SEC. 221. NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE ENHANCEMENT.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act, as amended by section 211, is further amended by inserting after section 316 (42 U.S.C. 10416) the following:

"SEC. 317. NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE ENHANCEMENT.

"(a) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are as follows:

"(1)(A) To provide a grant to develop a fully secure, continuously updated network of available domestic violence shelters and services across the United States.

"(B) To make the network available to entities consisting of the entity providing the National Domestic Violence Hotline, shelters nationwide, State and local domestic violence agencies, and other domestic violence organizations, to enable such entities to connect a victim of domestic violence to the most safe, appropriate, and convenient shelter, while the victim remains on the telephone line, or in the most efficient way possible.

"(2) To ensure that domestic violence victims get the help the victims need in a single phone call.

"(b) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary shall award a grant to a nonprofit organization to establish and operate, after consultation and collaboration with appropriate officials of the Department of Health and Human Services, an Internet website (referred to in this section as the 'Website') that shall—

"(1) link, to the greatest extent possible, entities consisting of the entity providing the National Domestic Violence Hotline, every domestic violence shelter in the United States, State and local domestic violence agencies, and other domestic violence organizations so that such entities will be able to connect a victim of domestic violence to the most safe, appropriate, and convenient domestic violence shelter, while the victim remains on the telephone line, or in the most efficient way possible;

"(2) be highly secure; and

"(3) contain continuously updated information as to available services and space in domestic violence shelters across the United States, to the maximum extent practicable.

"(c) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a nonprofit organization shall submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require. The application shall—

"(1) demonstrate the experience of the applicant in successfully developing and managing a technology-based network of domestic violence shelters;

"(2) demonstrate a record of success of the applicant in meeting the needs of domestic violence victims and their families; and

"(3) include a certification that the applicant will—

"(A) implement the highest level security system to ensure the confidentiality of the Website;

"(B) establish, within 5 years, a Website that links the entities described in subsection (b)(1);

"(C) consult with the entities described in subsection (b)(1) in developing and implementing the Website and providing Internet connections; and

"(D) otherwise comply with the requirements of this section.

“(1) collaborate with officials of the Department of Health and Human Services in a manner determined to be appropriate by the Secretary;

“(2) collaborate with the entity providing the National Domestic Violence Hotline in developing and implementing the network;

“(3) ensure that the Website is continuously updated;

“(4) ensure that the Website provides information describing the services of each domestic violence shelter to which the Website is linked, including information for individuals with limited English proficiency and information concerning access to medical care, social services, transportation, services for children, and other relevant services;

“(5) ensure that the Website provides up-to-the-minute information on available bed space in domestic violence shelters across the United States, to the maximum extent practicable;

“(6) provide training to the staff of the Hotline and to staff of the entities described in subsection (b)(1) regarding how to use the Website to best meet the needs of callers;

“(7) provide Internet access to domestic violence shelters in the United States that do not have the appropriate technology for such access, to the maximum extent practicable; and

“(8) ensure that after the third year of the Website project, the recipient will develop a plan to expand the sources of funding for the Website to include funding from public and private entities, although nothing in this paragraph shall preclude a grant recipient under this section from raising funds from other sources at any time during the 5-year grant period.

“(e) Rule of Construction.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require any shelter or service provider, whether public or private, to be linked to the website or to provide information to the entity receiving the grant or to the website.

“(f) Duration of Grant.—The term of a grant awarded under this section shall be 5 years.

“(g) Evaluation.—The Secretary shall annually—

“(1) conduct an evaluation of the grant program carried out under this section in a manner that shall be designed to derive information on—

“(A) the confidentiality of the Website;

“(B) the progress of the grant recipient in linking the entities described in subsection (b)(1) to the network described in subsection (c)(1);

“(C) the number of individuals served by the Website;

“(D) any decrease in the number of phone calls necessary to find shelter space for victims of domestic violence; and

“(E) other matters that the Secretary determines to be appropriate to ensure that the grant recipient is achieving the purposes of this section; and

“(2) submit to Congress a report on the results of that evaluation.

“(h) Oversight.—The Secretary shall have access to, monitor, and help ensure the security of the Website.

“(i) Authorization of Appropriations.—

“(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

“(A) $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2003; and

“(B) such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2007.

“(2) Administrative costs.—Of the amount made available to carry out this section for each fiscal year the Secretary may use not more than 2 percent for administrative costs associated with the grant program carried out under this section, of which not more than 5 percent shall be used to assist the entity providing the National Domestic Violence Hotline to participate in the establishment of the Website.”.

Subtitle C—Children Exposed to Domestic Violence Program

SEC. 231. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this subtitle to reduce the impact of exposure to domestic violence in the lives of children and youth.

SEC. 232. SERVICES FOR CHILDREN EXPOSED TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

“(a) Grants Authorized.—The Secretary may award grants on a competitive basis to eligible entities for the purposes and in the manner described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section (d) for the benefit of children exposed to domestic violence.

“(b) Eligibility.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity shall, as part of the application of the entity submitted under paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (d), describe the policies and procedures that entity has or will adopt to—

“(1) enhance or ensure the safety and security of a battered parent and, as a result, the child involved;

“(2) ensure that all services under this section are provided in a developmentally, linguistically, and culturally competent manner; and

“(3) ensure the confidentiality of child and adult victims of domestic violence in a manner that is consistent with applicable Federal and State law, including exempting domestic violence victim service providers from requirements to share confidential information about families receiving services except as required by law or with the informed, written consent of the adult victim being served.

“(c) Grant Awards and Distribution.—

“(A) for periods of not more than 3 fiscal years; and

“(B) in amounts that are not less than $50,000 per fiscal year and not more than $300,000 per fiscal year.

“(2) Distribution.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall—

“(A) ensure a reasonable geographical distribution among grantees in rural, urban, and suburban areas throughout the United States; and “(B) consider the needs of underserved populations, as defined in section 2003 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg-2).

“(d) Use of Funds.—

“(1) Direct services for children exposed to domestic violence.—

“(A) In general.—An entity shall use amounts provided under a grant awarded for purposes of this paragraph to design or replicate, and implement, a program or provide services (in accordance with subparagraph (B)) using domestic violence intervention models to respond to the needs of children who—

“(i) are exposed to domestic violence; and

“(ii) have a parent or caregiver who is a victim of domestic violence and who is receiving services from such entity.

“(B) Program or services.—The program or services described in subparagraph (A)—

“(i) shall be a new program or new services, or a new component (that is not offered by the entity on the date on which the entity submitted an application for the grant) of an existing program or services;

“(ii) shall provide direct counseling or appropriate services or advocacy for children who have been exposed to domestic violence;

“(iii) may include early childhood and mental health services;

“(iv) may provide services to assist in legal advocacy efforts on behalf of children with respect to issues related directly to services the children are receiving from the program or services described in subparagraph (A);

“(v) may include respite care, supervised visitation, and specialized services for children; and

“(vi) may provide additional services and resources for children including child care, transportation, educational support, respite care, supervised visitation, and access to specialized services for children, so long as the grantee does not use more than 25 percent of the amounts made available through the grant to enter into a contract with another organization to provide such additional services and resources.

“(i) Application.—With respect to grants for the use of funds under this paragraph, an eligible entity (as described in clause (ii) and subsection (b)) shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including a description of the intended uses of the grant funds consistent with subparagraphs (A) and (B).

“(ii) Eligibility.—To be eligible to receive a grant for the use of funds under this paragraph, an entity shall meet the requirements of section 303(a)(2)(A) or section 303(b)(1). Eligible entities may enter into partnerships with other agencies, organizations, or tribal entities to enhance the capacity of such entities to deliver effective services to children exposed to domestic violence.

“(2) Grants for training and collaboration among child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, courts, law enforcement, and other entities.—

“(A) In general.—An entity shall use amounts provided under a grant awarded for purposes of this paragraph to carry out a program or provide services to develop collaborative responses and provide cross-training to enhance community responses to cases where child abuse and neglect and domestic violence intersect.

“(B) Program or services.—The program or services described in subparagraph (A) shall—

“(i) encourage cross training, education, and collaboration among child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, and (as applicable) courts (including family, criminal, juvenile courts, or tribal courts), law enforcement agencies, and other entities, to identify, assess, and respond appropriately to—

“(I) domestic violence in homes where children are present and may be exposed to the violence;

“(II) domestic violence in child protection cases; and

“(III) the needs of both child and adult victims of such violence;

“(ii) establish and implement policies, procedures, programs, and practices for child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, and (as applicable) courts (including family, criminal, juvenile, or tribal courts), law enforcement agencies, and other entities, that are consistent with the principles of protecting and increasing the safety and well being of children by—

“(I) tending to their immediate and longer term needs for treatment and support;

“(II) increasing the safety, autonomy, capacity, and financial security of non-abusing parents, including developing service plans that provide resources and support to non-abusing parents;

“(III) protecting the safety, security, and well-being of children by preventing their unnecessary removal from a non-abusing parent, or, in cases where removal of the child is necessary to protect the child's safety, taking the necessary steps to provide appropriate services to the child and the non-abusing parent to promote the safe and appropriately prompt reunification of the child with the non-abusing parent;

“(IV) recognizing the relationship between child abuse or neglect (including child sexual abuse) and domestic violence in a family, as well as the impact of and danger posed by the perpetrators' behavior on both child and adult victims; and

“(V) holding adult perpetrators of domestic violence, not child and adult victims of abuse or neglect, accountable for stopping the perpetrators' abusive behaviors;

“(iii) increase cooperation and enhance linkages between child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, and (as applicable) courts (including family, criminal, juvenile courts, or tribal courts), law enforcement agencies, and other entities to provide more comprehensive community-based services (including health, mental health, social service, housing, and neighborhood resources) to protect and to serve both child and adult victims;

“(iv) identify, assess, and respond appropriately to domestic violence in child protection cases; and “(v) provide appropriate referrals to community-based programs and resources, such as health and mental health services, shelter and housing assistance for adult victims and their children, legal assistance and advocacy for adult victims, assistance for parents to help their children cope with the impact of exposure to domestic violence, appropriate intervention and treatment for adult perpetrators of domestic violence whose children are the subjects of child protection cases, and other necessary supportive services.

“(C) GRANTEE REQUIREMENTS.—

“(i) APPLICATION.—With respect to grants for the use of funds under this paragraph, an eligible entity (as described in clause (ii) and subsection (b)) shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including—

“(I) a description of the intended uses of the grant funds consistent with subparagraphs (A) and (B);

“(II) an outline and description of how training and other activities will be undertaken through the grant to promote collaboration;

“(III) an identification of the members of the partnership that will be responsible for carrying out the initiatives for which the partnership seeks the grant (including a description of roles of subcontractors and documentation of appropriate compensation of all partners, where relevant);

“(IV) documentation of any history of collaboration between child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, and (as applicable) courts (including family, criminal, juvenile courts, or tribal courts), law enforcement agencies, and other entities that have been involved in the development of the application; and

“(V) assurances that training and other activities described in subparagraph (B) will be provided to all levels of staff, will address appropriate practices for investigation, follow-up, screening, intake, assessment, and will provide services addressing the safety needs of child and adult victims in cases where child abuse and neglect and domestic violence intersect.

“(ii) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant for the use of funds under this paragraph, an entity shall be a partnership that—“(I) shall include a State child welfare agency, a tribal organization that serves as a child welfare agency, or a local child welfare agency;

“(II) shall include a domestic violence victim service provider, such as a domestic violence victim service program, tribal domestic violence victim service program, or coalition or other private nonprofit organization carrying out a community-based domestic violence program that has a documented history of effective work concerning domestic violence and the impact that exposure to domestic violence has on children;

“(III) may include a State, tribal, or local court (including family, criminal, juvenile or tribal courts);

“(IV) may include a State or local law enforcement agency with responsibility for responding to reports of domestic violence and child abuse and neglect; and “(V) may include any other such agencies or private nonprofit organizations with the capacity to provide effective help to the child and adult victims served by the partnership.

“(D) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this paragraph, the Secretary shall give priority to partnerships that include State or local courts (including family, criminal, juvenile, or tribal courts) and law enforcement agencies.

“(3) MULTISYSTEM INTERVENTIONS FOR CHILDREN EXPOSED TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—An entity shall use amounts provided under a grant awarded for purposes of this paragraph to carry out a program or provide services to develop and implement multisystem intervention models to respond to the needs of children exposed to domestic violence.

“(B) PROGRAMS OR SERVICES.—The programs or services described in subparagraph (A) shall—

“(i) design and implement protocols and systems to identify and appropriately respond to the needs of children exposed to domestic violence who are participating in programs administered by the grantee;

“(ii) establish guidelines to evaluate the mental health needs of the children and make appropriate intervention recommendations;

“(iii) include the development or replication of an effective mental health treatment model to meet the needs of children for whom such treatment has been identified as appropriate;

“(iv) establish institutionalized procedures to enhance or ensure the safety and security of adult victims of domestic violence and, as a result, their children;

“(v) provide direct counseling or appropriate services or advocacy for adult victims of domestic violence and their children who have been exposed to domestic violence;

“(vi) establish or implement policies and protocols for maintaining the safety and confidentiality of the adult victims and their children;

“(vii) provide community outreach and training to enhance the capacity of professionals who work with children to appropriately identify and respond to the mental health needs of children who have been exposed to domestic violence;

“(viii) establish procedures for documenting interventions used for each child and family;

“(ix) establish plans to perform a systematic outcome evaluation to evaluate the effectiveness of the interventions;

“(x) ensure that all services are provided in a culturally competent manner; and “(xi) provide appropriate remuneration to entities described in paragraph (2)(A) who participate in the partnership.

“(C) GRANTEE REQUIREMENTS.—

“(i) APPLICATION.—With respect to grants for the use of funds under this paragraph, an eligible entity (as described in clause (ii) and subsection (b)) shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including—

“(I) a description of the intended uses of the grant funds consistent with subparagraphs (A) and (B);

“(II) an outline of how multisystem interventions will be designed and implemented by the applicant, including submitting signed memoranda of understanding executed by the any partners of the applicant, describing the roles of each participating entity and the amount of remuneration each participating entity will receive;

“(III) a demonstration, to ensure that children of all ages utilizing services provided under the grant will have access to appropriate mental health services, of—

“(aa) the applicant's recognized history of providing advocacy, health care, child mental health, or crisis services for children in domestic violence cases; or

“(bb) the applicant's partnerships with providers having expertise in child mental health services; and

“(IV) a memorandum of understanding with the appropriate State or tribal coalition against domestic violence, to ensure coordination of and dissemination of information about activities to be carried out under the grant.

“(ii) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant for the use of funds under this paragraph, an entity shall be a collaborative partnership that includes—

“(I) a local private nonprofit organization that—

“(aa) carry out a domestic violence victim service program that provides shelter or related assistance; or

“(bb) has expertise in the field of providing services to victims of domestic violence and an understanding of the effects of exposure to domestic violence on children; and

“(II) other partners, such as courts (including family, criminal, juvenile, or tribal courts), schools, social service providers, health care providers, law enforcement, early childhood agencies, entities carrying out Head Start programs under the Head Start Act (42 U.S.C.9831 et seq.), or entities carrying out child protection, financial assistance, job training, housing, or children's mental health programs.

“(e) ANNUAL REPORTS.—An entity receiving a grant under this section shall report to the Secretary annually, at a minimum—

“(1) what services and, where appropriate, what collaborative efforts were provided with funds under this section;

"(2) the extent to which underserved populations were served with funds received under this section; and

"(3) how children exposed to domestic violence and, where appropriate, adult victims of domestic violence benefited from such the activities conducted under the grant.

"(f) Authorization of Appropriations.—

"(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $20,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007. Amounts appropriated under this subsection shall remain available until expended.

"(2) Allocation of amounts.—Of the amount appropriated to carry out this section for each fiscal year, the Secretary shall—

"(A) make available not less than 33 percent of such amount for each of the programs described in subsection (d)(1);

"(B) make available not more than 3 percent of such amount for evaluation, monitoring, and other administrative costs associated with conducting activities under this section; and

"(C) make available not less than 10 percent of such amount for Indian tribes.".

TITLE III—ADOPTION OPPORTUNITIES

SEC. 301. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE.

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking paragraphs (1) through (4) and inserting the following:

"(1) the number of children in substitute care has increased by nearly 24 percent since 1994, as our Nation's foster care population included more than 565,000 as of September of 2001;

"(2) children entering foster care have complex problems that require intensive services, with many such children having special needs because they are born to mothers who did not receive prenatal care, are born with life threatening conditions or disabilities, are born addicted to alcohol or other drugs, or have been exposed to infection with the etiologic agent for the human immunodeficiency virus;

"(3) each year, thousands of children are in need of placement in permanent, adoptive homes;";

(B) by striking paragraph (6);

(C) by striking paragraph (7)(A) and inserting the following:

"(7)(A) currently, there are 131,000 children waiting for adoption;"; and

(D) by redesignating paragraphs (5), (7), (8), (9), and (10) as paragraphs (4), (5), (6), (7), and (8) respectively; and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting ", including geographic barriers," after "barriers"; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking "a national" and inserting "an Internet-based national".

SEC. 302. INFORMATION AND SERVICES.

Section 203 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5113) is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

"SEC. 203. INFORMATION AND SERVICES.";

(2) by striking "Sec. 203. (a) The Secretary" and inserting the following:

(F) in paragraph (6), by striking "study the nature, scope, and effects of" and insert "support";

(G) in paragraph (7), by striking "nonprofit";

(H) in paragraph (9)—

(i) by striking "nonprofit"; and

(ii) by striking "and" at the end;

(I) in paragraph (10)—

(i) by striking "nonprofit"; each place that such appears; and

(ii) by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(J) by adding at the end the following:

"(11) provide (directly or by grant to or contract with States, local government entities, or public or private licensed child welfare or adoption agencies) for the implementation of programs that are intended to increase the number of older children (who are in foster care and with the goal of adoption) placed in adoptive families, with a special emphasis on child-specific recruitment strategies, including—

"(A) outreach, public education, or media campaigns to inform the public of the needs and numbers of older youth available for adoption;

"(B) training of personnel in the special needs of older youth and the successful strategies of child-focused, child-specific recruitment efforts; and

"(C) recruitment of prospective families for such children.";

(4) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking "(c)(1) The Secretary" and inserting the following:

"(c) Services for Families Adopting Special Needs Children.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary";

(B) by striking "(2) Services" and inserting the following:

"(2) Services.—Services"; and

(C) in paragraph (2)—

(i) by realigning the margins of subparagraphs (A) through (G) accordingly;

"(B) Reversion of unused funds.—Any payment"; and

(6) by adding at the end the following:

"(e) Elimination of Barriers to Adoptions Across Jurisdictional Boundaries.—

"(1) In general.—The Secretary shall award grants to, or enter into contracts with, States, local government entities, public or private child welfare or adoption agencies, adoption exchanges, or adoption family groups to carry out initiatives to improve efforts to eliminate barriers to placing children for adoption across jurisdictional boundaries.

"(2) Services to supplement not supplant.—Services provided under grants made under this subsection shall supplement, not supplant, services provided using any other funds made available for the same general purposes including—

"(A) developing a uniform homestudy standard and protocol for acceptance of homestudies between States and jurisdictions;

"(B) developing models of financing cross-jurisdictional placements;

"(C) expanding the capacity of all adoption exchanges to serve increasing numbers of children;

"(D) developing training materials and training social workers on preparing and moving children across State lines; and

"(E) developing and supporting initiative models for networking among agencies, adoption exchanges, and parent support groups across jurisdictional boundaries.".

SEC. 303. STUDY OF ADOPTION PLACEMENTS.

(1) by striking "of this Act" and inserting "of the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002";

(2) by striking "to determine the nature" and inserting "to determine—

"(1) the nature";

(3) by striking "not licensed" and all that follows through the period and inserting "for profit;"; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) how interstate placements are being financed across State lines;

"(3) recommendations on best practice models for both interstate and intrastate adoptions; and

"(4) how State policies in defining special needs children differentiate or group similar categories of children.".

SEC. 304. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 205(a) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 5115(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"There are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 2003 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 2004 through 2007 to carry out programs and activities authorized under this subtitle.".

SEC. 305. ADOPTION ACTION PLAN.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds that—

(1) the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997 mandated that "the State shall not delay or deny the placement of a child for adoption when an approved family is available outside of the jurisdiction with responsibility for handling the case of the child";

(2)(A) the policy and legal focus on expanding the pool of adoptive families for waiting children in foster care, as expressed by the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997, has brought attention to the need to improve interjurisdictional practice whether across State or county lines; and

(B) case workers, agency administrators, and State policy makers in many cases have resisted the use of interjurisdictional placements for children in their caseloads, citing practice, policy, legal, bureaucratic, and fiscal concerns;

(3) the National Conference of State Legislators has noted that among the many challenges 'interstate adoptions of special needs children has been complicated by a lack of familiarity with the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children on the part of caseworkers and judges, the absence of a standard protocol for pre-placement home studies, delays in the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children process, and similar issues'; and

(4) in its November 1999 report to Congress, the General Accounting Office found that public child welfare agencies have done little to improve the interjurisdictional adoption process.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services in consultation with the General Accounting Office shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Education and Workforce of the House of Representatives a report that contains recommendations for an action plan to facilitate the interjurisdictional adoption of foster children.

TITLE IV—ABANDONED INFANTS ASSISTANCE

SEC. 401. FINDINGS.

Section 2 of the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 670 note) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1);

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting "studies indicate that a number of factors contribute to" before "the inability of";

(B) by inserting "some" after "inability of";

(C) by striking "who abuse drugs"; and

(D) by striking "care for such infants" and inserting "care for their infants";

(3) by amending paragraph (5) to read as follows:

"(5) appropriate training is needed for personnel working with infants and young children with life-threatening conditions and other special needs, including those who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (commonly known as 'HIV'), those who have acquired immune deficiency syndrome (commonly know as 'AIDS'), and those who have been exposed to dangerous drugs;";

(4) by striking paragraphs (6) and (7);

(5) in paragraph (8), by inserting "by parents abusing drugs," after "deficiency syndrome,";

(6) in paragraph (9), by striking "comprehensive services" and all that follows through the semicolon at the end and inserting "comprehensive support services for such infants and young children and their families and services to prevent the abandonment of such infants and young children, including foster care services, case management services, family support services, respite and crisis intervention services, counseling services, and group residential home services; and";

(7) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), (4), (5), (8), (9), (10), and (11) as paragraphs (1) through (8), respectively.

(7) by adding at the end the following:

"(9) Private, Federal, State, and local resources should be coordinated to establish and maintain such services and to ensure the optimal use of all such resources.".

SEC. 402. ESTABLISHMENT OF LOCAL PROGRAMS.

(1) by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

"SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF LOCAL PROGRAMS."; and

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"(b) PRIORITY IN PROVISION OF SERVICES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless the applicant for the grant agrees to give priority to abandoned infants and young children who—

"(1) are infected with, or have been perinatally exposed to, the human immunodeficiency virus, or have a life-threatening illness or other special medical need; or

"(2) have been perinatally exposed to a dangerous drug.".

Section 102 of the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 670 note) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 102. EVALUATIONS, STUDY, AND REPORTS BY SECRETARY.

"(a) EVALUATIONS OF LOCAL PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall, directly or through contracts with public and nonprofit private entities, provide for evaluations of projects carried out under section 101 and for the dissemination of information developed as a result of such projects.

"(b) STUDY AND REPORT ON NUMBER OF ABANDONED INFANTS AND YOUNG CHILDREN.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study for the purpose of determining—

"(A) an estimate of the annual number of infants and young children relinquished, abandoned, or found deceased in the United States and the number of such infants and young children who are infants and young children described in section 223(b);

"(B) an estimate of the annual number of infants and young children who are victims of homicide;

"(C) characteristics and demographics of parents who have abandoned an infant within 1 year of the infant's birth; and

"(D) an estimate of the annual costs incurred by the Federal Government and by State and local governments in providing housing and care for abandoned infants and young children.

"(2) DEADLINE.—Not later than 36 months after the date of the enactment of the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002, the Secretary shall complete the study required under paragraph (1) and submit to the Congress a report describing the findings made as a result of the study.

"(c) EVALUATION.—The Secretary shall evaluate and report on effective methods of intervening before the abandonment of an infant or young child so as to prevent such abandonments, and effective methods for responding to the needs of abandoned infants and young children.".

SEC. 404. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 104 of the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 670 note) is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORIZATION.—For the purpose of carrying out this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated $45,000,000 for fiscal year 2003 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 2004 through 2007.

"(2) LIMITATION.—Not more than 5 percent of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) for any fiscal year may be obligated for carrying out section 224(a).";

(2) by striking subsection (b);

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting "AUTHORIZATION.—" after "(1)"; and

(B) in paragraph (2)—

(i) by inserting "LIMITATION.—" after "(2)"; and

(ii) by striking "fiscal year 1991." and inserting "fiscal year 2002."; and

(4) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (b) and (c), respectively.

SEC. 405. DEFINITIONS

Section 103 of the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988 (42 U.S.C. 670 note) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 103. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this Act:

"(1) The terms 'abandoned' and 'abandonment', with respect to infants and young children, mean that the infants and young children are medically cleared for discharge from acute-care hospital settings, but remain hospitalized because of a lack of appropriate out-of-hospital placement alternatives.

"(2) The term 'acquired immune deficiency syndrome' includes infection with the etiologic agent for such syndrome, any condition indicating that an individual is infected with such etiologic agent, and any condition arising from such etiologic agent.

"(3) The term 'dangerous drug' means a controlled substance, as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act.

"(4) The term 'natural family' shall be broadly interpreted to include natural parents, grandparents, family members, guardians, children residing in the household, and individuals residing in the household on a continuing basis who are in a care-giving situation with respect to infants and young children covered under this subtitle.

"(5) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.".

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I welcome this opportunity to join my colleagues in introducing the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2002.

This bipartisan bill authorizes funding and programs that support more than 870,000 children in this country who are victims of child abuse and neglect each year. It is essential to do all we can to see that these very vulnerable children are protected and feel safe, in spite of the abuse and neglect they have suffered.

Every year in America, local child protective service agencies respond to approximately 3 million reports of child abuse or neglect. According to Prevent Child Abuse America, this problem costs the U.S. over $9 billion a year in direct and indirect costs. We owe it to the Nation's children to provide more effective prevention and treatment services.

Often these children are caught up in a system that fails to protect them today. Nearly half of the children in substantiated cases of abuse receive no followup services. We can and must do better. Our bill will provide funding for grants to community-based and prevention-focused programs and activities to prevent child abuse and neglect.

In 2000, approximately 1,100 children died of abuse and neglect. Eight-five percent of these children were younger than 6. We know that early identification of risk and timely intervention can reduce abuse. One major prevention strategy shown to work is good parent education.

Effective action also means preparing those who investigate allegations of child abuse to assess the risk and ensure appropriate followup, so that children receive the medical and emotional treatment they need.

Included in this bill is Senator WELLSTONE's Children Who Witness Violence Act. This legislation is long overdue and very important in confronting the impact of domestic violence on children. It addresses the issue form multiple perspectives by supporting the development of intervention program for children who witness domestic violence. It takes advantage of local resources such as counselors, courts, schools, health care providers and battered women's programs to address the needs of children in violent homes.

Witnessing domestic violence directly affects school achievement. These children have higher levels of impaired concentration and poor school attendance. They are often labeled as underachievers and have difficulties in cognitive and academic functioning.

Research demonstrates that the effects of abuse can continue long after the bruises fade. We need to do much more to prevent abuse and help abused children find a way out of violence. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. SPECTER):

S. 3000. A bill to enhance and further research into paralysis and to improve rehabilitation and the quality of life for persons living with paralysis and other physical disabilities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined by Senators BROWNBACK, KENNEDY, and SPECTER today in introducing legislation that will provide hope to Americans living with paralysis.

Recent news reports about the medical miracle Christopher Reeve has experienced this past year are an inspiration for every American living with paralysis as a result of a spinal cord injury. When it was announced that, for the firs time since his accident in 1995, Chris was able to wiggle his fingers and toes, there was hope for some of the two million Americans living with paralysis.

Today, through the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Act of 2002, we seek to achieve two primary goals. First to further advance the science needed to help those living with paralysis take their next step. And second, to time build quality of life programs throughout the country that will further advance full participation, independent living, self-sufficiency and equality of opportunity for individuals with paralysis and other physical disabilities.

Chris' recovery and recent scientific evidence show that there is hope for those living with paralysis . At research centers in the United States, Europe and Japan, new techniques of rigorous exercise have helped an estimated 500 persons with paraplegic with limited sensations in their lower bodies walk for short distances, unassisted or using walkers.

While the results of these new methods are quite miraculous, the limits of what physical exercise can do for patients remains grossly understudied. While each person and each injury in unique, and some people recover spontaneously, an estimated 200,000 Americans are living with spinal cord injuries that have not improved. Which therapy or combination of therapies will work for each person is unknown. Today 2 million Americans are living with paralysis, including spinal cord injury, stroke, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, ALS and spina bifida. We need research to see how these new interventions work on the entire population on individuals living with paralysis.

What we do know is the ordinary repetitive motions used in most rehabilitation centers, like squeezing a ball, are almost certainly not enough to appropriately address neurological injuries.

Patients are usually told that after one year, two at the most, they will never make further progress in their abilities to move or feel sensation. Yet seven years after his accident, through a rigorous exercise plan, Chris Reeve is finally seeking results.

Due to efforts led by the National Institutes of Health and the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation, our nation stands on the brink of amazing breakthroughs in science for those living with paralysis. However, the biotech and pharmaceutical industries have not invested in paralysis research because they believe the market does not support the private investment. There is an urgent need for the federal government to further step up its commitment in this area. The Christopher Reeve Paralysis Act would do just that.

By establishing Paralysis Research Consortia at the National Institute on Neurological Disorders and Stoke, we can substantially increase our ability to capitalize on research advances in paralysis. These consortia would be formed to explore unique scientific expertise and focus across the existing research centers at NINDS in an effort to further advance treatments, therapies and developments on one or more forms of paralysis that result from central nervous system trauma and stroke.

Additional breakthrough are under way in rehabilitation research on paralysis. Federal funding for rehabilitation research at the National Center for Medical Rehabilitation Research at NIH is showing real potential to improve functional mobility; prevent secondary complications like bladder and urinary tract infections and ulcers; and to develop improved assistive technology. These rehabilitation interventions have the potential to greatly reduce pain and suffering for those suffering from neurological disorders and str9oke and, at the same time, save millions in health care expenditures.

Over the past 20 years, overall days in the hospital and rehabilitation centers for those living with paralysis have been cut in half. Those living with paralysis face astronomical medical costs, and our best estimates tell us that only one-third of those individuals remain employed after paralysis. At least one-third of those living with paralysis have income of $15,000 or less.

To date, there are no State-based programs at CDC that address paralysis and other physical disability with the goal of improving health outcomes and prevent secondary complications. This bill will, for the first time, ensure that individuals living with paralysis get the information they need; have access to public health programs; and support in their communities to navigate services. Ultimately these programs will help remove the barriers to community participation and help improve quality of life. The bill also establishes hospital-based registries on paralysis to collect needed data on the true numbers of individuals with these conditions, and it invests in population-based research to see how individuals are faring.

We are on the brink of major breakthroughs for individuals impacted by neurological disorders and stroke that result in paralysis. This bill will ensure that the federal government does it part to help more than 2 million Americans.

When Christopher Reeve was injured, he put a face on an issue that has been neglected for too long. Since then, his tireless efforts to walk again, coupled with his passion and commitment to improve quality of life for others living with paralysis, make him a role model for everyone.

It is a pleasure, and an honor to lead a bipartisan group of Senators, along with the support of number of disability groups, including the American Stroke Association, the American Heart Association, the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation, the National Family Caregivers Association, the National Spinal Cord Injury Association, Paralyzed Veterans of America and Eastern Paralyzed Veterans, in introducing this bill.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 146—SUPPORTING THE GOALS AND IDEAS OF NATIONAL TAKE YOUR KIDS TO VOTE DAY

Mrs. LINCOLN submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

S. CON. RES. 146

Whereas voting is a civic duty and critical to democracy;

Whereas voting participation rates in the United States for all age groups have fallen dramatically since 1972;

Whereas voting participation rates are lower among young voters;

Whereas only 32 percent of individuals 18 through 24 years of age voted in the last Presidential election;

Whereas large numbers of young people feel disconnected from government;

Whereas many younger adults report that they do not know how to vote;

Whereas, according to a 2002 study by the Council for Excellence in Government, children who go to the polls with their parents are more likely to go to the polls and vote as adults than their peers;

Whereas parents should talk to their children about the importance of voting;

Whereas a number of businesses and organizations have designated November 5, 2002, as National Take Your Kids to Vote Day in order to encourage people to vote; and

Whereas many Americans will go to the polls on November 5, 2002, to elect a new Congress: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) supports the goals and ideas of National Take Your Kids to Vote Day;

(2) encourages all voting eligible parents with children who are younger than 18 years of age to talk to their children about the importance of voting and, if possible, take their children to the polls; and

(3) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to conduct appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs to promote voting as a family tradition.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 147—ENCOURAGING IMPROVED COOPERATION WITH RUSSIA ON ENERGY DEVELOPMENT ISSUES

Mr. BURNS submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. CON. RES. 147

Whereas Russia, with its vast oil and gas resources, a growing and diverse number of private sector companies, and a renewed commitment to investment by international energy companies, is in a unique position to provide stability to an often volatile and insecure world energy market;

Whereas on June 6, 2002, Russia was granted market economy status by the United States;

Whereas the granting of market economy status is mutually beneficial to both Russia and the United States, and both governments should continue to pursue other measures to promote long-term engagement and integration of Russia into the world economy;

Whereas mutual efforts by Russia and the United States to bring greater stability to world energy markets and to sustain economic growth in both nations is a key way to ensure further engagement and integration of Russia with the world economy;

Whereas, recognizing Russia's progress on religious freedom and human rights, and its broad range of mechanisms to address remaining concerns, the President has requested that Congress terminate application to Russia of chapter 1 of title IV of the Trade Act of 1974 (commonly referred to as "Jackson-Vanik") and authorize the extension of normal trade relations to Russia; and

Whereas both Russia and the United States can play a critical role in supporting regional energy development and energy transportation corridor projects: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) encourages the Governments of Russia and the United States—

(A) to engage in a dialogue on energy development; and

(B) to consult widely with the governments of other independent states of the former Soviet Union and with other interested parties to promote exchanges on energy development and to seek support from the broadest cross section of business and civil societies;

(2) is committed to terminating the application to Russia of chapter 1 of title IV of the Trade Act of 1974 (commonly referred to as "Jackson-Vanik") and to authorizing the extension of normal trade relations to Russia;

(3) supports the actions of the Russian Duma designed to strengthen international investment in the Russian energy sector, such as—

(A) actions to permit the full implementation of energy projects on Sakhalin Island and in the Timan-Pechora region, all of which offer unique opportunities to increase the petroleum supplies of the United States and the world; and

(B) actions to encourage a regulatory and investment framework in Russia to expand Russia's oil and gas export capacities;

(4) supports the accession of Russia to the World Trade Organization; and

(5) supports continued high level and sustained exchanges on energy development between the Governments of Russia and the United States and between businesses in the two countries.

SA. 4708. Mr. SANTORUM submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

TITLE —BAN ON PARTIAL-BIRTH ABORTIONS

SEC. 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2002".

SEC. 02. FINDINGS.

(1) A moral, medical, and ethical consensus exists that the practice of performing a partial-birth abortion—an abortion in which a physician delivers an unborn child's body until only the head remains inside the womb, punctures the back of the child's skull with a sharp instrument, and sucks the child's brains out before completing delivery of the dead infant—is a gruesome and inhumane procedure that is never medically necessary and should be prohibited.

(2) Rather than being an abortion procedure that is embraced by the medical community, particularly among physicians who routinely perform other abortion procedures, partial-birth abortion remains a disfavored procedure that is not only unnecessary to preserve the health of the mother, but in fact poses serious risks to the long-term health of women, and, in some circumstances, their lives. As a result, at least 27 States banned the procedure as did Congress, which voted to ban the procedure during the 104th, 105th, and 106th Congresses.

(3) In Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 932 (2000), the Supreme Court opined "that significant medical authority supports the proposition that in some circumstances, [partial birth abortion] would be the safest procedure" for pregnant women who wish to undergo an abortion. Thus, the Supreme Court struck down Nebraska's ban on partial-birth abortion procedures, concluding that it placed an "undue burden" on women seeking abortions because it failed to include an exception for partial-birth abortions deemed necessary to preserve the "health" of the mother.

(4) In reaching this conclusion, the Supreme Court deferred to the Federal district court's findings that the partial-birth abortion procedure was statistically and medically as safe as, and in many circumstances safer than, alternative abortion procedures.

(5) However, the great weight of evidence presented at the Stenberg trial and other trials challenging partial-birth abortion bans, as well as at extensive congressional hearings, demonstrates that a partial-birth abortion is never necessary to preserve the health of a woman, poses significant health risks to a woman upon whom the procedure is performed, and is outside of the standard of medical care.

(6) Despite the dearth of evidence in the Stenberg trial court record supporting the district court's findings, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit and the Supreme Court refused to set aside the district court's findings because, under the applicable standard of appellate review, they were not "clearly erroneous". A finding of fact is clearly erroneous "when although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing court on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed". Anderson v. City of Bessemer City, North Carolina, 470 U.S. 564, 573 (1985) (quoting United States v. U.S. Gypsum Co. 333 U.S. 364, 395 (1948)). Under this standard, "if the district court's account of the evidence is plausible in light of the record viewed in its entirety, the court of appeals may not reverse it even though convinced that had it been sitting as the trier of fact, it would have weighed the evidence differently". Id. at 573-74.

(7) Thus, in Stenberg, the Supreme Court was required to accept the very questionable findings issued by the district court judge—the effect of which was to render null and void the reasoned findings and policy determinations of Congress and at least 27 State legislatures.

(8) However, under well-settled Supreme Court jurisprudence, Congress is not bound to accept the same findings as the Supreme Court was bound to accept in Stenberg under the "clearly erroneous" standard. Rather, Congress is entitled to reach its own findings—findings that the Supreme Court accords great deference—and to enact legislation based upon these findings so long as it seeks to pursue a legitimate interest that is within the scope of the Constitution, and draws reasonable inferences based upon substantial evidence.

(9) In Katzenbach v. Morgan, 384 U.S. 641 (1966), the Supreme Court articulated its highly deferential standard of review of congressional findings when it addressed the constitutionality of section 4(e) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Regarding Congress' finding that such section 4(e) would assist the Puerto Rican community in "gaining nondiscriminatory treatment in public services", the Supreme Court stated that "[i]t was for Congress, as the branch that made this judgment, to assess and weigh the various conflicting considerations . . . . It is not for us to review the congressional resolution of these factors. It is enough that we be able to perceive a basis upon which the Congress might resolve the conflict as it did. There plainly was such a basis to support section 4(e) in the application in question in this case.". Id. at 653.

(10) Katzenbach's highly deferential standard of review of Congress's findings was relied upon by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia when it upheld the "bail-out" provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, stating that "congressional fact finding, to which we are inclined to pay great deference, strengthens the inference that, in those jurisdictions covered by the Act, state actions discriminatory in effect are discriminatory in purpose". City of Rome, Georgia v. United States, 472 F. Supp. 221 (D. D. C. 1979) aff'd City of Rome, Georgia v. United States, 446 U.S. 156 (1980).

(11) The Supreme Court continued its practice of deferring to findings in reviewing the constitutionality of the must-carry provisions of the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act of 1992. See Turner Broad. Sys., Inc. v. Fed. Communications Comm'n, 512 U.S. 622 (1994) (referred to in this section as "Turner I") and Turner Broad. Sys., Inc. v. Fed. Communications Comm'n, 520 U.S. 180 (1997) (referred to in this section as "Turner II"). At issue in the Turner cases was Congress' finding that, absent mandatory carriage rules, the continued viability of local broadcast television would be "seriously jeopardized". In Turner I, the Supreme Court recognized that, as an institution, "Congress is far better equipped than the judiciary to 'amass and evaluate the vast amounts of data' bearing upon an issue as complex and dynamic as that presented here". 512 U.S. at 665-66. Although the Supreme Court recognized that "the deference afforded to legislative findings does 'not foreclose our independent judgment of the facts bearing on an issue of constitutional law'", its "obligation to exercise independent judgment when First Amendment rights are implicated is not a license to reweigh the evidence de novo, or to replace Congress' factual predictions with our own. Rather, it is to assure that, in formulating its judgments, Congress has drawn reasonable inferences based on substantial evidence.". Id. at 666.

(12) Three years later in Turner II, the Supreme Court upheld the "must-carry" provisions based upon Congress' findings, stating the Supreme Court's "sole obligation is 'to assure that, in formulating its judgments, Congress has drawn reasonable inferences based on substantial evidence.'". 520 U.S. at 195. Citing its ruling in Turner I, the Supreme Court reiterated that "[w]e owe Congress' findings deference in part because the institution 'is far better equipped than the judiciary to "amass and evaluate the vast amounts of data" bearing upon' legislative questions" Id. at 195, and added that it "owe[d] Congress' findings an additional measure of deference out of respect for its authority to exercise the legislative power". Id. at 196.

(13) There exists substantial record evidence upon which Congress has reached its conclusion that a ban on partial-birth abortion is not required to contain a "health" exception, because the facts indicate that a partial-birth abortion is never necessary to preserve the health of a woman, poses serious risks to a woman's health, and lies outside the standard of medical care. Congress was informed by extensive hearings held during the 104th and 105th Congresses and passed a ban on partial-birth abortion in the 104th, 105th, and 106th Congresses. The findings of these hearings reflect the very informed judgment of Congress that a partial-birth abortion is never necessary to preserve the health of a woman, poses serious risks to a woman's health, lies outside the standard of medical care, and should, therefore, be banned.

(14) Pursuant to the testimony received during extensive legislative hearings during the 104th and 105th Congresses, Congress finds and declares that:

(ii) Those risks include, among other things—

(I) an increased risk of suffering from cervical incompetence, a result of cervical dilation, making it difficult or impossible for a woman successfully to carry a subsequent pregnancy to term;

(II) an increased risk of uterine rupture, abruption, amniotic fluid embolus, and trauma to the uterus as a result of converting a child to a footling breech position, a procedure which, according to a leading obstetrics textbook, "there are very few, if any, indications for . . . other than for delivery of a second twin"; and

(III) a risk of lacerations and secondary hemorrhaging due to a doctor blindly forcing a sharp instrument into the base of the unborn child's skull while the child is lodged in the birth canal, an act that could result in severe bleeding, brings with it the threat of shock, and could ultimately result in maternal death.

(B) There is no credible medical evidence that partial-birth abortions are safe or are safer than other abortion procedures. No controlled studies of partial-birth abortion have been conducted nor have any comparative studies been conducted to demonstrate its safety and efficacy compared to other abortion methods. Furthermore, there have been no articles published in peer-reviewed journals that establish that partial-birth abortion is superior in any way to established abortion procedures. Indeed, there are currently no medical schools that provide instruction on abortions that include instruction on partial-birth abortion in their curriculum, unlike other more commonly used abortion procedures.

(C) A prominent medical association has concluded that partial-birth abortion is "not an accepted medical practice", that it has "never been subject to even a minimal amount of the normal medical practice development", that "the relative advantages and disadvantages of the procedure in specific circumstances remain unknown", and that "there is no consensus among obstetricians about its use". The association has further noted that partial-birth abortion is broadly disfavored by both medical experts and the public, is "ethically wrong", and "is never the only appropriate procedure".

(D) Neither the plaintiff in Stenberg v. Carhart, nor the experts who testified on his behalf, have identified a single circumstance during which a partial-birth abortion was necessary to preserve the health of a woman.

(E) The physician credited with developing the partial-birth abortion procedure has testified that the physician has never encountered a situation where a partial-birth abortion was medically necessary to achieve the desired outcome and, thus, that partial-birth abortion is never medically necessary to preserve the health of a woman.

(F) A ban on the partial-birth abortion procedure will therefore advance the health interests of pregnant women seeking to terminate a pregnancy.

(G) In light of this overwhelming evidence, Congress and the States have a compelling interest in prohibiting partial-birth abortions. In addition to promoting maternal health, such a prohibition will draw a bright line that clearly distinguishes abortion and infanticide, preserves the integrity of the medical profession, and promotes respect for human life.

(H) Based upon Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973) and Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992), a governmental interest in protecting the life of a child during the delivery process arises by virtue of the fact that during a partial-birth abortion, labor is induced and the birth process has begun. This distinction was recognized in Roe when the Supreme Court noted, without comment, that the Texas parturition statute, which prohibited one from killing a child "in a state of being born and before actual birth", was not under attack. This interest becomes compelling as the child emerges from the maternal body. A child that is completely born is a full, legal person entitled to constitutional protections afforded a "person" under the Constitution. Partial-birth abortions involve the killing of a child that is in the process, in fact mere inches away from, becoming a "person". Thus, the government has a heightened interest in protecting the life of the partially-born child.

(I) This interest, too, has not gone unnoticed in the medical community, where a prominent medical association has recognized that partial-birth abortion is "ethically different from other destructive abortion techniques because the fetus, normally twenty weeks or longer in gestation, is killed outside of the womb". According to this medical association, the "'partial birth' gives the fetus an autonomy which separates it from the right of the woman to choose treatments for her own body".

(J) Partial-birth abortion also causes confusion among the medical, legal, and ethical duties of physicians to preserve and promote life, as the physician acts directly against the physical life of a child, whom the physician had just delivered, all but the head, out of the womb, in order to end that life. Partial-birth abortion thus appropriates the terminology and techniques used by obstetricians in the delivery of living children—obstetricians who preserve and protect the life of the mother and the child—and instead uses those techniques to end the life of the partially-born child.

(K) Thus, by aborting a child in a manner that purposefully seeks to kill the child after a child has begun the process of birth, partial-birth abortion undermines the public's perception of the appropriate role of a physician during the delivery process, and perverts a process during which life is brought into the world, in order to destroy a partially-born child.

(L) The gruesome and inhumane nature of the partial-birth abortion procedure and its disturbing similarity to the killing of a newborn infant promotes a complete disregard for infant human life that can only be countered by a prohibition of the procedure.

(M) The vast majority of babies killed during partial-birth abortions are alive until the end of the procedure. It is a medical fact, however, that unborn infants at this stage can feel pain when subjected to painful stimuli and that their perception of this pain is even more intense than that of newborn infants and older children when subjected to the same stimuli. Thus, during a partial-birth abortion procedure, a child will fully experience the pain associated with piercing the child's skull and sucking out the child's brain.

(N) Implicitly approving such a brutal and inhumane procedure by choosing not to prohibit it will further make society indifferent to the humanity of not only newborns, but all vulnerable and innocent human life, making it increasingly difficult to protect such life. Thus, Congress has a compelling interest in acting—indeed it must act—to prohibit this inhumane procedure.

(O) For these reasons, partial-birth abortion is never medically indicated to preserve the health of the mother, is in fact unrecognized as a valid abortion procedure by the mainstream medical community, poses additional health risks to the mother, blurs the line between abortion and infanticide in the killing of a partially-born child just inches from birth, causes confusion of the role of the physician in childbirth, and should, therefore, be banned.

SEC. 03. PROHIBITION ON PARTIAL-BIRTH ABORTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 73 the following:

"CHAPTER 74—PARTIAL-BIRTH ABORTIONS

"Sec.

"1531. Partial-birth abortions prohibited.

"§ 1531. Partial-birth abortions prohibited

"(a) Any physician who, in or affecting interstate or foreign commerce, knowingly performs a partial-birth abortion and thereby kills a human fetus shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both. This subsection does not apply to a partial-birth abortion that is necessary to save the life of a mother whose life is endangered by a physical disorder, physical illness, or physical injury, including a life-endangering physical condition caused by or arising from the pregnancy itself. This subsection takes effect 1 day after the date of enactment of the Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act of 2002.

"(b) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'partial-birth abortion' means an abortion in which—

"(A) the person performing the abortion deliberately and intentionally vaginally delivers a living fetus until, in the case of a head-first presentation, the entire fetal head is outside the body of the mother, or, in the case of breech presentation, any part of the fetal trunk past the navel is outside the body of the mother for the purpose of performing an overt act that the person knows will kill the partially delivered living fetus; and

"(B) performs the overt act, other than completion of delivery, that kills the partially delivered living fetus; and

"(2) the term 'physician' means a doctor of medicine or osteopathy legally authorized to practice medicine and surgery by the State in which the doctor performs such activity, or any other individual legally authorized by the State to perform abortions, except that any individual who is not a physician or not otherwise legally authorized by the State to perform abortions, but who nevertheless directly performs a partial-birth abortion, shall be subject to the provisions of this section.

"(c)(1) The father, if married to the mother at the time she receives a partial-birth abortion procedure, and if the mother has not attained the age of 18 years at the time of the abortion, the maternal grandparents of the fetus, may in a civil action obtain appropriate relief, unless the pregnancy resulted from the plaintiff's criminal conduct or the plaintiff consented to the abortion.

"(2) Such relief shall include—

"(A) money damages for all injuries, psychological and physical, occasioned by the violation of this section; and

"(B) statutory damages equal to three times the cost of the partial-birth abortion.

"(d)(1) A defendant accused of an offense under this section may seek a hearing before the State Medical Board on whether the physician's conduct was necessary to save the life of the mother whose life was endangered by a physical disorder, physical illness, or physical injury, including a life-endangering physical condition caused by or arising from the pregnancy itself.

“(2) The findings on that issue are admissible on that issue at the trial of the defendant. Upon a motion of the defendant, the court shall delay the beginning of the trial for not more than 30 days to permit such a hearing to take place.

“(e) A woman upon whom a partial-birth abortion is performed may not be prosecuted under this section, for a conspiracy to violate this section, or for an offense under section 2, 3, or 4 of this title based on a violation of this section.”.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 73 the following new item:

SA 4709. Mr. ENZI submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. 172. REQUIREMENT TO BUY CERTAIN ARTICLES FROM AMERICAN SOURCES.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—Except as provided in subsections (c) through (g), funds appropriated or otherwise available to the Department of Homeland Security may not be used for the procurement of an item described in subsection (b) if the item is not grown, reprocessed, reused, or produced in the United States.

(b) COVERED ITEMS.—An item referred to in subsection (a) is any of the following:

(1) An article or item of—

(A) food;

(B) clothing;

(C) tents, tarpaulins, or covers;

(D) cotton and other natural fiber products, woven silk or woven silk blends, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth, synthetic fabric or coated synthetic fabric (including all textile fibers and yarns that are for use in such fabrics), canvas products, or wool (whether in the form of fiber or yarn or contained in fabrics, materials, or manufactured articles); or

(E) any item of individual equipment manufactured from or containing such fibers, yarns, fabrics, or materials.

(2) Specialty metals, including stainless steel flatware.

(3) Hand or measuring tools.

(c) AVAILABILITY EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) does not apply to the extent that the Secretary of Homeland Security determines that satisfactory quality and sufficient quantity of any such article or item described in subsection (b)(1) or specialty metals (including stainless steel flatware) grown, reprocessed, reused, or produced in the United States cannot be procured as and when needed at United States market prices.

(d) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PROCUREMENTS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—Subsection (a) does not apply to the following:

(1) Procurements outside the United States in support of combat operations.

(2) Procurements by vessels in foreign waters.

(3) Emergency procurements or procurements of perishable foods by an establishment located outside the United States for the personnel attached to such establishment.

(e) EXCEPTION FOR SPECIALTY METALS AND CHEMICAL WARFARE PROTECTIVE CLOTHING.—Subsection (a) does not preclude the procurement of specialty metals or chemical warfare protective clothing produced outside the United States if—

(1) such procurement is necessary—

(A) to comply with agreements with foreign governments requiring the United States to purchase supplies from foreign sources for the purposes of offsetting sales made by the United States Government or United States firms under approved programs serving defense requirements; or

(B) in furtherance of agreements with foreign governments in which both such governments agree to remove barriers to purchases of supplies produced in the other country or services performed by sources of the other country; and

(2) any such agreement with a foreign government complies, where applicable, with the requirements of section 36 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2776) and with section 2457 of title 10, United States Code.

(f) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN FOODS.—Subsection (a) does not preclude the procurement of foods manufactured or processed in the United States.

(g) EXCEPTION FOR SMALL PURCHASES.—Subsection (a) does not apply to purchases for amounts not greater than the simplified acquisition threshold (as defined in section 4(11) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(11))).

(h) APPLICABILITY TO CONTRACTS AND SUBCONTRACTS FOR PROCUREMENT OF COMMERCIAL ITEMS.—This section is applicable to contracts and subcontracts for the procurement of commercial items notwithstanding section 34 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 430).

(i) GEOGRAPHIC COVERAGE.—In this section, the term “United States” includes the possessions of the United States.

SA 4710. Mr. GREGG (for himself Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. SHELBY, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. HELMS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. GRASSLEY, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. DOMENICI, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. KOHL, and Mr. BURNS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . DIRECTORATE OF EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) DIRECTORATE.—There is established within the Department the Directorate of Emergency Preparedness and Response.

(2) UNDER SECRETARY.—There shall be an Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Directorate of Emergency Preparedness and Response shall be responsible for the following:

(1) Carrying out all nonterrorism emergency preparedness activities carried out by the Federal Emergency Management Agency before the effective date of this division.

(2) Carrying out all terrorism and other hazard response activities carried out by the Federal Emergency Management Agency before the effective date of this division.

(3) Creating a National Crisis Action Center to act as the focal point for—

(A) monitoring emergencies;

(B) notifying affected agencies and State and local governments; and

(C) coordinating Federal support for State and local governments and the private sector in crises.

(4) Managing and updating the Federal response plan to ensure the appropriate integration of operational activities of the Department of Defense, the National Guard, and other agencies, to respond to acts of terrorism and other disasters.

(5) Coordinating activities among private sector entities, including entities within the medical community, and animal health and plant disease communities, with respect to recovery, consequence management, and planning for continuity of services.

(6) Developing and managing a single response system for national incidents in coordination with all appropriate agencies.

(7) Coordinating with other agencies necessary to carry out the functions of the Office of Emergency Preparedness.

(8) Collaborating with, and transferring funds to, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention or other agencies for administration of the Strategic National Stockpile transferred under subsection (c)(6).

(9) Consulting with the Under Secretary for Science and Technology, Secretary of Agriculture, and the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in establishing and updating the list of potential threat agents or toxins relating to the functions of the Select Agent Registration Program transferred under subsection (c)(7).

(10) Developing a plan to address the interface of medical informatics and the medical response to terrorism that address—

(A) standards for interoperability;

(B) real-time data collection;

(C) ease of use for health care providers;

(D) epidemiological surveillance of disease outbreaks in human health and agriculture;

(E) integration of telemedicine networks and standards;

(F) patient confidentiality; and

(G) other topics pertinent to the mission of the Department.

(11) Activate and coordinate the operations of the National Disaster Medical System as defined under section 102 of the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–188).

(12) Performing such other duties as assigned by the Secretary.

(c) TRANSFER OF AUTHORITIES, FUNCTIONS, PERSONNEL, AND ASSETS TO THE DEPARTMENT.—The authorities, functions, personnel, and assets of the following entities are transferred to the Department:

(1) The Federal Emergency Management Agency, the 10 regional offices of which shall be maintained and strengthened by the Department, which shall be maintained as a distinct entity within the Department, except that those elements of the Office of National Preparedness of the Federal Emergency Management Agency that relate to terrorism shall be transferred to the Office of Domestic Preparedness established under this section.

(2) The National Office of Domestic Preparedness of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

(3) The Office of Domestic Preparedness of the Department of Justice.

(4) Those elements of the Office of National Preparedness of the Federal Emergency Management Agency which relate to terrorism, which shall be consolidated within the Department in the Office for Domestic Preparedness established under this section.

(5) The Office of Emergency Preparedness within the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Public Health Emergency Preparedness of the Department of Health and Human Services, including—

(A) the Noble Training Center;

(B) the Metropolitan Medical Response System;

(C) the Department of Health and Human Services component of the National Disaster Medical System;

(D) the Disaster Medical Assistance Teams, the Veterinary Medical Assistance Teams, and the Disaster Mortuary Operational Response Teams;

(E) the special events response; and

(F) the citizen preparedness programs.

(6) The Strategic National Stockpile of the Department of Health and Human Services including all functions and assets under sections 121 and 127 of the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–188).

(7) The functions of the Select Agent Registration Program of the Department of Health and Human Services and the United States Department of Agriculture, including all functions of the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Agriculture under sections 201 through 221 of the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–188).

(d) OFFICE FOR DOMESTIC PREPAREDNESS.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Directorate of Emergency Preparedness and Response the Office for Domestic Preparedness.

(2) DIRECTOR.—There shall be a Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness shall report directly to the Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response.

(3) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Office for Domestic Preparedness shall have the primary responsibility within the executive branch of Government for the preparedness of the United States for acts of terrorism, including—

(A) coordinating preparedness efforts at the Federal level, and working with all State, local, tribal, parish, and private sector emergency response providers on all matters pertaining to combating terrorism, including training, exercises, and equipment support;

(B) in keeping with intelligence estimates, working to ensure adequate strategic and operational planning, equipment, training, and exercise activities at all levels of government;

(C) coordinating or, as appropriate, consolidating communications and systems of communications relating to homeland security at all levels of government;

(D) directing and supervising terrorism preparedness grant programs of the Federal Government for all emergency response providers;

(E) incorporating the Strategy priorities into planning guidance on an agency level for the preparedness efforts of the Office for Domestic Preparedness;

(F) providing agency-specific training for agents and analysts within the Department, other agencies, and State and local agencies and international entities;

(G) as the lead executive branch agency for preparedness of the United States for acts of terrorism, cooperating closely with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which shall have the primary responsibility within the executive branch to prepare for and mitigate the effects of nonterrorist-related disasters in the United States; and

(H) assisting and supporting the Secretary, in coordination with other Directorates and entities outside the Department, in conducting appropriate risk analysis and risk management activities consistent with the mission and functions of the Directorate.

(4) FISCAL YEARS 2003 AND 2004.—During fiscal year 2003 and fiscal year 2004, the Director of the Office for Domestic Preparedness established under this section shall manage and carry out those functions of the Office for Domestic Preparedness of the Department of Justice (transferred under this section) before September 11, 2001, under the same terms, conditions, policies, and authorities, and with the required level of personnel, assets, and budget before September 11, 2001.

(5) REPORT.—Not later than the submission of the fiscal year 2005 budget request, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a detailed report containing a comprehensive, independent analysis, and recommendations addressing whether there should be a single office within the Department responsible for the domestic preparedness of the United States for all hazards, including terrorism and natural disasters. The analysis shall include an examination of the advantages, disadvantages, costs, and benefits of creating a single office for all hazards preparedness within the Department.

(e) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response shall submit a report to Congress on the status of a national medical informatics system and an agricultural disease surveillance system, and the capacity of such systems to meet the goals under subsection (b)(12) in responding to a terrorist attack.

(f) PREEMPTED PROVISIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, including any effective date provision, section 134 shall not take effect.

SA 4711. Ms. COLLINS (for herself and Mr. LEVIN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

homeland threats;

(D) minimize the damage, and assist in the recovery, from terrorist attacks or other natural or man-made crises that occur within the United States; and

(E) to the extent practicable, ensure the speedy, orderly, safe, and efficient flow of lawful traffic, travel, and commerce.

SA 4712. Ms. COLLINS (for herself and Mr. LEVIN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 25, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

(e) SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY.—

(1) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Secretary shall appoint a Special Assistant to the Secretary who shall be responsible for—

(A) creating and fostering strategic communications with the private sector to enhance the primary mission of the Department to protect the American homeland;

(B) advising the Secretary on the impact of the Department's policies, regulations, processes, and actions on the private sector;

(C) interfacing with other relevant Federal agencies with homeland security missions to assess the impact of these agencies' actions on the private sector;

(D) creating and managing private sector advisory councils composed of representatives of industries and associations designated by the Secretary to advise the Secretary on homeland security policies, regulations, processes, and actions that affect the participating industries and associations;

(E) promoting existing public-private partnerships and developing new public-private partnerships to provide for collaboration and mutual support to address homeland security challenges; and

(F) assisting in the development and promotion of private sector best practices to secure critical infrastructure.

(2) DUPLICATION OF FUNCTIONS.—The Special Assistant to the Secretary shall avoid duplication of functions performed by the Directorate of Science of Technology in accordance with section 135.

SA 4713. Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, and Ms. SNOWE) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

Subtitle G—First Responder Terrorism Preparedness

SEC. 199A. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "First Responder Terrorism Preparedness Act of 2002".

SEC. 199B. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the Federal Government must enhance the ability of first responders to respond to incidents of terrorism, including incidents involving weapons of mass destruction; and

(2) as a result of the events of September 11, 2001, it is necessary to clarify and consolidate the authority of the Federal Emergency Management Agency to support first responders.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to establish within the Federal Emergency Management Agency the Office of National Preparedness;

(2) to establish a program to provide assistance to enhance the ability of first responders to respond to incidents of terrorism, including incidents involving weapons of mass destruction; and

(3) to address issues relating to urban search and rescue task forces.

SEC. 199C. DEFINITIONS.

(a) MAJOR DISASTER.—Section 102(2) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122(2)) is amended by inserting "incident of terrorism," after "drought),".

(b) Weapon of Mass Destruction.—Section 602(a) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5196(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(11) Weapon of mass destruction.—The term 'weapon of mass destruction' has the meaning given the term in section 2302 of title 50, United States Code.".

SEC. 199D. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF NATIONAL PREPAREDNESS.

"SEC. 616. OFFICE OF NATIONAL PREPAREDNESS.

"(a) In General.—There is established in the Federal Emergency Management Agency an office to be known as the 'Office of National Preparedness' (referred to in this section as the 'Office').

"(b) Appointment of Associate Director.—

"(1) In general.—The Office shall be headed by an Associate Director, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(2) Compensation.—The Associate Director shall be compensated at the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

"(c) Duties.—The Office shall—

"(1) lead a coordinated and integrated overall effort to build, exercise, and ensure viable terrorism preparedness and response capability at all levels of government;

"(2) establish clearly defined standards and guidelines for Federal, State, tribal, and local government terrorism preparedness and response;

"(3) establish and coordinate an integrated capability for Federal, State, tribal, and local governments and emergency responders to plan for and address potential consequences of terrorism;

"(4) coordinate provision of Federal terrorism preparedness assistance to State, tribal, and local governments;

"(5) establish standards for a national, interoperable emergency communications and warning system;

"(6) establish standards for training of first responders (as defined in section 630(a)), and for equipment to be used by first responders, to respond to incidents of terrorism, including incidents involving weapons of mass destruction; and

"(7) carry out such other related activities as are approved by the Director.

"(d) Designation of Regional Contacts.—The Associate Director shall designate an officer or employee of the Federal Emergency Management Agency in each of the 10 regions of the Agency to serve as the Office contact for the States in that region.

"(e) Use of Existing Resources.—In carrying out this section, the Associate Director shall—

"(1) to the maximum extent practicable, use existing resources, including planning documents, equipment lists, and program inventories; and

"(2) consult with and use—

"(A) existing Federal interagency boards and committees;

"(B) existing government agencies; and

"(C) nongovernmental organizations.".

SEC. 199E. PREPAREDNESS ASSISTANCE FOR FIRST RESPONDERS.

(a) In General.—Subtitle B of title VI of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5197 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 630. PREPAREDNESS ASSISTANCE FOR FIRST RESPONDERS.

"(a) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) First responder.—The term 'first responder' means—

"(e) Provision of Funds to Local Governments and Local Entities.—

"(1) In general.—For each fiscal year, not less than 75 percent of the assistance provided to each State under this section shall be provided to local governments and local entities within the State.

"(2) Allocation of funds.—Under paragraph (1), a State shall allocate assistance to local governments and local entities within the State in accordance with criteria established by the Director, such as the criteria specified in subsection (d)(2)(B).

"(3) Deadline for provision of funds.—Under paragraph (1), a State shall provide all assistance to local government and local entities not later than 45 days after the date on which the State receives the assistance.

"(4) Coordination.—Each State shall coordinate with local governments and local entities concerning the use of assistance provided to local governments and local entities under paragraph (1).

"(f) Administrative Expenses.—

"(1) Director.—For each fiscal year, the Director may use to pay salaries and other administrative expenses incurred in administering the program not more than the lesser of—

"(A) 5 percent of the funds made available to carry out this section for the fiscal year; or

"(B)(i) for fiscal year 2003, $75,000,000; and

"(ii) for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2006, $50,000,000.

"(2) Recipients of assistance.—For each fiscal year, not more than 10 percent of the funds retained by a State after application of subsection (e) may be used to pay salaries and other administrative expenses incurred in administering the program.

"(g) Maintenance of Expenditures.—The Director may provide assistance to a State under this section only if the State agrees to maintain, and to ensure that each local government that receives funds from the State in accordance with subsection (e) maintains, for the fiscal year for which the assistance is provided, the aggregate expenditures by the State or the local government, respectively, for the uses described in subsection (c)(1) at a level that is at or above the average annual level of those expenditures by the State or local government, respectively, for the 2 fiscal years preceding the fiscal year for which the assistance is provided.

"(h) Reports.—

"(1) Annual report to the director.—As a condition of receipt of assistance under this section for a fiscal year, a State shall submit to the Director, not later than 60 days after the end of the fiscal year, a report on the use of the assistance in the fiscal year.

"(2) Exercise and report to congress.—As a condition of receipt of assistance under this section, not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this section, a State shall—

"(A) conduct an exercise, or participate in a regional exercise, approved by the Director, to measure the progress of the State in enhancing the ability of State and local first responders to respond to incidents of terrorism, including incidents involving weapons of mass destruction; and

"(B) submit a report on the results of the exercise to—

"(i) the Committee on Environment and Public Works and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate; and

"(ii) the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

"(i) COORDINATION.—

"(1) WITH FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Director shall, as necessary, coordinate the provision of assistance under this section with activities carried out by—

"(A) the Administrator of the United States Fire Administration in connection with the implementation by the Administrator of the assistance to firefighters grant program established under section 33 of the Federal Fire Prevention and Control Act of 1974 (15 U.S.C. 2229) (as added by section 1701(a) of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (114 Stat. 1654, 1654A–360));

"(B) the Attorney General, in connection with the implementation of the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Program established under section 1701(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796dd(a)); and

"(C) other appropriate Federal agencies.

"(2) WITH INDIAN TRIBES.—In providing and using assistance under this section, the Director and the States shall, as appropriate, coordinate with—

"(A) Indian tribes (as defined in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b)) and other tribal organizations; and

"(B) Native villages (as defined in section 3 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1602)) and other Alaska Native organizations.".

SEC. 189. USE OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.

(a) APPLICABILITY OF THIS SECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act or any other law, this section shall apply to the use of any funds, disposal of property, and acceptance, use, and disposal of gifts, or donations of services or property, of, for, or by the Department, including any agencies, entities, or other organizations transferred to the Department under this Act.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS TO CREATE DEPARTMENT.—There is authorized to be appropriated $160,000,000 for the Office of Homeland Security in the Executive Office of the President to be transferred without delay to the Department upon its creation by enactment of this Act, notwithstanding subsection (c)(1)(C) such funds shall be available only for the payment of necessary salaries and expenses associated with the initiation of operations of the Department.

(c) USE OF TRANSFERRED FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as may be provided in this subsection or in an appropriations Act in accordance with subsection (e), balances of appropriations and any other funds or assets transferred under this Act—

(A) shall be available only for the purposes for which they were originally available;

(B) shall remain subject to the same conditions and limitations provided by the law originally appropriating or otherwise making available the amount, including limitations and notification requirements related to the reprogramming of appropriated funds; and

(C) shall not be used to fund any new position established under this Act.

(2) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—After the creation of the Department and the swearing in of its Secretary, and upon determination by the Secretary that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary is authorized to transfer, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, not to exceed $140,000,000 of unobligated funds from organizations and entities transferred to the new Department by this Act.

(B) LIMITATION.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), funds authorized to be transferred by subparagraph (A) shall be available only for payment of necessary costs, including funding of new positions, for the initiation of operations of the Department and may not be transferred unless the Committees on Appropriations are notified at least 15 days in advance of any proposed transfer and have approved such transfer in advance.

(C) NOTIFICATION.—The notification required in subparagraph (B) shall include a detailed justification of the purposes for which the funds are to be used and a detailed statement of the impact on the program or organization that is the source of the funds, and shall be submitted in accordance with reprogramming procedures to be established by the Committees on Appropriations.

(D) USE FOR OTHER ITEMS.—The authority to transfer funds established in this section may not be used unless for higher priority items, based on demonstrated homeland security requirements, than those for which funds originally were appropriated and in no case where the item for which funds are requested has been denied by Congress.

(d) NOTIFICATION REGARDING TRANSFERS.—The President shall notify Congress not less than 15 days before any transfer of appropriations balances, other funds, or assets under this Act.

(e) ADDITIONAL USES OF FUNDS DURING TRANSITION.—Subject to subsections (c) and (d), amounts transferred to, or otherwise made available to, the Department may be used during the transition period, as defined in section 801(2), for purposes in addition to those for which such amounts were originally available (including by transfer among accounts of the Department), but only to the extent such transfer or use is specifically permitted in advance in an appropriations Act and only under the conditions and for the purposes specified in such appropriations Act.

(f) DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.—

(1) STRICT COMPLIANCE.—If specifically authorized to dispose of real property in this or any other Act, the Secretary shall exercise this authority in strict compliance with section 204 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 485).

(2) DEPOSIT OF PROCEEDS.—The Secretary shall deposit the proceeds of any exercise of property disposal authority into the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in accordance with section 3302(b) of title 31, United States Code.

(g) GIFTS.—Gifts or donations of services or property of or for the Department may not be accepted, used, or disposed of unless specifically permitted in advance in an appropriations Act and only under the conditions and for the purposes specified in such appropriations Act.

(h) BUDGET REQUEST.—Under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the President shall submit to Congress a detailed budget request for the Department for fiscal year 2004, and for each subsequent fiscal year.

TITLE I—CHARITABLE GIVING INCENTIVES

SEC. 101. DEDUCTION FOR PORTION OF CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE ALLOWED TO INDIVIDUALS WHO DO NOT ITEMIZE DEDUCTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 170 (relating to charitable, etc., contributions and gifts) is amended by redesignating subsection (m) as subsection (n) and by inserting after subsection (l) the following new subsection:

"(m) DEDUCTION FOR INDIVIDUALS NOT ITEMIZING DEDUCTIONS.—In the case of an individual who does not itemize deductions for any taxable year, there shall be taken into account as a direct charitable deduction under section 63 an amount equal to the amount allowable under subsection (a) for the taxable year for cash contributions, but only with respect to such contributions which exceed $250 ($500 in the case of a joint return), but do not exceed $500 ($1,000 in the case of a joint return).".

(b) DIRECT CHARITABLE DEDUCTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (b) of section 63 (defining taxable income) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) the direct charitable deduction.".

(2) DEFINITION.—Section 63 is amended by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (h) and by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g) DIRECT CHARITABLE DEDUCTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'direct charitable deduction' means that portion of the amount allowable under section 170(a) which is taken as a direct charitable deduction for the taxable year under section 170(m).".

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subsection (d) of section 63 is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) the direct charitable deduction.".

(c) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall study the effect of the amendments made by this section on increased charitable giving and taxpayer compliance, including a comparison of taxpayer compliance by those who itemize their charitable contributions with those who claim a direct charitable deduction.

(2) REPORT.—By not later than December 31, 2003, the Secretary of the Treasury shall report on the study required under paragraph (1) to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001, and before January 1, 2004.

SEC. 102. TAX-FREE DISTRIBUTIONS FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS FOR CHARITABLE PURPOSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 408 (relating to individual retirement accounts) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) DISTRIBUTIONS FOR CHARITABLE PURPOSES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—No amount shall be includible in gross income by reason of a qualified charitable distribution.

"(B) QUALIFIED CHARITABLE DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified charitable distribution' means any distribution from an individual retirement account—

"(i) which is made directly by the trustee—

"(I) to an organization described in section 170(c), or

"(II) to a split-interest entity, and

"(ii) which is made on or after the date that the individual for whose benefit the account is maintained has attained—

"(I) in the case of any distribution described in clause (i)(I), age 70½, and

"(II) in the case of any distribution described in clause (i)(II), age 59½.

A distribution shall be treated as a qualified charitable distribution only to the extent that the distribution would be includible in gross income without regard to subparagraph (A) and, in the case of a distribution to a split-interest entity, only if no person holds an income interest in the amounts in the split-interest entity attributable to such distribution other than one or more of the following: the individual for whose benefit such account is maintained, the spouse of such individual, or any organization described in section 170(c).

"(C) CONTRIBUTIONS MUST BE OTHERWISE DEDUCTIBLE.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) DIRECT CONTRIBUTIONS.—A distribution to an organization described in section 170(c) shall be treated as a qualified charitable distribution only if a deduction for the entire distribution would be allowable under section 170 (determined without regard to subsection (b) thereof and this paragraph).

"(ii) SPLIT-INTEREST GIFTS.—A distribution to a split-interest entity shall be treated as a qualified charitable distribution only if a deduction for the entire value of the interest in the distribution for the use of an organization described in section 170(c) would be allowable under section 170 (determined without regard to subsection (b) thereof and this paragraph).

"(D) APPLICATION OF SECTION 72.—Notwithstanding section 72, in determining the extent to which a distribution is a qualified charitable distribution, the entire amount of the distribution shall be treated as includible in gross income without regard to subparagraph (A) to the extent that such amount does not exceed the aggregate amount which would be so includible if all amounts were distributed from all individual retirement accounts otherwise taken into account in determining the inclusion on such distribution under section 72. Proper adjustments shall be made in applying section 72 to other distributions in such taxable year and subsequent taxable years.

"(E) Special rules for split-interest entities.—

"(i) Charitable remainder trusts.—Notwithstanding section 664(b), distributions made from a trust described in subparagraph (G)(i) shall be treated as ordinary income in the hands of the beneficiary to whom is paid the annuity described in section 664(d)(1)(A) or the payment described in section 664(d)(2)(A).

"(ii) Pooled income funds.—No amount shall be includible in the gross income of a pooled income fund (as defined in subparagraph (G)(ii)) by reason of a qualified charitable distribution to such fund, and all distributions from the fund which are attributable to qualified charitable distributions shall be treated as ordinary income to the beneficiary.

"(iii) Charitable gift annuities.—Qualified charitable distributions made for a charitable gift annuity shall not be treated as an investment in the contract.

"(F) Denial of deduction.—Qualified charitable distributions shall not be taken into account in determining the deduction under section 170.

"(G) Split-interest entity defined.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'split-interest entity' means—

"(i) a charitable remainder annuity trust or a charitable remainder unitrust (as such terms are defined in section 664(d)) which must be funded exclusively by qualified charitable distributions,

"(ii) a pooled income fund (as defined in section 642(c)(5)), but only if the fund accounts separately for amounts attributable to qualified charitable distributions, and

"(iii) a charitable gift annuity (as defined in section 501(m)(5)).".

(b) Modifications Relating to Information Returns by Certain Trusts.—

(1) Returns.—Section 6034 (relating to returns by trusts described in section 4947(a)(2) or claiming charitable deductions under section 642(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6034. RETURNS BY TRUSTS DESCRIBED IN SECTION 4947(a)(2) OR CLAIMING CHARITABLE DEDUCTIONS UNDER SECTION 642(c).

"(a) Trusts Described in Section 4947(a)(2).—Every trust described in section 4947(a)(2) shall furnish such information with respect to the taxable year as the Secretary may by forms or regulations require.

"(b) Trusts Claiming a Charitable Deduction Under Section 642(c).—

"(1) In general.—Every trust not required to file a return under subsection (a) but claiming a charitable, etc., deduction under section 642(c) for the taxable year shall furnish such information with respect to such taxable year as the Secretary may by forms or regulations prescribe, including:

"(B) the amount paid out within such year which represents amounts for which charitable, etc., deductions under section 642(c) have been taken in prior years,

"(C) the amount for which charitable, etc., deductions have been taken in prior years but which has not been paid out at the beginning of such year,

"(D) the amount paid out of principal in the current and prior years for charitable, etc., purposes,

"(E) the total income of the trust within such year and the expenses attributable thereto, and

"(F) a balance sheet showing the assets, liabilities, and net worth of the trust as of the beginning of such year.

"(2) Exceptions.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply in the case of a taxable year if all the net income for such year, determined under the applicable principles of the law of trusts, is required to be distributed currently to the beneficiaries. Paragraph (1) shall not apply in the case of a trust described in section 4947(a)(1).".

(2) Increase in penalty relating to filing of information return by split-interest trusts.—Paragraph (2) of section 6652(c) (relating to returns by exempt organizations and by certain trusts) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Split-interest trusts.—In the case of a trust which is required to file a return under section 6034(a), subparagraphs (A) and (B) of this paragraph shall not apply and paragraph (1) shall apply in the same manner as if such return were required under section 6033, except that—

"(i) the 5 percent limitation in the second sentence of paragraph (1)(A) shall not apply,

"(ii) in the case of any trust with gross income in excess of $250,000, the first sentence of paragraph (1)(A) shall be applied by substituting '$100' for '$20', and the second sentence thereof shall be applied by substituting '$50,000' for '$10,000', and

"(iii) the third sentence of paragraph (1)(A) shall be disregarded.

In addition to any penalty imposed on the trust pursuant to this subparagraph, if the person required to file such return knowingly fails to file the return, such penalty shall also be imposed on such person who shall be personally liable for such penalty.".

(3) Confidentiality of noncharitable beneficiaries.—Subsection (b) of section 6104 (relating to inspection of annual information returns) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "In the case of a trust which is required to file a return under section 6034(a), this subsection shall not apply to information regarding beneficiaries which are not organizations described in section 170(c).".

(c) Effective Dates.—

(1) Subsection (a).—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

(2) Subsection (b).—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to returns for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

SEC. 103. CHARITABLE DEDUCTION FOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF FOOD INVENTORIES.

(a) In General.—Subsection (e) of section 170 (relating to certain contributions of ordinary income and capital gain property) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) Application of paragraph (3) to certain contributions of food inventory.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) Extension to individuals.—In the case of a charitable contribution of apparently wholesome food—

"(i) paragraph (3)(A) shall be applied without regard to whether the contribution is made by a C corporation, and

"(ii) in the case of a taxpayer other than a C corporation, the aggregate amount of such contributions from any trade or business (or interest therein) of the taxpayer for any taxable year which may be taken into account under this section shall not exceed 10 percent of the taxpayer's net income from any such trade or business, computed without regard to this section, for such taxable year.

"(B) Limitation on reduction.—

"(i) For taxable years 2009, 2010, and 2011.—With respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2008, and before January 1, 2012, in the case of a charitable contribution of apparently wholesome food, notwithstanding paragraph (3)(B), the amount of the reduction determined under paragraph (1)(A) shall not exceed the greater of—

"(I) 25 percent of the fair market value of the contributed property, or

"(II) the amount by which the fair market value of such property exceeds twice the basis of such property.

"(ii) For taxable years after 2011.—With respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2011, in the case of a charitable contribution of apparently wholesome food, notwithstanding paragraph (3)(B), the amount of the reduction determined under paragraph (1)(A) shall not exceed the amount by which the fair market value of such property exceeds twice the basis of such property.

"(C) Determination of basis.—If a taxpayer—

"(i) does not account for inventories under section 471, and

"(ii) is not required to capitalize indirect costs under section 263A, the taxpayer may elect, solely for purposes of paragraph (3)(B), to treat the basis of any apparently wholesome food as being equal to 25 percent of the fair market value of such food.

"(D) Determination of fair market value.—In the case of a charitable contribution of apparently wholesome food which is a qualified contribution (within the meaning of paragraph (3), as modified by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph) and which, solely by reason of internal standards of the taxpayer or lack of market, cannot or will not be sold, the fair market value of such contribution shall be determined—

"(i) without regard to such internal standards or such lack of market and

"(ii) by taking into account the price at which the same or substantially the same food items are sold by the taxpayer at the time of the contribution (or, if not so sold at such time, in the recent past).

"(E) Apparently wholesome food.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'apparently wholesome food' has the meaning given such term by section 22(b)(2) of the Bill Emerson Good Samaritan Food Donation Act (42 U.S.C. 1791(b)(2)), as in effect on the date of the enactment of this paragraph.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

SEC. 104. CHARITABLE DEDUCTION FOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF BOOK INVENTORIES.

(a) In General.—Section 170(e)(3) (relating to certain contributions of ordinary income and capital gain property) is amended by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D) and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Special rule for contributions of book inventory for educational purposes.—

"(i) Contributions of book inventory.—In determining whether a qualified book contribution is a qualified contribution, subparagraph (A) shall be applied without regard to whether—

"(I) the donee is an organization described in the matter preceding clause (i) of subparagraph (A), and

"(II) the property is to be used by the donee solely for the care of the ill, the needy, or infants.

"(ii) AMOUNT OF REDUCTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (B), the amount of the reduction determined under paragraph (1)(A) shall not exceed the amount by which the fair market value of the contributed property (as determined by the taxpayer using a bona fide published market price for such book (using the same printing and edition) published within 7 years preceding the contribution) exceeds twice the basis of such property.

"(iii) QUALIFIED BOOK CONTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified book contribution' means a charitable contribution of books, but only if the requirements of clauses (iv) and (v) are met.

"(iv) IDENTITY OF DONEE.—The requirement of this clause is met if the contribution is to an organization—

"(I) described in subclause (I) or (III) of paragraph (6)(B)(i), or

"(II) described in section 501(c)(3) and exempt from tax under section 501(a) (other than a private foundation, as defined in section 509(a), which is not an operating foundation, as defined in section 4942(j)(3)), which is organized primarily to make books available to the general public at no cost or to operate a literacy program.

"(v) CERTIFICATION BY DONEE.—The requirement of this clause is met if, in addition to the certifications required by subparagraph (A) (as modified by this subparagraph), the donee certifies in writing that—

"(I) the books are suitable, in terms of currency, content, and quantity, for use in the donee's educational programs, and

"(II) the donee will use the books in its educational programs.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

SEC. 105. EXPANSION OF CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTION ALLOWED FOR SCIENTIFIC PROPERTY USED FOR RESEARCH AND FOR COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY AND EQUIPMENT USED FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES.

(a) SCIENTIFIC PROPERTY USED FOR RESEARCH.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Clause (ii) of section 170(e)(4)(B) (defining qualified research contributions) is amended by inserting "or assembled" after "constructed".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Clause (iii) of section 170(e)(4)(B) is amended by inserting "or assembling" after "construction".

(b) COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY AND EQUIPMENT FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Clause (ii) of section 170(e)(6)(B) is amended by inserting "or assembled" after "constructed" and "or assembling" after "construction".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Subparagraph (D) of section 170(e)(6) is amended by inserting "or assembled" after "constructed" and "or assembling" after "construction".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001.

SEC. 106. MODIFICATIONS TO ENCOURAGE CONTRIBUTIONS OF CAPITAL GAIN REAL PROPERTY MADE FOR CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 170(h) (relating to qualified conservation contribution) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) ADDITIONAL INCENTIVES FOR QUALIFIED CONSERVATION CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any qualified conservation contribution (as defined in paragraph (1)) made by an individual—

"(i) subparagraph (C) of subsection (b)(1) shall not apply,

"(ii) except as provided in subparagraph (B)(i), subsections (b)(1)(A) and (d)(1) shall be applied separately with respect to such contributions by treating references to 50 percent of the taxpayer's contribution base as references to the amount of such percentage of such base reduced by the amount of other contributions allowable under subsection (b)(1)(A), and

"(iii) subparagraph (A) of subsection (d)(1) shall be applied—

"(I) by substituting '15 succeeding taxable years' for '5 succeeding taxable years', and

"(II) by applying clause (ii) to each of the 15 succeeding taxable years.

"(B) SPECIAL RULES FOR ELIGIBLE FARMERS AND RANCHERS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any such contributions made by an eligible farmer or rancher—

"(I) if the taxpayer is an individual, subsections (b)(1)(A) and (d)(1) shall be applied separately with respect to such contributions by substituting 'the taxpayer's contribution base reduced by the amount of other contributions allowable under subsection (b)(1)(A)' for '50 percent of the taxpayer's contribution base' each place it appears, and

"(II) if the taxpayer is a corporation, subsections (b)(2) and (d)(2) shall be applied separately with respect to such contributions, subsection (b)(2) shall be applied with respect to such contributions as if such subsection did not contain the words '10 percent of' and as if subparagraph (A) thereof read 'the deduction under this section for qualified conservation contributions', and rules similar to the rules of subparagraph (A)(iii) shall apply for purposes of subsection (d)(2).

"(ii) DEFINITION.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'eligible farmer or rancher' means a taxpayer whose gross income from the trade or business of farming (within the meaning of section 2032A(e)(5)) is at least 51 percent of the taxpayer's gross income for the taxable year, and, in the case of a C corporation, the stock of which is not publicly traded on a recognized exchange.".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to contributions made in taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

SEC. 107. EXCLUSION OF 25 PERCENT OF GAIN ON SALES OR EXCHANGES OF LAND OR WATER INTERESTS TO ELIGIBLE ENTITIES FOR CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by inserting after section 121 the following new section:

"SEC. 121A. 25-PERCENT EXCLUSION OF GAIN ON SALES OR EXCHANGES OF LAND OR WATER INTERESTS TO ELIGIBLE ENTITIES FOR CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

"(a) EXCLUSION.—Gross income shall not include 25 percent of the qualifying gain from a conservation sale of a long-held qualifying land or water interest.

"(b) QUALIFYING GAIN.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualifying gain' means any gain which would be recognized as long-term capital gain, reduced by the amount of any long-term capital gain attributable to disqualified improvements.

"(2) DISQUALIFIED IMPROVEMENT.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'disqualified improvement' means any building, structure, or other improvement, other than—

"(A) any improvement which is described in section 175(c)(1), determined—

"(i) without regard to the requirements that the taxpayer be engaged in farming, and

"(ii) without taking into account subparagraphs (A) and (B) thereof, or

"(B) any improvement which the Secretary determines directly furthers conservation purposes.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR SALES OF STOCK.—If the long-held qualifying land or water interest is 1 or more shares of stock in a qualifying land or water corporation, the qualifying gain is equal to the lesser of—

"(A) the qualifying gain determined under paragraph (1), or

"(B) the product of—

"(i) the percentage of such corporation's stock which is transferred by the taxpayer, times

"(ii) the amount which would have been the qualifying gain (determined under paragraph (1)) if there had been a conservation sale by such corporation of all of its interests in the land and water for a price equal to the product of the fair market value of such interests times the ratio of—

"(I) the proceeds of the conservation sale of the stock, to

"(II) the fair market value of the stock which was the subject of the conservation sale.

"(c) CONSERVATION SALE.—For purposes of this section, the term 'conservation sale' means a sale or exchange which meets the following requirements:

"(1) TRANSFEREE IS AN ELIGIBLE ENTITY.—The transferee of the long-held qualifying land or water interest is an eligible entity.

"(2) QUALIFYING LETTER OF INTENT REQUIRED.—At the time of the sale or exchange, such transferee provides the taxpayer with a qualifying letter of intent.

"(3) NONAPPLICATION TO CERTAIN SALES.—The sale or exchange is not made pursuant to an order of condemnation or eminent domain.

"(4) CONTROLLING INTEREST IN STOCK SALE REQUIRED.—In the case of the sale or exchange of stock in a qualifying land or water corporation, at the end of the taxpayer's taxable year in which such sale or exchange occurs, the transferee's ownership of stock in such corporation meets the requirements of section 1504(a)(2) (determined by substituting '90 percent' for '80 percent' each place it appears).

"(d) LONG-HELD QUALIFYING LAND OR WATER INTEREST.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'long-held qualifying land or water interest' means any qualifying land or water interest owned by the taxpayer or a member of the taxpayer's family (as defined in section 2032A(e)(2)) at all times during the 5-year period ending on the date of the sale.

"(2) QUALIFYING LAND OR WATER INTEREST.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualifying land or water interest' means a real property interest which constitutes—

"(i) a taxpayer's entire interest in land,

"(ii) a taxpayer's entire interest in water rights,

"(iii) a qualified real property interest (as defined in section 170(h)(2)), or

"(iv) stock in a qualifying land or water corporation.

"(B) ENTIRE INTEREST.—For purposes of clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) a partial interest in land or water is not a taxpayer's entire interest if an interest in land or water was divided in order to create such partial interest in order to avoid the requirements of such clause or section 170(f)(3)(A), and

"(ii) a taxpayer's entire interest in certain land does not fail to satisfy subparagraph (A)(i) solely because the taxpayer has retained an interest in other land, even if the other land is contiguous with such certain land and was acquired by the taxpayer along with such certain land in a single conveyance.

"(e) Other Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Eligible entity.—The term 'eligible entity' means—

"(A) a governmental unit referred to in section 170(c)(1), or an agency or department thereof operated primarily for 1 or more of the conservation purposes specified in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of section 170(h)(4)(A), or

"(B) an entity which is—

"(i) described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(vi) or section 170(h)(3)(B), and

"(ii) organized and at all times operated primarily for 1 or more of the conservation purposes specified in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of section 170(h)(4)(A).

"(2) Qualifying letter of intent.—The term 'qualifying letter of intent' means a written letter of intent which includes the following statement: 'The transferee's intent is that this acquisition will serve 1 or more of the conservation purposes specified in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of section 170(h)(4)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, that the transferee's use of the property so acquired will be consistent with section 170(h)(5) of such Code, and that the use of the property will continue to be consistent with such section, even if ownership or possession of such property is subsequently transferred to another person.'

"(3) Qualifying land or water corporation.—The term 'qualifying land or water corporation' means a C corporation (as defined in section 1361(a)(2)) if, as of the date of the conservation sale—

"(A) the fair market value of the corporation's interests in land or water held by the corporation at all times during the preceding 5 years equals or exceeds 90 percent of the fair market value of all of such corporation's assets, and

"(B) not more than 50 percent of the total fair market value of such corporation's assets consists of water rights or infrastructure related to the delivery of water, or both.

"(f) Tax on Subsequent Transfers or Removals of Conservation Restrictions.—

"(1) In general.—A tax is hereby imposed on any subsequent—

"(A) transfer by an eligible entity of ownership or possession, whether by sale, exchange, or lease, of property acquired directly or indirectly in—

"(i) a conservation sale described in subsection (a), or

"(ii) a transfer described in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of paragraph (4)(A), or

"(B) removal of a conservation restriction contained in an instrument of conveyance of such property.

"(2) Amount of tax.—The amount of tax imposed by paragraph (1) on any transfer or removal shall be equal to the sum of—

"(A) either—

"(i) 20 percent of the fair market value (determined at the time of the transfer) of the property the ownership or possession of which is transferred, or

"(ii) 20 percent of the fair market value (determined at the time immediately after the removal) of the property upon which the conservation restriction was removed, plus

"(B) the product of—

"(i) the highest rate of tax specified in section 11, times

"(ii) any gain or income realized by the transferor or person removing such restriction as a result of the transfer or removal.

"(3) Liability.—The tax imposed by paragraph (1) shall be paid—

"(A) on any transfer, by the transferor, and

"(B) on any removal of a conservation restriction contained in an instrument of conveyance, by the person removing such restriction.

"(4) Relief from liability.—The person (otherwise liable for any tax imposed by paragraph (1)) shall be relieved of liability for the tax imposed by paragraph (1)—

"(A) with respect to any transfer if—

"(i) the transferee is an eligible entity which provides such person, at the time of transfer, a qualifying letter of intent,

"(ii) the transferee is not an eligible entity, it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary, that the transfer of ownership or possession, as the case may be, will be consistent with section 170(h)(5), and the transferee provides such person, at the time of transfer, a qualifying letter of intent, or

"(iii) tax has previously been paid under this subsection as a result of a prior transfer of ownership or possession of the same property, or

"(B) with respect to any removal of a conservation restriction contained in an instrument of conveyance, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the retention of the restriction was impracticable or impossible and the proceeds continue to be used in a manner consistent with 1 or more of the conservation purposes specified in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of section 170(h)(4)(A).

"(5) Administrative provisions.—For purposes of subtitle F, the taxes imposed by this subsection shall be treated as excise taxes with respect to which the deficiency procedures of such subtitle apply.

"(6) Reporting.—The Secretary may require such reporting as may be necessary or appropriate to further the purpose under this section that any conservation use be in perpetuity.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections for part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 121 the following new item:

"Sec. 121A. 25-percent exclusion of gain on sales or exchanges of land or water interests to eligible entities for conservation purposes.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales or exchanges occurring after December 31, 2003, in taxable years ending after such date.

SEC. 108. TAX EXCLUSION FOR COST-SHARING PAYMENTS UNDER PARTNERS FOR FISH AND WILDLIFE PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Section 126(a) (relating to certain cost-sharing payments) is amended by redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (11) and by inserting after paragraph (9) the following:

SEC. 110. ENHANCED DEDUCTION FOR CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTION OF LITERARY, MUSICAL, ARTISTIC, AND SCHOLARLY COMPOSITIONS.

(a) In General.—Subsection (e) of section 170 (relating to certain contributions of ordinary income and capital gain property), as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(A) In general.—In the case of a qualified artistic charitable contribution—

"(i) the amount of such contribution taken into account under this section shall be the fair market value of the property contributed (determined at the time of such contribution), and

"(ii) no reduction in the amount of such contribution shall be made under paragraph (1).

"(B) Qualified artistic charitable contribution.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified artistic charitable contribution' means a charitable contribution of any literary, musical, artistic, or scholarly composition, or similar property, or the copyright thereon (or both), but only if—

"(i) such property was created by the personal efforts of the taxpayer making such contribution no less than 18 months prior to such contribution,

"(ii) the taxpayer—

"(I) has received a qualified appraisal of the fair market value of such property in accordance with the regulations under this section, and

"(II) attaches to the taxpayer's income tax return for the taxable year in which such contribution was made a copy of such appraisal,

"(iii) the donee is an organization described in subsection (b)(1)(A),

"(iv) the use of such property by the donee is related to the purpose or function constituting the basis for the donee's exemption under section 501 (or, in the case of a governmental unit, to any purpose or function described under section 501(c)),

"(v) the taxpayer receives from the donee a written statement representing that the donee's use of the property will be in accordance with the provisions of clause (iv), and

"(vi) the written appraisal referred to in clause (ii) includes evidence of the extent (if any) to which property created by the personal efforts of the taxpayer and of the same type as the donated property is or has been—

"(I) owned, maintained, and displayed by organizations described in subsection (b)(1)(A), and

"(II) sold to or exchanged by persons other than the taxpayer, donee, or any related person (as defined in section 465(b)(3)(C)).

"(C) Maximum dollar limitation; no carryover of increased deduction.—The increase in the deduction under this section by reason of this paragraph for any taxable year—

"(i) shall not exceed the artistic adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for such taxable year, and

"(ii) shall not be taken into account in determining the amount which may be carried from such taxable year under subsection (d).

"(D) Artistic adjusted gross income.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'artistic adjusted gross income' means that portion of the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year attributable to—

"(i) income from the sale or use of property created by the personal efforts of the taxpayer which is of the same type as the donated property, and

"(ii) income from teaching, lecturing, performing, or similar activity with respect to property described in clause (i).

"(E) Paragraph not to apply to certain contributions.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any charitable contribution of any letter, memorandum, or similar property which was written, prepared, or produced by or for an individual while the individual is an officer or employee of any person (including any government agency or instrumentality) unless such letter, memorandum, or similar property is entirely personal.

"(F) Copyright treated as separate property for partial interest rule.—In the case of a qualified artistic charitable contribution, the tangible literary, musical, artistic, or scholarly composition, or similar property and the copyright on such work shall be treated as separate properties for purposes of this paragraph and subsection (f)(3).".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to contributions made after December 31, 2002, in taxable years ending after such date.

SEC. 310. TREATMENT OF BONDS ISSUED TO ACQUIRE STANDING TIMBER ON LAND SUBJECT TO CONSERVATION EASEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 145 (defining qualified 501(c)(3) bond) is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) BONDS ISSUED TO ACQUIRE STANDING TIMBER ON LAND SUBJECT TO CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A bond to which this subsection applies shall not fail to be a qualified 501(c)(3) bond by reason of the sale, lease, or other use of standing timber if—

"(A) such sale, lease, or other use does not constitute an unrelated trade or business (determined by applying section 513(a)),

"(B) the bond is designated by the Secretary for purposes of this subsection, and

"(C) the bond otherwise meets the requirements of this subsection.

"(2) BONDS TO WHICH SUBSECTION APPLIES.—This subsection applies to bonds the proceeds of which are used to acquire both land and any standing timber associated with such land from an unrelated person if—

"(A) such land is subject to a conservation restriction which—

"(i) is granted in perpetuity to an unrelated person which is a qualified organization (as defined in section 170(h)(3)),

"(ii) meets the requirements of clause (ii) or (iii)(II) of section 170(h)(4)(A), and

"(iii) obligates the owner of such land to pay the costs incurred by the holder of the conservation restriction in monitoring compliance with such restriction, and

"(B) the seller irrevocably elects not to exclude from income any gain on the sale under section 121A.

"(3) TREATMENT OF TIMBER, ETC.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a), the cost of any standing timber acquired with proceeds of such bonds shall be treated as a cost of acquiring the land associated with the standing timber and such land shall not be treated as used for a private business use because of the sale or lease of the standing timber to, or other use of the standing timber by, an unrelated person to the extent that such sale, lease, or other use does not constitute an unrelated trade or business, determined by applying section 513(a).

"(B) APPLICATION OF BOND MATURITY LIMITATION.—For purposes of section 147(b), the land or standing timber acquired with proceeds of such bonds shall have an economic life of 35 years.

"(C) UNRELATED PERSON.—For purposes of this subsection, a person shall be treated as unrelated to—

"(i) an organization to which section 501 applies, if such person (or, if such person is an individual, a member of such person's family) controls directly or indirectly less than 20 percent of the governing body of such organization,

"(ii) a corporation, if such person owns directly or indirectly less than 20 percent of the value of the outstanding stock of such corporation, or

"(iii) a partnership, if such person owns directly or indirectly less than 20 percent of the capital interests or profit interests of such partnership.

"(4) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF BONDS DESIGNATED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The aggregate amount of bonds (including any bond (or series of bonds) used to advance refund such bonds) which may be designated for purposes of this subsection under paragraph (1)(B) shall not exceed $2,000,000,000.

"(B) NO DESIGNATION AFTER 2005.—No bonds may be so designated after 2005.

"(C) ALLOCATION OF LIMITATION.—The limitation described in subparagraph (A) shall be allocated by the Secretary among 501(c)(3) organizations based on criteria established by the Secretary after consultation with appropriate Federal, State, and local officials.

"(D) TREATMENT OF CURRENT REFUNDING BONDS.—Any bond (or series of bonds) issued to refund a bond designated and issued before January 1, 2006, shall be treated as designated for purposes of this subsection under paragraph (1)(B) and shall not be taken into account in applying subparagraph (A) or (B) of this paragraph if—

"(i) the amount of the refunding bond does not exceed the outstanding amount of the refunded bond, and

"(ii) the net proceeds of the refunding bond are used to redeem the refunded bond not later than 90 days after the date of the issuance of the refunding bond.

"(5) TERMINATION.—This subsection shall not apply to any bond (other than a refunding bond described in paragraph (4)(D)) issued after December 31, 2005.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to bonds issued after September 30, 2002.

SEC. 311. EXEMPTION FROM INCOME TAX FOR STATE-CREATED ORGANIZATIONS PROVIDING PROPERTY AND CASUALTY INSURANCE FOR PROPERTY FOR WHICH SUCH COVERAGE IS OTHERWISE UNAVAILABLE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (c) of section 501 (relating to exemption from tax on corporations, certain trusts, etc.) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(29)(A) Any association created before January 1, 1999, by State law and organized and operated exclusively to provide property and casualty insurance coverage for windstorm, hail, and fire damage to property located within the State for which the State determines, through appropriate State action, that such coverage in the authorized insurance market is not reasonably available to a substantial number of insurable real properties (and any successor association) if—

"(i) no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual,

"(ii) except as provided in clause (v), no part of the assets of which may be used for, or diverted to, any purpose other than—

"(I) to satisfy, in whole or in part, the liability of the association for, or with respect to, claims made on policies written by the association,

"(II) to invest in investments authorized by applicable law,

"(III) to pay reasonable and necessary administration expenses in connection with the establishment and operation of the association and the processing of claims against the association, or

"(IV) to make remittances pursuant to State law to be used by the State to provide for the payment of claims on policies written by the association, purchase reinsurance covering losses under such policies, or to support governmental programs to prepare for or mitigate the effects of natural catastrophic events,

"(iii) the State law governing the association permits the association to levy assessments on insurance companies authorized to sell property and casualty insurance in the State, or on property and casualty insurance policyholders with insurable interests in property located in the State to fund deficits of the association, including the creation of reserves,

"(iv) the plan of operation of the association is subject to approval by the chief executive officer or other official of the State, by the State legislature, or both, and

"(v) the assets of the association revert upon dissolution to the State, the State's designee, or an entity designated by the State law governing the association, or State law does not permit the dissolution of the association.

"(B)(i) An entity described in clause (ii) (and any successor entity) shall be disregarded as a separate entity and treated as part of the association described in subparagraph (A) from which it receives remittances described in clause (ii) if an election is made within 30 days after the date that such association is determined to be exempt from tax.

"(ii) An entity is described in this clause if it is an entity or fund created before January 1, 1999, pursuant to State law and organized and operated exclusively to receive, hold, and invest remittances from an association described in subparagraph (A) and exempt from tax under subsection (a), to make disbursements to pay claims on insurance contracts issued by such association, and to make disbursements to support governmental programs to prepare for or mitigate the effects of natural catastrophic events.".

(b) UNRELATED BUSINESS TAXABLE INCOME.—Subsection (a) of section 512 (relating to unrelated business taxable income) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) SPECIAL RULE APPLICABLE TO ORGANIZATIONS DESCRIBED IN SECTION 501(c)(29).—In the case of an organization described in section 501(c)(29), the term 'unrelated business taxable income' means taxable income for a taxable year computed without the application of section 501(c)(29) if at the end of the immediately preceding taxable year the organization's net equity exceeded 15 percent of the total coverage in force under insurance contracts issued by the organization and outstanding at the end of such preceding year.".

(c) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—No income or gain shall be recognized by an association as a result of a change in status to that of an association described by section 501(c)(29) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended by subsection (a).

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2002.

SEC. 312. MODIFICATION OF SPECIAL ARBITRAGE RULE FOR CERTAIN FUNDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 648 of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 is amended to read as follows:

"(1) such securities or obligations are held in a fund—

"(A) which, except to the extent of the investment earnings on such securities or obligations, cannot be used, under State constitutional or statutory restrictions continuously in effect since October 9, 1969, through the date of issue of the bond issue, to pay debt service on the bond issue or to finance the facilities that are to be financed with the proceeds of the bonds, or

"(B) the annual distributions from which cannot exceed 7 percent of the average fair market value of the assets held in such fund except to the extent distributions are necessary to pay debt service on the bond issue,".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 648(3) of such Act is amended by striking "the investment earnings of" and inserting "distributions from".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 313. MATCHING GRANTS TO LOW-INCOME TAXPAYER CLINICS FOR RETURN PREPARATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may, subject to the availability of appropriated funds, make grants to provide matching funds to not-for-profit organizations described in section 501(c) and exempt from taxation under section 501(a) which assist low-income taxpayers in tax return preparation.

"(b) AGGREGATE LIMITATION.—Unless otherwise provided by specific appropriation, the Secretary shall not allocate more than $10,000,000 per year (exclusive of costs of administering the program) to grants under this section.

"(c) REQUIREMENT OF MATCHING FUNDS.—A not-for-profit organization must provide matching funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis for all grants provided under this section. Matching funds may include—

"(1) the salary (including fringe benefits) of individuals performing tax return preparation services for the organization; and

"(2) the cost of equipment used by the organization.

Indirect expenses, including general overhead of the organization, shall not be counted as matching funds.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 314. MODIFICATION OF SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION RULES.

In applying the limitations on the percentage of scholarship grants which may be awarded after December 31, 2002, to children of employees under Revenue Procedure 76–47, such percentage shall be increased to 35 percent of the eligible applicants to be considered by the selection committee and to 20 percent of individuals eligible for the grants, but only if the foundation awarding the grants demonstrates that, in addition to meeting the other requirements of Revenue Procedure 76–47, it provides a comparable number and aggregate amount of grants during the same program year to children who are not children of current or former employees.

SEC. 315. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN HOSPITAL SUPPORT ORGANIZATIONS AS QUALIFIED ORGANIZATIONS FOR PURPOSES OF DETERMINING ACQUISITION INDEBTEDNESS.

(a) In General.—Subparagraph (C) of section 514(c)(9) (relating to real property acquired by a qualified organization) is amended by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting "; or", and by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) a qualified hospital support organization (as defined in subparagraph (I)).".

(b) Qualified Hospital Support Organizations.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(I) Qualified hospital support organizations.—For purposes of subparagraph (C)(iv), the term 'qualified hospital support organization' means, with respect to any eligible indebtedness (including any qualified refinancing of such eligible indebtedness), a support organization (as defined in section 509(a)(3)) which supports a hospital described in section 119(d)(4)(B) and with respect to which—

"(i) more than half of its assets (by value) at any time since its organization—

"(I) were acquired, directly or indirectly, by testamentary gift or devise, and

"(II) consisted of real property, and

"(ii) the fair market value of the organization's real estate acquired, directly or indirectly, by gift or devise, exceeded 25 percent of the fair market value of all investment assets held by the organization immediately prior to the time that the eligible indebtedness was incurred.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'eligible indebtedness' means indebtedness secured by real property acquired by the organization, directly or indirectly, by gift or devise, the proceeds of which are used exclusively to acquire any leasehold interest in such real property or for improvements on, or repairs to, such real property. A determination under clauses (i) and (ii) of this subparagraph shall be made each time such an eligible indebtedness (or the qualified refinancing of such an eligible indebtedness) is incurred. For purposes of this subparagraph, a refinancing of such an eligible indebtedness shall be considered qualified if such refinancing does not exceed the amount of the refinanced eligible indebtedness immediately before the refinancing.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to indebtedness incurred after December 31, 2003.

SEC. 316. 10-YEAR DIVESTITURE PERIOD FOR CERTAIN EXCESS BUSINESS HOLDINGS OF PRIVATE FOUNDATIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 4943(c) (relating to excess business holdings) is amended by redesignating paragraph (7) as paragraph (8) and by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) 10-year period to dispose of certain large gifts and bequests.—

"(A) In general.—Upon the election of a private foundation (at such time and in such form and manner as the Secretary may prescribe), paragraph (6) shall be applied by substituting '10-year period' for '5-year period' if—

"(i) it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that—

"(I) the excess business holdings (or increase in excess business holdings) in a business enterprise by the private foundation is the result of a gift or bequest the value of which exceeds $1,000,000,000, and

"(II) after such gift or bequest, the private foundation does not have effective control of such business enterprise to which such gift or bequest relates, and

"(ii) not later than the end of the taxable year following the taxable year during which such gift or bequest was made, the private foundation submits to the Secretary a reasonable plan for disposing of all of the excess business holdings related to such gift or bequest.

"(B) Inflation adjustment.—In the case of any taxable year beginning in a calendar year after 2003, the $1,000,000,000 amount under subparagraph (A)(i)(I) shall be increased by an amount equal to such dollar amount, multiplied by the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section 1(f)(3) for such calendar year, determined by substituting '2002' for '1992' in subparagraph (B) thereof. If the $1,000,000,000 amount as increased under this subparagraph is not a multiple of $100,000,000, such amount shall be rounded to the next lowest multiple of $100,000,000.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to gifts and bequests made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE IV—SOCIAL SERVICES BLOCK GRANT

SEC. 401. RESTORATION OF FUNDS FOR THE SOCIAL SERVICES BLOCK GRANT.

(a) Findings.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On August 22, 1996, the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–193; 110 Stat. 2105) was signed into law.

(2) In enacting that law, Congress authorized $2,800,000,000 for fiscal year 2003 and each fiscal year thereafter to carry out the Social Services Block Grant program established under title XX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1397 et seq.).

(b) Restoration of Funds.—Section 2003(c)(11) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1397b(c)(11)) is amended by inserting ", except that, with respect to fiscal year 2003, the amount shall be $1,975,000,000, and with respect to fiscal year 2004, the amount shall be $2,800,000,000" after "thereafter.".

SEC. 402. RESTORATION OF AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER UP TO 10 PERCENT OF TANF FUNDS TO THE SOCIAL SERVICES BLOCK GRANT.

(a) In General.—Section 404(d)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 604(d)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Limitation on amount transferable to title xx programs.—A State may use not more than 10 percent of the amount of any grant made to the State under section 403(a) for a fiscal year to carry out State programs pursuant to title XX.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) applies to amounts made available for fiscal year 2003 and each fiscal year thereafter.

SEC. 403. REQUIREMENT TO SUBMIT ANNUAL REPORT ON STATE ACTIVITIES.

(a) In General.—Section 2006(c) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1397e(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "The Secretary shall compile the information submitted by the States and submit that information to Congress on an annual basis.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) applies to information submitted by States under section 2006 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1397e) with respect to fiscal year 2002 and each fiscal year thereafter.

TITLE V—INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNTS

SEC. 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Savings for Working Families Act of 2002".

SEC. 502. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are to provide for the establishment of individual development account programs that will—

(1) provide individuals and families with limited means an opportunity to accumulate assets and to enter the financial mainstream,

(2) promote education, homeownership, and the development of small businesses,

(3) stabilize families and build communities, and

(4) support continued United States economic expansion.

SEC. 503. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) Eligible individual.—

(A) In general.—The term "eligible individual" means, with respect to any taxable year, an individual who—

(i) has attained the age of 18 but not the age of 61 as of the last day of such taxable year,

(ii) is a citizen or lawful permanent resident (within the meaning of section 7701(b)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) of the United States as of the last day of such taxable year,

(iii) was not a student (as defined in section 151(c)(4) of such Code) for the immediately preceding taxable year,

(iv) is not an individual with respect to whom a deduction under section 151 of such Code is allowable to another taxpayer for a taxable year of the other taxpayer ending during the immediately preceding taxable year of the individual,

(v) is not a taxpayer described in subsection (c), (d), or (e) of section 6402 of such Code for the immediately preceding taxable year,

(vi) is not a taxpayer described in section 1(d) of such Code for the immediately preceding taxable year, and

(vii) is a taxpayer the modified adjusted gross income of whom for the immediately preceding taxable year does not exceed—

(I) $18,000, in the case of a taxpayer described in section 1(c) of such Code,

(II) $30,000, in the case of a taxpayer described in section 1(b) of such Code, and

(III) $38,000, in the case of a taxpayer described in section 1(a) of such Code.

(B) INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any taxable year beginning after 2004, each dollar amount referred to in subparagraph (A)(vii) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

(I) such dollar amount, multiplied by

(II) the cost-of-living adjustment determined under section (1)(f)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, by substituting "2003" for "1992".

(ii) ROUNDING.—If any amount as adjusted under clause (i) is not a multiple of $50, such amount shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $50.

(C) MODIFIED ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(v), the term "modified adjusted gross income" means adjusted gross income—

(i) determined without regard to sections 86, 893, 911, 931, and 933 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and

(ii) increased by the amount of interest received or accrued by the taxpayer during the taxable year which is exempt from tax.

(2) INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT.—The term "Individual Development Account" means an account established for an eligible individual as part of a qualified individual development account program, but only if the written governing instrument creating the account meets the following requirements:

(A) The owner of the account is the individual for whom the account was established.

(B) No contribution will be accepted unless it is in cash, and, except in the case of any qualified rollover, contributions will not be accepted for the taxable year in excess of $1,500 on behalf of any individual.

(C) The trustee of the account is a qualified financial institution.

(D) The assets of the account will not be commingled with other property except in a common trust fund or common investment fund.

(E) Except as provided in section 507(b), any amount in the account may be paid out only for the purpose of paying the qualified expenses of the account owner.

(3) PARALLEL ACCOUNT.—The term "parallel account" means a separate, parallel individual or pooled account for all matching funds and earnings dedicated to an Individual Development Account owner as part of a qualified individual development account program, the trustee of which is a qualified financial institution.

(4) QUALIFIED FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The term "qualified financial institution" means any person authorized to be a trustee of any individual retirement account under section 408(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(5) QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT PROGRAM.—The term "qualified individual development account program" means a program established upon approval of the Secretary under section 504 after December 31, 2002, under which—

(A) Individual Development Accounts and parallel accounts are held in trust by a qualified financial institution, and

(B) additional activities determined by the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, as necessary to responsibly develop and administer accounts, including recruiting, providing financial education and other training to Account owners, and regular program monitoring, are carried out by the qualified financial institution.

(6) QUALIFIED EXPENSE DISTRIBUTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified expense distribution" means any amount paid (including through electronic payments) or distributed out of an Individual Development Account or a parallel account established for an eligible individual if such amount—

(i) is used exclusively to pay the qualified expenses of the Individual Development Account owner or such owner's spouse or dependents,

(ii) is paid by the qualified financial institution—

(I) except as otherwise provided in this clause, directly to the unrelated third party to whom the amount is due,

(II) in the case of any qualified rollover, directly to another Individual Development Account and parallel account, or

(III) in the case of a qualified final distribution, directly to the spouse, dependent, or other named beneficiary of the deceased Account owner, and

(iii) is paid after the Account owner has completed a financial education course if required under section 505(b).

(B) QUALIFIED EXPENSES.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified expenses" means any of the following expenses approved by the qualified financial institution:

(I) Qualified higher education expenses.

(II) Qualified first-time homebuyer costs.

(III) Qualified business capitalization or expansion costs.

(IV) Qualified rollovers.

(V) Qualified final distribution.

(ii) QUALIFIED HIGHER EDUCATION EXPENSES.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified higher education expenses" has the meaning given such term by section 529(e)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, determined by treating the Account owner, the owner's spouse, or one or more of the owner's dependents as a designated beneficiary, and reduced as provided in section 25A(g)(2) of such Code.

(II) COORDINATION WITH OTHER BENEFITS.—The amount of expenses which may be taken into account for purposes of section 135, 529, or 530 of such Code for any taxable year shall be reduced by the amount of any qualified higher education expenses taken into account as qualified expense distributions during such taxable year.

(iii) QUALIFIED FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER COSTS.—The term "qualified first-time homebuyer costs" means qualified acquisition costs (as defined in section 72(t)(8)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) with respect to a principal residence (within the meaning of section 121 of such Code) for a qualified first-time homebuyer (as defined in section 72(t)(8)(D)(i) of such Code).

(iv) QUALIFIED BUSINESS CAPITALIZATION OR EXPANSION COSTS.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified business capitalization or expansion costs" means qualified expenditures for the capitalization or expansion of a qualified business pursuant to a qualified business plan.

(II) QUALIFIED EXPENDITURES.—The term "qualified expenditures" means expenditures normally associated with starting or expanding a business and included in a qualified business plan, including costs for capital, plant, and equipment, inventory expenses, and attorney and accounting fees.

(III) QUALIFIED BUSINESS.—The term "qualified business" means any business that does not contravene any law.

(IV) QUALIFIED BUSINESS PLAN.—The term "qualified business plan" means a business plan which has been approved by the qualified financial institution and which meets such requirements as the Secretary may specify.

(v) QUALIFIED ROLLOVERS.—The term "qualified rollover" means the complete distribution of the amounts in an Individual Development Account and parallel account to another Individual Development Account and parallel account established in another qualified financial institution for the benefit of the Account owner.

(vi) QUALIFIED FINAL DISTRIBUTION.—The term "qualified final distribution" means, in the case of a deceased Account owner, the complete distribution of the amounts in the Individual Development Account and parallel account directly to the spouse, any dependent, or other named beneficiary of the deceased.

(7) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 504. STRUCTURE AND ADMINISTRATION OF QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT PROGRAMS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT PROGRAMS.—Any qualified financial institution may apply to the Secretary for approval to establish 1 or more qualified individual development account programs which meet the requirements of this title and for an allocation of the Individual Development Account limitation under section 45G(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to such programs.

(b) BASIC PROGRAM STRUCTURE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—All qualified individual development account programs shall consist of the following 2 components for each participant:

(A) An Individual Development Account to which an eligible individual may contribute cash in accordance with section 505.

(B) A parallel account to which all matching funds shall be deposited in accordance with section 506.

(2) TAILORED IDA PROGRAMS.—A qualified financial institution may tailor its qualified individual development account program to allow matching funds to be spent on 1 or more of the categories of qualified expenses.

(3) NO FEES MAY BE CHARGED TO IDAS.—A qualified financial institution may not charge any fees to any Individual Development Account or parallel account under a qualified individual development account program.

(c) COORDINATION WITH PUBLIC HOUSING AGENCY INDIVIDUAL SAVINGS ACCOUNTS.—Section 3(e)(2) of the United States Housing Act of 1937 (42 U.S.C. 1437a(e)(2)) is amended by inserting "or in any Individual Development Account established under the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002" after "subsection".

(d) TAX TREATMENT OF PARALLEL ACCOUNTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 77 (relating to miscellaneous provisions) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"For purposes of this title—

"(1) any account described in section 504(b)(1)(B) of the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002 shall be exempt from taxation,

"(2) except as provided in section 45G, no item of income, expense, basis, gain, or loss with respect to such an account may be taken into account, and

"(3) any amount withdrawn from such an account shall not be includible in gross income.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 77 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

(e) COORDINATION OF CERTAIN EXPENSES.—Section 25A(g)(2) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) a qualified expense distribution with respect to qualified higher education expenses from an Individual Development Account or a parallel account under section 507(a) of the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002.

SEC. 505. PROCEDURES FOR OPENING AND MAINTAINING AN INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT AND QUALIFYING FOR MATCHING FUNDS.

(a) OPENING AN ACCOUNT.—An eligible individual may open an Individual Development Account with a qualified financial institution upon certification that such individual has never maintained any other Individual Development Account (other than an Individual Development Account to be terminated by a qualified rollover).

(b) REQUIRED COMPLETION OF FINANCIAL EDUCATION COURSE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Before becoming eligible to withdraw funds to pay for qualified expenses, owners of Individual Development Accounts must complete 1 or more financial education courses specified in the qualified individual development account program.

(2) STANDARD AND APPLICABILITY OF COURSE.—The Secretary, in consultation with representatives of qualified individual development account programs and financial educators, shall not later than January 1, 2004, establish minimum quality standards for the contents of financial education courses and providers of such courses described in paragraph (1) and a protocol to exempt individuals from the requirement under paragraph (1) in the case of hardship, lack of need, the attainment of age 65, or a qualified final distribution.

(c) PROOF OF STATUS AS AN ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUAL.—Federal income tax forms for the immediately preceding taxable year and any other evidence of eligibility which may be required by a qualified financial institution shall be presented to such institution at the time of the establishment of the Individual Development Account and in any taxable year in which contributions are made to the Account to qualify for matching funds under section 506(b)(1)(A).

(d) SPECIAL RULE IN THE CASE OF MARRIED INDIVIDUALS.—For purposes of this title, if, with respect to any taxable year, 2 married individuals file a Federal joint income tax return, then not more than 1 of such individuals may be treated as an eligible individual with respect to the succeeding taxable year.

SEC. 506. DEPOSITS BY QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT PROGRAMS.

(a) PARALLEL ACCOUNTS.—The qualified financial institution shall deposit all matching funds for each Individual Development Account into a parallel account at a qualified financial institution.

(b) REGULAR DEPOSITS OF MATCHING FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the qualified financial institution shall deposit into the parallel account with respect to each eligible individual the following amounts:

(A) A dollar-for-dollar match for the first $500 contributed by the eligible individual into an Individual Development Account with respect to any taxable year of such individual.

(B) Any matching funds provided by State, local, or private sources in accordance with the matching ratio set by those sources.

(2) TIMING OF DEPOSITS.—A deposit of the amounts described in paragraph (1) shall be made into a parallel account—

(A) in the case of amounts described in paragraph (1)(A), not later than 30 days after the end of the calendar quarter during which the contribution described in such paragraph was made, and

(B) in the case of amounts described in paragraph (1)(B), not later than 2 business days after such amounts were provided.

(3) CROSS REFERENCE.—

For allowance of tax credit for Individual Development Account subsidies, including matching funds, see section 45G of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(c) DEPOSIT OF MATCHING FUNDS INTO INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT OF INDIVIDUAL WHO HAS ATTAINED AGE 65.—In the case of an Individual Development Account owner who attains the age of 65, the qualified financial institution shall deposit the funds in the parallel account with respect to such individual into the Individual Development Account of such individual on the later of—

(1) the day which is the 1-year anniversary of the deposit of such funds in the parallel account, or

(2) the first business day of the taxable year of such individual following the taxable year in which such individual attained age 65.

(d) UNIFORM ACCOUNTING REGULATIONS.—To ensure proper recordkeeping and determination of the tax credit under section 45G of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations with respect to accounting for matching funds in the parallel accounts.

(e) REGULAR REPORTING OF ACCOUNTS.—Any qualified financial institution shall report the balances in any Individual Development Account and parallel account of an individual on not less than an annual basis to such individual.

SEC. 507. WITHDRAWAL PROCEDURES.

(a) WITHDRAWALS FOR QUALIFIED EXPENSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An Individual Development Account owner may withdraw funds in order to pay qualified expense distributions from such individual's—

(A) Individual Development Account, but only from funds which have been on deposit in such Account for at least 1 year, and

(B) parallel account, but only—

(i) from matching funds which have been on deposit in such parallel account for at least 1 year,

(ii) from earnings in such parallel account, after all matching funds described in clause (i) have been withdrawn, and

(iii) to the extent such withdrawal does not result in a remaining balance in such parallel account which is less than the remaining balance in the Individual Development Account after such withdrawal.

(2) PROCEDURE.—Upon receipt of a withdrawal request which meets the requirements of paragraph (1), the qualified financial institution shall directly transfer the funds electronically to the distributees described in section 503(6)(A)(ii). If a distributee is not equipped to receive funds electronically, the qualified financial institution may issue such funds by paper check to the distributee.

(b) WITHDRAWALS FOR NONQUALIFIED EXPENSES.—An Individual Development Account owner may withdraw any amount of funds from the Individual Development Account for purposes other than to pay qualified expense distributions, but if, after such withdrawal, the amount in the parallel account of such owner (excluding earnings on matching funds) exceeds the amount remaining in such Individual Development Account, then such owner shall forfeit from the parallel account the lesser of such excess or the amount withdrawn.

(c) WITHDRAWALS FROM ACCOUNTS OF NONELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.—If the individual for whose benefit an Individual Development Account is established ceases to be an eligible individual, such account shall remain an Individual Development Account, but such individual shall not be eligible for any further matching funds under section 506(b)(1)(A) for contributions which are made to the Account during any taxable year when such individual is not an eligible individual.

(d) EFFECT OF PLEDGING ACCOUNT AS SECURITY.—If, during any taxable year of the individual for whose benefit an Individual Development Account is established, that individual uses the Account, the individual's parallel account, or any portion thereof as security for a loan, the portion so used shall be treated as a withdrawal of such portion from the Individual Development Account for purposes other than to pay qualified expenses.

SEC. 508. CERTIFICATION AND TERMINATION OF QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT PROGRAMS.

(a) CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES.—Upon establishing a qualified individual development account program under section 504, a qualified financial institution shall certify to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary and accompanied by any documentation required by the Secretary, that—

(1) the accounts described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 504(b)(1) are operating pursuant to all the provisions of this title, and

(2) the qualified financial institution agrees to implement an information system necessary to monitor the cost and outcomes of the qualified individual development account program.

(b) AUTHORITY TO TERMINATE QUALIFIED IDA PROGRAM.—If the Secretary determines that a qualified financial institution under this title is not operating a qualified individual development account program in accordance with the requirements of this title (and has not implemented any corrective recommendations directed by the Secretary), the Secretary shall terminate such institution's authority to conduct the program. If the Secretary is unable to identify a qualified financial institution to assume the authority to conduct such program, then any funds in a parallel account established for the benefit of any individual under such program shall be deposited into the Individual Development Account of such individual as of the first day of such termination.

SEC. 509. REPORTING, MONITORING, AND EVALUATION.

(a) RESPONSIBILITIES OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each qualified financial institution that operates a qualified individual development account program under section 504 shall report annually to the Secretary within 90 days after the end of each calendar year on—

(A) the number of individuals making contributions into Individual Development Accounts and the amounts contributed,

(B) the amounts contributed into Individual Development Accounts by eligible individuals and the amounts deposited into parallel accounts for matching funds,

(C) the amounts withdrawn from Individual Development Accounts and parallel accounts, and the purposes for which such amounts were withdrawn,

(D) the balances remaining in Individual Development Accounts and parallel accounts, and

(E) such other information needed to help the Secretary monitor the effectiveness of the qualified individual development account program (provided in a non-individually-identifiable manner).

(2) Additional reporting requirements.—Each qualified financial institution that operates a qualified individual development account program under section 504 shall report at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe any additional information that the Secretary requires to be provided for purposes of administering and supervising the qualified individual development account program. This additional data may include, without limitation, identifying information about Individual Development Account owners, their Accounts, additions to the Accounts, and withdrawals from the Accounts.

(b) Responsibilities of the Secretary.—

(1) Monitoring protocol.—Not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall develop and implement a protocol and process to monitor the cost and outcomes of the qualified individual development account programs established under section 504.

(2) Annual reports.—For each year after 2003, the Secretary shall submit a progress report to Congress on the status of such qualified individual development account programs. Such report shall, to the extent data are available, include from a representative sample of qualified individual development account programs information on—

(A) the characteristics of participants, including age, gender, race or ethnicity, marital status, number of children, employment status, and monthly income,

(B) deposits, withdrawals, balances, uses of Individual Development Accounts, and participant characteristics,

(C) the characteristics of qualified individual development account programs, including match rate, economic education requirements, permissible uses of accounts, staffing of programs in full time employees, and the total costs of programs, and

(D) process information on program implementation and administration, especially on problems encountered and how problems were solved.

(3) Reauthorization report on cost and outcomes of IDAs.—

(A) In general.—Not later than July 1, 2008, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit a report to Congress and the chairmen and ranking members of the Committee on Finance, the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, and the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means, the Committee on Banking and Financial Services, and the Committee on Education and the Workforce of the House of Representatives, in which the Secretary shall—

(i) summarize the previously submitted annual reports required under paragraph (2),

(ii) from a representative sample of qualified individual development account programs, include an analysis of—

(I) the economic, social, and behavioral outcomes,

(II) the changes in savings rates, asset holdings, and household debt, and overall changes in economic stability,

(III) the changes in outlooks, attitudes, and behavior regarding savings strategies, investment, education, and family,

(IV) the integration into the financial mainstream, including decreased reliance on alternative financial services, and increase in acquisition of mainstream financial products, and

(V) the involvement in civic affairs, including neighborhood schools and associations, associated with participation in qualified individual development account programs,

(iii) from a representative sample of qualified individual development account programs, include a comparison of outcomes associated with such programs with outcomes associated with other Federal Government social and economic development programs, including asset building programs, and

(iv) make recommendations regarding the reauthorization of the qualified individual development account programs, including—

(I) recommendations regarding reforms that will improve the cost and outcomes of the such programs, including the ability to help low income families save and accumulate productive assets,

(II) recommendations regarding the appropriate levels of subsidies to provide effective incentives to financial institutions and Account owners under such programs, and

(III) recommendations regarding how such programs should be integrated into other Federal poverty reduction, asset building, and community development policies and programs.

(B) Authorization.—There is authorized to be appropriated $2,500,000, for carrying out the purposes of this paragraph.

(4) Use of accounts in rural areas encouraged.—The Secretary shall develop methods to encourage the use of Individual Development Accounts in rural areas.

SEC. 510. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $1,000,000 for fiscal year 2003 and for each fiscal year through 2010, for the purposes of implementing this title, including the reporting, monitoring, and evaluation required under section 509, to remain available until expended.

SEC. 511. MATCHING FUNDS FOR INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNTS PROVIDED THROUGH A TAX CREDIT FOR QUALIFIED FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) In General.—Subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to business related credits) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 45G. INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNT INVESTMENT CREDIT.

"(a) Determination of Amount.—For purposes of section 38, the individual development account investment credit determined under this section with respect to any eligible entity for any taxable year is an amount equal to the individual development account investment provided by such eligible entity during the taxable year under an individual development account program established under section 504 of the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002.

"(b) Applicable Tax.—For the purposes of this section, the term 'applicable tax' means the excess (if any) of—

"(1) the tax imposed under this chapter (other than the taxes imposed under the provisions described in subparagraphs (C) through (Q) of section 26(b)(2)), over

"(2) the credits allowable under subpart B (other than this section) and subpart D of this part.

"(c) Individual Development Account Investment.—For purposes of this section, the term 'individual development account investment' means, with respect to an individual development account program in any taxable year, an amount equal to the sum of—

"(1) the aggregate amount of dollar-for-dollar matches under such program under section 506(b)(1)(A) of the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002 for such taxable year, plus

"(2) $50 with respect to each Individual Development Account maintained—

"(A) as of the end of such taxable year, but only if such taxable year is within the 7-taxable-year period beginning with the taxable year in which such Account is opened, and

"(B) with a balance of not less than $100 (other than the taxable year in which such Account is opened).

"(d) Eligible Entity.—For purposes of this section, except as provided in regulations, the term 'eligible entity' means a qualified financial institution.

"(e) Other Definitions.—For purposes of this section, any term used in this section and also in the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002 shall have the meaning given such term by such Act.

"(f) Denial of Double Benefit.—

"(1) In general.—No deduction or credit (other than under this section) shall be allowed under this chapter with respect to any expense which—

"(A) is taken into account under subsection (c)(1)(A) in determining the credit under this section, or

"(B) is attributable to the maintenance of an Individual Development Account.

"(2) Determination of amount.—Solely for purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the amount attributable to the maintenance of an Individual Development Account shall be deemed to be the dollar amount of the credit allowed under subsection (c)(1)(B) for each taxable year such Individual Development Account is maintained.

"(g) Credit May Be Transferred.—

"(1) In general.—An eligible entity may transfer any credit allowable to the eligible entity under subsection (a) to any person other than to another eligible entity which is exempt from tax under this title. The determination as to whether a credit is allowable shall be made without regard to the tax-exempt status of the eligible entity.

"(2) Consent required for revocation.—Any transfer under paragraph (1) may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary.

"(h) Regulations.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out this section, including

"(1) such regulations as necessary to insure that any credit described in subsection (g)(1) is claimed once and not retransferred by a transferee, and

"(2) regulations providing for a recapture of the credit allowed under this section (notwithstanding any termination date described in subsection (i)) in cases where there is a forfeiture under section 507(b) of the Savings for Working Families Act of 2002 in a subsequent taxable year of any amount which was taken into account in determining the amount of such credit.

"(i) Application of Section.—

"(1) In general.—This section shall apply to any expenditure made in any taxable year ending after December 31, 2003, and beginning on or before January 1, 2011, with respect to any Individual Development Account which—

"(A) is opened before January 1, 2011, and

"(B) as determined by the Secretary, when added to all of the previously opened Individual Development Accounts, does not exceed—

"(i) 100,000 Accounts if opened after December 31, 2003, and before January 1, 2007,

"(ii) an additional 100,000 Accounts if opened after December 31, 2006, and before January 1, 2009, but only if, except as provided in paragraph (4), the total number of Accounts described in clause (i) are opened and the Secretary determines that such Accounts are being reasonably and responsibly administered, and

"(iii) an additional 100,000 Accounts if opened after December 31, 2008, and before January 1, 2011, but only if the total number of Accounts described in clauses (i) and (ii) are opened and the Secretary makes a determination described in paragraph (2).

Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, this section shall apply to amounts which are described in subsection (c)(1)(A) and which are timely deposited into a parallel account during the 30-day period following the end of last taxable year beginning before January 1, 2011.

"(2) Determination with respect to third group of accounts.—A determination is described in this paragraph if the Secretary determines that—

"(A) substantially all of the previously opened Accounts have been reasonably and responsibly administered prior to the date of the determination,

"(B) the individual development account programs have increased net savings of participants in the programs,

"(C) participants in the individual development account programs have increased Federal income tax liability and decreased utilization of Federal assistance programs relative to similarly situated individuals that did not participate in the individual development account programs, and

"(D) the sum of the estimated increased Federal tax liability and reduction of Federal assistance program benefits to participants in the individual development account programs is greater than the cost of the individual development account programs to the Federal government.

"(3) Determination of limitation.—The limitation on the number of Individual Development Accounts under paragraph (1)(B) shall be allocated by the Secretary among qualified individual development account programs selected by the Secretary and, in the case of the limitation under clause (iii) of such paragraph, shall be equally divided among the States.

"(4) Special rule if smaller number of accounts are opened.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B)(ii)—

"(i) In general.—If less than 100,000 Accounts are opened before January 1, 2007, such paragraph shall be applied by substituting "applicable number of Accounts' for '100,000 Accounts'.

"(ii) Applicable number.—For purposes of clause (i), the applicable number equals the lesser of—

"(I) 75,000, or

"(II) 3 times the number of Accounts opened before January 1, 2007.".

(b) Credit Treated as Business Credit.—Section 38(b) (relating to current year business credit) is amended by striking "plus" at the end of paragraph (14), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (15) and inserting ", plus", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(11) No carryback of section 45G credit before effective date.—No portion of the unused business credit for any taxable year which is attributable to the individual development account investment credit determined under section 45G may be carried back to a taxable year ending before January 1, 2004.".

(d) Conforming Amendment.—The table of sections for subpart C of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 45G. Individual development account investment credit.".

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after December 31, 2003.

SEC. 512. ACCOUNT FUNDS DISREGARDED FOR PURPOSES OF CERTAIN MEANS-TESTED FEDERAL PROGRAMS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law (other than the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) that requires consideration of 1 or more financial circumstances of an individual, for the purpose of determining eligibility to receive, or the amount of, any assistance or benefit authorized by such provision to be provided to or for the benefit of such individual, any amount (including earnings thereon) in any Individual Development Account of such individual and any matching deposit made on behalf of such individual (including earnings thereon) in any parallel account shall be disregarded for such purpose with respect to any period during which such individual maintains or makes contributions into such Individual Development Account.

TITLE VI—REVENUE PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Tax Shelter Transparency Requirements

PART I—TAXPAYER-RELATED PROVISIONS

SEC. 601. PENALTY FOR FAILING TO DISCLOSE REPORTABLE TRANSACTION.

(a) In General.—Part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 (relating to assessable penalties) is amended by inserting after section 6707 the following new section:

"SEC. 6707A. PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO INCLUDE REPORTABLE TRANSACTION INFORMATION WITH RETURN OR STATEMENT.

"(a) Imposition of Penalty.—Any person who fails to include on any return or statement any information with respect to a reportable transaction which is required under section 6011 to be included with such return or statement shall pay a penalty in the amount determined under subsection (b).

"(b) Amount of Penalty.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amount of the penalty under subsection (a) shall be $50,000.

"(2) Listed transaction.—The amount of the penalty under subsection (a) with respect to a listed transaction shall be $100,000.

"(3) Increase in penalty for large entities and high net worth individuals.—

"(A) In general.—In the case of a failure under subsection (a) by—

"(i) a large entity, or

"(ii) a high net worth individual, the penalty under paragraph (1) or (2) shall be twice the amount determined without regard to this paragraph.

"(B) Large entity.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'large entity' means, with respect to any taxable year, a person (other than a natural person) with gross receipts in excess of $10,000,000 for the taxable year in which the reportable transaction occurs or the preceding taxable year. Rules similar to the rules of paragraph (2) and subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (3) of section 448(c) shall apply for purposes of this subparagraph.

"(C) High net worth individual.—The term 'high net worth individual' means, with respect to a reportable transaction, a natural person whose net worth exceeds $2,000,000 immediately before the transaction.

"(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Reportable transaction.—The term 'reportable transaction' means any transaction with respect to which information is required to be included with a return or statement because, as determined under regulations prescribed under section 6011, such transaction is of a type which the Secretary determines as having a potential for tax avoidance or evasion.

"(2) Listed transaction.—Except as provided in regulations, the term 'listed transaction' means a reportable transaction which is the same as, or similar to, a transaction specifically identified by the Secretary as a tax avoidance transaction for purposes of section 6011.

"(d) Authority to Rescind Penalty.—

"(1) In general.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue may rescind all or any portion of any penalty imposed by this section with respect to any violation if—

"(A) the violation is with respect to a reportable transaction other than a listed transaction,

"(B) the person on whom the penalty is imposed has a history of complying with the requirements of this title,

"(C) it is shown that the violation is due to an unintentional mistake of fact;

"(D) imposing the penalty would be against equity and good conscience, and

"(E) rescinding the penalty would promote compliance with the requirements of this title and effective tax administration.

"(2) Discretion.—The exercise of authority under paragraph (1) shall be at the sole discretion of the Commissioner and may be delegated only to the head of the Office of Tax Shelter Analysis. The Commissioner, in his sole discretion, may establish a procedure to determine if a penalty should be referred to the Commissioner or the head of such Office for a determination under paragraph (1).

"(3) No appeal.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any determination under this subsection may not be reviewed in any administrative or judicial proceeding.

"(4) Records.—If a penalty is rescinded under paragraph (1), the Commissioner shall place in the file in the Office of the Commissioner the opinion of the Commissioner or the head of the Office of Tax Shelter Analysis with respect to the determination, including—

"(A) the reasons for the rescission, and

"(B) the amount of the penalty rescinded.

"(5) Report.—The Commissioner shall each year report to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate—

"(A) a summary of the total number and aggregate amount of penalties imposed, and rescinded, under this section, and

"(B) a description of each penalty rescinded under this subsection and the reasons therefor.

"(e) Penalty Reported to SEC.—In the case of a person—

"(1) which is required to file periodic reports under section 13 or 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or is required to be consolidated with another person for purposes of such reports, and

"(2) which—

"(A) is required to pay a penalty under this section with respect to a listed transaction, or

"(B) is required to pay a penalty under section 6662A with respect to any reportable transaction at a rate prescribed under section 6662A(c), the requirement to pay such penalty shall be disclosed in such reports filed by such person for such periods as the Secretary shall specify. Failure to make a disclosure in accordance with the preceding sentence shall be treated as a failure to which the penalty under subsection (b)(2) applies.

"(f) Coordination With Other Penalties.—The penalty imposed by this section is in addition to any penalty imposed under section 6662."

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 6707 the following:

"Sec. 6707A. Penalty for failure to include reportable transaction information with return or statement."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to returns and statements the due date for which is after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 602. ACCURACY-RELATED PENALTY FOR LISTED TRANSACTIONS AND OTHER REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS HAVING A SIGNIFICANT TAX AVOIDANCE PURPOSE.

(a) In General.—Subchapter A of chapter 68 is amended by inserting after section 6662 the following new section:

"(a) Imposition of Penalty.—If a taxpayer has a reportable transaction understatement for any taxable year, there shall be added to the tax an amount equal to 20 percent of the amount of such understatement.

"(b) Reportable Transaction Understatement.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—The term 'reportable transaction understatement' means the sum of—

"(A) the product of—

"(i) the amount of the increase (if any) in taxable income which results from a difference between the proper tax treatment of an item to which this section applies and the taxpayer's treatment of such item (as shown on the taxpayer's return of tax), and

"(ii) the highest rate of tax imposed by section 1 (section 11 in the case of a taxpayer which is a corporation), and

"(B) the amount of the decrease (if any) in the aggregate amount of credits determined under subtitle A which results from a difference between the taxpayer's treatment of an item to which this section applies (as shown on the taxpayer's return of tax) and the proper tax treatment of such item.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any reduction of the excess of deductions allowed for the taxable year over gross income for such year, and any reduction in the amount of capital losses which would (without regard to section 1211) be allowed for such year, shall be treated as an increase in taxable income.

"(2) Items to which section applies.—This section shall apply to any item which is attributable to—

"(A) any listed transaction, and

"(B) any reportable transaction (other than a listed transaction) if a significant purpose of such transaction is the avoidance or evasion of Federal income tax.

"(c) Higher Penalties for Nondisclosed Listed and Other Avoidance Transactions.—If the requirement of section 6664(d)(2)(A) is not met with respect to any portion of any reportable transaction understatement, then subsection (a) shall be applied by substituting—

"(1) '30 percent' for '20 percent' if such understatement is attributable to a listed transaction, and

"(2) '25 percent' for '20 percent' in the case of any other understatement.

"(d) Definitions of Reportable and Listed Transactions.—For purposes of this section, the terms 'reportable transaction' and 'listed transaction' have the respective meanings given to such terms by section 6707A(c).

"(e) Special rules.—

"(1) Coordination with penalties, etc., on other understatements.—In the case of an understatement (as defined in section 6662(d)(2))—

"(A) the amount of such understatement (determined without regard to this paragraph) shall be increased by the aggregate amount of reportable transaction understatements for purposes of determining whether such understatement is a substantial understatement under section 6662(d)(1), but

"(B) the addition to tax under section 6662(a) shall apply only to the excess of the amount of the substantial understatement (if any) after the application of subparagraph (A) over the aggregate amount of reportable transaction understatements.

"(2) Coordination with fraud penalty.—

"(A) In general.—References to an underpayment in section 6663 shall be treated as including references to a reportable transaction understatement.

"(B) No double penalty.—This section shall not apply to any portion of an understatement on which a penalty is imposed under section 6663.

"(3) Special rule for amended returns.—Except as provided in regulations, in no event shall any tax treatment included with an amendment or supplement to a return of tax be taken into account in determining the amount of any reportable transaction understatement if the amendment or supplement is filed after the earlier of the date the taxpayer is first contacted by the Secretary regarding the examination of the return or such other date as is specified by the Secretary."

"The excess under the preceding sentence shall be determined without regard to items to which section 6662A applies."

(c) Reasonable Cause Exception.—

(1) In general.—Section 6664 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) Reasonable Cause Exception for Reportable Transaction Understatements.—

"(1) In general.—No penalty shall be imposed under section 6662A with respect to any portion of a reportable transaction understatement if it is shown that there was a reasonable cause for such portion and that the taxpayer acted in good faith with respect to such portion.

"(2) Special rules.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any reportable transaction understatement unless—

"(A) the relevant facts affecting the tax treatment of the item are adequately disclosed in accordance with the regulations prescribed under section 6011,

"(B) there is or was substantial authority for such treatment, and

"(C) the taxpayer reasonably believed that such treatment was more likely than not the proper treatment.

A taxpayer failing to adequately disclose in accordance with section 6011 shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A) if the penalty for such failure was rescinded under section 6707A(d).

"(3) Rules relating to reasonable belief.—For purposes of paragraph (2)(C)—

"(A) In general.—A taxpayer shall be treated as having a reasonable belief with respect to the tax treatment of an item only if such belief—

"(i) is based on the facts and law that exist at the time the return of tax which includes such tax treatment is filed, and

"(ii) relates solely to the taxpayer's chances of success on the merits of such treatment and does not take into account the possibility that a return will not be audited, such treatment will not be raised on audit, or such treatment will be resolved through settlement if it is raised.

"(B) Certain opinions may not be relied upon.—

"(i) In general.—An opinion of a tax advisor may not be relied upon to establish the reasonable belief of a taxpayer if—

"(I) the tax advisor is described in clause (ii), or

"(II) the opinion is described in clause (iii).

"(ii) Disqualified tax advisors.—A tax advisor is described in this clause if the tax advisor is a material advisor (within the meaning of section 6111(b)(1)) who—

"(I) participates in the organization, management, promotion, or sale of the transaction or is related (within the meaning of section 267 or 707) to any person who so participates,

"(II) is compensated by another material advisor with respect to the transaction,

"(III) has a fee arrangement with respect to the transaction which is contingent on all or part of the intended tax benefits from the transaction being sustained, or

"(IV) as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, has a continuing financial interest with respect to the transaction.

"(iii) Disqualified opinions.—For purposes of clause (i), an opinion is disqualified if the opinion—

"(I) is based on unreasonable factual or legal assumptions (including assumptions as to future events),

"(II) unreasonably relies on representations, statements, findings, or agreements of the taxpayer or any other person,

"(III) does not identify and consider all relevant facts, or

"(IV) fails to meet any other requirement as the Secretary may prescribe."

(2) Conforming amendment.—The heading for subsection (c) of section 6664 is amended by inserting "for Underpayments" after "Exception".

(d) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Subparagraph (C) of section 461(i)(3) is amended by striking "section 6662(d)(2)(C)(iii)" and inserting "section 1274(b)(3)(C)".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 1274(b) is amended—

(A) by striking "(as defined in section 6662(d)(2)(C)(iii))" in subparagraph (B)(i), and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Tax shelter.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term 'tax shelter' means—

"(i) a partnership or other entity,

"(ii) any investment plan or arrangement, or

"(iii) any other plan or arrangement, if a significant purpose of such partnership, entity, plan, or arrangement is the avoidance or evasion of Federal income tax."

(3) Section 6662(d)(2) is amended by striking subparagraphs (C) and (D).

(4) Section 6664(c)(1) is amended by striking "part" and inserting "section 6662 or 6663".

(5) Subsection (b) of section 7525 is amended by striking "section 6662(d)(2)(C)(iii)" and inserting "section 1274(b)(3)(C)".

"SEC. 6662. IMPOSITION OF ACCURACY-RELATED PENALTY ON UNDERPAYMENTS."

(B) The table of sections for part II of subchapter A of chapter 68 is amended by striking the item relating to section 6662 and inserting the following new items:

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 603. MODIFICATIONS OF SUBSTANTIAL UNDERSTATEMENT PENALTY FOR NONREPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS.

(a) Substantial Understatement of Corporations.—Section 6662(d)(1)(B) (relating to special rule for corporations) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) Special rule for corporations.—In the case of a corporation other than an S corporation or a personal holding company (as defined in section 542), there is a substantial understatement of income tax for any taxable year if the amount of the understatement for the taxable year exceeds the lesser of—

"(i) 10 percent of the tax required to be shown on the return for the taxable year (or, if greater, $10,000), or

"(ii) $10,000,000."

(b) Reduction for Understatement of Taxpayer Due to Position of Taxpayer or Disclosed Item.—

(1) In general.—Section 6662(d)(2)(B)(i) (relating to substantial authority) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) the tax treatment of any item by the taxpayer if the taxpayer had reasonable belief that the tax treatment was more likely than not the proper treatment, or".

(2) Conforming amendment.—Section 6662(d) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Secretarial list.—For purposes of this subsection, section 6664(d)(2), and section 6694(a)(1), the Secretary may prescribe a list of positions for which the Secretary believes there is not substantial authority or there is no reasonable belief that the tax treatment is more likely than not the proper tax treatment. Such list (and any revisions thereof) shall be published in the Federal Register or the Internal Revenue Bulletin."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 604. TAX SHELTER EXCEPTION TO CONFIDENTIALITY PRIVILEGES RELATING TO TAXPAYER COMMUNICATIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 7525(b) (relating to section not to apply to communications regarding corporate tax shelters) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Section Not To Apply to Communications Regarding Tax Shelters.—The privilege under subsection (a) shall not apply to any written communication which is—

"(1) between a federally authorized tax practitioner and—

"(A) any person,

"(B) any director, officer, employee, agent, or representative of the person, or

"(C) any other person holding a capital or profits interest in the person, and

"(2) in connection with the promotion of the direct or indirect participation of the person in any tax shelter (as defined in section 1274(b)(3)(C))."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to communications made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

PART II—PROMOTER AND PREPARER RELATED PROVISIONS

Subpart A—Provisions Relating to Reportable Transactions

SEC. 611. DISCLOSURE OF REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 6111 (relating to registration of tax shelters) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6111. DISCLOSURE OF REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS.

"(a) In General.—Each material advisor with respect to any reportable transaction shall make a return (in such form as the Secretary may prescribe) setting forth—

"(1) information identifying and describing the transaction,

"(2) information describing any potential tax benefits expected to result from the transaction, and

"(3) such other information as the Secretary may prescribe.

Such return shall be filed not later than the date specified by the Secretary.

"(b) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Material advisor.—

"(A) In general.—The term 'material advisor' means any person—

"(i) who provides any material aid, assistance, or advice with respect to organizing, promoting, selling, implementing, or carrying out any reportable transaction, and

"(ii) who directly or indirectly derives gross income in excess of the threshold amount for such advice or assistance.

"(B) Threshold amount.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the threshold amount is—

"(i) $50,000 in the case of a reportable transaction substantially all of the tax benefits from which are provided to natural persons, and

"(ii) $250,000 in any other case.

"(2) Reportable transaction.—The term 'reportable transaction' has the meaning given to such term by section 6707A(c).

"(c) Regulations.—The Secretary may prescribe regulations which provide—

"(1) that only 1 person shall be required to meet the requirements of subsection (a) in cases in which 2 or more persons would otherwise be required to meet such requirements,

"(2) exemptions from the requirements of this section, and

"(3) such rules as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section."

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) The item relating to section 6111 in the table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 61 is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 6111. Disclosure of reportable transactions."

(2)(A) So much of section 6112 as precedes subsection (c) thereof is amended to read as follows:

"(a) In General.—Each material advisor (as defined in section 6111) with respect to any reportable transaction (as defined in section 6707A(c)) shall maintain, in such manner as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe, a list—

"(1) identifying each person with respect to whom such advisor acted as such a material advisor with respect to such transaction, and

"(2) containing such other information as the Secretary may by regulations require.

This section shall apply without regard to whether a material advisor is required to file a return under section 6111 with regard to such transaction."

(C) Section 6112(b), as redesignated by subparagraph (B), is amended—

(i) by inserting "written" before "request" in paragraph (1)(A), and

(ii) by striking "shall prescribe" in paragraph (2) and inserting "may prescribe".

(D) The item relating to section 6112 in the table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 61 is amended to read as follows:

(3)(A) The heading for section 6708 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6708. FAILURE TO MAINTAIN LISTS OF ADVISEES WITH RESPECT TO REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS."

(B) The item relating to section 6708 in the table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended to read as follows:

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transactions with respect to which material aid, assistance, or advice referred to in section 6111(b)(1)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this section) is provided after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 612. MODIFICATIONS TO PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO REGISTER TAX SHELTERS.

(a) In General.—Section 6707 (relating to failure to furnish information regarding tax shelters) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6707. FAILURE TO FURNISH INFORMATION REGARDING REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS.

"(a) In General.—If a person who is required to file a return under section 6111(a) with respect to any reportable transaction—

"(1) fails to file such return on or before the date prescribed therefor, or

"(2) files false or incomplete information with the Secretary with respect to such transaction, such person shall pay a penalty with respect to such return in the amount determined under subsection (b).

"(b) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the penalty imposed under subsection (a) with respect to any failure shall be $50,000.

"(2) LISTED TRANSACTIONS.—The penalty imposed under subsection (a) with respect to any listed transaction shall be an amount equal to the greater of—

"(A) $200,000, or

"(B) 50 percent of the gross income derived by such person with respect to aid, assistance, or advice which is provided with respect to the reportable transaction before the date the return including the transaction is filed under section 6111.

Subparagraph (B) shall be applied by substituting '75 percent' for '50 percent' in the case of an intentional failure or act described in subsection (a).

"(c) REPORTABLE AND LISTED TRANSACTIONS.—The terms 'reportable transaction' and 'listed transaction' have the respective meanings given to such terms by section 6707A(c).

"(d) RESCISSION AUTHORITY.—The provisions of section 6707A(d) (relating to authority of Commissioner to rescind penalty) shall apply to any penalty imposed under this section."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The item relating to section 6707 in the table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by striking "tax shelters" and inserting "reportable transactions".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to returns the due date for which is after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 613. MODIFICATION OF PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO MAINTAIN LISTS OF INVESTORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) of section 6708 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If any person who is required to maintain a list under section 6112(a) fails to make such list available to the Secretary in accordance with section 6112(b)(1)(A) within 20 business days after the date of the Secretary's request, such person shall pay a penalty of $10,000 for each day of such failure after such 20th day.

"(2) REASONABLE CAUSE EXCEPTION.—No penalty shall be imposed by paragraph (1) with respect to the failure on any day if such failure is due to reasonable cause."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to requests made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 614. MODIFICATION OF ACTIONS TO ENJOIN CERTAIN CONDUCT RELATED TO TAX SHELTERS AND REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 7408 (relating to action to enjoin promoters of abusive tax shelters, etc.) is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following new subsections:

"(a) AUTHORITY TO SEEK INJUNCTION.—A civil action in the name of the United States to enjoin any person from further engaging in specified conduct may be commenced at the request of the Secretary. Any action under this section shall be brought in the district court of the United States for the district in which such person resides, has his principal place of business, or has engaged in specified conduct. The court may exercise its jurisdiction over such action (as provided in section 7402(a)) separate and apart from any other action brought by the United States against such person.

"(b) ADJUDICATION AND DECREE.—In any action under subsection (a), if the court finds—

"(1) that the person has engaged in any specified conduct, and

"(2) that injunctive relief is appropriate to prevent recurrence of such conduct, the court may enjoin such person from engaging in such conduct or in any other activity subject to penalty under this title.

"(c) SPECIFIED CONDUCT.—For purposes of this section, the term 'specified conduct' means any action, or failure to take action, subject to penalty under section 6700, 6701, 6707, or 6708."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The heading for section 7408 is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 7408. ACTIONS TO ENJOIN SPECIFIED CONDUCT RELATED TO TAX SHELTERS AND REPORTABLE TRANSACTIONS."

(2) The table of sections for subchapter A of chapter 67 is amended by striking the item relating to section 7408 and inserting the following new item:

> "Sec. 7408. Actions to enjoin specified conduct related to tax shelters and reportable transactions."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall take effect on the day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subpart B—Other Promoter and Preparer Provisions

SEC. 621. UNDERSTATEMENT OF TAXPAYER'S LIABILITY BY INCOME TAX RETURN PREPARER.

(a) STANDARDS CONFORMED TO TAXPAYER STANDARDS.—Section 6694(a) (relating to understatements due to unrealistic positions) is amended—

(1) by striking "realistic possibility of being sustained on its merits" in paragraph (1) and inserting "reasonable belief that the tax treatment in such position was more likely than not the proper treatment",

(2) by striking "or was frivolous" in paragraph (3) and inserting "or there was no reasonable basis for the tax treatment of such position", and

(3) by striking "UNREALISTIC" in the heading and inserting "IMPROPER".

(b) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—Section 6694 is amended—

(1) by striking "$250" in subsection (a) and inserting "$1,000", and

(2) by striking "$1,000" in subsection (b) and inserting "$5,000".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to documents prepared after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 622. PENALTY ON FAILURE TO REPORT INTERESTS IN FOREIGN FINANCIAL ACCOUNTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5321(a)(5) of title 31, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(5) FOREIGN FINANCIAL AGENCY TRANSACTION VIOLATION.—

"(A) PENALTY AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Treasury may impose a civil money penalty on any person who violates, or causes any violation of, any provision of section 5314.

"(B) AMOUNT OF PENALTY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), the amount of any civil penalty imposed under subparagraph (A) shall not exceed $5,000.

"(ii) REASONABLE CAUSE EXCEPTION.—No penalty shall be imposed under subparagraph (A) with respect to any violation if—

"(I) such violation was due to reasonable cause, and

"(II) the amount of the transaction or the balance in the account at the time of the transaction was properly reported.

"(C) WILLFUL VIOLATIONS.—In the case of any person willfully violating, or willfully causing any violation of, any provision of section 5314—

"(i) the maximum penalty under subparagraph (B)(i) shall be increased to the greater of—

"(I) $25,000, or

"(II) the amount (not exceeding $100,000) determined under subparagraph (D), and

"(ii) subparagraph (B)(ii) shall not apply.

"(D) AMOUNT.—The amount determined under this subparagraph is—

"(i) in the case of a violation involving a transaction, the amount of the transaction, or

"(ii) in the case of a violation involving a failure to report the existence of an account or any identifying information required to be provided with respect to an account, the balance in the account at the time of the violation."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to violations occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 623. FRIVOLOUS TAX SUBMISSIONS.

"SEC. 6702. FRIVOLOUS TAX SUBMISSIONS.

"(a) CIVIL PENALTY FOR FRIVOLOUS TAX RETURNS.—A person shall pay a penalty of $5,000 if—

"(1) such person files what purports to be a return of a tax imposed by this title but which—

"(A) does not contain information on which the substantial correctness of the self-assessment may be judged, or

"(B) contains information that on its face indicates that the self-assessment is substantially incorrect; and

"(2) the conduct referred to in paragraph (1)—

"(A) is based on a position which the Secretary has identified as frivolous under subsection (c), or

"(B) reflects a desire to delay or impede the administration of Federal tax laws.

"(b) CIVIL PENALTY FOR SPECIFIED FRIVOLOUS SUBMISSIONS.—

"(1) IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), any person who submits a specified frivolous submission shall pay a penalty of $5,000.

"(2) SPECIFIED FRIVOLOUS SUBMISSION.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) SPECIFIED FRIVOLOUS SUBMISSION.—The term 'specified frivolous submission' means a specified submission if any portion of such submission—

"(i) is based on a position which the Secretary has identified as frivolous under subsection (c), or

"(ii) reflects a desire to delay or impede the administration of Federal tax laws.

"(B) SPECIFIED SUBMISSION.—The term 'specified submission' means—

"(i) a request for a hearing under—

"(I) section 6320 (relating to notice and opportunity for hearing upon filing of notice of lien), or

"(II) section 6330 (relating to notice and opportunity for hearing before levy), and

"(ii) an application under—

"(I) section 6159 (relating to agreements for payment of tax liability in installments),

"(II) section 7122 (relating to compromises), or

"(III) section 7811 (relating to taxpayer assistance orders).

"(3) OPPORTUNITY TO WITHDRAW SUBMISSION.—If the Secretary provides a person with notice that a submission is a specified frivolous submission and such person withdraws such submission within 30 days after such notice, the penalty imposed under paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to such submission.

"(c) LISTING OF FRIVOLOUS POSITIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe (and periodically revise) a list of positions which the Secretary has identified as being frivolous for purposes of this subsection. The Secretary shall not include in such list any position that the Secretary determines meets the requirement of section 6662(d)(2)(B)(ii)(II).

"(d) REDUCTION OF PENALTY.—The Secretary may reduce the amount of any penalty imposed under this section if the Secretary determines that such reduction would promote compliance with and administration of the Federal tax laws.

"(e) PENALTIES IN ADDITION TO OTHER PENALTIES.—The penalties imposed by this section shall be in addition to any other penalty provided by law."

(b) TREATMENT OF FRIVOLOUS REQUESTS FOR HEARINGS BEFORE LEVY.—

(1) FRIVOLOUS REQUESTS DISREGARDED.—Section 6330 (relating to notice and opportunity for hearing before levy) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) FRIVOLOUS REQUESTS FOR HEARING, ETC.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if the Secretary determines that any portion of a request for a hearing under this section or section 6320 meets the requirement of clause (i) or (ii) of section 6702(b)(2)(A), then the Secretary may treat such portion as if it were never submitted and such portion shall not be subject to any further administrative or judicial review."

(2) PRECLUSION FROM RAISING FRIVOLOUS ISSUES AT HEARING.—Section 6330(c)(4) is amended—

(A) by striking "(A)" and inserting "(A)(i)";

(B) by striking "(B)" and inserting "(ii)";

(C) by striking the period at the end of the first sentence and inserting "; or"; and

(D) by inserting after subparagraph (A)(ii) (as so redesignated) the following:

"(B) the issue meets the requirement of clause (i) or (ii) of section 6702(b)(2)(A)."

(3) STATEMENT OF GROUNDS.—Section 6330(b)(1) is amended by striking "under subsection (a)(3)(B)" and inserting "in writing under subsection (a)(3)(B) and states the grounds for the requested hearing".

(c) TREATMENT OF FRIVOLOUS REQUESTS FOR HEARINGS UPON FILING OF NOTICE OF LIEN.—Section 6320 is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1), by striking "under subsection (a)(3)(B)" and inserting "in writing under subsection (a)(3)(B) and states the grounds for the requested hearing", and

(2) in subsection (c), by striking "and (e)" and inserting "(e), and (g)".

"(e) FRIVOLOUS SUBMISSIONS, ETC.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if the Secretary determines that any portion of an application for an offer-in-compromise or installment agreement submitted under this section or section 6159 meets the requirement of clause (i) or (ii) of section 6702(b)(2)(A), then the Secretary may treat such portion as if it were never submitted and such portion shall not be subject to any further administrative or judicial review."

(e) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part I of subchapter B of chapter 68 is amended by striking the item relating to section 6702 and inserting the following new item:

"Sec. 6702. Frivolous tax submissions."

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to submissions made and issues raised after the date on which the Secretary first prescribes a list under section 6702(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended by subsection (a).

(a) CENSURE; IMPOSITION OF PENALTY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 330(b) of title 31, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by inserting ", or censure," after "Department", and

(B) by adding at the end the following new flush sentence:

"The Secretary may impose a monetary penalty on any representative described in the preceding sentence. If the representative was acting on behalf of an employer or any firm or other entity in connection with the conduct giving rise to such penalty, the Secretary may impose a monetary penalty on such employer, firm, or entity if it knew, or reasonably should have known, of such conduct. Such penalty shall not exceed the gross income derived (or to be derived) from the conduct giving rise to the penalty and may be in addition to, or in lieu of, any suspension, disbarment, or censure."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to actions taken after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) TAX SHELTER OPINIONS, ETC.—Section 330 of such title 31 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) Nothing in this section or in any other provision of law shall be construed to limit the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to impose standards applicable to the rendering of written advice with respect to any entity, transaction plan or arrangement, or other plan or arrangement, which is of a type which the Secretary determines as having a potential for tax avoidance or evasion."

SEC. 625. PENALTY ON PROMOTERS OF TAX SHELTERS.

(a) PENALTY ON PROMOTING ABUSIVE TAX SHELTERS.—Section 6700(a) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Notwithstanding the first sentence, if an activity with respect to which a penalty imposed under this subsection involves a statement described in paragraph (2)(A), the amount of the penalty shall be equal to 50 percent of the gross income derived (or to be derived) from such activity by the person on which the penalty is imposed."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to activities after the date of the enactment of this Act.

PART III—OTHER PROVISIONS

SEC. 631. AFFIRMATION OF CONSOLIDATED RETURN REGULATION AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1502 (relating to consolidated return regulations) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "In prescribing such regulations, the Secretary may prescribe rules applicable to corporations filing consolidated returns under section 1501 that are different from other provisions of this title that would apply if such corporations filed separate returns."

(b) RESULT NOT OVERTURNED.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be construed by treating Treasury regulation §1.1502-20(c)(1)(iii) (as in effect on January 1, 2001) as being inapplicable to the type of factual situation in Rite Aid Corporation v. United States, 255 F.3d 1357 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall apply to taxable years beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Tax Treatment of Inversion Transactions

SEC. 641. TAX TREATMENT OF INVERTED CORPORATE ENTITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter C of chapter 80 (relating to provisions affecting more than one subtitle) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"(a) INVERTED CORPORATIONS TREATED AS DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a foreign incorporated entity is treated as an inverted domestic corporation, then, notwithstanding section 7701(a)(4), such entity shall be treated for purposes of this title as a domestic corporation.

"(2) INVERTED DOMESTIC CORPORATION.—For purposes of this section, a foreign incorporated entity shall be treated as an inverted domestic corporation if, pursuant to a plan (or a series of related transactions)—

"(A) the entity completes after March 20, 2002, the direct or indirect acquisition of substantially all of the properties held directly or indirectly by a domestic corporation or substantially all of the properties constituting a trade or business of a domestic partnership,

"(B) after the acquisition at least 80 percent of the stock (by vote or value) of the entity is held—

"(i) in the case of an acquisition with respect to a domestic corporation, by former shareholders of the domestic corporation by reason of holding stock in the domestic corporation, or

"(ii) in the case of an acquisition with respect to a domestic partnership, by former partners of the domestic partnership by reason of holding a capital or profits interest in the domestic partnership, and

"(C) the expanded affiliated group which after the acquisition includes the entity does not have substantial business activities in the foreign country in which or under the law of which the entity is created or organized when compared to the total business activities of such expanded affiliated group.

"(b) PRESERVATION OF DOMESTIC TAX BASE IN CERTAIN INVERSION TRANSACTIONS TO WHICH SUBSECTION (a) DOES NOT APPLY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a foreign incorporated entity would be treated as an inverted domestic corporation with respect to an acquired entity if either—

"(A) subsection (a)(2)(A) were applied by substituting 'after December 31, 1996, and on or before March 20, 2002' for 'after March 20, 2002' and subsection (a)(2)(B) were applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent', or

"(B) subsection (a)(2)(B) were applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent', then the rules of subsection (c) shall apply to any inversion gain of the acquired entity during the applicable period and the rules of subsection (d) shall apply to any related party transaction of the acquired entity during the applicable period. This subsection shall not apply for any taxable year if subsection (a) applies to such foreign incorporated entity for such taxable year.

"(2) ACQUIRED ENTITY.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'acquired entity' means the domestic corporation or partnership substantially all of the properties of which are directly or indirectly acquired in an acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which this subsection applies.

"(B) AGGREGATION RULES.—Any domestic person bearing a relationship described in section 267(b) or 707(b) to an acquired entity shall be treated as an acquired entity with respect to the acquisition described in subparagraph (A).

"(3) APPLICABLE PERIOD.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'applicable period' means the period—

"(i) beginning on the first date properties are acquired as part of the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which this subsection applies, and

"(ii) ending on the date which is 10 years after the last date properties are acquired as part of such acquisition.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR INVERSIONS OCCURRING BEFORE MARCH 21, 2002.—In the case of any acquired entity to which paragraph (1)(A) applies, the applicable period shall be the 10-year period beginning on January 1, 2002.

"(c) TAX ON INVERSION GAINS MAY NOT BE OFFSET.—If subsection (b) applies—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The taxable income of an acquired entity (or any expanded affiliated group which includes such entity) for any taxable year which includes any portion of the applicable period shall in no event be less than the inversion gain of the entity for the taxable year.

"(2) CREDITS NOT ALLOWED AGAINST TAX ON INVERSION GAIN.—Credits shall be allowed against the tax imposed by this chapter on an acquired entity for any taxable year described in paragraph (1) only to the extent such tax exceeds the product of—

"(A) the amount of the inversion gain for the taxable year, and

The credit allowed by section 901 may be taken into account under the preceding sentence only to the extent of the product of such highest rate and the amount of taxable income from sources without the United States that is not inversion gain.

"(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR PARTNERSHIPS.—In the case of an acquired entity which is a partnership—

"(A) the limitations of this subsection shall apply at the partner rather than the partnership level,

"(B) the inversion gain of any partner for any taxable year shall be equal to the sum of—

"(i) the partner's distributive share of inversion gain of the partnership for such taxable year, plus

"(ii) income or gain required to be recognized for the taxable year by the partner under section 367(a), 741, or 1001, or under any other provision of chapter 1, by reason of the transfer during the applicable period of any partnership interest of the partner in such partnership to the foreign incorporated entity, and

"(C) the highest rate of tax specified in the rate schedule applicable to the partner under chapter 1 shall be substituted for the rate of tax under paragraph (2)(B).

"(4) INVERSION GAIN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'inversion gain' means any income or gain required to be recognized under section 304, 311(b), 367, 1001, or 1248, or under any other provision of chapter 1, by reason of the transfer during the applicable period of stock or other properties by an acquired entity—

"(A) as part of the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which subsection (b) applies, or

"(B) after such acquisition to a foreign related person.

The Secretary may provide that income or gain from the sale of inventories or other transactions in the ordinary course of a trade or business shall not be treated as inversion gain under subparagraph (B) to the extent the Secretary determines such treatment would not be inconsistent with the purposes of this section.

"(5) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 172 AND MINIMUM TAX.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 860E(a) shall apply for purposes of this section.

"(6) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The statutory period for the assessment of any deficiency attributable to the inversion gain of any taxpayer for any pre-inversion year shall not expire before the expiration of 3 years from the date the Secretary is notified by the taxpayer (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) of the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which such gain relates and such deficiency may be assessed before the expiration of such 3-year period notwithstanding the provisions of any other law or rule of law which would otherwise prevent such assessment.

"(B) PRE-INVERSION YEAR.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'pre-inversion year' means any taxable year if—

"(i) any portion of the applicable period is included in such taxable year, and

"(ii) such year ends before the taxable year in which the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) is completed.

"(d) SPECIAL RULES APPLICABLE TO RELATED PARTY TRANSACTIONS.—

"(1) ANNUAL APPLICATION FOR AGREEMENTS ON RETURN POSITIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each acquired entity to which subsection (b) applies shall file with the Secretary an application for an approval agreement under subparagraph (D) for each taxable year which includes a portion of the applicable period. Such application shall be filed at such time and manner, and shall contain such information, as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(B) SECRETARIAL ACTION.—Within 90 days of receipt of an application under subparagraph (A) (or such longer period as the Secretary and entity may agree upon), the Secretary shall—

"(i) enter into an agreement described in subparagraph (D) for the taxable year covered by the application,

"(ii) notify the entity that the Secretary has determined that the application was filed in good faith and substantially complies with the requirements for the application under subparagraph (A), or

"(iii) notify the entity that the Secretary has determined that the application was not filed in good faith or does not substantially comply with such requirements.

If the Secretary fails to act within the time prescribed under the preceding sentence, the entity shall be treated for purposes of this paragraph as having received notice under clause (ii).

"(C) FAILURES TO COMPLY.—If an acquired entity fails to file an application under subparagraph (A), or the acquired entity receives a notice under subparagraph (B)(iii), for any taxable year, then for such taxable year—

"(i) there shall not be allowed any deduction, or addition to basis or cost of goods sold, for amounts paid or incurred, or losses incurred, by reason of a transaction between the acquired entity and a foreign related person,

"(ii) any transfer or license of intangible property (as defined in section 936(h)(3)(B)) between the acquired entity and a foreign related person shall be disregarded, and

"(iii) any cost-sharing arrangement between the acquired entity and a foreign related person shall be disregarded.

"(D) APPROVAL AGREEMENT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'approval agreement' means a prefiling, advance pricing, or other agreement specified by the Secretary which contains such provisions as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure that the requirements of sections 163(j), 267(a)(3), 482, and 845, and any other provision of this title applicable to transactions between related persons and specified by the Secretary, are met.

"(2) MODIFICATIONS OF LIMITATION ON INTEREST DEDUCTION.—In the case of an acquired entity to which subsection (b) applies, section 163(j) shall be applied—

"(A) without regard to paragraph (2)(A)(ii) thereof, and

"(B) by substituting '25 percent' for '50 percent' each place it appears in paragraph (2)(B) thereof.

"(e) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) RULES FOR APPLICATION OF SUBSECTION (a)(2).—In applying subsection (a)(2) for purposes of subsections (a) and (b), the following rules shall apply:

"(A) CERTAIN STOCK DISREGARDED.—There shall not be taken into account in determining ownership for purposes of subsection (a)(2)(B)—

"(i) stock held by members of the expanded affiliated group which includes the foreign incorporated entity, or

"(ii) stock of such entity which is sold in a public offering related to the acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A).

"(B) PLAN DEEMED IN CERTAIN CASES.—If a foreign incorporated entity acquires directly or indirectly substantially all of the properties of a domestic corporation or partnership during the 4-year period beginning on the date which is 2 years before the ownership requirements of subsection (a)(2)(B) are met, such actions shall be treated as pursuant to a plan.

"(C) CERTAIN TRANSFERS DISREGARDED.—The transfer of properties or liabilities (including by contribution or distribution) shall be disregarded if such transfers are part of a plan a principal purpose of which is to avoid the purposes of this section.

"(D) SPECIAL RULE FOR RELATED PARTNERSHIPS.—For purposes of applying subsection (a)(2) to the acquisition of a domestic partnership, except as provided in regulations, all partnerships which are under common control (within the meaning of section 482) shall be treated as 1 partnership.

"(E) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN RIGHTS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary—

"(i) to treat warrants, options, contracts to acquire stock, convertible debt instruments, and other similar interests as stock, and

"(ii) to treat stock as not stock.

"(2) EXPANDED AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term 'expanded affiliated group' means an affiliated group as defined in section 1504(a) but without regard to section 1504(b), except that section 1504(a) shall be applied by substituting 'more than 50 percent' for 'at least 80 percent' each place it appears.

"(3) FOREIGN INCORPORATED ENTITY.—The term 'foreign incorporated entity' means any entity which is, or but for subsection (a)(1) would be, treated as a foreign corporation for purposes of this title.

"(4) FOREIGN RELATED PERSON.—The term 'foreign related person' means, with respect to any acquired entity, a foreign person which—

"(A) bears a relationship to such entity described in section 267(b) or 707(b), or

"(B) is under the same common control (within the meaning of section 482) as such entity.

"(5) SUBSEQUENT ACQUISITIONS BY UNRELATED DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.—Subject to such conditions, limitations, and exceptions as the Secretary may prescribe, if, after an acquisition described in subsection (a)(2)(A) to which subsection (b) applies—

"(A) a domestic corporation stock of which is traded on an established securities market acquires directly or indirectly substantially all of the properties of an acquired entity,

"(B) before such acquisition such domestic corporation did not have a relationship described in section 267(b) or 707(b), and was not under common control (within the meaning of section 482), with such entity, or any member of an expanded affiliated group including such entity, and

"(C) after such acquisition such acquired entity does not have such a relationship and was not under such common control with any member of the expanded affiliated group which before such acquisition included such entity, then this section shall cease to apply to such entity.

"(f) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall provide such regulations as are necessary to carry out this section, including regulations providing for such adjustments to the application of this section as are necessary to prevent the avoidance of the purposes of this section, including the avoidance of such purposes through—

"(1) the use of related persons, pass-through or other noncorporate entities, or other intermediaries, or

"(2) transactions designed to have persons cease to be (or not become) members of expanded affiliated groups or related persons."

(b) TREATMENT OF AGREEMENTS.—

(1) CONFIDENTIALITY.—

(A) TREATMENT AS RETURN INFORMATION.—Section 6103(b)(2) (relating to return information) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (D), and by inserting after subparagraph (D) the following new subparagraph:

"(E) any approval agreement under section 7874(d)(1) to which any preceding subparagraph does not apply and any background information related to the agreement or any application for the agreement,".

(B) EXCEPTION FROM PUBLIC INSPECTION AS WRITTEN DETERMINATION.—Section 6110(b)(1)(B) is amended by striking "or (D)" and inserting ", (D), or (E)".

(2) REPORTING.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall include with any report on advance pricing agreements required to be submitted after the date of the enactment of this Act under section 521(b) of the Ticket to Work and Work Incentives Improvement Act of 1999 (Public Law 106–170) a report regarding approval agreements under section 7874(d)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. Such report shall include information similar to the information required with respect to advance pricing agreements and shall be treated for confidentiality purposes in the same manner as the reports on advance pricing agreements are treated under section 521(b)(3) of such Act.

(c) INFORMATION REPORTING.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall exercise the Secretary's authority under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require entities involved in transactions to which section 7874 of such Code (as added by subsection (a)) applies to report to the Secretary, shareholders, partners, and such other persons as the Secretary may prescribe such information as is necessary to ensure the proper tax treatment of such transactions.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any risk reinsured after April 11, 2002.

Subtitle D—Extension of Internal Revenue Service User Fees

SEC. 661. EXTENSION OF INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE USER FEES.

"SEC. 7527. INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE USER FEES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary shall establish a program requiring the payment of user fees for—

"(1) requests to the Internal Revenue Service for ruling letters, opinion letters, and determination letters, and

"(2) other similar requests.

"(b) PROGRAM CRITERIA.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The fees charged under the program required by subsection (a)—

"(A) shall vary according to categories (or subcategories) established by the Secretary,

"(B) shall be determined after taking into account the average time for (and difficulty of) complying with requests in each category (and subcategory), and

"(C) shall be payable in advance.

"(2) EXEMPTIONS, ETC.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide for such exemptions (and reduced fees) under such program as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(B) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN REQUESTS REGARDING PENSION PLANS.—The Secretary shall not require payment of user fees under such program for requests for determination letters with respect to the qualified status of a pension benefit plan maintained solely by 1 or more eligible employers or any trust which is part of the plan. The preceding sentence shall not apply to any request—

"(i) made after the later of—

"(I) the fifth plan year the pension benefit plan is in existence, or

"(II) the end of any remedial amendment period with respect to the plan beginning within the first 5 plan years, or

"(ii) made by the sponsor of any prototype or similar plan which the sponsor intends to market to participating employers.

"(C) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of subparagraph (B)—

"(i) PENSION BENEFIT PLAN.—The term 'pension benefit plan' means a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, annuity, or employee stock ownership plan.

"(ii) ELIGIBLE EMPLOYER.—The term 'eligible employer' means an eligible employer (as defined in section 408(p)(2)(C)(i)(I)) which has at least 1 employee who is not a highly compensated employee (as defined in section 414(q)) and is participating in the plan. The determination of whether an employer is an eligible employer under subparagraph (B) shall be made as of the date of the request described in such subparagraph.

"(iii) DETERMINATION OF AVERAGE FEES CHARGED.—For purposes of any determination of average fees charged, any request to which subparagraph (B) applies shall not be taken into account.

"(3) AVERAGE FEE REQUIREMENT.—The average fee charged under the program required by subsection (a) shall not be less than the amount determined under the following table:

"Category	Average Fee
Employee plan ruling and opinion ..	$250
Exempt organization ruling	$350
Employee plan determination	$300
Exempt organization determination.	$275

TITLE VII—EQUAL TREATMENT FOR NONGOVERNMENTAL PROVIDERS

SEC. 701. NONGOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY.—For any social service program, a nongovernmental organization that is (or is applying to be) involved in the delivery of social services for the program shall not be required—

(1) to alter or remove art, icons, scripture, or other symbols, or to alter its name, because the symbols or name are religious;

(2) to alter or remove provisions in its chartering documents because the provisions are religious, except that no such charter provisions shall affect the application to a nongovernmental organization of any law that would (notwithstanding this paragraph) apply to the nongovernmental organization; or

(3) to alter or remove religious qualifications for membership on its governing boards.

(b) PRIOR EXPERIENCE.—A nongovernmental organization that has not previously been awarded a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement from an agency shall not, for that reason, be disadvantaged in a competition to secure a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement to deliver services under a social service program from the agency administering the program.

(c) INTERMEDIATE GRANTORS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An agency that administers a social service program, and that is authorized to award grants or cooperative agreements to nongovernmental organizations under the program, may award to a nongovernmental organization (referred to in this subsection as an "intermediate grantor") a grant or cooperative agreement, the terms of which authorize the intermediate grantor—

(A) to provide subgrants or subagreements to nongovernmental providers (referred to individually in this subsection as a "subrecipient"), to deliver social services for the program; and

(B) to manage the subgrants or subagreements.

(2) RESPONSIBILITIES AND RIGHTS OF SUBRECIPIENTS.—

(A) RESPONSIBILITIES.—Except for those administrative responsibilities that the intermediate grantor fully performs on behalf of the subrecipient, the subrecipient shall have the same responsibilities or duties with respect to the program as the subrecipient would have if it were the intermediate grantor.

(B) RIGHTS.—The subrecipient shall have the same rights or authorities under this section as the subrecipient would have if it were the intermediate grantor.

(3) RESPONSIBILITIES AND RIGHTS OF AGENCIES.—

(A) RESPONSIBILITIES.—Nothing in this subsection shall alter any of an agency's responsibilities or duties with respect to the program, the intermediate grantor, or the subrecipient.

(B) RIGHTS.—Nothing in this subsection shall alter any of an agency's rights or authorities with respect to the program, the intermediate grantor, or the subrecipient.

(d) COMPLIANCE.—To enforce the provisions of this section against a Federal agency or official, a nongovernmental organization may bring an action for injunctive relief in an appropriate United States district court. To enforce the provisions of this section against a State or local agency or official, a nongovernmental organization may bring an action for injunctive relief in an appropriate State court of general jurisdiction.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The term "Federal financial assistance" does not include a tax credit, deduction, or exemption.

(2) SOCIAL SERVICE PROGRAM.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "social service program" means a program that—

(i) is administered by the Federal Government, or by a State or local government using Federal financial assistance; and

(ii) provides services directed at helping people in need, reducing poverty, improving outcomes of low-income children, revitalizing low-income communities, and empowering low-income families and low-income individuals to become self-sufficient, including—

(I) child care services, protective services for children and adults, services for children and adults in foster care, adoption services, services related to the management and maintenance of the home, day care services for adults, and services to meet the special needs of children, older individuals, and individuals with disabilities (including physical, mental, or emotional disabilities);

(II) transportation services;

(III) job training and related services, and employment services;

(IV) information, referral, and counseling services;

(V) the preparation and delivery of meals, and services related to soup kitchens or food banks;

(VI) health support services;

(VII) literacy and mentoring programs;

(VIII) services for the prevention and treatment of juvenile delinquency and substance abuse, services for the prevention of crime and the provision of assistance to the victims and the families of criminal offenders, and services related to the intervention in, and prevention of, domestic violence; and

(IX) services related to the provision of assistance for housing under Federal law.

(B) EXCLUSIONS.—The term does not include a program having the purpose of delivering educational assistance under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6301 et seq.) or under the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

SEC. 1007. EFFECT OF AMENDMENTS ON EXISTING DISCLOSURES.

Notices, reports, or returns that were required to be filed with the Secretary of the Treasury before the date of the enactment of the amendments made by this title and that were disclosed by the Secretary of the Treasury consistent with the law in effect at the time of disclosure shall remain subject on and after such date to the disclosure provisions of section 6104 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SA 4720. Mr. EDWARDS (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. HATCH) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 210, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

TITLE VI—COMMISSION ON ENHANCING SECURITY AND PRESERVING FREEDOM

SEC. 601. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, and the continuing threat of further attacks, are an assault on the safety and security of all Americans.

(2) The threat of further acts of terrorism has necessitated an expansion of the authority of government to conduct surveillance and collect data.

(3) While recognizing the need for additional security measures, Americans remain deeply committed to the individual dignity, liberty, and privacy rooted in United States history and protected by the Constitution of the United States.

(4) Different investigative technologies and methods can achieve the same security goals in ways that have substantially different impacts on individual rights.

(5) The government should conduct investigations and surveillance in a manner that fully addresses law enforcement and national security needs in the manner that best preserves the personal dignity, liberty, and privacy of individuals within the United States.

SEC. 602. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Commission on Enhancing Security and Preserving Freedom (in this title referred to as the "Commission").

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 17 members of whom—

(A) five shall be representatives of the Federal Government, including—

(i) the Attorney General, or the Attorney General's designee;

(ii) the Secretary of the Treasury, or the Secretary's designee;

(iii) the Secretary of Commerce, or the Secretary's designee;

(iv) the Director of Central Intelligence, or the Director's designee; and

(v) the Secretary of Homeland Security, or the Secretary's designee;

(B) four shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(C) two shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate;

(D) four shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

(E) two shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(2) LIMITATION ON DESIGNEES.—An individual may not be designated for membership on the Commission under paragraph (1)(A) unless the individual holds a position in the United States Government by appointment of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(3) APPOINTMENTS BY CONGRESSIONAL LEADERSHIP.—

(A) REQUIREMENTS.—(i) One of the individuals appointed under subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall be an officer or employee of a State law enforcement agency.

(ii) One of the individuals appointed under subparagraph (D) of paragraph (1) shall be an officer or employee of a local law enforcement agency.

(B) LIMITATION.—No individual may be appointed under subparagraphs (B) through (E) of paragraph (1) if the individual is an officer or employee of the Federal Government or an active member of the uniformed services.

(C) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that in making appointments to the Commission under subparagraphs (B) through (E) of paragraph (1) the Members of Congress referred to in such subparagraphs should seek to appoint individuals with varying viewpoints on and areas of expertise in the matters to be covered by the Commission, including individuals from the technology industry, non-profit entities, and academia.

(c) PERIOD OF APPOINTMENT; VACANCIES.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed for the life of the Commission. Any vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(d) SECURITY CLEARANCES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each individual appointed to the Commission under subparagraphs (B) through (E) of subsection (b)(1) shall possess a security clearance appropriate for the work of the Commission under this title.

(2) FAILURE TO SECURE CLEARANCE.—

(A) INITIAL APPOINTMENTS.—If an individual initially appointed under subparagraphs (B) through (E) of subsection (b)(1) without a security clearance does not secure a security clearance by the commencement of the work of the Commission, the appointment shall be deemed vacant.

(B) APPOINTMENTS TO VACANCIES.—If an individual appointed to a vacancy in a position under subparagraphs (B) through (E) of subsection (b)(1) without a security clearance does not secure a security clearance within a reasonable period (as determined by the Commission), the appointment shall be deemed vacant.

(3) PROCESSING OF CLEARANCES.—The Attorney General shall seek to ensure the timely processing of any applications for security clearances for purposes of this subsection.

(e) CHAIRMAN.—The Commission shall select a Chairman from among its members.

(f) INITIAL MEETING.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which nine members of the Commission have been appointed, the Commission shall hold its first meeting.

(g) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman.

SEC. 603. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(1) Standards for using, selecting, and operating investigative and surveillance technologies to meet law enforcement and national security needs in the manner that best preserves the personal dignity, liberty, and privacy of individuals within the United States.

(2) The advisability of establishing within the Government one or more entities or procedures to ensure that the Government uses investigative and surveillance technologies to meet law enforcement and national security needs in the manner that best preserves the personal dignity, liberty, and privacy of individuals within the United States.

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the initial meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall submit to the President and Congress a report which shall contain a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, together with its recommendations for such legislation and administrative actions as it considers appropriate.

(2) FORM OF REPORT.—The report under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

(c) INVESTIGATIVE AND SURVEILLANCE TECHNOLOGIES DEFINED.—In this section, the term "investigative and surveillance technologies" means technologies that may be used by the Federal Government, and by State and local governments, to monitor and collect information about individuals in the absence of reasonable, articulable suspicion of criminal activity, including—

(1) Internet surveillance technologies;

(2) data mining technologies;

(3) surveillance camera technologies;

(4) x-ray body scan technologies;

(5) biometric technologies; and

(6) other technologies identified by the Commission for purposes of this title.

SEC. 604. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission or, at its direction, any subcommittee or member of the Commission, may, for the purpose of carrying out this title—

(A) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, receive such evidence, administer such oaths; and as the Commission or such subcommittee or member considers advisable.

(B) require, by subpoena or otherwise, the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, papers, documents, tapes, and materials,

(2) PUBLIC MEETINGS.—To the maximum extent practicable, the meetings of the Commission shall be open to the public.

(3) CLOSED MEETINGS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Meetings of the Commission may be closed to the public under section 10(d) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) or other applicable law.

(B) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—In addition to the authority under subparagraph (A), paragraphs (1) and (3) of section 10(a) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply to any portion of a Commission meeting if the President determines that such portion or portions of that meeting is likely to disclose matters that could endanger national security. If the President makes such determination, the requirements relating to a determination under section 10(d) of that Act shall apply.

(4) PUBLIC SUMMARY OF CLOSED PROCEEDINGS.—Whenever practicable, the Commission shall maintain and make available for public inspection an unclassified summary of any classified information considered by the Commission and of any classified meeting or proceeding conducted by the Commission.

(b) ISSUANCE AND ENFORCEMENT OF SUBPOENAS.—

(1) ISSUANCE.—Subpoenas issued under subsection (a) shall bear the signature of the Chairman of the Commission and shall be served by any person or class of persons designated by the Chairman for that purpose.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—In the case of contumacy or failure to obey a subpoena issued under subsection (a), the United States district court for the judicial district in which the subpoenaed person resides, is served, or may be found may issue an order requiring such person to appear at any designated place to testify or to produce documentary or other evidence. Any failure to obey the order of the court may be punished by the court as a contempt of court.

(c) WITNESS ALLOWANCES AND FEES.—Section 1821 of title 28, United States Code, shall apply to witnesses requested or subpoenaed to appear at any hearing of the Commission. The per diem and mileage allowances for witnesses shall be paid from funds available to pay the expenses of the Commission.

(d) PROCEDURES.—The Commission may adopt procedures for the work of the Commission under this title. Any portion of such procedures relating to the treatment of confidential or classified information shall not go into effect until jointly approved by the Attorney General and the Director of Central Intelligence.

(e) INFORMATION FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal department or agency such information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out this title. Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(f) POSTAL SERVICES.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

(g) GIFTS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

SEC. 605. COMMISSION PERSONNEL MATTERS.

(a) COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation for their service as members of the Commission. All members of the Commission who are officers or employees of the United States shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as officers or employees of the United States.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—The members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission.

(c) STAFF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Chairman of the Commission may, without regard to the civil service laws and regulations, appoint and terminate an executive director and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to perform its duties. The employment of an executive director shall be subject to confirmation by the Commission.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Chairman of the Commission may fix the compensation of the executive director and other personnel without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification of positions and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for the executive director and other personnel may not exceed the rate payable for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

(3) SECURITY CLEARANCES.—The executive director and any other personnel of the Commission shall possess security clearances appropriate for the work of the Commission.

(d) DETAIL OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.—Any Federal Government employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(e) PROCUREMENT OF TEMPORARY AND INTERMITTENT SERVICES.—The Chairman of the Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals which do not exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

SEC. 606. TERMINATION OF COMMISSION.

The Commission shall terminate 60 days after the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 603(b).

SEC. 607. FUNDING.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 2003, 2004, and 2005 such sums as may be necessary for the Commission to carry out this title in such fiscal year.

(b) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—If no funds are appropriated to the Commission by the end of the session of Congress ending in a fiscal year specified in subsection (a), the Secretary of Commerce shall, from amounts appropriated or otherwise available to the Secretary for such fiscal year, transfer to the Commission an amount necessary to permit the Commission to carry out this title in such fiscal year.

(c) AVAILABILITY.—Any amounts appropriated to the Commission under subsection (a), or transferred to the Commission under subsection (b), shall remain available, without fiscal year limitation, until expended.

SA 4721. Mr. KOHL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 4471 proposed by Mr. LIEBERMAN to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(r) 'Alien' means any person who is not a citizen or national of the United States.

"(s) 'Intimate partner' means, with respect to a person, the spouse of the person, a former spouse of the person, an individual who is a parent of a child of the person, and an individual who cohabits or has cohabited with the person.

"(t)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), 'misdemeanor crime of domestic violence' means an offense that—

"(A) is a misdemeanor under Federal or State law; and

"(B) has, as an element, the use or attempted use of physical force, or the threatened use of a deadly weapon, committed by a current or former spouse, parent, or guardian of the victim, by a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, by a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, parent, or guardian, or by a person similarly situated to a spouse, parent, or guardian of the victim.

"(2) A person shall not be considered to have been convicted of such an offense for purposes of this chapter, unless—

"(A) the person was represented by counsel in the case, or knowingly and intelligently waived the right to counsel in the case; and

"(B) in the case of a prosecution for an offense described in this subsection for which a person was entitled to a jury trial in the jurisdiction in which the case was tried, either—

"(i) the case was tried by a jury; or

"(ii) the person knowingly and intelligently waived the right to have the case tried by a jury, by guilty plea or otherwise.

"(u) 'Responsible person' means an individual who has the power to direct the management and policies of the applicant pertaining to explosive materials.".

(b) PERMITS FOR PURCHASE OF EXPLOSIVES.—Section 842 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2), by striking "and" at the end;

(2) by striking subsection (a)(3) and inserting the following:

"(3) other than a licensee or permittee knowingly—

"(A) to transport, ship, cause to be transported, or receive any explosive materials; or

"(B) to distribute explosive materials to any person other than a licensee or permittee; or

"(4) who is a holder of a limited user permit—

"(A) to transport, ship, cause to be transported, or receive in interstate or foreign commerce any explosive materials; or

"(B) to receive explosive materials from a licensee or permittee, whose premises are located outside the State of residence of the limited user permit holder, or on more than 6 separate occasions, during the period of the permit, to receive explosive materials from 1 or more licensees or permittees whose premises are located within the State of residence of the limited user permit holder."; and

(3) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"(b) It shall be unlawful for any licensee or permittee knowingly to distribute any explosive materials to any person other than—

"(1) a licensee;

"(2) a holder of a user permit; or

"(3) a holder of a limited user permit who is a resident of the State where distribution is made and in which the premises of the transferor are located.".

(c) LICENSES AND USER PERMITS.—Section 843(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting "or limited user permit" after "user permit"; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", including the names of and appropriate identifying information regarding all employees who will be authorized by the applicant to possess explosive materials, as well as fingerprints and a photograph of each responsible person";

(2) in the second sentence, by striking "$200" and inserting $50"; and

(3) by striking the third sentence and inserting "Each license or user permit shall be valid for no longer than 3 years from the date of issuance and each limited user permit shall be valid for no longer than 1 year from the date of issuance. Each license or permit shall be renewable upon the same conditions and subject to the same restrictions as the original license or permit, and upon payment of a renewal fee not to exceed one-half of the original fee.".

(d) CRITERIA FOR APPROVING LICENSES AND PERMITS.—Section 843(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(1) the applicant (or, if the applicant is a corporation, partnership, or association, each responsible person with respect to the applicant) is not a person who is prohibited from receiving, distributing, transporting, or possessing explosive materials under subsection (d) or (i) of section 842;";

(2) by striking paragraph (4) and inserting the following:

"(4) the applicant has a place of storage for explosive materials that meets such standards of public safety and security against theft as the Secretary shall prescribe by regulations, which the Secretary may verify by inspection or such other means as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, and no license or permit shall remain valid for more than 3 years without an inspection;"

(3) in paragraph (5), by striking the period at the end; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

"(6) none of the employees of the applicant who will be authorized by the applicant to possess explosive materials is a person whose possession of explosives would be unlawful under section 842(i); and

"(7) in the case of a limited user permit, the applicant has certified in writing that the applicant will not receive explosive materials on more than 6 separate occasions during the 12-month period for which the limited user permit is valid.".

(e) APPLICATION APPROVAL.—Section 843(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "forty-five days" and inserting "45 days for limited user permits and 90 days for licenses and user permits,".

(h) BACKGROUND CHECKS; CLEARANCES.—Section 843 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h)(1) If the Secretary receives from an employer the name and other identifying information with respect to a responsible person or an employee who will be authorized by the employer to possess explosive materials in the course of employment with the employer, the Secretary shall determine whether possession of explosives by the responsible person or the employee, as the case may be, would be unlawful under section 842(i). In making the determination, the Secretary may take into account a letter or document issued under paragraph (2).

"(2)(A) If the Secretary determines that possession of explosives by the responsible person or the employee would not be unlawful under section 842(i), the Secretary shall notify the employer in writing or electronically of the determination and issue to the responsible person or the employee, as the case may be, a letter of clearance which confirms the determination.

"(B) If the Secretary determines that possession of explosives by the responsible person or the employee would be unlawful under section 842(i), the Secretary shall notify the employer in writing or electronically of the determination and issue to the responsible person or the employee, as the case may be, a document that—

"(i) confirms the determination;

"(ii) explains the grounds for the determination;

"(iii) provides information on how the disability may be relieved; and

"(iv) explains how the determination may be appealed.".

(i) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) Exception.—Notwithstanding any provision of this title, a license or permit issued under section 843 of title 18, United States Code, before the date of enactment of this Act, shall remain valid until that license or permit is revoked under section 843(d) or expires, or until a timely application for renewal is acted upon.

"(i) Furnishing of Samples.—

"(1) In general.—Licensed manufacturers and licensed importers and persons who manufacture or import explosive materials or ammonium nitrate shall, when required by letter issued by the Secretary, furnish—

"(A) samples of such explosive materials or ammonium nitrate;

"(B) information on chemical composition of those products; and

"(C) any other information that the Secretary determines is relevant to the identification of the explosive materials or to identification of the ammonium nitrate.

"(2) Reimbursement.—The Secretary may, by regulation, authorize reimbursement of the fair market value of samples furnished pursuant to this subsection, as well as the reasonable costs of shipment.".

SEC. 05. DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY OF INSTITUTIONS RECEIVING FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

Section 844(f)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the word "shall" the following: "or any institution or organization receiving Federal financial assistance,".

SEC. 06. RELIEF FROM DISABILITIES.

Section 845(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Relief From Disabilities.—

"(1) Prohibited persons.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), a person who is prohibited from engaging in activity under section 842 may make application to the Secretary for relief from the disabilities imposed by Federal law with respect to a violation of that section, and the Secretary may grant that relief, if the Secretary determines that—

"(i) the circumstances regarding the disability, and the record and reputation of the applicant are such that the applicant will not be likely to act in a manner dangerous to public safety; and

"(ii) that the granting of the relief will not be contrary to the public interest.

"(B) Petition for judicial review.—Any person whose application for relief from disabilities under this section is denied by the Secretary may file a petition with the United States district court for the district in which that person resides for a judicial review of the denial.

"(C) Additional evidence.—The court may, in its discretion, admit additional evidence where failure to do so would result in a miscarriage of justice.

"(D) Further operations.—A licensee or permittee who conducts operations under this chapter and makes application for relief from the disabilities under this chapter, shall not be barred by that disability from further operations under the license or permit of that person pending final action on an application for relief filed pursuant to this section.

"(E) Notice.—Whenever the Secretary grants relief to any person pursuant to this section, the Secretary shall promptly publish in the Federal Register, notice of that action, together with reasons for that action.

"(2) Waiver for lawful nonimmigrants.—

"(A) Conditions for waiver.—Any individual who has been admitted to the United States in a lawful nonimmigrant status may receive a waiver from the requirements of subsection (d)(7) or (i)(5) of section 842, if—

"(i) the individual submits to the Secretary a petition that meets the requirements of subparagraph (C); and

"(ii) the Secretary approves the petition.

"(B) Petition.—Each petition submitted in accordance with this subsection shall—

"(i) demonstrate that the petitioner has resided in the United States for a continuous period of not less than 180 days before the date on which the petition is submitted under this paragraph; and

"(ii) include a written statement from the embassy or consulate of the petitioner, authorizing the petitioner to acquire explosives and certifying that the alien would not, absent the application of subsection (d)(7) or (i)(5) of section 842, otherwise be prohibited from such an acquisition under that subsection (d) or (i).

"(C) Approval of petition.—The Secretary may approve a petition submitted in accordance with this paragraph if the Secretary determines that waiving the requirements of subsection (d)(7) or (i)(5) of section 842 with respect to the petitioner—

"(i) would not jeopardize the public safety; and

"(ii) will not be contrary to the public interest.".

SEC. 07. THEFT REPORTING REQUIREMENT.

"(p) Theft Reporting Requirement.—

"(1) In general.—A holder of a license or permit who knows that explosive materials have been stolen from that licensee, user permittee, or limited user permittee, shall report the theft to the Secretary not later than 24 hours after the discovery of the theft.

"(2) Penalty.—A holder of a license or permit who does not report a theft in accordance with paragraph (1), shall be fined not more than $10,000, imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.".

(a) In General.—Chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is further amended by inserting after section 926B the following:

"§ 926C. Carrying of concealed firearms by qualified retired law enforcement officers

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of the law of any State or any political subdivision thereof, an individual who is a qualified retired law enforcement officer and who is carrying the identification required by subsection (d) may carry a concealed firearm that has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce, subject to subsection (b).

"(b) This section shall not be construed to supersede or limit the laws of any State that—

"(1) permit private persons or entities to prohibit or restrict the possession of concealed firearms on their property; or

"(2) prohibit or restrict the possession of firearms on any State or local government property, installation, building, base, or park.

"(c) As used in this section, the term 'qualified retired law enforcement officer' means an individual who—

"(1) retired in good standing from service with a public agency as a law enforcement officer, other than for reasons of mental instability;

"(2) before such retirement, was authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of, or the incarceration of any person for, any violation of law, and had statutory powers of arrest;

"(3)(A) before such retirement, was regularly employed as a law enforcement officer for an aggregate of 15 years or more; or

"(B) retired from service with such agency, after completing any applicable probationary period of such service, due to a service-connected disability, as determined by such agency;

"(4) has a nonforfeitable right to benefits under the retirement plan of the agency;

"(5) during the most recent 12-month period, has met, at the expense of the individual, the State's standards for training and qualification for active law enforcement officers to carry firearms; and

"(6) is not prohibited by Federal law from receiving a firearm.

"(d) The identification required by this subsection is photographic identification issued by the agency for which the individual was employed as a law enforcement officer.".

SEC. 173. REPORT ON ESTABLISHMENT OF CIVILIAN LINGUIST RESERVE CORPS.

(a) REPORT.—

(1) PREPARATION.—The Secretary of Defense, acting through the Director of the National Security Education Program, shall prepare a report on the feasibility of various methods for improving the foreign language capability of the Federal Government, including the establishment of a Civilian Linguist Reserve Corps comprised of individuals with advanced levels of proficiency in foreign languages who are United States citizens who would be available upon a call of the President to perform such service or duties with respect to such foreign languages in the Federal Government as the President may specify.

(2) CONSULTATION.—In preparing the report, the Secretary shall consult with such organizations having expertise in training in foreign languages as the Secretary determines appropriate.

(b) MATTERS CONSIDERED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall develop a proposal for the structure and operations of the Civilian Linguist Reserve Corps. The proposal shall establish requirements for performance of duties and levels of proficiency in foreign languages of the members of the Civilian Linguist Reserve Corps, including maintenance of language skills and specific training required for performance of duties as a linguist of the Federal Government, and shall include recommendations on such other matters as the Secretary determines appropriate.

(2) CONSIDERATION OF USE OF DEFENSE LANGUAGE INSTITUTE AND LANGUAGE REGISTRIES.—In developing the proposal under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consider the appropriateness of using—

(A) the Defense Language Institute to conduct testing for language skills proficiency and performance, and to provide language refresher courses; and

(B) foreign language skill registries of the Department of Defense or of other agencies or departments of the United States to identify individuals with sufficient proficiency in foreign languages.

(3) CONSIDERATION OF RESERVE COMPONENTS OF ARMED FORCES AS MODEL.—In developing the proposal under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consider the provisions of title 10, United States Code, establishing and governing service in the Reserve Components of the Armed Forces, as a model for the Civilian Linguist Reserve Corps.

(c) COMPLETION OF REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress the report prepared under subsection (a).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Defense $300,000 to carry out this section.

(1) by redesignating subsections (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (d), (e), and (f), respectively;

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

"(c) PERSONNEL GRANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the grants authorized under subsection (b)(1), the Director may award grants to fire departments of a State for the purpose of hiring 'employees engaged in fire protection' as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fair Labor Standards Act (29 U.S.C. 203).

"(2) DURATION.—Grants awarded under this subsection shall be for a 3-year period.

"(3) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—The total amount of grants awarded under this subsection shall not exceed $100,000 per firefighter, indexed for inflation, over the 3-year grant period.

"(4) FEDERAL SHARE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of a grant under this subsection shall not exceed 75 percent of the total salary and benefits cost for additional firefighters hired.

"(B) WAIVER.—The Director may waive the 25 percent non-Federal match under subparagraph (A) for a jurisdiction of 50,000 or fewer residents or in cases of extreme hardship.

"(5) APPLICATION.—An application for a grant under this subsection, shall—

"(A) meet the requirements under subsection (b)(5);

"(B) include an explanation for the applicant's need for Federal assistance; and

"(C) contain specific plans for obtaining necessary support to retain the position following the conclusion of Federal support.

"(6) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—Grants awarded under this subsection shall only be used to pay the salaries and benefits of additional firefighting personnel, and shall not be used to supplant funding allocated for personnel from State and local sources."; and

(3) in subsection (f) (as redesignated by paragraph (1)), by adding at the end the following:

"(3) $1,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2003 and 2004, to be used only for grants under subsection (c).".

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the smallpox virus has killed more people than any other infectious disease in human history, and is estimated to have killed approximately 400,000,000 people in the 20th century;

(2) Congress and the Administration have determined that a bioterrorist attack utilizing the smallpox virus is a present threat to the nation's public health and safety;

(3) the Secretary of Health and Human Services has contracted with private manufacturers to purchase approximately 300,000,000 doses of smallpox vaccine, of which 100,000,000 doses have already been delivered;

(4) the Smallpox Response Plan and Guidelines released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on September 23, 2002, calls for vaccinating the entire population of the United States against smallpox within 5 days of an outbreak of the disease;

(5) the plan would make the vaccine available to the general public only in the event of an outbreak of the disease;

(6) the strategy adopted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is an important step forward but it is short of what is needed to adequately protect and defend against a possible attack using the disease;

(7) because the initial symptoms of smallpox are flu-like, the disease may go undetected or undiagnosed for up to 2 weeks, and could spread to and kill thousands before the first vaccinations could be administered;

(8) the more people who receive prompt vaccination against smallpox, the lower the rate of transmission of the disease and the greater the likelihood that such an outbreak could be contained; and

(9) because there are known health risks associated with the smallpox vaccine, the decision to be vaccinated should be made by the individual, or parent or guardian, in consultation with a doctor, and not the Federal Government.

(b) Sense of the Senate.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Secretary of Health and Human Services, at the request of any individual, or such individual's parent or guardian, and in consultation with such individual's physician, should make available to that individual vaccine sufficient to inoculate such individual from the smallpox virus;

(2) such vaccine should be provided at no cost or at nominal cost to the individual;

(3) such vaccine should be provided to the individual if the individual resides in the United States or any commonwealth, possession, or territory of the United States or the individual is an American citizen who resides outside of the United States; and

(4) such vaccine should be provided only if it is Federally licensed.

SA 4729. Mr. HOLLINGS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 2995, to improve economic opportunity and development in communities that are dependent on tobacco production, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry; as follows:

SEC. . TAX TREATMENT OF PAYMENTS UNDER TOBACCO EQUITY REDUCTION PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Part II of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to items specifically included in gross income) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 91. TOBACCO EQUITY REDUCTION PROGRAM PAYMENTS.

"(b) Exception for Amounts Transferred During Reinvestment Period.—

"(1) In general.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any amount if during reinvestment period such amount is—

"(A) used to make a qualified debt repayment, or

"(B) transferred to a tobacco farmer individual retirement account established under section 522.

"(2) Qualified debt repayment.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'qualified debt repayment' means the payment of debt incurred directly by the taxpayer to produce tobacco before the marketing year for the 2004 crop of each kind of tobacco.

"(c) Character of Income.—For purposes of this subtitle, any amount received under section 380j of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 and included in gross income under this section shall be treated as long-term capital gain.".

(b) Tobacco Farmer Individual Retirement Accounts.—Part IV of subchapter F of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to farmers' cooperatives) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 522. TOBACCO FARMER INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.

"(a) General Rule.—Except as provided in this section, a tobacco farmer individual retirement account shall be treated for purposes of this title in the same manner as an individual retirement plan.

"(b) Definitions and Special Rules.—For purposes of this title—

"(1) Tobacco farmer individual retirement account.—The term 'tobacco farmer individual retirement account' means an individual retirement plan (as defined in section 7701(a)(37)) other than a Roth IRA which is designated (in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe) at the time of establishment of the plan as a tobacco farmer individual retirement account.

"(2) Treatment of contributions.—

"(A) Cash only.—No contribution will be accepted unless it is in cash.

"(B) Source of contributions.—The only contributions which will be accepted are—

"(i) payments under section 380j of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, and

"(ii) trustee-to-trustee transfers to such trust from another tobacco farmer individual retirement account of the account beneficiary.

"(C) No deduction allowed.—No deduction shall be allowed under section 219 for a contribution to a tobacco farmer individual retirement account.

"(D) No rollover contributions allowed.—No rollover contribution may be made to or from a tobacco farmer individual retirement account.

"(3) Tax treatment of distributions.—Any amount distributed from a tobacco farmer individual retirement account attributable to payments made under section 380j of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (including earnings thereon) shall be includible in the gross income of the distributee under the rules described in section 91(c).

"(4) Coordination with individual retirement accounts.—Section 408(d)(2) shall be applied separately with respect to tobacco farmer individual retirement accounts and other individual retirement plans.".

(c) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) The table of sections for part II of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Sec. 91. Tobacco equity reduction program payments.".

(2) The table of sections for part IV of subchapter F of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Sec. 522. Tobacco farmer individual retirement accounts.".

(3) The heading for part IV of subchapter F of chapter 1 of such code is amended by striking "FARMERS' COOPERATIVES" and inserting "CERTAIN FARMER ENTITIES".

(4) The table of parts for subchapter F of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking "FARMERS' COOPERATIVES" and inserting "CERTAIN FARMER ENTITIES".

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2003.

SA 4730. Mr. KYL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill H.R. 5005, to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

(20) To provide for border and transportation security.

(a) Establishment.—The Secretary shall establish a border security and immigration working group (in this section referred to as the "Working Group"), composed of the Secretary or the designee of the Secretary, the Under Secretary for Immigration Affairs, and the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security.

(b) Functions.—The Working Group shall meet not less frequently than once every 3 months and shall—

(1) with respect to border security functions, develop coordinated budget requests, allocations of appropriations, staffing requirements, communication, use of equipment, transportation, facilities, and other infrastructure;

(2) coordinate joint and cross-training programs for personnel performing border security functions;

(3) monitor, evaluate and make improvements in the coverage and geographic distribution of border security programs and personnel;

(4) develop and implement policies and technologies to ensure the speedy, orderly, and efficient flow of lawful traffic, travel and commerce, and enhanced scrutiny for high-risk traffic, travel, and commerce;

(5) identify systemic problems in coordination encountered by border security agencies and programs and propose administrative, regulatory, or statutory changes to mitigate such problems; and

(6) coordinate the enforcement of all immigration laws.

(c) Relevant Agencies.—The Secretary shall consult with representatives of relevant agencies with respect to deliberations under subsection (b), and may include representatives of such agencies in Working Group deliberations, as appropriate.

On page 215, lines 15 and 16, strike "policy, administration, and inspection" and insert "policy and administration".

On page 215, line 20, before the period at the end of the line insert the following: ", but does not include the functions described in paragraphs (7) and (8) of section 131(b).

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, and any statements relating thereto be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 326) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

S. RES. 326

Whereas according to the American Cancer Society, in 2002, 203,500 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer and 39,600 women will die from this disease;

Whereas it is estimated that about 2,000,000 women were diagnosed with breast cancer in the 1990s, and that in nearly 500,000 of those cases, the cancer resulted in death;

Whereas the risk of breast cancer increases with age, with a woman at age 70 years having twice as much of a chance of developing the disease as a woman at age 50 years;

Whereas at least 80 percent of the women who get breast cancer have no family history of the disease;

Whereas mammograms, when operated professionally at a certified facility, can provide safe screening and early detection of breast cancer in many women;

Whereas mammography is an excellent method for early detection of localized breast cancer, which has a 5-year survival rate of more than 97 percent;

Whereas the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society continue to recommend periodic mammograms; and

Whereas the National Breast Cancer Coalition recommends that each woman and her health care provider make an individual decision about mammography: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates October 18, 2002, as "National Mammography Day"; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate programs and activities.

ORDER FOR PRINTING STATEMENTS OF TRIBUTE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Members have until Friday, October 4, at 12 noon to submit statements of tribute to Senator Strom Thurmond and the tributes then be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 2002

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow morning, September 25; that following the prayer and the pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and there be a period for morning business until 10:30 a.m. with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each, with the time equally divided between the two leaders or their designees; that at 10:30 the Senate resume consideration of the Interior Appropriations Act and vote on cloture on the Byrd amendment to the Interior Appropriations Act regarding firefighting and drought; that, if cloture is not invoked, the Senate immediately vote on cloture on the Lieberman substitute amendment to the Homeland Security Act; further, that Senators have until 10 a.m. tomorrow in order to file second-degree amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the next rollcall vote will occur at 10:30 a.m., on cloture on the Byrd amendment to the Interior Appropriations Act.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I know of no further business to come before the Senate. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 6:36 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, September 25, 2002, at 9:30 a.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, September 24, 2002

The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

WASHINGTON, DC,
September 24, 2002.

I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN ABNEY CULBERSON to set as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) for 5 minutes.

THE FEDERAL DEBT

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, tonight I and some others are going to do a one hour special order, on some of the problems, the misconceptions about the debt of the Federal Government. The policy committee that I serve on, the Republican Policy Committee, met with Art Laffer, who I consider an esteemed economist in this country. One of my questions to Art was what is worse as far as being a downside to economic growth—the debt and going deeper into debt in this country or having tax increases, and he said they are both about the same. They take private money out of circulation that could be used to expand businesses and jobs.

And that brings a question that this body must consider. How big should the Federal Government be in terms of a percentage of gross domestic product? How fast should the expenditures of this Congress grow compared to inflation? We have been growing from 2 to 4 times the rate of inflation every year for the last 20 years. The elections of politicians to come up with new programs, to come up with pork barrel projects to take back to their districts probably enhances the chances that they are going to be reelected. So the tendency has been to have government grow faster than the economy, faster than the ability of the American taxpayer to pay, and certainly faster than what is good for us in terms of increasing taxes and debt.

Politicians, Members of Congress, Members of the Senate, the President have tended to say, well, we can expand government and not have it quite so visible in terms of the American worker digging into their pockets, if we pay for some of that increased spending with increased debt.

When I was first elected to Congress 10 years ago the debt of the Federal Government was four trillion dollars. Today guess what the debt is in just under 10 years? The current debt of the Federal Government is $6.2 trillion. A 50 percent increase in 10 years. So we can imagine if we project that kind of debt increase for the next 20 years we are leaving our kids and our grandkids a tremendous indebtedness burden because we think the expenditures today are so important that it justifies higher taxes and more debt for our kids to pay.

I think there is a misunderstanding about debt. We have said we have paid the debt down. Actually, the total debt of this country over the last 20 years has continued to increase, and so has the obligation of our kids to pay off our overzealous spending. I am a farmer from Michigan. Our tradition has been to try to pay off the mortgage on the farm to give our kids a little better chance. In Congress we are doing the opposite. We are increasing that obligation.

Tune in tonight to the special orders and we will talk more on the problems of going deeper and deeper into debt and the increased downside for the economy.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 23, 2002, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) is recognized during morning hour debates for 30 minutes.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge the Republican leadership to address the unfinished business of the American people's agenda. The House has a lot of work to do and not a lot of time in which to do it. In America today millions of hard working families face challenges in their daily lives.

Since January, 2001, our Nation's economy has deteriorated dramatically and this House has failed to provide real relief to the families who need it most. We have seen the most anemic period of economic growth since Dwight Eisenhower was President. In 18 months the stock market has lost $4.5 trillion in value. More than 2 million people have lost their jobs. A wave of corporate scandals has eroded people's fundamental faith in our Nation's free markets and scores of corporations have become bankrupt.

Consumer confidence dropped in each of the last 4 months and is at the lowest level since November, 2001. Our Nation's retirement security system has also been undermined and in great difficulty. In 18 months Republican economic policies have taken $2 trillion from the Social Security Trust Fund. Baby boomers' retirement benefits have been jeopardized.

In each of the last few years, prescription drug prices have soared more than 10 percent. Reliable prescription drug coverage eludes almost two-thirds of all Medicare recipients. On a daily basis, senior citizens face a choice between buying food, paying the rent, or buying their medicine. Senior citizens actually slice pills into halves because they cannot afford their full prescriptions.

Faced with these challenges, the House Republican leadership has failed to address people's kitchen table concerns. In the last 18 months this leadership passed an agenda that satisfied the special interests, misled the American people, and dismissed the interest of America's hard working families. But for bipartisan action after the September 11 terrorist attacks, Republicans amassed a record of nonachievement in this 107th Congress and failed to make a difference, a real difference, in people's lives.

On the economy Republicans have demonstrated a devotion to special interest-driven tax cuts. In 2001, in a mammoth tax cut giveaway, Republicans gave the lion's share of the breaks to those who least needed tax relief. The Republican economic plan turned record surpluses into deep deficits for the decade ahead. The only surplus that is left is after they have squandered most of the Social Security surplus.

The Republican economic agenda rejected the fundamental values that in the 1990s propelled the longest economic expansion ever recorded: Opportunity, responsibility, and community. In a so-called stimulus bill, the Republican agenda even tried to give Enron a $254 million tax break. For the economic victims of the September 11 attacks, the Republican agenda blocked the extension of unemployment benefits legislation for 5 months. For people who had lost jobs in this Republican recession, the Republican agenda blocked the extension of health care benefits legislation. This ideological agenda has blocked a modest, very modest, minimum wage increase even though in the 5 years since the last increase the minimum wage's real value has fallen 11 percent.

This agenda has done almost nothing positive for Americans. It has instead led to large layoffs, weakened America's manufacturing sector, and helped produce big losses in people's pensions, IRAs, and mutual funds across the board. Faced with this mounting tide of bad economic news, Republicans continue to support more special interest tax cuts for the wealthiest individuals. In April, in the middle of a recession, they voted to extend provisions in the spring 2001 tax cut bill that would not take effect until 2011. Think about it. As families face financial hardships, the Republican majority wasted valuable time trying to cut taxes for the wealthiest individuals starting 10 years from now, in 2011.

In recent weeks they have wasted the House's time and people's money, passing the exact same tax cut all over again. Republicans sliced their 10-year enrichment plan for the wealthy into individual tax cut pieces in order to distract attention from the absence of a real agenda that would address America's real problems.

The sole passion of House Republicans has been to reward their wealthy political clientele for the next decade and beyond at the expense of every other need of the American people. Republicans pass one press release after the next and abdicate their responsibility to lead America. They seek to create the illusion of real life legislative progress on America's real problems where none exists. Perhaps more telling about their inability to carry out their responsibility to govern is that to date not a single spending bill has been sent to the President, just one week before the new fiscal year begins. In fact, since the August recess, this House has failed to pass a single spending bill and it is the House that must originate this important budgetary legislation.

Republicans are failing at this most basic task because their misguided economic plan is starving important investments we can and must make in our families' futures, especially in educating our children. Their budget plan would force 50,000 kids from afterschool programs that keep children safe. Republicans will leave children trailing behind in America. In fact, because some Republican moderates understand cuts will have to be made, they have been unable to bring key bills to the floor and now their strategy appears to be delay, delay, delay until after the November elections to avoid voters' wrath.

This week the House will have to pass the first of what will probably be several continuing resolutions to try to fund the Federal Government. Republicans are simply kicking the can down the road, looking ahead to a possible lame duck session to fix their budgetary problems while they continue to deny the consequences of this deeply misguided economic plan.

A lame duck session deprives voters of the legislative information to make an informed decision, and by delaying key spending decisions, Republicans are depriving critical resources to public schools, hospitals, homeland security, among other priorities.

The House should not adjourn before holding a full debate on all of these spending bills and priorities. People deserve common sense solutions to the challenges that confront them. That is why I hope Republicans will at least accept our offer to convene a bipartisan economic growth summit to put together a plan that will cut the budget deficits, bring back responsibility and discipline, and get us back on the path to long-term economic growth and opportunity.

Even now as we consider a resolution to go to war, there is an unwillingness to reconsider Republican economic and budgetary decisions made more than 1 year ago, before September, 11, 2001. Furthermore, Democrats support a 21st century energy agenda that creates jobs, protects the environment, and expands the economic pie for all of us; education investments to create the most trained and most highly skilled work force on the planet; a minimum wage increase for hard-working families; and a second round of extended unemployment benefits because for over 1 million people their benefits have been exhausted, and by December, 1.5 million people will be in this position.

Second, this House must have a free and fair debate about our Nation's Social Security future. Despite repeated promises to safeguard the surplus, the Republican leadership passed an economic plan that diverted $2 trillion from Social Security into other non-Social Security initiatives. Putting special interest tax cuts first, second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth, Republicans broke our commitment to save Social Security first and jeopardized the baby boomers' Social Security benefits.

Social Security is the greatest retirement security program ever conceived. Social Security puts food on people's table, shelter over people's head. It spells the difference between poverty and dignity in the lives of millions of senior citizens, surviving spouses, and people with disabilities. It represents the largest, most reliable income source for middle-income seniors.

Republicans have at least five plans to privatize and cut Social Security benefits. These schemes make it clear: Either Republicans will have to cut benefits, divert trillions of dollars from other as yet unspecified programs, or they will have to do both things. According to one study, senior citizens, surviving spouses, and people with disabilities would see benefit cuts between 30 and 46 percent annually if the Republican privatization proposals get enacted. Therefore, I can think of few more crucial priorities than a full Social Security debate with a spotlight shining on Republican's privatization schemes.

I am deeply disappointed that House Republicans seemingly do not want this debate and they do not want this vote. The Republican leadership is doing everything in its power to sweep Social Security under the carpet until after the November election. They understand just how unpopular the privatization agenda has become, especially since the near record drop in the stock market of the last months. The American people have a right to know the consequences that flow from this decision. They deserve a frank, honest discussion about all of the Republicans' Social Security privatization proposals. As elected leaders, it is our obligation and our responsibility to hold this discussion before the November elections so the people, the people, can decide Social Security's future.

In addition, Republicans must complete the unfinished business of the American people's prescription drugs agenda. Right now they are trying to run out the clock on the crucial challenge of prescription drug prices. I have talked to hundreds of senior citizens who have urged the Congress to cut prescription drug prices down so hardworking families can afford them. In this Congress Republicans have failed these families while protecting the profits of the biggest drug makers that support their campaigns.

In July Republicans passed a sham bill written by the prescription drug lobby. They refused even to let us vote on our Democratic alternative. They rejected a real Medicare prescription drug benefit rooted in the right values, a benefit available and affordable to all, and 100 percent available, reliable and guaranteed. The Republican bill represented a fraud and a farce. It was not worth the paper it was written on. It covered barely a fraction of America's senior citizens, put the benefit in the hands of private insurance companies, and took a dangerous first step toward privatizing Medicare. On a party-line vote, it passed the House. Days later I was in Missouri and I saw commercials underwritten by the pharmaceutical lobby. The spots praised Republican candidates for supporting the Republican prescription drug bill fraud. That bill secured the profit priorities of our Nation's drug makers over, and at the expense of, our Nation's senior citizens. It is the same special interest Republican story line on the issue of prescription drug prices.

This summer the Senate, 78 to 21, passed a good, bipartisan bill that will close loopholes used by drug makers to stifle competition, keep prescription drug prices high, and maximize industry profits. This simple legislative step could cut prescription drug prices by about 60 percent. According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, it would save consumers $60 billion in prescription drug prices each year. In the House, Democrats are circulating a petition to discharge the Senate-passed bill because Republicans also refuse to debate this. Not surprisingly, the pharmaceutical lobby is starting an advertising blitz attacking the Senate bill, scaring people with the canard that if this bill is enacted, somehow, magically, medical and pharmaceutical advances will come to a grinding halt. The drug companies continue to fund Republican campaigns as a reward for Republican actions and inactions on this high-priority agenda item.

The special interests can afford to pay for this largess. Since January the big drug makers earned more than $37 billion in prescription drug sales. On this issue the special interests have seized and controlled the agenda.

Before adjournment we must make this the people's House again. We must not let it be the pharmaceutical companies' subsidiary corporate interest. We should and we must vote in this Congress to try to lower prescription drug prices for all Americans. Preventing more corporate scandals and bringing corporate criminals to justice is the fourth piece of unfinished business here in the House. Again, the reality, the sad reality, is that special interests have guided the Republican response to the whole basket of corporate accountability issues.

Under Republican leadership thousands of Americans have lost jobs due to corporate misbehavior. In recent months Arthur Andersen fired 7,000 employees, Global Crossing fired over 9,000 employees, WorldCom fired over 20,000, and Enron fired over 4,500. This is not part of a normal business cycle, to say the least. In recent months people's pensions lost $210 billion and State pensions lost $4 billion combined when WorldCom and Enron stock plummeted because their books had been cooked.

In response to these awful mind-numbing developments, House Republicans passed watered-down special interest legislation to create the appearance of action when the truth was a failed Republican deregulatory agenda. Republicans blocked accounting industry reform for months until the pressure became so great they had no choice but capitulation. But they refused to impose stiff penalties on employers who mislead employees about the value of company stock. They failed to punish CEOs who run their companies into the ground. They blocked our efforts to eliminate tax breaks and Federal contracts that corporations still today receive by relocating overseas to avoid paying American taxes.

In April Republicans passed a pension reform bill that failed to protect pensions from corporate abuse and indiscretions. One House Republican even acknowledged that the bill "does little to protect people's pensions." It failed to give employees control over their nest eggs and retirement plans. It treated executive pensions better than employee pensions, maintaining two sets of rules. It offered employees no legal remedies when companies abused people's 401(k)s.

I believe America has the greatest, most vibrant free enterprize system on the face of this planet. But for the sake of every consumer, every CEO, every employee and every investor, we must create one set of rules for all, reward hard work with fair play and ensure that corporate criminals pay the price. I will continue to stand on this floor and fight for comprehensive business, employees' and investors' bills of rights. Let us get it done today and restore people's faith after what has happened to their precious savings.

Sadly, the Republican response to all these challenges is to "run out the clock" on the Congress, as one newspaper wrote over the weekend. I saw a headline just yesterday calling the Republican agenda an "Avoidance Agenda." I quote Bob Novak: "Apart from the war on terrorism, the Republican party," he says, "flinches from standing for much of anything in the 2002 election."

To retain their majority, Republican leaders have created a playbook that reveals the failed Republican agenda and mocks the priorities of their constituents. In recent weeks even with misguided bills, Republicans seem incapable of taking any action.

Republicans pulled an education tax bill, pulled the bankruptcy conference report. Now they waste time and over $100,000 a day of the people's money, according to one calculation, passing press release bills, one more obvious than the next. The nonsense of the House resolutions, as I would like to call them, will make zero impact on people's actual lives. The same can be said of other well-meaning resolutions that represent the lion's share of the legislative agenda with House Republicans in the majority.

In this session the House has passed at least 40 suspension bills to bestow names on post offices. Under Republican leadership this House has considered the following resolutions, among others: Supporting the Goals of the Year of the Rose; Honoring the Invention of Modern Air Conditioning; recognizing the Significant Contributions of Paul Ecke, Jr. to the Poinsettia Industry, and for other purposes; Ensuring Continuity for the Design of the 5-cent Coin, Establish the Coin Design Advisory Committee, and for other purposes.

At the rate we are going nobody is going to have any coins to redesign if we do not get this economy straightened out. This House is becoming irrelevant because people's kitchen table priorities are not being addressed on a constructive and bipartisan basis. Instead of wasting time on empty, meaningless gestures and then voting to allow the President's plans to privatize Social Security to take effect; sheltering unpatriotic offshore corporate tax havens from paying their fair share of taxes; blocking campaign reform; passing the largest gift to the wealthy in the history of this Nation in the form of massive tax breaks, without even considering a new economic plan; passing a gift to Enron and other oil and gas interests through a dirty energy bill; delaying and bending to corporate interest in addressing the corporate scandals and protecting pensions; delaying and then undoing the strong air safety rules Congress enacted to safeguard the public in the aftermath of September 11, Republicans should have been working with Democrats to address the American people's unfinished and important business.

The American people want us to raise the minimum wage, protect investor rights, enact job training, pass Medicare prescription drugs, cut prescription drug prices, and extend unemployment benefits. People also want us to reform our elections and voting apparatus to ensure that every vote counts and that what happened in 2000 and 2002 in Florida and elsewhere never ever happens again.

People want us to enact a real Patients' Bill of Rights with teeth and effectiveness and not the sham Republican legislation that is languishing and waiting in going to conference. They want us to help school districts across America get class size down to 18 students in each classroom. They want us to pass school construction to promote safety in every public school, create a stable learning environment and meet the staggering backlog of unmet school construction needs.

People want us to close the pay gap between men and women. They want us to overturn new White House rules and restore real medical privacy protections to every American patient. They want us to make polluters, not taxpayers, foot the cleanup bill and maintain the Super Fund program that cleans up toxic waste. They want us to enhance our hate crimes law and provide more resources to States and local jurisdictions to help investigate and prosecute these heinous crimes. They want us to reinstate worker safety protections to prevent repetitive stress injuries in the workplace, just to name a few.

This agenda is worthy of the American people's highest dreams and hopes for their family. It is worthy of people's real concerns that are there on a day-to-day basis. It is incumbent upon us all to stop wasting time in this House, to stop being irrelevant to the people's real agenda, and to get about the business of the American people's domestic security agenda. Let us do it on a bipartisan basis, let us enact an agenda that creates opportunity for all to fulfill their potential and let us not adjourn before it is done. Let us get to work.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 3 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON) at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord of all creation and Wisdom for the ages, we turn to You in prayer. To turn to You is to humble one's self as a person, as a Nation. Although we often approach You with hesitancy, it is only because of our sins or weakness of faith, for You are always present and ever faithful, for You alone are God.

To step into Your holy presence, O Lord, is to be boldly revealed, as in a hall of piercing mirrors. Before You all our fears, resentments of the past and deepest fault lines come to light. But receive us once again as Your very own.

Guide us as Your people. Accomplish in us Your righteous purpose. Shape the body of this House to shoulder its proper responsibilities so to bring forth justice across our land and peace to the world. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. ISAKSON led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

PUBLIC LANDS DAY

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, September 28, in honor of National Public Lands Day, a 3,000-mile trek crossing six states and 14 national forests will end in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Last July 31, two teams began this unique journey with one group departing from New Mexico and the other from Montana. Their travels were solely on public lands and consisted of hiking, horseback riding, mountain biking, canoeing, boating and driving SUVs.

Those Americans making this trek also worked to educate people, especially our youth, on the importance of public lands. Public lands are a tremendous source for clean air, clean water and open space, and they provide important natural resources, such as minerals, coal, gas, oil, forage and timber.

It is my hope that National Public Lands Day will remind all of America of the important role public lands play in protecting ecosystems, as well as contributing to our national economy and our national defense.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, Congress must enact responsible public land policies.

GIVE PEACE A CHANCE

(Mr. DAVIS of Illinois asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I am so glad that the people of the Seventh District, like many people throughout America, have no compunctions letting you know where they stand. For the last week I have been getting telephone calls, e-mails, i-mails, people stopping me on the street, and they are saying, let us give peace a chance. Let us go slow on this war business. Let us let the inspectors inspect. Let us let them do their job.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with them.

MIDSHIPMAN EDWIN JOSEPH O'HARA

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, 60 years ago, on September 27, 1942, Midshipman Edwin Joseph O'Hara saw two enemy surface raiders suddenly appear out of the morning mist to attack the vessel he was on. Heavy guns of one raider pounded his ship, and machine guns fired from the other, spraying the decks for one-half hour at close quarters.

The heroic gun crew of O'Hara's ship exchanged shot for shot with the enemy, placing 35 shells into the waterline of one of the raiders, until its crew was forced to abandon their sinking ship. All of the gun crew were killed or wounded when an enemy shell exploded the magazine of their gun.

At the explosion, Midshipman O'Hara ran aft and single-handedly served and fired the damaged gun with five live shells remaining in the ready box, scoring direct hits near the waterline of the second raider. O'Hara was mortally wounded in this action.

With boilers blown up, engines destroyed, masts shot away, and ablaze from stem to stern, the ship finally went under, carrying O'Hara and several of his shipmates with her.

O'Hara was awarded the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal for his bravery, bravery we should never forget.

TOURING THE NATIONAL CENTER FOR MISSING AND EXPLOITED CHILDREN

(Mr. LAMPSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday a group of staffers for Members who are part of the Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited children took part of a tour and briefing at the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, and I want to thank them today for taking the time to see firsthand the amazing work that the National Center does.

One of the things that I did after the abduction and murder of Laura Kate Smither was to go to the National Center to see the work that they do there, to meet with Ernie Allen, the President and CEO of the National Center. Seeing the Center and the people who work there proved absolutely inspiring to me and helped me to found that Congressional caucus that so many of our Members now participate in.

I hope that the Members of your staff, those of you who hear me and all of us who visited the center yesterday, were just as inspired and will bring that inspiration back to your offices. There is so much that we can do together to prevent the abduction and exploitation of America's children, if we but take the first step.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today on motions to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Record votes on motions to suspend the rules ordered prior to 6:30 p.m. may be taken today.

Record votes on remaining motions to suspend the rules will be taken tomorrow.

RECOGNIZING 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF 4-H YOUTH DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 472) recognizing the 100th anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program.

H. CON. RES. 472

Whereas the 4-H Youth Development Program celebrates its 100th anniversary in 2002;

Whereas members of the 4-H Youth Development Program pledge their Heads to clearer thinking, their Hearts to greater loyalty, their Hands to larger service, and their Health to better living for the club, the community, the country, and the world;

Whereas the 4-H Youth Development Program sponsors clubs in rural and urban areas throughout the world;

Whereas 4-H Clubs have grown to over 5,600,000 annual participants ranging from 5 to 19 years of age;

Whereas 4-H Clubs strengthen families and communities;

Whereas 4-H Clubs foster leadership and volunteerism for youth and adults;

Whereas 4-H Clubs build internal and external partnerships for programming and resource development;

Whereas today's 4-H Clubs are very diverse, offering projects relating to citizenship and civic education, communications and expressive arts, consumer and family sciences, environmental education and earth sciences, healthy lifestyle education, personal development and leadership, plants, animals, and science and technology; and

Whereas the 4-H Youth Development Program continues to make great contributions toward the development of well-rounded youth: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress—

(1) recognizes the 100th anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program and commends the program for service to the youth of the world; and

(2) urges the President to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe a "National 4-H Youth Development Program Week" with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) each will control 20 minutes.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 472.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H. Con. Res. 472, recognizing the 100th anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program and commends the program's contributions toward the development of well-rounded youth.

The 4-H program is the youth education branch of the Cooperative Extension Service, a program of the United States Department of Agriculture. Members can range from age 5 to 21 and the 4-H experience enables its members to have fun, meet new people, learn new life-skills, build self-confidence, learn responsibility and set and achieve goals. It is a program that builds the leaders of tomorrow at the local, county, district, state, national and international level.

Parents, volunteers, community leaders and staff share their time and talents with 4-H youth, thereby aiding in the development of these young people to reach their fullest potential. The life skill and leadership development is accomplished through hands-on learning and by utilizing the knowledge of the country's land-grant university system.

4-H projects are in-depth, hands-on learning experiences for their members. Training pets, making clothes, repairing computers, growing plants and building rockets are just a few examples of 4-H projects. A wide range of projects is offered in each state. Additionally, 4-H Members across the country are assisting in closing the gap between the technology haves and have-nots. The Access the Future Coalition was created to coordinate the efforts of 4-H youths and adults working in partnership with organizations across the United States to bridge the digital divide.

I am very pleased to recognize the 100th anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program, and I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to join the gentleman from Georgia and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS), and am particularly pleased to join my Congressional neighbor, the chief sponsor of the resolution, the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. DAVIS), in formally recognizing the 100th anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program.

The 4-H program originally began as a number of separate farm programs for youth. In Illinois, the programs consisted of corn growing clubs. In Ohio, they consisted of soil experiments. In Virginia, the programs began as corn growing boys and tomato canning clubs for girls. In the early 1900s, the U.S. Department of Agriculture organized these various youth groups throughout the country into the 4-H program.

The 4-H program began as a way to involve heads, hearts and hands of farm youth in practical hands-on education in agriculture. A fourth H, for health, was added on later because of that important issue. Early extension agents and educators were able to introduce new technology and improved ways of doing things to rural communities through work with youth.

Today, 4-H has grown well beyond its original roots. It involves at least 28 percent of U.S. youth during one or more of their K through 12 grade years, and there are approximately 60 million 4-H alumni. Last year, nearly 7 million young men and women participated in 4-H programs. More than half of them were from cities and their suburbs. Over 30 percent are from racial or ethnic minorities.

In Virginia, 4-H clubs can be found in each of the State's 107 cities and counties, and through its 4-H education centers, Virginia has the second largest camping program in the Nation.

As the 4-H has grown in size, it has also grown in focus. Although working with plants and animals is still a major focus of 4-H, participants can also choose projects in personnel development and leadership, environmental education, science and technology or communications. National 4-H initiatives also include workforce preparation programs dedicated to helping young people acquire basic skills, explore career opportunities and gain experience in the workplace.

All in all, 4-H programs provide opportunities, relationships and support for youth to help them acquire the life skills necessary to meet the challenges of adolescence and adulthood.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleague from Virginia, the chief sponsor of the resolution, and salute her for introducing the resolution, and also want to salute the 4-H Youth Development Program as it celebrates its 100th anniversary in 2002, and ask that my colleagues support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the distinguished gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. DAVIS), the author of H. Con. Res. 472.

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to urge my colleagues today to support House Concurrent Resolution 472, urging the President to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe a national 4–H Youth Development Program Week in recognition of the 100 years of contributions to America's youth.

As a mom of two sons who have participated in 4–H programs and having been enriched by the experience, I commend this program for motivating young people to pledge their heads to clearer thinking, their hearts to greater loyalty, their hands to larger service and their health to better living for the club, the community, the country and the world.

Mr. Speaker, 4–H is the youth education branch of the Cooperative Extension Service, a program of the United States Department of Agriculture. Each State and each county has access to a county extension office for both youth and adult programs, and 4–H programs are available to youth with ages ranging from 5 to 21, depending on the State.

As my colleague previously said, 4–H programs originated in Illinois and Ohio, with corn-growing clubs for boys and tomato-canning clubs for girls; and they have developed into a full range of activities for children and youth, ranging from animal sciences to computer technology. In Virginia, one of the highlights of 4–H participation is the opportunity to display your work and your skill and compete for awards at the State fair. We did that for many years with our sons, and it was a rewarding experience for the whole family.

Young people in Virginia can display their skills in dairy, livestock, horses, and a variety of other agricultural-related programs at the State fair and exhibit to the public their achievements and their skills.

Experiential education is at the heart of 4–H, and it provides young people with opportunities of learning and accomplishments that go beyond a classroom education. In the 100th anniversary of the program, 4–H clubs have grown to 5.6 million annual participants and continue to provide experiences and opportunities that can impact a child for a lifetime. In an age where young people are confronted with many negative and destructive influences, 4–H provides them with an opportunity to spend their time constructively, cultivating a talent, learning a new skill, learning a responsibility, or working with others to accomplish a project.

I urge my colleagues today to join me in commemorating the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program by supporting this concurrent resolution.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, prior to recognizing the gentleman from Illinois, I ask unanimous consent that the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS) be able to control the remaining time on this side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I also want to commend my colleague from Virginia for introducing this matter to the House. I was not around 100 years ago for the beginning of the 4–H club movement, but I was around 50 years ago; and 50 years ago, I was an active member of a 4–H club. As I remember those days of my youth, I remember the pledge: "I pledge my head to clearer thinking, my heart to greater loyalty, my hands for larger service, and my health for better living for my club, my community, and my country," and now we add "the world."

But I also remember the glee of participation, the projects that we had. One year it was my project to grow 100 Rhode Island red chickens, and I managed to bring the 100 in. I broke one's neck one day; I stepped on his neck as they were coming to be fed, and I wanted to save him. I did not know much about medicine, but I just made myself a splint and put some coal oil on the neck and tied it together and the poor chicken lived and always walked like this, because it was crooked. A great project, though. I learned about electricity one year when I worked on another project.

I simply want to commend all of those individuals who have been instrumental in the development of 4–H activity. It does indeed provide an opportunity for young people to be actively engaged.

I remember another motto that they taught us. It had to do with good, better and best. Never rest until your good becomes better and your better becomes best.

So I want to thank all of those 4–H club leaders. I also want to commend the University of Illinois, which is one of the outstanding leaders of the Nation in agricultural extension and in 4–H club work and have expanded that to include urban communities. It is a great program; it is a great movement. I look forward to visiting 4–H club meetings and groups, talking with the young people, looking at their projects, hearing what they are doing.

So again, I commend the gentlewoman from Virginia for introducing this matter, and I urge its swift passage.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. BOOZMAN).

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I join with my colleagues today in celebration of the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program. I commend the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS) for introducing this resolution and for her strong support of this wonderful organization.

For the past 100 years, 4–H has taught young Americans to grow through their accomplishments. They have developed our youth, including my daughters and some of my staff members, into responsible, civic-minded citizens through their fun and rewarding educational programs.

Next to church, 4–H has probably had the most influence of any organization in my own family. I was honored to serve as a member of the 4–H advisory board in Tenton County, Arkansas; and all three of my daughters were members of the program that taught them skills from sewing to cooking to raising cattle. I do not have any chicken stories to tell, but we have countless stories to tell in everything from learning how to cook and sew to raising rabbits, sheep, whatever.

As we recognize the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program today, I believe it is important to reflect on what the organization stands for: dedication to our youth and communities. The 4–H motto simply states, "To make the best better." I think they have done an excellent job working to make the best better over the past 100 years, and I wish them continued success in the future.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise here today to recognize the long-time achievements of the 4–H Youth Development Program. I recall the program being instituted at one of my local public high schools where I attended. Unfortunately, not every student got to be a part of that program, but I know that there are over 6 million members worldwide that participate in this program that helps to provide support to our young children and young adults, teaching them respect and appreciation of the world in which they live.

But I find it ironic, Mr. Speaker, that today, as we celebrate today's generation of agricultural enthusiasts, the Republican leadership continues to ignore the advocates who fight day in and day out for safer working conditions for farm workers who toil in our fields to put food on our tables. Specifically, I am talking about one of my friends and colleagues, Dolores Huerta, who was cofounder of the United Farm Workers Union. A legend of her own time, she is an advocate for all people who seek justice and fair treatment in our country.

Each year, between September 15 and October 15, we celebrate in this great Capitol National Hispanic Heritage Month. It is fitting, therefore, Mr. Speaker, for us to recognize the multitude of accomplishments that Latinos have made over the span of the history of our country. Whether they were helping to fight freedom back in the Civil War, or whether it is defending our Nation's shores at this time, we need to make a commendation of those Latinos that helped to provide support for this great country.

But in contemporary Hispanic culture, one of the most respected national community leaders is none other than Dolores Huerta, who has fought for decades to protect farm workers and women from pesticides, unrealistically-long work schedules, and inadequate pay that oftentimes violate our own labor and State laws. Dolores Huerta continues to be a strong voice for working men and women; and regrettably, the administration, or the Republican leadership of this body, rather, has repeatedly blocked our attempts to formally recognize her many accomplishments.

Last year, nearly 15 months ago, I introduced House Concurrent Resolution 177, a resolution to honor Dolores Huerta for her tireless commitment to our Nation's farm workers and the Latino community. Although the measure had 94 cosponsors and, may I add, two Republican cosponsors, and the other body unanimously approved its companion piece in May, this body still has not yet considered that measure.

Mr. Speaker, I support the 4-H resolution and will vote in favor of it because I believe in its merits, but I ask that House Concurrent Resolution 177 be treated with the same respect and be brought forth on its own merits and not held back because of partisan bickering.

Nearly 13 percent of the people in the United States are of Hispanic backgrounds; 33 million in total. Many in the Latino community care about this resolution and, trust me, I believe some of your constituents will too. I urge the leadership to do the right thing and pass House concurrent resolution 177 for a floor vote.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as may be remaining.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentlewoman from California for, first of all, her cooperative spirit in supporting the resolution, even though she has a concern over a resolution of her own which has not yet come to the floor. One of the life skills that is taught in 4-H is working together; and her concurrence in supporting this resolution, while expressing her regret that her resolution has not yet come to the floor, is to me commendable, and I commend the gentlewoman. That really is what the 4-H is all about, teaching our young people life skills that are essential in working together and being productive, and I commend the gentlewoman from California.

I would make a point, however, as to the gentlewoman's point about this leader from the Hispanic community, that the Hispanic community receives tremendous benefits from the 4-H program. In my State of Georgia, which is an agricultural State, 4-H is an essential program in many parts of rural Georgia and in which many of its participants are Hispanic. I am proud that we are making this recommendation today in House Concurrent Resolution 472, and I believe the reason for the gentlewoman's concurrence in supporting it is because of the tremendous benefit this program brings to children of every ethnicity and all regions and all States.

I commend the gentlewoman from Virginia for her introduction of the resolution, and I urge my colleagues to vote for the resolution.

Mr. RODRIGUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program.

Mr. Speaker, over the past 100 years, the 4–H Youth Development Program has helped our Nation's young people become more involved in leadership, citizenship, and community service. The program has also provided youth with valuable life-skills and a safe, educational after school environment.

4–H program in my home state of Texas began in 1908 with a small "corn club" of 25 young boys. Under the Texas Cooperative Extension Service, the Program has grown into a modern youth organization with over 80 project areas. These projects areas include not only agriculture, but also non-agricultural interests such as photography, music, sports, consumer studies, science, and safety.

In and around the district I am privileged to represent, the 28th District of Texas, more than 72,000 young people are enrolled in 12 county 4–H programs. In addition, 4–H youth from the entire state of Texas come to the City of San Antonio, in my district, each February to compete at the San Antonio Livestock Show and Rodeo.

In addition to its 100th birthday, the 4–H Youth Development Program will celebrate National 4–H Week October 6–12, 2002. National 4–H Week is a week of community service, 4–H promotion, and celebration that has been held annually since 1942.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the 4–H Youth Development Program for its dedication to developing and educating our nation's young people, and I congratulate the organization on its 100th anniversary.

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Con. Res. 472, recognizing the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program. As a proud former 4–H member of my hometown La Crosse Wisconsin, I appreciate and recognize what a difference this excellent program makes in our youth's lives.

4–H in Wisconsin. 4–H was founded in 1902, and established in my home state of Wisconsin in 1914. There are currently over 2,000 4–H clubs in my state alone, with more than 150,000 young people as members. 4–H is Wisconsin's largest animal science education program for youth, teaching these thousands of people ethical approaches to animal care for both pets and production animals.

4–H Mission and Vision. Mr. Speaker, 4–H is a dynamic organization whose mission is to foster innovation and shared learning for America's youth, aged 5 to 19. Its vision is to draw upon the combined power of youth and adults, so that we can learn together in order to address the challenges and opportunities critical to youth in our communities.

4–H Pledge. While many people associate 4–H with rural communities and agricultural issues, kids from cities and suburbs and from all backgrounds belong to 4–H clubs. Through 4–H they study citizenship and civics, communications and arts, consumer and family issues, earth and environmental science, technology and personal leadership. 4–H stresses three fundamental values: Treat others with mutual trust and respect and open and honest communication; assume personal leadership and responsibility for our actions; and Celebrate our differences as well as our similarities and always realize that working with youth as partners is the key to our success.

Since September 11 of last year our country faces new challenges and responsibilities, which is why it is so important for Congress to recognize an outstanding organization that promotes civic duty and community responsibility. By pledging "their heads to clearer thinking, their hearts to greater loyalty, their heads to larger services, and their health to better living, our young people do work to strengthen their clubs and their communities, their countries, and their world."

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize 4–H for its Centennial Anniversary. This is an exceptional program that lives up to its motto "To Make the Best Better". I know from my own personal experience that the skills I learned as a 4–H member remain with me today and I will continue to live up to the program's motto "To Make the Best Better" throughout "my community, my country, and my world."

Mr. PUTNAM. Mr. Speaker, today we celebrate the centennial of 4–H in America. After a century of inclusion and collaboration, has spanned the nation from family farms to urban cityscapes. 4–H brings together youth and adults to build a nation of stronger communities.

More than 6.8 million youth, ages 5 to 19, across the Nation are involved in 4–H programs from aerospace to zoology. 4–H members are still rooted in the historic base of rural America but more than 35 percent of today's 4–H youth live in our major urban centers and suburbs.

The Florida 4–H program is active in all of Florida's 67 counties and on the Seminole Tribes reservations in south Florida. The total number of youth participating in Florida 4–H last year was 287,156 youth.

Florida's children and youth began enjoying educational activities provided in cooperation with the state's land-grant institutions as early as 1909. Leadership for the Florida 4–H program was found in three major academic institutions. State 4–H club agents were housed at the University of Florida and Florida State University. In addition, District Extension agents working with 4–H programs for black youth were housed at Florida A&M University. This long-standing relationship brings academic excellence to youth development as strategies and curriculum are created for the coming century.

Florida 4–H type programs were first established in the north Florida area. The boys participated in corn clubs, and the girls were active in tomato clubs.

County and regional fairs in Florida have a long tradition of providing opportunities for 4–H'ers to publicly show their projects and compete for awards.

Agricultural judging teams, organized in many counties, participated in regional, state and national contests. These teams provided a way for youth to travel and meet people from outside their communities, and learn more about the world around them.

Camping has always been a key component in the Florida 4–H program with Camp Timpoochee in northwest Florida being one of the first 4–H residential camps in the country, established in 1926.

One of the most successful programs is Florida 4–H Legislature, founded in 1973, and annually held in the State Capital of Tallahassee. The youth participants conduct a mock legislature in the State Capitol building by filling the roles of legislators, lobbyists, reporters and legislative staff.

Over 45 million 4–H alumni, including myself, and 4–H members are celebrating the centennial of the 4–H youth development movement. 4–H provides a positive environment, a relationship with caring adults, and exciting educational experiences for today's youth.

Thanks, 4–H for molding and shaping so many great Americans. Here's to another 100 years of outstanding youth development and leadership growth.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the House is taking time today to recognize the 100th anniversary of the 4–H Youth Development Program, which has spent a century helping young people develop skills to improve their lives and contribute to their communities.

In Missouri, more than 200,000 children and teenagers are involved in the 4–H program, which is coordinated by University Outreach and Extension, a partnership of the University of Missouri, Lincoln University, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and county governments. 4–H is often associated with rural communities, but today more than 1,000 Missouri 4–H clubs serve as many young people from suburban and urban areas as from farms and small towns.

During this centennial year, members of 4–H throughout Missouri have participated in events honoring the 100th anniversary of this outstanding organization. They have continued their unwavering commitment to community service throughout the Show Me State.

In May, 4–H and the U.S. Army teamed up to benefit American youth. 4–H faculty and staff from the University of Missouri worked with staff at Fort Leonard Wood to coordinate the Teen Discovery program for more than 30 teenagers from 16 Army installations across the nation. These teens received training in team building activities, opportunity for Army youth to focus on leadership training.

In July, nine 4–H members from across the state led Missouri 4–H into the technology age. They formed the first Missouri 4–H Technology Leadership Team and competed for a chance to attend the National 4–H Technology Conference in Maryland. The primary focus of the team has been to provide leadership and community service within the context of using and learning information technology skills. In a technology-driven era, opening up these new doors to 4–H members is more important than ever.

This month, 4–H'ers helped Missouri youth prepare for the troubling anniversary of last year's terrorist attacks. ParentLink, part of the 4–H youth development office in Missouri, provided support to parents, childcare providers, and communities. The ParentLink service creates educational programs and offers resources on parenting and working with children. During a time when our youth may be confused about the terrifying events of September 11, 4–H has taken a lead role in helping parents and children cope.

Mr. Speaker, Missouri 4–H, not unlike their counterparts throughout the United States, has distinguished itself in this anniversary year. As we celebrate 100 years since the inception of this outstanding community service program, I encourage anyone who is interested in joining or volunteering for 4–H to get involved in this worthwhile initiative.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my support and deep concern for H. Con. Res. 177, a resolution honoring Dolores Huerta for her commitment to the improvement of working conditions for children, women, and farmworker families. As a community leader, civic activist, and lobbyist, Dolores Huerta has struggled to bring justice and equal opportunity to immigrant farmworkers and their families for nearly three-quarters of a century.

Mr. Speaker, I have to question why House Concurrent Resolution 177 has not been brought to the floor when there are 91 cosponsors including myself who believe it is time to pay tribute to Dolores Huerta, especially during Hispanic Heritage Month. So far this month the House has heard and passed 3 Concurrent Resolutions that have had no more than 8 co-sponsors combined. In one case, a concurrent resolution was introduced and passed in a matter of months. And this week alone we are scheduled to hear another 6 concurrent resolutions, two of which have only 1 co-sponsor. All the while House Concurrent Resolution 177 has been waiting since June of 2001 with overwhelming support to be heard.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for us to show our support for this resolution and bring it to the floor. Let us not delay any longer in paying tribute to Dolores Huerta. Her story deserves to be told and her contribution to Hispanic American culture celebrated.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 472.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING AMERICAN GOLD STAR MOTHERS, INCORPORATED, BLUE STAR MOTHERS OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED, THE SERVICE FLAG, AND THE SERVICE LAPEL BUTTON

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 301) expressing the sense of Congress regarding American Gold Star Mothers, Incorporated, Blue Star Mothers of America, Incorporated, the service flag, and the service lapel button.

H. CON. RES. 301

Whereas section 901 of title 36, United States Code, authorizes members of the immediate family of individuals serving in the Armed Forces to display a service flag approved by the Secretary of Defense in a window of their place of residence during any period of war or hostilities in which the Armed Forces are engaged;

Whereas such section also authorizes members of the immediate family of individuals serving in the Armed Forces to wear a service lapel button approved by the Secretary of Defense during any period of war or hostilities in which the Armed Forces are engaged;

Whereas the traditions of displaying the service flag and wearing the service lapel button have not been widely practiced since the end of World War II; and

Whereas reinvigorating the traditions of displaying the service flag and wearing the service lapel button would foster patriotism and express support for the members of the Armed Forces during the war on terrorism: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the members of American Gold Star Mothers, Incorporated, and Blue Star Mothers of America, Incorporated, should be recognized for their sacrifices and for their dedicated and patriotic support of the United States;

(2) during the period in which the Armed Forces are engaged in the war on terrorism, members of the immediate family of individuals serving in the Armed Forces should be encouraged to display a service flag approved by the Secretary of Defense under section 901 of title 36, United States Code, in the window of their place of residence and wear a service lapel button approved under such section; and

(3) the President should issue a proclamation calling on members of the immediate family of individuals serving in the Armed Forces to display a service flag approved by the Secretary of Defense under section 901 of title 36, United States Code, in the window of their place of residence and wear a service lapel button approved under such section during the period in which the Armed Forces are engaged in the war on terrorism.

SEC. 2. The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall transmit a copy of this resolution to the American Gold Star Mothers, Incorporated, and the Blue Star Mothers of America, Incorporated.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS) and the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the concurrent resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as America's war on terrorism continues, the men and women who serve in our Armed Forces, like the veterans before them, help bring freedom and democracy to the world. In obscure, remote parts of the globe, the airmen, soldiers, sailors, and Marines stand tall. In some remote location, a sailor will miss his anniversary, an airman will miss his daughter's birthday, and a Marine will be absent for yet another family reunion, all in an effort to help make the world a safer place to live, work, and play.

As demonstrated by military casualties in Afghanistan, America's patriots sometimes pay the ultimate price in support and defense of democracy. The family members they leave behind especially feel the sacrifice. The American Gold Star and Blue Star Mothers of America deserve our special thanks and appreciation.

The tradition of the Blue Star dates back to World War I, symbolizing a mother who had her pride and joy serve in the Armed Forces. The traditional Gold Star recognized a mother who had lost a child during any period of war or hostilities.

During World War I, the Blue Star flag flown in a family's window was a symbol of both hope and yet grave concern for their son and others who were serving in the military and fighting for their country. It served as recognition of what Americans at home could do to support military family members, and also symbolized a pride in the commitment of America's youth, and a reminder of the gravity of the entire war effort.

During this time, there was the all-too-constant fear that the Blue Star would change its color to become a Gold Star days, weeks, or months later.

Mr. Speaker, the tradition of immediate family members displaying the service flag in their home or wearing a Blue Star or Gold Star service lapel button have not been widely practiced since the end of World War II.

As Americans, and at this historic juncture in our history, when America will indefinitely continue its war on terrorism, let us not forget the sacrifices of the families of the military members who make the world a safer place. Mr. Speaker, when we see Blue Star or Gold Star flags flying in a window or family members wearing lapel buttons, we should take the time to thank them for their sacrifice, and let them know that America stands behind them.

On behalf of a grateful Nation, I urge my colleagues to vote for this resolution, and let us not forget the families who have also sacrificed on behalf of freedom, liberty, and democracy.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 301, introduced by my colleague and friend, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS).

House Concurrent Resolution 301 urges the President to issue a proclamation on behalf of the members of the American Gold Star Mothers and Blue Star Mothers of America for their sacrifices and dedicated and patriotic support.

The bill also calls upon family members of American service members to display an approved service flag and wear a service lapel button in support of members of the Armed Forces.

Army captain Robert L. Queissner of the Fifth Ohio Infantry created the blue star flag in 1917 during World War I. The blue star flag quickly became a symbol that a family member was serving in the armed services. The blue star symbolizes the hope and pride of families who have loved ones in uniform.

During World War I, a blue star was replaced with a gold star if a service member was killed or died while on active duty. The idea for a gold star is believed to have been developed from the Women's Committee on the Council of National Defenses on May 28, 1918. The Women's Committee recommended a gilt star on a black band on the left arm for mourning the loss of a family member in wartime. The gold was to signify the sacrifice of a loved one for the cause of liberty and freedom.

Grace Darling Seibold, who lost her son George Vaughn Seibold during World War I, established the American Gold Star Mothers. When George left for service, his mother began to do community service by visiting returning servicemen in hospitals. On Christmas Eve, Grace Seibold received word that her son had been killed. In her sorrow, she reached out to other mothers who lost a child, and organized a group of special mothers. The group provided comfort to each other, and also provided loving support to hospitalized veterans confined in hospitals far from home. But it was not until January 5, 1929, that the American Gold Star Mothers, Incorporated, was officially established.

On June 12, 1984, the American Gold Star Mothers received a congressional charter. Army Captain George H. Maines founded the Blue Star Mothers of America in the 1940s. On January 22, 1942, he ran a newspaper article in the Flint News Advertiser requesting information about children in the Armed Forces. Over 1,000 mothers responded, and chapters of Blue Star Mothers began forming across the United States. Blue Star Mothers also began to volunteer for the war effort, visiting hospitals, providing hospitality areas in buses and train stations, preparing packages for shipment overseas, and comforting families who lost loved ones.

I want to commend the blue star mothers and gold star mothers who have dedicated themselves in support of our service members and families. As our Nation continues its war on terrorism, it is only fitting that we call upon the families of service members to reinvigorate the tradition of displaying a service flag in the windows of their homes, and that all Americans recognize the sacrifices of families of those who volunteer to defend our country.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SIMMONS).

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Oklahoma for yielding time to me, and I thank him for his sponsorship of House Concurrent Resolution 301, which expresses support of the Congress for the American Gold Star Mothers, for the Blue Star Mothers of America, and for our Armed Forces. I also commend the American Legion for its support of the Blue Star program.

We have heard, Mr. Speaker, that during World War I and during other conflicts, it was the custom for citizens in our country to hang a blue star banner in the windows of their homes or in the windows of their places of business to commemorate the fact that a family member or an employee of that business was serving in uniform overseas in difficult and dangerous circumstances.

We have also heard of the tragic news that when a family or a business would learn that that loved one or that employee was killed in the line of duty or died as a result of wounds, that blue star would then become a gold star, and that mother, that mother would lose her son or her husband or her loved one.

The blue star program is a program whose time has come for us here in America. It is a time for this program to be reinvigorated. That is what this resolution does.

In my home district of eastern Connecticut, we have a Blue Star Highway and we also have a Gold Star Highway and a Gold Star Bridge. Not every State or every district can honor the gold star mothers and the blue star mothers with a bridge or a highway, but something that we can all do, we can all do, is present a blue star banner to those constituents who have a family member or an employee serving in uniform.

Recently, I had the opportunity to honor several constituents who were serving in the Armed Forces. They would be Jason Tinelle, who currently serves in Bosnia as an infantry platoon sergeant with the U.S. Army, and also Torpedoman First Class Richard Messick, who currently serves aboard the USS Hartford.

When I presented these banners to their family members, to their spouses and to their children, there were literally tears in their eyes, tears in their eyes because this Congress recognized the sacrifice of their loved ones, and also the burden of those families.

This is an important resolution. This is a resolution which conveys this Congress' support for the men and women of our Armed Forces and for the mothers who wait at home, hoping beyond hope that that blue star does not turn into a gold star.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS) for this resolution. I think that all of us find ourselves in the 20th century in a time of asymmetrical warfare, unidentified enemies, and very troubling times. I think that it is very emblematic of a country that has been the shining beacon of freedom to have a volunteer military.

Unlike the Second World War, before we were born, when many, many of our fighting men and women came from our neighborhoods, we have a small military right now, one that is, I think, the best in the world, but is not necessarily represented in every community. I think that anonymity has created a lack of support for military families who find themselves disconnected in many ways, and unappreciated.

I think that the resolution of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS) is a good way for us to reknit together the community of Americans; to find a way to recognize those families that have provided our fighting men and women; and to give them a sense of support, a sense of pride, and a sense of the ability to recognize them.

So I am really encouraging my colleagues to vote for this resolution. I think it is very timely.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SIMMONS), and my friend, the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER), for being here on the floor today to help recognize the blue and gold star moms. My colleague, the gentlewoman from California, said it very well: We have moms and dads around the country, all over the Nation, that have made tremendous sacrifices in giving a loved one, giving a son or a daughter or a husband, in defense of the values and the freedoms and the many things that we hold dear in this Nation. I again would hope that we would never forget that sacrifice.

We have some blue and gold star moms here with us today. We are going to go and take some pictures with them, and have an opportunity to have a little fellowship with them.

So I want to say for them on behalf of a grateful Nation, we are appreciative of the sacrifices that they have made over the years in allowing this country to be the country that we know it to be this day.

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H. Con. Res. 301, which recognizes the American Gold Star Mothers, Inc., and Blue Star Mothers of America, Inc., for their sacrifices and patriotic support of the United States. I join my colleagues in urging the families of those serving in the armed forces to display a service flag in the window of their homes and to wear a service lapel button approved by the Secretary of Defense.

At a time when our military men and women are putting their lives on the line of our safety, we all recognize the importance of displaying a service flag. In times of war, these flags symbolize the love and pride that we have for the young men and women in the Armed Forces. They are a poignant reminder just how much America's greatness depends on their bravery.

The patriotic tradition of the service flag dates back to World War I, when mothers of young soldiers hand stitched red, white, and blue flags to hang in their windows as a sign that a loved one had gone to fight in the war. This tradition was later extended to the wives and families of servicemen serving during the war. This tradition encountered a huge resurgence in World War II and again during the Korean War. Even during Desert Storm some U.S. ships sent service flags to the families of everyone aboard.

As we face this new threat to our country, it is only fitting that we take the time to recognize that America's mothers may once again suffer the supreme sacrifice of motherhood, the loss of a son or daughter. To everyone with a family member in the Armed Services we offer our humble appreciation and respect.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATTS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 301.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

AMENDING INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS IMMUNITIES ACT TO PROVIDE FOR APPLICABILITY TO THE EUROPEAN CENTRAL BANK

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3656) to amend the International Organizations Immunities Act to provide for the applicability of that Act to the European Central Bank.

H.R. 3656

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION OF THE EUROPEAN CENTRAL BANK UNDER THE INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS IMMUNITIES ACT.

"SEC. 15. The provisions of this title may be extended to the European Central Bank in the same manner, to the same extent, and subject to the same conditions, as they may be extended to a public international organization in which the United States participates pursuant to any treaty or under the authority of any Act of Congress authorizing such participation or making an appropriation for such participation.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) and the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this measure is a minor but symbolically important bill designed to underscore support for the establishment of the European Union by according its central bank legal rights within the United States that are accorded the central banks of individual Nation states.

The European Central Bank is an independent legal entity owned by the central banks of the European Union member states, and was established in 1998 in accordance with the provisions of the treaty creating the European Union itself.

Significant portions of the ECB's foreign reserves are held at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York as well as private banks in the United States.

While the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act extends immunity to foreign central banks, the ECB's immunities under this act are not assured because of the ECB's unique status resulting from its multinational ownership. Although the International Organizations Act extends to international organizations the same immunity enjoyed by foreign governments, for the purpose of this act, the reference to "international organizations" only includes organizations to which the United States is a member; and of course, the United States is not a member of the EU.

In January of this year, I introduced this legislation to protect the legal security of the ECB's foreign reserves by amending the IOIA by designating the ECB, all of which is a mouthful, as an international organization for the purposes of this act. A significant number of other organizations of which the United States is not a member have been designated in this way, including the Organization of African Unity, the European Space Agency, and the International Committee of the Red Cross.

The extension of immunity provided by the IOIA to the ECB would assure the protection of their foreign reserves equivalent to that enjoyed by other foreign central banks. If we refuse the ECB request, we would, in effect, penalize monetary unions exercising sovereign Central Bank functions by, among other things, making the ECB vulnerable to private litigation. In this context, providing the ECB this status is entirely equitable and reasonable and amounts to the kind of mutual accommodation that we should be emphasizing at a time when so much friction is building between the United States and the European Union on a host of commercial and political issues.

Indeed, in a historical context, the United States, in effect, created a monetary union when we replaced the original Articles of Confederation with a Constitution that restricted the capacity of individual States to tax each other. The European Union wisely matched this step 2 centuries later, and the newly created European Central Bank is an emanation of this daring initiative. It is incumbent on those on this side of the Atlantic to express our support and respect for this historical movement and for the institutions necessary to make it a cohesive success.

The Committee on International Relations approved H.R. 3656 by a voice vote on March 20. The Federal Reserve, the Treasury Department, and the Department of State are in strong support of the legislation. I recommend an "aye" vote.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker I rise in strong support of this bill.

This is a very straightforward measure to provide the European Central Bank the same immunity from judicial process that we routinely provide to foreign central banks under the Foreign Services Immunities Act. I want to commend the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH), and also chairman of our Subcommittee on East Asia and the Pacific, for his authorship of this bill.

The ECB was established in June of 1998 in accordance with the treaty establishing the European Union. The ECB is an independent legal entity owned by the central banks of the EU member states. Like any central banks, its role is to define and implement the monetary policy of the European Union and to maintain price stability. It also conducts foreign exchange operations and holds the official foreign reserves of the EU states.

Given the nature of the ECB, it makes absolute sense to extend to it the same legal treatment we routinely provide to other foreign central banks.

Unfortunately, since the ECB is a new type of central bank, it does not fit the definition of a foreign central bank under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act; and it is, therefore, not granted the immunities provided by that act.

The ECB is likewise excluded from the judicial process immunities normally provided to the international organizations by the International Organizations Immunities Act because the IOIA only extends its immunities to international organizations of which the United States is a member.

Therefore, H.R. 3656 amends the IOIA to include its provisions to the European Central Bank in the same manner, to the same extent, and subject to the same conditions as they may be extended to a public international organization in which the United States participates.

This extension of the IOIA will simply provide the ECB with the same immunity we routinely grant to foreign central banks.

This is a good bill, Mr. Speaker; and I urge my colleagues to support it. Again, I commend my good friend from Iowa for his sponsorship of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers; and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would just conclude with my appreciation for the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) and his thoughtful approach to all issues of the day.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CULBERSON). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3656.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the House by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

WELCOMING MADAME CHEN WU SUE-JEN, THE FIRST LADY OF TAIWAN, TO WASHINGTON, D.C.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 533) welcoming Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen, the first lady of Taiwan, to Washington, D.C.

H. RES. 533

Whereas Taiwan's First Lady Chen Wu Sue-jen, wife and political partner to her husband President Chen Shui-bian, has been unwaveringly and courageously striving for justice, human rights, and democracy in Taiwan and has herself held a seat in the Legislative Yuan;

Whereas Taiwan is now a model vibrant democracy and one of the top ten trading partners of the United States;

Whereas supporting democracy, human rights, and free market economies has been a longstanding policy of the United States;

Whereas the Government and people in Taiwan have consistently provided tremendous support and generous contributions to the United States after the terrorist attacks against the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001;

Whereas First Lady Chen Wu was one of the main forces behind Taiwan's charity and humanitarian assistance for the victims of the terrorist attacks;

Whereas First Lady Chen Wu will visit the United States beginning on September 22, 2002, and will bring with her a strong message from her husband and the people of Taiwan that Taiwan's cooperation with the United States in this joint anti-terrorism campaign will continue and be further strengthened;

Whereas First Lady Chen Wu, on behalf of President Chen Shui-bian, visited France in November 2001 to receive the International Human Rights Award; and

Whereas First Lady Chen Wu, confined to a wheelchair due to a tragic traffic accident during a political campaign, is a strong and effective advocate for Taiwan's physically challenged citizens: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives extends its warmest welcome to Taiwan's First Lady Chen Wu Sue-jen during her visit to Washington, D.C., in September 2002.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Res. 533, the resolution under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I would like to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), our good ranking minority member, for expediting consideration of H. Res. 533, a resolution welcoming Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen of Taiwan to Washington.

Madame Chen's visit comes at an important moment in our Nation's relationship with Taiwan and the People's Republic of China. Although the United States has repeatedly asked Beijing to resolve its difficulties with Taiwan through peaceful means, the Communist Chinese military has placed hundreds of ballistic missiles on the coast of China aimed at Taiwan. To make matters worse, Communist China is building more and more of those missiles.

The Communist authorities portray the peaceful cause of Taiwan independence as a terrorist movement. Nothing could be further from the truth. Taiwan threatens no one. On the contrary, Taiwan has been 100 percent supportive of the war against terrorism; and it has, for example, given generously to the humanitarian effort in Afghanistan and trying to help the Afghan Government in this very pivotal moment. China, on the other hand, has helped the Taliban. While the Taiwanese has been helping those people trying to create a more democratic society in Afghanistan, trying to create a more peaceful environment, the Communist Chinese, on the other hand, have been helping the Taliban. They have helped them build a 14,000 secure-line telephone system; and I might add that on September 11, the Communist Chinese authorities flew in to Kabul and signed a trade agreement with the Taliban.

China has also assisted Iraq in building a fiber optic communications network that is used for the Iraqi military. So it is clear who supports terrorism and who does not.

First Lady Chen Wu will be bringing with her a strong message from her husband and the people of Taiwan that Taiwan's cooperation with the United States in its anti-terrorism campaign will continue and will strengthen in the future. This is the sort of mature behavior that the world has come to expect from Taiwan.

We hope that Beijing will soon follow in Taiwan's footsteps and become a truly constructive member of the world community. The threats that it is making against a peaceful Taiwan, the threats of military action, are irresponsible; and we should take note that the rest of the world should take note of Communist China's behavior. Such a change in behavior on the part of Communist China toward the people of Taiwan should be also noted. We would invite the Communist Chinese to take a second look at their policies.

In the meantime, I urge my colleagues to vote for H. Res. 533 and welcome the First Lady of Taiwan, Madame Chen to the United States. Madam Chen and her husband represent democratically elected leaders. Her husband was elected President of Taiwan. No one has elected in a free election those so-called leaders in Beijing who threaten Taiwan with violence and military action.

Let us take this moment to tip our hat respectfully to the wife of an elected President of a country, and that is what Americans should be doing instead of kowtowing and being afraid to anger tyrants overseas.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), the chairman of our Committee on International Relations, for his support and leadership in bringing this legislation to the forefront. I also want to commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for his authorship of this resolution, and of course, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and his management of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. I would first like to commend, as I said earlier, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for introducing this important resolution. As the ranking Democrat on the Subcommittee on East Asia and the Pacific, I was very pleased to join the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), the ranking member of our side of the Committee on International Relations, as an original cosponsor of this measure.

Mr. Speaker, the economic and political transformation of Taiwan over the past decades is truly remarkable. From the depths of poverty in the 1950s, Taiwan has turned into an economic power house which is now one of America's top 10 trading partners.

Turning away from one-party rule, Taiwan has become a vibrant democracy, serving as a beacon to those across the Asia-Pacific region who yearn for freedom and showing that democracy can thrive in a Chinese context, especially within the context of meeting with the people of China.

Mr. Speaker, the election of Chen Shui-bian to the presidency in March of 2000 further demonstrates the depth and strength of Taiwan's democracy, as President Chen is the first member of the opposition to serve as President.

As a result of these positive developments, the relations between the United States and Taiwan have never been closer. There is no better example of this close relationship than the visit to the United States this week of Taiwan's First Lady, Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen.

First Lady Chen Wu has long fought for democracy and human rights and humanitarian causes in Taiwan. The First Lady previously served in Taiwan's legislature. She has provided critical assistance to her husband in his political efforts.

Maybe not known to the Members of our body, Mr. Speaker, but First Lady Chen Wu was seriously injured in a traffic accident years ago; and as a result, she has become a paraplegic, but what is more important is the tremendous courage and her fortitude in continuing to support her husband, not only to stand as a symbol, a beacon for democracy to the people of Taiwan but certainly an example of someone who has that determination as First Lady Chen Wu has demonstrated, not only to the people in Taiwan but certainly to the people here in America.

Mr. Speaker, since the horrendous tragedy of September 11, the First Lady has also been a driving force behind Taiwan's charity and humanitarian assistance for the victims of the terrorist attacks. The First Lady will be on Capitol Hill tomorrow to meet Members of Congress, and I do strongly urge my colleagues to take this opportunity to meet her. I have no doubt that they will be impressed by her strength, her sense of compassion, and her commitment to building stronger ties between the United States and Taiwan.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge support from my colleagues for this House Resolution 533. Again I could not have asked for a greater advocate and champion of freedom and democracy in the Asia Pacific region than the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and I commend his leadership and management of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself just a few moments to close this debate.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) and I visited many hot spots around the world in our time together, and he has always demonstrated a love of liberty and justice, and I think that today this resolution demonstrates that in a democratic society even where there are some disagreements, and we all understand people have disagreements on various issues, that fundamental values that this body represents cross party lines.

The gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS), the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) and others who have been so active on the Committee on International Relations, sometimes we have heated debates, but quite often those debates are not about the fundamentals but are instead about details, and today we are talking about something that is very fundamental, and that is showing respect to a country that has a democratically elected government. We show our respect to that country by tipping our hat and greeting the First Lady of that country who is visiting with us, a lady who has herself endured many, many crises and challenges in her life and demonstrates a courage, and a lady who is married to a man who was elected the first really democratically elected leader of a Chinese people and a man now who represents the republic there in Taiwan and is a good friend to the United States.

So I would urge my colleagues to join me in voting for H. Res. 533.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to welcome Ms. Wu Sue-jen, Taiwan's First Lady, in her visit to Washington, DC, and in strong support of H. Res. 533, a resolution welcoming Madam First Lady to the Capitol of the United States.

Throughout her life, Ms. Wu has been a reliable partner for President Chen Shui-bien and a determined fighter for democratic development in Taiwan. While she has been paralyzed from the waist down since 1985, Ms. Wu has nonetheless remained politically engaged and continued to play a key role in Taiwanese politics. She was elected and served as a member of Taiwan's Legislative Yuan in 1986, and has played a great role in President Chen's ascension first to the Mayor of Taipei, and later, Taiwan's presidency.

While I am not able to welcome President Chen in Washington, DC today, it is a great pleasure to welcome Ms. Wu to our nation's capital. I believe it is critically important to America's commitment to democracy for the U.S. Congress to welcome representatives of a democratic and free people to our capital, and I look forward to future opportunities to welcome democratically elected leaders of the Taiwanese people.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support for H. Res. 533, a resolution welcoming Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen, the first lady of Taiwan, to Washington, D.C.

First Lady Chen has sacrificed so much for the freedom of her countrymen and women. Her efforts to establish political pluralism in Taiwan led to a botched assassination attempt that left her permanently paralyzed from the waist down. Yet she continues to work tirelessly for the ideals that she so strongly believes in—self determination, the rule of law and human rights.

Self-determination is a right that the Taiwanese should not be deprived of, and it is in our interests to demand that communist China immediately stop threatening Taiwan when its leaders simply state a fact of truth . . . Taiwan is independent and it should be a full-fledged member of the United Nations. Taiwan's courageous leaders have every right to express their people's desire to be independent . . . especially from the gruesome dictatorship in Beijing. As President Chen so bravely articulated: "Taiwan's future and destiny can only be decided by the 23 million people living on the island."

We support the efforts of the Bush Administration to clearly articulate a policy on Taiwan that places more emphasis on Taiwan's interests and less on our concerns with the People's Republic of China. Accordingly, it was disappointing to learn that our U.S. representative to Taiwan recently criticized the government there for viewing "the mainland through the prism of economic threat." It makes no sense to shrug aside Taiwan's fears that their businessmen may be inadvertently assisting the communists to build up their military resources.

We need to work closely with our Administration so that there is a single strong focused unambivalent message from the United States that our government understands the aspirations and the fears of the people of Taiwan. Madame Chen is an inspiration to all of us and we heartily welcome her here to the United States.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 533.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

HONORING HEROISM AND COURAGE DISPLAYED BY AIRLINE FLIGHT ATTENDANTS

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 110) honoring the heroism and courage displayed by airline flight attendants on a daily basis.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. CON. RES. 110

Whereas over 100,000 men and women in the United States serve as flight attendants;

Whereas flight attendants dedicate themselves to serving and protecting their passengers;

Whereas flight attendants react to dangerous situations as the first line of defense of airline passengers;

Whereas safety and security are the primary concerns of flight attendants;

Whereas flight attendants evacuate passengers from an airplane in emergency situations;

Whereas flight attendants defend passengers against hijackers, terrorists, and abusive passengers;

Whereas flight attendants perform routine safety and service duties on board the aircraft;

Whereas 25 flight attendants lost their lives aboard 4 hijacked flights on September 11, 2001;

Whereas 5 flight attendants helped to prevent United Flight 93 from reaching its intended target on September 11, 2001;

Whereas flight attendants provided assistance to passengers across the United States who had their flights diverted on September 11, 2001;

Whereas flight attendants on American Airlines Flight 63 helped to subdue Richard Reid on December 22, 2001, thereby preventing him from detonating an explosive device in his shoe intended to bring down the airplane and kill all 185 passengers and 12 crew members on board; and

Whereas flight attendants helped to prevent Pablo Moreira, a Uruguayan citizen, from breaking into the cockpit on February 7, 2002, during United Flight 855 from Miami to Buenos Aires: Now therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) expresses its profound gratitude for the faithful service provided by flight attendants to make air travel safe;

(2) honors the courage and dedication of flight attendants;

(3) supports all the flight attendants who continue to display heroism on a daily basis, as they had been doing before, during, and after September 11, 2001; and

(4) shall send a copy of this resolution to a family member of each of the flight attendants killed on September 11, 2001.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and the gentleman from Utah (Mr. MATHESON) each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this afternoon we take up as a body Senate Concurrent Resolution 110. That resolution addresses a long overdue requirement of this House, and that is to honor the heroism and also the courage displayed by our flight attendants not only on September 11 but on a daily basis.

Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, more than 3,000 innocent people lost their lives. This devastating number includes some 25 flight attendants who were on board the four hijacked aircraft on that day. As a result of the tragic events of that fateful day, the vital role that these men and women play as a very first line of defense became painfully evident. Flight attendants react and they also provide essential guidance to passengers during emergency situations. Flight attendants are in fact responsible and primarily concerned with passenger safety. Once the aircraft door is closed, they not only provide safety for the traveling public but also become our very first line of defense in aircraft security. They also guarantee that there are in fact additional eyes and ears on guard for suspicious and threatening behavior.

Examples of their acts of heroism and service include the actions of the 25 flight attendants who lost their lives on September 11 in the four aircraft that were hijacked that day. Mr. Speaker, we have honored firefighters, police, pilots, and ordinary citizens. Today it is fitting that we take some time to recognize those flight attendants who served both the aviation industry, the public, and America so well. It is also important to note that we also have the remarkable assistance that these flight attendants provide every day and particularly on the day that those flights around the Nation and around the world were diverted.

The flight attendants on American Airlines Flight 63 last December recognized the terrible threat that that aircraft faced. It was not security guards. It was not air marshals. It was not a large force. It was flight attendants who helped subdue the attempted and now somewhat infamous shoe bomber, Richard Reid. They acted. They saved the lives of countless passengers on that aircraft. We are indebted to those flight attendants.

Also flight attendants helped prevent another tragedy on a flight. United Flight 855 in February of this year, a deranged individual attempted to break into a cockpit. I believe that was on a flight from South America to Miami. They also acted with heroism.

In recognition of their vital role as a first line of defense, the House voted in July to strengthen the flight attendant training program, and those reforms are long overdue because sometimes these flight attendants are left at bay to fight these terrorist acts and other disruptions on aircraft. H.R. 4635, which is primarily devoted to arming pilots and allowing pilots to defend themselves, also requires that flight attendants receive much needed hands-on training in self-defense so they too can defends themselves, the passengers, the aircraft, and again serve as a first line of defense.

As H.R. 4635 demonstrates, the House supports these brave men and women and wants to ensure their safety and their security along with that of the flying public.

So today we are considering Senate Concurrent Resolution 110. The House passed a similar version of this concurrent resolution earlier this month. The concurrent resolution recognizes the over 100,000 airline flight attendants who have dedicated themselves to serving and protecting our passengers, the flying public, on a daily basis. It also recognizes the courage and heroism of those who lost their lives on September 11. It expresses Congress' profound gratitude to airline flight attendants and it rightfully honors their courage and dedication. For all these reasons and many more, I encourage my colleagues in the House to pass the Senate concurrent resolution so rightfully honoring our flight attendants.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MATHESON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), our subcommittee chairman. I have enjoyed serving on the Subcommittee on Aviation under his leadership, and I appreciate his leadership on this bill today.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of Senate Concurrent Resolution 110. It is such an appropriate thing for us to be doing in terms of recognizing the service and honor and courage of over 100,000 flight attendants that fly in the skies above this country. It is important that we acknowledge their service. And something that has helped us focus on this service is the actions that took place on September 11 and actions that took place subsequent to September 11.

As was mentioned, 25 flight attendants lost their lives that day. That same day let us not forget that all the other planes that were up in the sky were ordered down on the ground by the FAA and a number of flight attendants on all those flights on that day faced some real challenges. They faced the fear that we all felt that day, but they also faced the job of having to work with a number of passengers on all those airplanes that were being diverted and asked to land on emergency notice, and the flight attendants in this country served us well that day in terms of dealing with that difficult situation, and that applies to the days following September 11. We had a public that was nervous, and the flight attendants represented the face of courage. They were the first line of defense, quite frankly, in maintaining security on those airplanes.

So it is appropriate that we honor them in this context, but we ought to honor them also for all the work they have done. Let us face it. When they get on that airplane, they are the face of the airline for which they work. The traveling public at times experiences some frustrations maybe through delays, maybe through the weather or what not. Sometimes those frustrations are unfairly directed towards flight attendants because they are the ones who are there interacting with the public, and I think that as a profession they deal with that situation so well and they certainly deserve our gratitude and our respect.

It is important that we do not forget the folks who lost their lives September 11, those 25 flight attendants, and we owe them a lot. We owe them this resolution today to honor what they have done but we owe them more. We owe them the commitment that we are going to continue to move forward and try to encourage as good a security situation as we can get in our aviation industry. That is the commitment we need to make to the flight attendants as well. They are on the front lines, and we are going to do whatever we can do to back them up to make sure this is a secure situation in our aviation industry.

So it is with great pleasure that I advocate support of Senate Concurrent Resolution 110.

Mrs. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. Con. Res 110. The women and men who make up America's flight attendant workforce deserve recognition for their role as safety professionals. As the eyes and ears of the aircraft cabin, flight attendants have historically provided detailed information on countless safety issues.

Flight attendants are a highly-trained, highly-skilled workforce, charged with the safety and security of passengers, other crewmembers, and the aircraft itself.

On September 11, 2001, twenty-five flight attendants onboard the four hijacked flights provided the government with vital information, and with little more than their own ingenuity and bravery, fought the armed hijackers and performed their duties as safety professionals to the end.

Since that day, safety in the air is of paramount concern to millions. We now understand the vulnerability that flight crews have felt for years. But today, more than 12 months after the attacks on our nation, flight attendants are no more prepared to defend the flying public today than they were on the morning of September 11, 2001.

Air Tran flight attendant Susan Cosby began developing her airline's voluntary defense training program within days of September 11. In a visit to my office, Cosby posed this question, "Flight attendants have always been expected to save lives in emergencies. Why should defending the flying public from the threat of terrorism be any different?'"

Now more than ever, it is crucial for us to recognize the importance of flight attendants. It is my hope of America's 100,000 flight attendants, that the Congress will quickly pass meaningful security training legislation.

Mr. MATHESON. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate concurrent resolution, S. Con. Res. 110.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on Senate Concurrent Resolution 110.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

TIMPANOGOS INTERAGENCY LAND EXCHANGE ACT OF 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1240) to provide for the acquisition of land and construction of an interagency administrative and visitor facility at the entrance to America Fork Canyon, Utah, and for other purposes, as amended.

S. 1240

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—TIMPANOGOS INTERAGENCY LAND EXCHANGE

SEC. 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the facility that houses the administrative office of the Pleasant Grove Ranger District of the Uinta National Forest can no longer properly serve the purpose of the facility;

(2) a fire destroyed the Timpanogos Cave National Monument Visitor Center and administrative office in 1991, and the temporary structure that is used for a visitor center cannot adequately serve the public; and

(3) combining the administrative office of the Pleasant Grove Ranger District with a new Timpanogos Cave National Monument visitor center and administrative office in one facility would—

(A) facilitate interagency coordination;

(B) serve the public better; and

(C) improve cost effectiveness.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire by exchange non-Federal land located in Highland, Utah as the site for an interagency administrative and visitor facility;

(2) to direct the Secretary of the Interior to construct an administrative and visitor facility on the non-Federal land acquired by the Secretary of Agriculture; and

(3) to direct the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to cooperate in the development, construction, operation, and maintenance of the facility.

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) FACILITY.—The term "facility" means the facility constructed under section 106 to house—

(A) the administrative office of the Pleasant Grove Ranger District of the Uinta National Forest; and

(2) FEDERAL LAND.—The term "Federal land" means the parcels of land and improvements to the land in the Salt Lake Meridian comprising—

(A) approximately 237 acres located in T. 5 S., R. 3 E., sec. 13, lot 1, SW¼, NE¼, E½, NW¼ and E½, SW¼, as depicted on the map entitled "Long Hollow-Provo Canyon Parcel", dated March 12, 2001;

(B) approximately 0.18 acre located in T. 7 S., R. 2 E., sec. 12, NW¼, as depicted on the map entitled "Provo Sign and Radio Shop", dated March 12, 2001;

(C) approximately 20 acres located in T. 3 S., R. 1 E., sec. 33, SE¼, as depicted on the map entitled "Corner Canyon Parcel", dated March 12, 2001;

(D) approximately 0.18 acre located in T. 29 S., R. 7 W., sec. 15, S½, as depicted on the map entitled "Beaver Administrative Site", dated March 12, 2001;

(E) approximately 7.37 acres located in T. 7 S., R. 3 E., sec. 28, NE¼, SW¼, NE¼, as depicted on the map entitled "Springville Parcel", dated March 12, 2001; and

(F) approximately 0.83 acre located in T. 5 S., R. 2 E., sec. 20, as depicted on the map entitled "Pleasant Grove Ranger District Parcel", dated March 12, 2001.

(3) NON-FEDERAL LAND.—The term "non-Federal land" means the parcel of land in the Salt Lake Meridian comprising approximately 37.42 acres located at approximately 4,400 West, 11,000 North (SR–92), Highland, Utah in T. 4 S., R. 2 E., sec. 31, NW¼, as depicted on the map entitled "The Highland Property", dated March 12, 2001.

(4) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Agriculture.

SEC. 103. MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.

(a) AVAILABILITY OF MAPS.—The maps described in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 102 shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Chief of the Forest Service until the date on which the land depicted on the maps is exchanged under this title.

(b) TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.—The Secretary may correct minor errors in the legal descriptions in paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 102.

SEC. 104. EXCHANGE OF LAND FOR FACILITY SITE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary may, under such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, convey by quitclaim deed all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the Federal land in exchange for the conveyance of the non-Federal land.

(b) TITLE TO NON-FEDERAL LAND.—Before the land exchange takes place under subsection (a), the Secretary shall determine that title to the non-Federal land is acceptable based on the approval standards applicable to Federal land acquisitions.

(c) VALUATION OF NON-FEDERAL LAND.—

(1) DETERMINATION.—The fair market value of the land and the improvements on the land exchanged under this title shall be determined by an appraisal that—

(A) is approved by the Secretary; and

(B) conforms with the Federal appraisal standards, as defined in the publication entitled "Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions".

(2) SEPARATE APPRAISALS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Each parcel of Federal land described in subparagraphs (A) through (F) of section 102(2) shall be appraised separately.

(B) INDIVIDUAL PROPERTY VALUES.—The property values of each parcel shall not be affected by the unit rule described in the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions.

(d) CASH EQUALIZATION.—Notwithstanding section 206(b) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1716(b)), the Secretary may, as the circumstances require, either make or accept a cash equalization payment in excess of 25 percent of the total value of the lands or interests transferred out of Federal ownership.

(e) ADMINISTRATION OF LAND ACQUISITION BY UNITED STATES.—

(1) BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—On acceptance of title by the Secretary—

(i) the non-Federal land conveyed to the United States shall become part of the Uinta National Forest; and

(ii) the boundaries of the national forest shall be adjusted to include the land.

(B) ALLOCATION OF LAND AND WATER CONSERVATION FUND MONEYS.—For purposes of section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 4601–099), the boundaries of the national forest, as adjusted under this section, shall be considered to be boundaries of the national forest as of January 1, 1965.

(2) APPLICABLE LAW.—Subject to valid existing rights, the Secretary shall manage any land acquired under this section in accordance with—

(A) the Act of March 1, 1911 (16 U.S.C. 480 et seq.) (commonly known as the "Weeks Act"); and

(B) other laws (including regulations) that apply to National Forest System land.

SEC. 105. DISPOSITION OF FUNDS.

(a) DEPOSIT.—The Secretary shall deposit any cash equalization funds received in the land exchange in the fund established under Public Law 90-171 (16 U.S.C. 484a) (commonly known as the "Sisk Act").

(b) Use of Funds.—Funds deposited under subsection (a) shall be available to the Secretary, without further appropriation, for the acquisition of land and interests in land for administrative sites in the State of Utah and land for the National Forest System.

SEC. 106. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF FACILITY.

(a) Construction.—

(1) In general.—Subject to paragraph (2), as soon as practicable after funds are made available to carry out this title, the Secretary of the Interior shall construct, and bear responsibility for all costs of construction of, a facility and all necessary infrastructure on non-Federal land acquired under section 104.

(2) Design and specifications.—Prior to construction, the design and specifications of the facility shall be approved by the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior.

(b) Operation and Maintenance of Facility.—The facility shall be occupied, operated, and maintained jointly by the Secretary (acting through the Chief of the Forest Service) and the Secretary of the Interior (acting through the Director of the National Park Service) under terms and conditions agreed to by the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 107. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title.

TITLE II—UTAH PUBLIC LANDS ARTIFACT PRESERVATION

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the collection of the Utah Museum of Natural History in Salt Lake City, Utah, includes more than 1,000,000 archaeological, paleontological, zoological, geological, and botanical artifacts;

(2) the collection of items housed by the Museum contains artifacts from land managed by—

(A) the Bureau of Land Management;

(B) the Bureau of Reclamation;

(C) the National Park Service;

(D) the United States Fish and Wildlife Service; and

(E) the Forest Service;

(3) more than 75 percent of the Museum's collection was recovered from federally managed public land; and

(4) the Museum has been designated by the legislature of the State of Utah as the State museum of natural history.

SEC. 202. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) Museum.—The term "Museum" means the University of Utah Museum of Natural History in Salt Lake City, Utah.

(2) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 203. ASSISTANCE FOR UNIVERSITY OF UTAH MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

(a) Assistance for Museum.—The Secretary shall make a grant to the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, Utah, to pay the Federal share of the costs of construction of a new facility for the Museum, including the design, planning, furnishing, and equipping of the Museum.

(b) Grant Requirements.—

(1) In general.—To receive a grant under subsection (b), the Museum shall submit to the Secretary a proposal for the use of the grant.

(2) Federal share.—The Federal share of the costs described in subsection (a) shall not exceed 25 percent.

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $15,000,000, to remain available until expended.

TITLE III—SALT RIVER BAY NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK AND ECOLOGICAL PRESERVE BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT

SEC. 301. BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.

The first sentence of section 103(b) of the Salt River Bay National Historical Park and Ecological Preserve at St. Croix, Virgin Islands, Act of 1992 (16 U.S.C. 410tt-1(b)) is amended to read as follows: "The park shall consist of approximately 1015 acres of lands, waters, and interests in lands as generally depicted on the map entitled 'Salt River Bay National Historical Park and Ecological Preserve, St. Croix, U.S.V.I.', numbered 141/80002, and dated May 2, 2002.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Jeff Miller of Florida). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Hansen) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Rahall) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Hansen).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1240 would authorize the exchange of 266 acres of National Forest System land within the Uinta and Wasatch-Cache National Forests in Utah for 37 acres of private land at the mouth of American Fork Canyon. The bill would also require the Secretary of Interior to construct a joint visitor center for the Mount Timpanogos National Monument, administered by the National Park Service, and the Uinta National Forest, administered by the U.S. Forest Service.

The visitor center would replace the center that was burned down in 1991. Since that time, the park has been in the position of attempting to house its visitors and administrative offices in a double-wide trailer. On days of high visitation, the trailer is easily overwhelmed.

This bill also contains the text of H.R. 3928, passed previously by the House under suspension of the rules. This legislation would direct the Secretary of Interior to assist the University of Utah by making a grant to the University of Utah Museum of Natural History in Salt Lake City, Utah, to help pay for the Federal share of the costs of construction of a new natural history museum. The Federal share, however, would not exceed 25 percent of the total cost. It is important to note that more than 75 percent of the museum's vast collection comes from Federal lands in Utah and the surrounding States in the Intermountain West. The poor condition of the current building poses serious threats to the preservation of these artifacts and must be replaced.

Finally, the bill contains the text of H.R. 5097, which would adjust the boundaries of the Salt River Bay National Historic Park and Ecological Preserve located in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, to include the site of a two-story, 4,800 square foot house at the site that can easily be converted to a visitor station, museum and operation center and 15.4 acres of land that has been offered as a donation to the park. This park includes the only known place in present-day U.S. territory where members of Christopher Columbus' expedition landed. This is a good bill. I urge Members to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1240 is a package consisting of three free-standing bills which have already been explained.

For my part, I would simply note that our colleague, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Matheson), was the original sponsor of the legislation to provide assistance to the University of Utah, and we appreciate very much the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Hansen) moving this measure forward.

I would like to highlight the fact that the text of H.R. 5097, a bill introduced by the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. Christensen) is included in this measure. This important legislation would expand the boundaries of the Salt River Bay National Historical Park and Ecological Preserve, located on the island of St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The people of the U.S. Virgin Islands have a strong and effective advocate in the gentlewoman. It has been my pleasure to work with the gentlewoman on many issues where she has taken a leadership role in advancing the well-being of her constituents and the American public.

In particular, I want to commend the gentlewoman for the distinguished work she has done as the ranking member of the Subcommittee on National Parks, Recreation and Public Lands. In that role the gentlewoman has assumed that responsibility not just in this Congress but in many others as well and has taken hold of that responsibility and helped shepherd numerous pieces of legislation that affect the very fabric of this great Nation. Her leadership has made possible the preservation and careful use of many of the natural and historical resources that we are blessed with across this country.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Hansen) as well, and salute him for his leadership on a number of important issues we will be addressing today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. Christensen).

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 1240 as well, and urge Members to support its passage. This bill includes my bill, H.R. 5097, to expand the boundaries of the Salt River National Historical Park and Ecological Preserve located on St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

I would like to express my gratitude to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), to the ranking member, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), and the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH) for their support of my bill, which will make it possible for the National Park Service to establish an official presence at Salt River for the first time since the park was established more than 10 years ago.

Salt River Bay is located approximately 3.5 miles west of Christiansted on the north central coast of St. Croix. It became a part of the National Park System when President Bush signed H.R. 2927 into law on February 24, 1992. Salt River and its surrounding land areas comprise an important ecosystem continuum, the only one of its kind in the Virgin Islands and one of the few left in the West Indies. This unique chain of habitats functions as an intact ecosystem from the dry tropical forested hillsides down to the wetlands, streams, marshes, mangroves, salt ponds, and sea grass beds to the magnificent coral reefs and superb submarine canyon containing deep water sponges and corals.

Salt River Bay and its surrounding areas support the highest diversity of bird life known in the Virgin Islands. Twenty-four out of 110 bird species recorded within Salt River system are locally or federally listed as threatened or endangered species. In addition, seven species of endangered vertebrates occur here: The leatherback; green and hawksbill sea turtles; the brown pelican; the least and roseate tern and the peregrine falcon.

In addition to these incredible natural resources, the historical and archeological significance of Salt River is also remarkable. Salt River Bay is the first, and best-documented, site where Christopher Columbus made landfall on his second voyage to the New World in 1493.

From other archeological findings on St. Croix, experts believe Salt River was likely home to pre-ceramic peoples living more than 3,000 years ago. The site contains evidence of the only ceremonial ball court of the Carib Indian culture ever to be discovered in the Lesser Antilles.

In order to provide better service and a more rewarding experience for park visitors, it is important for the Park Service to have a place where visitors can come to learn about the park and receive assistance from the Park Service personnel. There is currently no such facility at the park. The Park Service recently identified a house at the site that can be easily converted to a visitor station, museum and operation center that will house enforcement and maintenance personnel, and many other functions.

Because this facility is presently outside of the current park boundaries, H.R. 5097 was introduced to expand the boundaries of the park to include the site of the new facility, as well as include 15.4 acres of land that has been offered as a donation to the park.

In conclusion, I thank my colleagues on the Committee on Resources and thank majority subcommittee staff Tod Hull and Rob Howarth, as well as Rich Healy and David Watkins on the minority staff for their assistance on H.R. 5097.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Timpanogos Interagency Land Exchange Act of 2001. This legislation authorizes a land exchange between the United States Forest Service and a private citizen in my district and provides for the construction of an interagency administrative and visitor facility at the entrance of American Fork Canyon. I want to thank my colleague and fellow Utahan, Senator ROBERT BENNETT, for introducing this bill in the Senate and for his hard work in helping this bill become law.

The Timpanogos Interagency Land Exchange Act of 2001 authorizes the exchange of 266 acres of United States Forest Service land for 37 acres of private land. This exchange is being done with a willing private landowner. The values for the exchange will be equal. The exchange requires the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and must conform to the "Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions."

The newly acquired Forest Service land will serve as the site for a new visitor center and administrative office of the Pleasant Grove Ranger District of the Uinta National Forest and the Timpanogos Cave National Monument. This new facility will greatly benefit the visiting public and result in better coordination between the NPS and the USFS.

The original visitor center at Timpanogos Cave burned down in 1991. Since then, a 20 by 60 foot double-wide trailer has served as the make-shift visitor center. This trailer is far from adequate for the monument's annual visitation of 120,000 people. It is simply too small and outdated. Additionally, the center suffers from occasional rock-falls that cause significant damage to the roof of the trailer and raises obvious public safety concerns.

The new facility will meet the space needs of the ranger district and be more technology friendly and will also be in a safer location. Furthermore, the public now will be able to visit one conveniently located office to inquire about NPS and USFS activities.

The Timpanogos Interagency Land Exchange Act of 2001 is long overdue. Its passage today will help correct a decade old problem and will help both the National Park Service and the United States Forest Service serve the public better.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass Senate bill, S. 1240, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALEUT CORPORATION AND UNITED STATES OF AMERICA LAND EXCHANGE

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1325) to ratify an agreement between the Aleut Corporation and the United States of America to exchange land rights received under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act for certain land interests on Adak Island, and for other purposes.

S. 1325

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that:

(1) Adak Island is an isolated island located 1,200 miles southwest of Anchorage, Alaska, between the Pacific Ocean and the Bering Sea. The Island, with its unique physical and biological features, including a deep water harbor and abundant marine-associated wildlife, was recognized early for both its natural and military values. In 1913, Adak Island was reserved and set aside as a Preserve because of its value to seabirds, marine mammals, and fisheries. Withdrawals of portions of Adak Island for various military purposes date back to 1901 and culminated in the 1959 withdrawal of approximately half of the Island for use by the Department of the Navy for military purposes.

(2) By 1990, military development on Adak Island supported a community of 6,000 residents. Outside of the Adak Naval Complex, there was no independent community on Adak Island.

(3) As a result of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (104 Stat. 1808), as amended, the Adak Naval Complex has been closed by the Department of Defense.

(4) The Aleut Corporation is an Alaskan Native Regional Corporation incorporated in the State of Alaska pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (ANCSA), as amended (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.). The Aleut Corporation represents the indigenous people of the Aleutian Islands who prior to the Russian exploration and settlement of the Aleutian Islands were found throughout the Aleutian Islands which includes Adak Island.

(5) None of Adak Island was available for selection by The Aleut Corporation under section 14(h)(8) of ANCSA (43 U.S.C. 1613(h)(8)) because it was part of a National Wildlife Refuge and because the portion comprising the Adak Naval Complex was withdrawn for use by the United States Navy for military purposes prior to the passage of ANCSA in December 1971.

(6) The Aleut Corporation is attempting to establish a community on Adak and has offered to exchange ANCSA land selections and entitlements for conveyance of certain lands and interests therein on a portion of Adak formerly occupied by the Navy.

(7) Removal of a portion of the Adak Island land from refuge status will be offset by the acquisition of high quality wildlife habitat in other Aleut Corporation selections within the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge, maintaining a resident human population on Adak to control caribou, and making possible a continued U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service presence in that remote location to protect the natural resources of the Aleutian Islands Unit of the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge.

(8) It is in the public interest to promote reuse of the Adak Island lands by exchanging certain lands for lands selected by The Aleut Corporation elsewhere in the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge. Experience with environmental problems associated with formerly used defense sites in the State of Alaska suggests that the most effective and efficient way to avoid future environmental problems on Adak is to support and encourage active reuse of Adak.

SEC. 2. RATIFICATION OF AGREEMENT.

The document entitled the "Agreement Concerning the Conveyance of Property at the Adak Naval Complex" (hereinafter "the Agreement"), and dated September 20, 2000, executed by The Aleut Corporation, the Department of the Interior and the Department of the Navy, together with any technical amendments or modifications to the boundaries that may be agreed to by the parties is hereby ratified, confirmed, and approved and the terms, conditions, procedures, covenants, reservations, indemnities and other provisions set forth in the Agreement are declared to be obligations and commitments of the United States and The Aleut Corporation: Provided, That modifications to the maps and legal descriptions of lands to be removed from the National Wildlife Refuge System within the military withdrawal on Adak Island set forth in Public Land Order 1949 may be made only upon agreement of all Parties to the Agreement and notification given to the Committee on Resources of the United States House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate: Provided further, That the acreage conveyed to the United States by The Aleut Corporation under the Agreement, as modified, shall be at least 36,000 acres.

SEC. 3. REMOVAL OF LANDS FROM REFUGE.

Effective on the date of conveyance to the Aleut Corporation of the Adak Exchange Lands as described in the Agreement, all such lands shall be removed from the National Wildlife Refuge System and shall neither be considered as part of the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge nor be subject to any laws pertaining to lands within the boundaries of the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge, including the conveyance restrictions imposed by section 22(g) of the ANCSA, 43 U.S.C. 1621(g), for land in the National Wildlife Refuge System. The Secretary shall adjust the boundaries of the Refuge so as to exclude all interests in lands and land rights, surface and subsurface, received by The Aleut Corporation in accordance with this Act and the Agreement.

SEC. 4. ALASKA NATIVE CLAIMS SETTLEMENT ACT.

Lands and interests therein exchanged and conveyed by the United States pursuant to this Act shall be considered and treated as conveyances of lands or interests therein under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, except that receipt of such lands and interests therein shall not constitute a sale or disposition of land or interests received pursuant to such Act. The public easements for access to public lands and waters reserved pursuant to the Agreement are deemed to satisfy the requirements and purposes of Section 17(b) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

SEC. 5. REACQUISITION OF LANDS.

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to acquire by purchase or exchange, on a willing seller basis only, any land conveyed to The Aleut Corporation under the Agreement and this Act. In the event any of the lands are subsequently acquired by the United States, they shall be automatically included in the Refuge System. The laws and regulations applicable to Refuge lands shall then apply to these lands and the Secretary shall then adjust the boundaries accordingly.

SEC. 6. GENERAL.

(a) Nothwithstanding the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended (40 U.S.C. 483–484) and the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990, as amended (10 U.S.C. 2687), and for the purposes of the transfer of property authorized by this Act, Department of Navy personal property that remains on Adak Island is deemed related to the real property and shall be conveyed by the Department of the Navy to The Aleut Corporation at no additional cost when the related real property is conveyed by the Department of the Interior.

(b) The Secretary of the Interior shall convey to the Aleut Corporation those lands identified in the Agreement as the former landfill sites without charge to the Aleut Corporation's entitlement under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

(c) Any property, including, but not limited to, appurtenances and improvements, received pursuant to this Act shall, for purposes of section 21(d) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, as amended, and section 907(d) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, as amended, be treated as not developed until such property is actually occupied, leased (other than leases for nominal consideration to public entities) or sold by The Aleut Corporation, or, in the case of a lease or other transfer by The Aleut Corporation to a wholly owned development subsidiary, actually occupied, leased, or sold by the subsidiary.

(d) Upon conveyance to The Aleut Corporation of the lands described in Appendix A of the Agreement, the lands described in Appendix C of the Agreement will become unavailable for selection under ANCSA.

(e) The maps included as part of Appendix A to the Agreement depict the lands to be conveyed to The Aleut Corporation. The maps shall be left on file at the Region 7 Office of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the offices of Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge in Homer, Alaska. The written legal descriptions of the lands to be conveyed to The Aleut Corporation are also part of Appendix A. In case of any discrepancies, the maps shall be controlling.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to ratify an agreement between the Aleut Corporation and the United States of America to exchange land rights received under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act for certain land interests on Adak Island, and for other purposes.

S. 1325 is sponsored by Senator MURKOWSKI of Alaska. The bill ratifies a land exchange agreement between the Aleut Corporation and the United States of America. The Aleut Corporation is an Alaska Native regional corporation.

The purpose of this land exchange is to ensure the economic reuse of a major Cold War base that has closed, and to add pristine lands to the National Wildlife Refuge System.

Under the bill, the Federal Government will transfer to the Aleut Corporation about 47,000 acres of Federal lands comprising the former Adak Naval Complex, which closed in 1997 under the Base Realignment and Closure Procedure.

In return for this asset, the corporation will relinquish its entitlement to about 47,000 acres of high quality wildlife habitat within the Alaska Maritime National Wildlife Refuge. These lands will be made a part of the Refuge System. The Department of Interior, the Navy, the State of Alaska and the Aleut Corporation deserve ours thanks for hammering out a major land exchange that is, in my opinion, totally noncontroversial. It benefits the American public, a Native corporation, and the conservation of fish and wildlife.

Mr. Speaker, I should note that substantially identical legislation is contained in the Defense authorization bill which is currently in conference. The House and Senate have not resolved their differences over the retention of this legislation in the conference report. I have grown very concerned over the status of the language in the Defense bill, and failure to pass this bill today could preclude our best opportunity to ratify this land exchange. The administration supports enactment of S. 1325, and I strongly urge that we suspend the rules and pass the bill so that the long-awaited land exchange can be completed to benefit so many people. I urge Members to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the chairman has fully explained the bill. We have no problems with it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1325.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VICKSBURG NATIONAL MILITARY PARK BOUNDARY MODIFICATION ACT OF 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass Senate bill (S. 1175) to modify the boundary of Vicksburg National Military Park to include the property known as Pemberton's Headquarters, and for other purposes.

S. 1175

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Vicksburg National Military Park Boundary Modification Act of 2002".

SEC. 2. BOUNDARY MODIFICATION.

The boundary of Vicksburg National Military Park is modified to include the property known as Pemberton's Headquarters, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Boundary Map, Pemberton's Headquarters at Vicksburg National Military Park", numbered 306/80015A, and dated August, 2001. The map shall be on file and available for inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service.

SEC. 3. ACQUISITION OF PROPERTY.

(a) PEMBERTON'S HEADQUARTERS.—The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to acquire the properties described in section 2 and 3(b) by purchase, donation, or exchange, except that each property may only be acquired with the consent of the owner thereof.

(b) PARKING.—The Secretary is also authorized to acquire not more than one acre of land, or interest therein, adjacent to or near Pemberton's Headquarters for the purpose of providing parking and other facilities related to the operation of Pemberton's Headquarters. Upon the acquisition of the property referenced in this subsection, the Secretary add it to Vicksburg National Military Park and shall modify the boundaries of the park to reflect its inclusion.

SEC. 4. ADMINISTRATION.

The Secretary shall administer any properties acquired under this Act as part of the Vicksburg National Military Park in accordance with applicable laws and regulations.

SEC. 5. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1175 would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to acquire the property known as Pemberton's headquarters and to modify the boundaries of Vicksburg National Military Park to include that property.

The home, located in the heart of Vicksburg's historic district, served as the headquarters for the military operations of Lt. General John C. Pemberton of the Confederate Army during the Civil War. The inclusion of this historical property would draw many of the 1.2 million annual visitors into the historic district of Vicksburg and allow for greater interpretation of the important historical events that took place there during the critical military confrontations between General Ulysses S. Grant and General Pemberton during the Civil War.

This bill mirrors H.R. 3307, introduced by the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) and approved unanimously by the Committee on Resources. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the majority has adequately explained this measure and we on this side of the aisle support it as well.

While we are considering the Senate bill today, it should be noted that the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON) has worked diligently to move a House companion measure through the legislative process. The gentleman's efforts on behalf of this park unit, and our entire National Park Service, are to be commended.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass Senate bill, S. 1175.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING PERIODS OF AUTHORIZATION TO IMPLEMENT PROJECTS FOR UPPER COLORADO AND SAN JUAN RIVER BASINS

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5099) to extend the periods of authorization for the Secretary of the Interior to implement capital construction projects associated with the endangered fish recovery implementation programs for the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins.

H.R. 5099

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AMENDMENTS TO EXISTING PROVISIONS.

(1) Section 2(1) is amended by inserting "and extended by the Extension of the Cooperative Agreement dated December 6, 2001," after "September 29, 1987,".

(2) Section 3(a)(2) is amended by striking "fiscal year 2005" and inserting "fiscal year 2008".

(3) Section 3(a)(3) is amended by striking "fiscal year 2007" and inserting "fiscal year 2008".

(4) Section 3(b) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1) by striking "fiscal year 2005" and inserting "fiscal year 2008"; and

(B) in paragraph (2) by striking "fiscal year 2007" and inserting "fiscal year 2008".

(5) Section 3(c)(1) is amended by striking "with" and inserting "within".

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 5099 amends the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins Endangered Fish Recovery Programs Act of 2000 by extending the periods of authorization for the Secretary of the Interior to implement capital construction projects associated with the endangered fish recovery implementation programs in the basins to fiscal year 2008.

H.R. 5099 does not increase the total amount authorized to be expended to complete the fish recovery program.

I urge the bill's adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

We in the minority support this bill. It is sponsored by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), our committee chairman. He has explained it eloquently. He is a true poet, and I cannot add any more to what he had to say.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5099.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TUPELO, OKLAHOMA, LAND CONVEYANCE

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5109) to direct the Secretary of Energy to convey a parcel of land at the facility of the Southwestern Power Administration in Tupelo, Oklahoma, as amended.

H.R. 5109

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. LAND CONVEYANCE, TUPELO, OKLAHOMA.

(a) CONVEYANCE REQUIRED.—Except as required by subsection (d), the Secretary of Energy shall convey, at fair market value, to Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, Incorporated, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of land, and any improvements thereto, consisting of approximately 6.3 acres of the facility of the Southwestern Power Administration in Tupelo, Oklahoma, for use in economic development within the service area of the Tri-County Indian Nations Community Development Corporation.

(b) DESCRIPTION OF PARCEL.—The exact acreage and description of the parcel to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary and to Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, Incorporated.

(c) CONDITIONS OF CONVEYANCE.—As conditions of the conveyance under subsection (a), the Secretary shall require that Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, Incorporated—

(1) agree to honor the terms of any lease of the parcel or portion thereof that is in existence on the date of the conveyance; and

(2) agree to bear the costs of the conveyance, including the cost of the survey required by subsection (b) and the appraisal required by subsection (f).

(d) EASEMENT.—Under the terms of the conveyance of the parcel under subsection (a), the Secretary shall retain an easement to the parcel for the purpose of maintaining a sewage connection to the electrical substation and lagoon facility located adjacent to the parcel. Such easement shall include telephone and telegraph rights.

(e) UNDEPRECIATED VALUE.—The Southwestern Power Administration is authorized to remove the undepreciated value of the facilities conveyed under subsection (a) from its repayable investment obligation.

(f) VALUATION OF LAND TO BE CONVEYED.—The fair market value of the land to be conveyed under subsection (a) shall be determined by an appraisal acceptable to the Secretary that is conducted by an appraiser agreed upon by the Secretary and Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, Incorporated, and conducted in accordance with—

(1) the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Policies Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4601; Public Law 91-646);

(2) the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisition; and

(3) the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 5109, authored by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATKINS), authorizes the Secretary of Energy, acting through the Southwestern Power Administration, to convey a 6.3 acre parcel of land in Tupelo, Oklahoma. The conveyance will be at fair market value. The parcel has three buildings on the site: an office building, an open-ended garage, and a storage building. The Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, which currently leases the parcel on a temporary basis, plans to begin incubator businesses utilizing the land and facilities to be transferred.

The bill is noncontroversial and will help bring economic development to one of the poorest counties in the State. I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 5109 is a simple fair market value conveyance of a small parcel of land and facilities in Tupelo, Oklahoma. We have no objection to the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. WATKINS).

Mr. WATKINS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), my classmate, by the way, for their action on H.R. 5109.

This is my district. I worked a number of years ago with putting together a facility, working with the Southwest Power Administration, which is no longer being used and is being leased out. This is transferring it to Rural Enterprises, which manages about a dozen business industrial incubators in my district and in the State of Oklahoma, in order to help build jobs and the economy.

I might just add that Coal County, where this is located, is a 25 percent or more poverty area with a high rate of underemployment and unemployed. This could be a stimulus that would help us try to diversify and build jobs. I just want to thank the gentleman from Utah and the gentleman from West Virginia for their great work.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5109, legislation that would transfer a building owned by the Department of Energy under the control of the Southwest Power Administration in Tupelo, Oklahoma to Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, a 501 (c)(3) non-profit economic development organization.

The Tupelo facility was built for use by the Southwest Power Administration in the mid 1980's and was actively used until 1999. Since then the building has been vacant. The Southwest Power Administration has asked me to help them transfer the building to a group that will put it to good use. I have worked with the Southwest Power Administration to draft this legislation so that we can use this vacant building to help build economic and job opportunities for our citizens. Rural Enterprises currently leases the building and plans to use it as a business incubator.

Tupelo, Oklahoma is a small community in rural Coal County, Oklahoma. According to the U.S. Census data Coal County has 25% of the population below the poverty level and 35% of children live in poverty. For many years I have worked to create greater economic job opportunities for the future children and grandchildren of my district. I know this transfer will allow for Rural Enterprises to put the facility into active use as a business and industrial Incubator which will in turn build jobs which this community desperately needs.

Rural Enterprises is a non-profit group that has experience managing business incubators. They are presently operating incubators in 10 communities in the rural areas of my state. One of the incubators run by Rural Enterprises is in Bennington, Oklahoma. This incubator for several years housed a company that made hammer dulcimers. The hammer dulcimer company brought about 10 jobs to a small town of about 200 people. Within the last two years this company graduated from the incubator, and moved their business to a more spacious location. These musical instruments have been sold all over the world.

Mr. Speaker, I believe with the passage of H.R. 5109 we can repeat the successes we have had with other incubators. This bill will allow for the transfer a currently vacant building to a group that will put it into good use as a business incubator.

I ask for the support of my colleagues and urge passage of H.R. 5109.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5109, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BIRTHPLACE NATIONAL MONUMENT BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3449) to revise the boundaries of the George Washington Birthplace National Monument, and for other purposes.

H.R. 3449

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. ADDITION TO NATIONAL MONUMENT.

The boundaries of the George Washington Birthplace National Monument (hereinafter referred to as the "National Monument") are hereby modified to include the area comprising approximately 115 acres, as generally depicted on the map entitled "George Washington Birthplace National Monument Boundary Map", numbered 332/80.023 and dated October 2001, which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

SEC. 2. ACQUISITION OF LANDS.

Within the boundaries of the National Monument, the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter referred to as the "Secretary") is authorized to acquire lands, or interests therein, from willing owners by donation, purchase with donated money or appropriated funds, or exchange.

SEC. 3. ADMINISTRATION OF NATIONAL MONUMENT.

In administering the National Monument, the Secretary shall take actions necessary to preserve and interpret the history and resources associated with George Washington, the generations of the Washington family who lived in the vicinity and their contemporaries, and 18th century plantation life and society.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 3449, introduced by the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS), would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to revise the boundaries of the George Washington Birthplace National Historic Monument in Westmoreland County, Virginia, by purchasing up to 115 acres from a single willing owner, the Muse family. Currently, Mr. Speaker, the Muse property divides the historic site in half and has become attractive to local developers. By authorizing the boundary adjustment, the National Park Service will have the authority to work with the Muse family to purchase the land and protect the historic site from future residential development.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is noncontroversial. It is supported by the administration, the majority and the minority of the Committee on Resources, and the Muse family.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3449.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The chairman has fully explained this bill. Make no mistake about it, we on this side of the aisle support George Washington as well, just like the Republicans.

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3449, which would authorize the National Park Service to revise and expand the boundaries of the George Washington Birthplace National Monument in Westmoreland County, Virginia.

I appreciate Chairman RADANOVICH and Chairman HANSEN for their dedication in bringing this measure before the House in an effort to realize a long standing effort by the National Park Service, Westmoreland County and the surrounding community to preserve this undisturbed land for future generations to enjoy and learn of the Washington's way of life during our nation's formative years.

(As stated) George Washington was born on this property on February 22, 1732, and lived on the farm for three and a half years, and again for several years in his teens. The modern location includes a Memorial House designed to recreate the original birthsite as revealed by excavations. The Memorial House was finished in time for George Washington's 200th birthday in 1932, and is one of the center pieces of the National Monument.

George Washington's great-grandfather, immigrated to America and acquired this property in 1664. His father, grandfather, and great-grandfather are buried in the family cemetery located on the National Monument property.

Because of the Monument's current boundary configuration, over 100 acres of private land outside the Monument's boundary are sandwiched between two units of the monument and the Potomac River. Willing sellers, the Muse family, are amenable to transferring the property to the National Park Service, and Congress needs to consequently act so that this opportunity will not be lost.

H.R. 3449 is a fitting tribute to a man who has long been revered as our greatest founding father, a man of high moral integrity and character, a man with distinct leadership capabilities, and above all a man who guided Americans to freedom and led them to union. I urge your support of this measure.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3449.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING OF INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FISH AND WILDLIFE AGENCIES

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 419) requesting the President to issue a proclamation in observance of the 100th Anniversary of the founding of the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies.

H. CON. RES. 419

Whereas on September 17, 1902, when Theodore Roosevelt was President, 8 wildlife managers and game wardens from 6 States met in West Yellowstone, Montana, on behalf of the country's beleaguered fish and wildlife populations, and established the National Association of Game and Fish Wardens and Commissioners, which later became the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies (IAFWA);

Whereas 100 years later, IAFWA represents the fish and wildlife agencies of all 50 States and enjoys the membership of several Federal natural resource agencies, the Federal and provincial fish and wildlife agencies of Canada, and the Federal natural resource agency of Mexico;

Whereas IAFWA has been a significant force in the enactment of fish and wildlife conservation treaties and Federal statutes too numerous to enumerate, including the Migratory Bird Treaty Act; the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act; the Dingell-Johnson Sportfish Restoration Act; all farm bills enacted since 1985; the North American Wetlands Conservation Act; the National Wildlife Refuge System Improvement Act of 1997, and the Fish and Wildlife Programs Improvement and National Wildlife Refuge System Centennial Act of 2000, to mention but a few;

Whereas IAFWA continues to promote the sustainable use of natural resources; to encourage cooperation and coordination of fish and wildlife conservation and management at all levels of government; to encourage professional management of fish and wildlife; to develop coalitions among conservation organizations to promote fish and wildlife interests; and to foster public understanding of the need for conservation; and

Whereas the State fish and wildlife agencies have successfully restored healthy fish and wildlife populations enjoyed by all Americans largely using Federal excise taxes paid by hunters and anglers into the Federal trust funds known as the Pittman-Robertson, Dingell-Johnson, and Wallop-Breaux trust funds, and using State hunting and fishing license fees: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) recognizes the significance of the centennial of the establishment of the entity that became the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies;

(2) acknowledges the outstanding contributions of its member agencies to fish and wildlife conservation; and

(3) requests the President to issue a proclamation observing the 100th anniversary of the founding of the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am pleased to present this resolution, introduced by the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), which recognizes the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies for the dedicated service that they have rendered over the past 100 years and the invaluable contributions they have made to fish and wildlife management.

On September 17, 1902, eight wildlife managers from six States met together in West Yellowstone, Montana, to form an organization which became known as the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies. This month they will celebrate their 100th anniversary, and it is appropriate to reflect upon the fine work that our State fish and wildlife agencies perform on a daily basis. This organization has played a key role in conserving and managing thousands of fish and wildlife species and their essential habitats throughout the United States.

This resolution recognizes the importance of the centennial establishment of this organization, acknowledges the outstanding contributions of its member agencies to conservation, and requests the President to issue a proclamation commemorating its 100th anniversary.

This is a good resolution, it is bipartisan, it should be noncontroversial; and I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I too rise in support of this concurrent resolution which recognizes the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies. It is cosponsored by two very distinguished Members of this body, on our side of the aisle the dean of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. DINGELL), and on the majority side the former chairman of the Committee on Resources and the current chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG). I commend these gentlemen for bringing this resolution before us, and I urge its support.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 419.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FREMONT-MADISON CONVEYANCE ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4708) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain facilities to the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District, as amended.

H.R. 4708

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—FREMONT-MADISON IRRIGATION FACILITIES CONVEYANCE

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Fremont-Madison Conveyance Act".

SEC. 102. CONVEYANCE OF FACILITIES.

(a) CONVEYANCE REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of the Interior shall convey to the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District, Idaho, as soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act and in accordance with all applicable law and pursuant to the terms of the memorandum of agreement between the District and the Secretary (Contract No. 1425-01-MA-10-3310). The Secretary shall include in the facilities conveyed under this section all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the canals, laterals, drains, and other components of the water distribution and drainage system that is operated or maintained by the District for delivery of water to and drainage of water from lands within the boundaries of the District as they exist upon the date of enactment of this Act, consistent with section 107.

(b) REPORT.—If the Secretary has not completed any conveyance required under this title by September 13, 2003, the Secretary shall, by no later than that date, submit a report to the Congress explaining the reasons that conveyance has not been completed and stating the date by which the conveyance will be completed.

SEC. 103. COSTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall require, as a condition of the conveyance under section 102, that the District pay the administrative costs of the conveyance and related activities, including the costs of any review required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) as described in Contract No. 1425-01-MA-10-3310.

(b) VALUE OF FACILITIES TO BE TRANSFERRED.—In addition to subsection (a) the Secretary shall also require, as condition of the conveyance under section 102, that the District pay to the United States the lesser of the net present value of the remaining obligations owed by the District to the United States with respect to the facilities conveyed, or $280,000. Amounts received by the United States under this subsection shall be deposited into the reclamation fund.

SEC. 104. TETON EXCHANGE WELLS.

(a) CONTRACTS AND PERMIT.—In conveying the Teton Exchange Wells under section 102, the Secretary shall also convey to the District—

(1) Idaho Department of Water Resources permit number 22-7022, including drilled wells under the permit, as described in Contract No. 1425-01-MA-10-3310; and

(2) all equipment appurtenant to such wells.

(b) EXTENSION OF WATER SERVICE CONTRACT.—The water service contract between the Secretary and the District (Contract No. 7-07-10-W0179, dated September 16, 1977) is hereby extended and shall continue in full force and effect until all conditions described in this title are fulfilled.

SEC. 105. NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY ACT OF 1969.

Prior to conveyance the Secretary shall complete all actions as may be required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.), and all other applicable laws.

SEC. 106. LIABILITY.

Effective on the date of the conveyance of the facilities described in section 102, the United States shall not be held liable by any court for damages of any kind arising out of any act, omission, or occurrence relating to the conveyed facilities, except for damages caused by acts of negligence committed by the United States or by its employees, agents, or contractors prior to the date of conveyance. Nothing in this section may be deemed to increase the liability of the United States beyond that currently provided in chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, popularly known as the Federal Tort Claims Act.

SEC. 107. WATER SUPPLY TO DISTRICT LANDS.

The Secretary shall increase the number of acres within the District that are eligible to receive water from the Minidoka Project and the Teton Basin Projects to reflect the number of acres within the District as of the date of enactment of this Act, which includes lands annexed into the District prior to enactment of this Act as intended by the Teton Basin Project. This section does not in any way authorize the use of any additional Federal Reclamation project water beyond that which is currently authorized under their existing water storage contracts and as allowed by State water law.

SEC. 108. EXISTING RIGHTS NOT AFFECTED.

Nothing in this title affects the rights of any person except as provided in this title. Any conveyance under this title shall not affect or abrogate any provision of any contract executed by the United States or State law regarding any irrigation district's right to use water developed in the facilities conveyed.

SEC. 109. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) DISTRICT.—The term "District" means the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District, an irrigation district organized under the law of the State of Idaho.

(2) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

TITLE II—HUMBOLT PROJECT CONVEYANCE

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Humboldt Project Conveyance Act".

SEC. 202. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title:

(1) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) STATE.—The term "State" means the State of Nevada.

(3) PCWCD.—The term "PCWCD" means the Pershing County Water Conservation District, a public entity organized under the laws of the State of Nevada.

(4) PERSHING COUNTY.—The term "Pershing County" means the Pershing County government, a political subunit of the State of Nevada.

(5) LANDER COUNTY.—The term "Lander County" means the Lander County government, a political subunit of the State of Nevada.

SEC. 203. AUTHORITY TO CONVEY TITLE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act and in accordance with all applicable law, the Secretary shall convey all right, title, and interest in and to the lands and features of the Humboldt Project, including all water rights for storage and diversion, to PCWCD, the State, Pershing County, and Lander County, consistent with the terms and conditions set forth in the Memorandum of Agreement between PCWCD and Lander County dated January 24, 2000, the Conceptual Agreement between PCWCD and the State dated October 18, 2001, the Letter of Agreement between Pershing County and the State dated April 16, 2002, and any agreements between the Bureau of Reclamation and PCWCD.

(b) COMPLIANCE WITH AGREEMENTS.—All parties to the conveyance under subsection (a) shall comply with the terms and conditions of the agreements cited in subsection (a).

(c) REPORT.—If the conveyance required by this section has not been completed within 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate that describes—

(1) the status of the conveyance;

(2) any obstacles to completion of the conveyance; and

(3) the anticipated date for completion of the conveyance.

SEC. 204. PAYMENT.

(a) In General.—As consideration for any conveyance required by section 203, PCWCD shall pay to the United States the net present value of miscellaneous revenues associated with the lands and facilities to be conveyed.

(b) Withdrawn Lands.—As consideration for any conveyance of withdrawn lands required by section 203, the entity receiving title shall pay the United States (in addition to amounts paid under subsection (a)) the fair market value for any such lands conveyed that were withdrawn from the public domain pursuant to the Secretarial Orders dated March 16, 1934, and April 6, 1956.

(c) Administrative Costs.—Administrative costs for conveyance of any land or facility under this title shall be paid in equal shares by the Secretary and the entity receiving title to the land or facility, except costs identified in subsections (d) and (e).

(d) Real Estate Transfer Costs.—As a condition of any conveyance of any land or facility required by section 203, costs of all boundary surveys, title searches, cadastral surveys, appraisals, and other real estate transactions required for the conveyance shall be paid by the entity receiving title to the land or facility.

(e) NEPA Costs.—Costs associated with any review required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) for conveyance of any land or facility under section 203 shall be paid in equal shares by the Secretary and the entity receiving title to the land or facility.

(f) State of Nevada.—The State shall not be responsible for any payments for land or facilities under this section. Any proposal by the State to reconvey to another entity land conveyed by the Secretary under this title shall be pursuant to an agreement with the Secretary providing for fair market value to the United States for the lands, and for continued management of the lands for recreation, wildlife habitat, wetlands, or resource conservation.

SEC. 205. COMPLIANCE WITH OTHER LAWS.

Following the conveyance required by section 203, the district, the State, Pershing County, and Lander County shall, with respect to the interests conveyed, comply with all requirements of Federal, State, and local law applicable to non-Federal water distribution systems.

SEC. 206. REVOCATION OF WITHDRAWALS.

Effective on the date of the conveyance required by section 203, the Secretarial Orders dated March 16, 1934, and April 6, 1956, that withdrew public lands for the Rye Patch Reservoir and the Humboldt Sink, are hereby revoked.

SEC. 207. LIABILITY.

Effective on the date of the conveyance required by section 203, the United States shall not be held liable by any court for damages of any kind arising out of any act, omission, or occurrence relating to the Humboldt Project, except for damages caused by acts of negligence committed by the United States or by its employees or agents prior to the date of conveyance. Nothing in this section shall be considered to increase the liability of the United States beyond that currently provided in chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, popularly known as the Federal Tort Claims Act.

SEC. 208. NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY ACT.

Prior to any conveyance under this title, the Secretary shall complete all actions as may be required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.), and all other applicable laws.

SEC. 209. FUTURE BENEFITS.

Upon conveyance of the lands and facilities by the Secretary under this title, the Humboldt Project shall no longer be a Federal reclamation project and the district shall not be entitled to receive any future reclamation benefits with respect to that project, except those benefits that would be available to other nonreclamation districts.

TITLE III—JICARILLA APACHE RESERVATION RURAL WATER SYSTEM

SEC. 301. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Jicarilla Apache Reservation Rural Water System Act".

SEC. 302. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are as follows:

(1) To ensure a safe and adequate rural, municipal, and water supply and wastewater systems for the residents of the Jicarilla Apache Reservation in the State of New Mexico in accordance with Public Law 106-243.

(2) To authorize the Secretary of the Interior, through the Bureau of Reclamation, in consultation and collaboration with the Jicarilla Apache Nation—

(A) to plan, design, and construct the water supply, delivery, and wastewater collection systems on the Jicarilla Apache Reservation in the State of New Mexico; and

(B) to include service connections to facilities within the town of Dulce and the surrounding area, and to individuals as part of the construction.

(3) To require the Secretary, at the request of the Jicarilla Apache Nation, to enter into a self-determination contract with the Jicarilla Apache Nation under title I of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450f et seq.) under which—

(A) the Jicarilla Apache Nation shall plan, design, and construct the water supply, delivery, and wastewater collection systems, including service connections to communities and individuals; and

(B) the Bureau of Reclamation shall provide technical assistance and oversight responsibility for such project.

(4) To establish a process in which the Jicarilla Apache Nation shall assume title and responsibility for the ownership, operation, maintenance, and replacement of the system.

SEC. 303. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) BIA.—The term "BIA" means the Bureau of Indian Affairs, an agency within the Department of the Interior.

(2) Irrigation.—The term "irrigation" means the commercial application of water to land for the purpose of establishing or maintaining commercial agriculture in order to produce field crops and vegetables for sale.

(3) Reclamation.—The term "Reclamation" means the Bureau of Reclamation, an agency within the Department of the Interior.

(4) Report.—The term "Report" means the report entitled "Planning Report/Environmental Assessment, Water and Wastewater Improvements, Jicarilla Apache Nation, Dulce, New Mexico", dated September 2001, which was completed pursuant to Public Law 106-243.

(5) Reservation.—The term "Reservation" means the Jicarilla Apache Reservation in the State of New Mexico, including all lands and interests in land that are held in trust by the United States for the Tribe.

(6) Rural Water Supply Project.—The term "Rural Water Supply Project" means a municipal, domestic, rural, and industrial water supply and wastewater facility area and project identified to serve a group of towns, communities, cities, tribal reservations, or dispersed farmsteads with access to clean, safe domestic and industrial water, to include the use of livestock.

(7) State.—The term "State" means the State of New Mexico.

(8) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Reclamation.

(9) Tribe.—The term "Tribe" means the Jicarilla Apache Nation.

SEC. 304. JICARILLA APACHE RESERVATION RURAL WATER SYSTEM.

(a) Construction.—The Secretary, in consultation and collaboration with the Tribe, shall plan, design, and construct the Rural Water Supply Project to improve the water supply, delivery, and wastewater facilities to the town of Dulce, New Mexico, and surrounding communities for the purpose of providing the benefits of clean, safe, and reliable water supply, delivery, and wastewater facilities.

(b) Scope of Project.—The Rural Water Supply Project shall consist of the following:

(1) Facilities to provide water supply, delivery, and wastewater services for the community of Dulce, the Mundo Ranch Development, and surrounding areas on the Reservation.

(2) Pumping and treatment facilities located on the Reservation.

(3) Distribution, collection, and treatment facilities to serve the needs of the Reservation, including, but not limited to, construction, replacement, improvement, and repair of existing water and wastewater systems, including systems owned by individual tribal members and other residents on the Reservation.

(4) Appurtenant buildings and access roads.

(5) Necessary property and property rights.

(6) Such other electrical power transmission and distribution facilities, pipelines, pumping plants, and facilities as the Secretary deems necessary or appropriate to meet the water supply, economic, public health, and environmental needs of the Reservation, including, but not limited to, water storage tanks, water lines, maintenance equipment, and other facilities for the Tribe on the Reservation.

(c) Cost Sharing.—

(1) Tribal Share.—Subject to paragraph (3) and subsection (d), the tribal share of the cost of the Rural Water Supply Project is comprised of the costs to design and initiate construction of the wastewater treatment plant, to replace the diversion structure on the Navajo River, and to construct raw water settling ponds, a water treatment plant, water storage plants, a water transmission pipeline, and distribution pipelines, and has been satisfied.

(2) Federal Share.—Subject to paragraph (3) and subsection (d), the Federal share of the cost of the Rural Water Supply Project shall be all remaining costs of the project identified in the Report.

(3) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The Federal share of the cost of operation and maintenance of the Rural Water Supply Project shall continue to be available for operation and maintenance in accordance with the Indian Self-Determination Act, as set forth in this title.

(d) OPERATION, MAINTENANCE, AND REPLACEMENT AFTER COMPLETION.—Upon determination by the Secretary that the Rural Water Supply Project is substantially complete, the Tribe shall assume responsibility for and liability related to the annual operation, maintenance, and replacement cost of the project in accordance with this title and the Operation, Maintenance, and Replacement Plan under chapter IV of the Report.

SEC. 305. GENERAL AUTHORITY.

The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts, grants, cooperative agreements, and other such agreements and to promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title and the Indian Self-Determination Act (Public Law 93-638; 25 U.S.C. 450 et seq.).

SEC. 306. PROJECT REQUIREMENTS.

(a) PLANS.—

(1) PROJECT PLAN.—Not later than 60 days after funds are made available for this purpose, the Secretary shall prepare a recommended project plan, which shall include a general map showing the location of the proposed physical facilities, conceptual engineering drawings of structures, and general standards for design for the Rural Water Supply Project.

(2) OM&R PLAN.—The Tribe shall develop an operation, maintenance, and replacement plan, which shall provide the necessary framework to assist the Tribe in establishing rates and fees for customers of the Rural Water Supply Project.

(b) CONSTRUCTION MANAGER.—The Secretary, through Reclamation and in consultation with the Tribe, shall select a project construction manager to work with the Tribe in the planning, design, and construction of the Rural Water Supply Project.

(c) MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall enter into a memorandum of agreement with the Tribe that commits Reclamation and BIA to a transition plan that addresses operations and maintenance of the Rural Water Supply Project while the facilities are under construction and after completion of construction.

(d) OVERSIGHT.—The Secretary shall have oversight responsibility with the Tribe and its constructing entity and shall incorporate value engineering analysis as appropriate to the Rural Water Supply Project.

(e) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall provide such technical assistance as may be necessary to the Tribe to plan, develop, and construct the Rural Water Supply Project, including, but not limited to, operation and management training.

(f) SERVICE AREA.—The service area of the Rural Water Supply Project shall be within the boundaries of the Reservation.

(g) OTHER LAW.—The planning, design, construction, operation, and maintenance of the Rural Water Supply Project shall be subject to the provisions of the Indian Self-Determination Act (25 U.S.C. 450 et seq.).

(h) REPORT.—During the year that construction of the Rural Water Supply Project begins and annually until such construction is completed, the Secretary, through Reclamation and in consultation with the Tribe, shall report to Congress on the status of the planning, design, and construction of the Rural Water Supply Project.

(i) TITLE.—Title to the Rural Water Supply Project shall be held in trust for the Tribe by the United States and shall not be transferred or encumbered without a subsequent Act of Congress.

SEC. 307. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $45,000,000 (January 2002 dollars) plus or minus such amounts, if any, as may be justified by reason of changes in construction costs as indicated by engineering cost indexes applicable to the types of construction involved for the planning, design, and construction of the Rural Water Supply Project as generally described in the Report dated September 2001.

(b) CONDITIONS.—Funds may not be appropriated for the construction of any project authorized under this title until after—

(1) an appraisal investigation and a feasibility study have been completed by the Secretary and the Tribe; and

(2) the Secretary has determined that the plan required by section 306(a)(2) is completed.

(c) NEPA.—The Secretary shall not obligate funds for construction until after the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) are met with respect to the Rural Water Supply Project.

SEC. 308. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR IRRIGATION PURPOSES.

None of the funds made available to the Secretary for planning or construction of the Rural Water Supply Project may be used to plan or construct facilities used to supply water for the purposes of irrigation.

SEC. 309. WATER RIGHTS.

The water rights of the Tribe are part of and included in the Jicarilla Apache Tribe Water Rights Settlement Act (Public Law 102-441). These rights are adjudicated under New Mexico State law as a partial final judgment and decree entered in the Eleventh Judicial District Court of New Mexico. That Act and decree provide for sufficient water rights under "historic and existing uses" to supply water for the municipal water system. These water rights are recognized depletions within the San Juan River basin and no new depletions are associated with the Rural Water Supply Project. In consultation with the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, Reclamation has determined that there shall be no significant impact to endangered species as a result of water depletions associated with this project. No other water rights of the Tribe shall be impacted by the Rural Water Supply Project.

TITLE IV—TOM GREEN COUNTY WATER CONTROL AND IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NO. 1 REPAYMENT CONTRACT EXTENSION

SEC. 401. TOM GREEN COUNTY WATER CONTROL AND IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NO. 1; REPAYMENT PERIOD EXTENDED.

The Secretary of the Interior may revise the repayment contract with the Tom Green County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 numbered 14-06-500-369, by extending the period authorized for repayment of reimbursable constructions costs of the San Angelo project from 40 years to 50 years.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 4708, the Fremont-Madison Conveyance Act of 2002, directs the Secretary of the Interior to transfer all right, title and interest of the United States in and to all components of the water system that are operated and maintained by the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District to the district. This title transfer must take place pursuant to a memorandum of agreement between the Secretary of the Interior and Fremont-Madison Irrigation District dated September 13, 2001.

The second component of this bill is H.R. 5039, the Humboldt Project Conveyance Act of 2002. H.R. 5039, the Humboldt Project Conveyance Act of 2002, directs the Secretary of the Interior to transfer the title and interest of the United States in and to certain irrigation project property in the Humboldt Project, Nevada, that are operated and maintained by the Pershing County Water Conservation District to the district. This title transfer must take place pursuant to a memorandum of agreement between the Secretary of the Interior acting through the Bureau of Reclamation and Pershing County Water Conservation District.

The third component is H.R. 3223, Jicarilla Apache Reservation Rural Water System Act of 2001. H.R. 3222, the Jicarilla Apache Reservation Rural Water System Act of 2001, will allow the Jicarilla Apache Nation to work with the Bureau of Reclamation to plan, design and construct a water supply delivery and wastewater collection system which would bring the water quality up to Federal water quality standards and allow for continued development in the area by expanding the quality of potable water available.

The fourth component is H.R. 4910, to revise the repayment contract with the Tom Green County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1, San Angelo Project, Texas. H.R. 4910 authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to revise a repayment contract with the Tom Green County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 in Texas. Due to the ongoing drought in the area, the district has had very limited quantities of water to deliver to their constituents and limited revenues to repay their required repayment obligation. This bill will authorize the Secretary to extend the repayment period to allow the annual payments to remain constant and allow for the repayment of the remaining obligation over a longer period of time.

All of these measures are noncontroversial bills. I urge their passage.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The majority has already explained this bill, which would address water management needs in four western States. It is important to mention that certain conditions must be met before local project sponsors take over any project facilities now owned by the United States. Prior to completing the project conveyances authorized in title I and II of this bill, the Secretary of the Interior is directed to comply with all applicable statutes. This includes the National Environmental Policy Act, the Endangered Species Act, the National Historic Preservation Act, and any other laws that apply to the transfer.

The Congress recognizes that there may be ways to condition the transfers to mitigate any issues raised during the environmental reviews conducted prior to conveyance. But compliance with applicable laws prior to conveyance is not optional; it is required by the bill.

I extend my compliments to the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL) for his hard work on title III of this bill, which will literally change the lives of the people who live in the affected area of the State of New Mexico. The gentleman from New Mexico is a very distinguished and hardworking representative for his people and deserves a great deal of praise for what has gone into this particular legislation.

In addition, I would note that title IV of this bill includes legislation sponsored by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM). His leadership in sponsoring this worthy legislation will assist farmers in his district as they cope with the continuing drought. I commend the gentleman from Texas for his superb leadership.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL).

□ 1545

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), and the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN), for all of their hard work and leadership on this bill.

I rise today to speak to title III of H.R. 4708, which contains the Jicarilla Apache Rural Water System Act which I introduced on November 1, 2001, and which the Committee on Resources reported to the House on September 4, 2002.

I would like to thank the 12 bipartisan cosponsors of this legislation, and I am thankful to the committee for including these provisions in this overall bill.

The Jicarilla Apache Rural Water System Act will greatly improve the quality of safe and reliable drinking water to the reservation. It will also support an adequate wastewater treatment system. This legislation addresses critical public health issues for the tribe and for North-Central New Mexico.

For over 2 decades, the current system, the Dulce municipal water system, has deteriorated due to a lack of funds and capital improvements made by the Federal trustee. The Jicarilla Nation has invested $14 million in their efforts to improve the quality of its municipal water and waste water system. The Jicarilla's investment of over $14 million is roughly 25 percent of the total project cost.

The lack of investment and rehabilitation in the municipal water system constructed by the BIA in the 1920s and expanded in the 1960s has led to the delivery of inadequate water to the residents of the reservation and surrounding communities. The completion of this project will allow tribal development, such as building additional housing, schools, medical facilities and elderly care facilities, just to name a few.

This legislation will enable the Jicarilla Apache Nation to work with the Bureau of Reclamation to plan, design and construct the water supply, delivery and waste water collection system. These improvements would bring the water quality up to Federal water quality standards.

In addition, the legislation will allow for continued development in the area of expanding the quantity of potable water. The Bureau of Reclamation will be responsible for the construction costs of this project, while the Jicarilla Apache Nation will assume the annual operation, maintenance and replacement costs of the project.

I would also like to thank Lori Sonken, Steve Lanich and Marie Howard of the Committee on Resources minority staff, as well as Josh Johnson and Doug Yoder of the Committee on Resources majority staff for working closely with my office on this important legislation.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS).

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, my bill, H.R. 5039, would direct the Secretary of Interior to convey title to certain irrigation project property in the Humboldt Project, Nevada, to the Pershing County Water Control District, the State of Nevada and to Lander and Pershing Counties.

The Pershing County Water Conservation District will receive the Rye Patch Reservoir along with specific lands along the reservoir and title for acquired passage lands. The State of Nevada will receive all the withdrawn lands above the high water mark at Rye Patch to be added to existing State park and withdrawn lands in the Humboldt Sink area and in Lander County to be managed as wetlands.

All lands being conveyed to the State will be used for recreation, wildlife habitat, wetlands or resource conversation, pursuant to the agreement between the State of Nevada and the Pershing County Water Conservation District. Lander County will receive title to designated pasture lands and Pershing County will acquire lands immediately adjacent to Derby Airport for maintenance and future expansion purposes.

Over the past 5 years, the Pershing County Water Conservation District has undergone an extensive consensus-based process with the Federal Government, the counties and the State of Nevada. They have also conducted outreach with local representatives of environmental organizations.

As a result of public comments received through scoping meetings and in their other convenient views, the Pershing County Water Conservation District has continued to reformulate their proposal in a sincere attempt to address all concerns. They should be commended for their efforts.

Mr. Speaker, this bill ratifies agreement between the Bureau of Reclamation and the Pershing County Water Conservation District, the State and the counties. It has the support of the Governor of Nevada, the Humboldt River Basin Water Authority and the counties of Lander and Pershing in Nevada as well. The Department of Interior and the Bureau of Reclamation are on record as supporters of transferring title to the reclamation project to the local entities.

This is the third and hopefully final attempt to obtain title to Humboldt Project facilities since it repaid its original project loan back in 1978. The Pershing County Water Conservation District operates and maintains the project and its constituents are the sole beneficiaries of the project. Local control is the logical choice.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage my colleagues to pass this legislation.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4708, which includes legislation I introduced to extend a repayment period for the Tom Green County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1.

The Tom Green County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 has an outstanding loan with the Department of Interior for the construction of an irrigation canal. The remaining balance is approximately $2.4 million. The farmers in the District have made diligent efforts to make timely payments on the contract. They have paid 38 percent (about $1.5 million) of the original debt owed to the Department of Interior despite the fact that they have yet to receive a fair return on their investment.

In West Texas, there is virtually nothing of a higher daily concern than the availability of water. In recent years, Texas has been devastated by drought. As a result, the farmers have received a full year's allocation of irrigation water only 50 percent of the time. Moreover, for the other 50 percent of the time, they received either less than the annual allocation or no irrigation water at all.

Payment on the debt has never been forgiven, even in years when the District received no water. Deferments have been granted seven times; however, those payments still have to be made. They are added to the remaining balance and the payments continue to get higher annually because the original contract end date does not change.

To make matters worse, the concrete lining placed in the canal in 1960 has started to deteriorate after forty-two years and repairs are necessary. These repairs are very expensive. Farmers simply cannot sustain paying the costs of the annual operation and maintenance costs due to the irrigation district, the bureau of Reclamation annual payment, and extensive repair costs when little or no water is available.

The Bureau of Reclamation has stated that the increased payments, as a result of continued deferments due to the drought conditions, are making it increasingly difficult on the farmers' ability to repay the annual payments. The increased annual payments place additional financial burdens on the District and increasing these payments further will only lead to future difficulty that the Bureau of Reclamation cannot remedy. Only Congress can remedy the long-term problem, which is why I have introduced H.R. 4910 to get this loan restructured.

This legislation would allow the Secretary of Interior to revise the repayment contract (No. 14–06–500–369) by extending the period authorized for repayment of reimbursable construction costs of the canal from 40 to 50 years.

These Tom Green County farmers have been doing their part to meet their responsibilities. When year-after-year the water was unavailable, their only recourse was to ask for an extension on the loan. I'm glad Tom Green County Commissioner Clayton Friend brought this to my attention and I'm very appreciative of the speedy Resources Committee action. I have high hopes that we will be able to get this bill to the President within the next few weeks.

On behalf of the farmers in my district, I urge you to support H.R. 4708.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to thank you for considering H.R. 4708, the Freemont Madison Conveyance Act. Under H.R. 4708, the Cross-cut Diversion Dam, Cross-cut Canal and five wells with associated water rights would be owned and operated by the FMID. The district has operated and maintained these facilities since they were constructed.

In July the Resources Committee held a hearing on H.R. 4708. During this hearing the Bureau of Reclamation expressed concern over capping the costs for the required NEPA study and administrative costs associated with the transfer.

After the hearing I worked with the Bureau and Freemont Madison Irrigation District to find a solution that is acceptable. The Resources Committee marked up an amended version of H.R. 4708. The amendment in the nature of the substitute was agreed up by all interested parties and was subsequently reported out of the Committee by unanimous consent.

This bill is the culmination of many years of hard work by the members of the Freemont-Madison Irrigation District. In fact, it is one of the first issues I was approached with when I was elected to my first term in the House almost four years ago. I know the members of the Freemont-Madison will continue to provide quality service and remain the good stewards of the natural resources that are at their disposal upon transfer of this title and I look forward to the passage of H.R. 4708.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4708, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title is amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain facilities to the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District, and for other purposes.".

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WEST BUTTE ROAD RIGHT-OF-WAY ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4953) to direct the Secretary of the Interior to grant to Deschutes and Crook Counties in the State of Oregon a right-of-way to West Butte Road, as amended.

H.R. 4953

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. COUNTY RIGHT-OF-WAY TO WEST BUTTE ROAD IN THE STATE OF OREGON.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this Act:

(1) WEST BUTTE ROAD.—The term "West Butte Road" means the unpaved Bureau of Land Management road in the State of Oregon identified on the map as BLM Road 6520.

(2) COUNTY.—The term "County" means each of Crook County and Deschutes County in the State of Oregon.

(3) MAP.—The term "map" means the map entitled "West Butte Road Right of Way" dated July 17, 2002.

(4) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Land Management.

(b) GRANT TO COUNTIES.—Notwithstanding any other Act, and subject to subsection (d), the Secretary shall grant to each County a right-of-way to the West Butte Road.

(c) BOUNDARIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the rights-of-way granted under subsection (b) shall—

(A) extend in length from Reservoir Road in Crook County to United States Route 20 in Deschutes County, Oregon; and

(B) shall extend in width 100 feet on each side of the centerline of West Butte Road.

(2) MODIFICATIONS.—

(A) STATE ROADS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall amend the existing rights-of-way of each of the Counties as contained in their respective road case files to include the rights-of-way granted under subsection (b).

(ii) EFFECT.—The rights-of-way amended under clause (i) shall be subject to the common terms, conditions, and stipulations identified in the Counties' rights-of-way grants that apply on the date of enactment of this Act.

(iii) CONSIDERATION OF ENVIRONMENTAL CONCERNS.—Environmental concerns associated with any development of the West Butte Road shall be addressed by the County in meeting compliance requirements associated with State and Federal highway projects and the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 as administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

(B) WEST BUTTE ROAD.—Notwithstanding any other Act, the Secretary shall provide for adjustment to the right-of-way width and alignment granted under subsection (b) in portions of the West Butte Road necessary for the road to meet applicable State and Federal highway standards.

(d) RELINQUISHMENT OF RIGHT-OF-WAY.—The right-of-way granted to each County under subsection (b) shall be contingent upon the Counties relinquishing any right, title, or interest in and to any RS 2477 right-of-way claim held by the Counties to the portion of the road known as George Millican Road that is located in the area described in subsection (c)(1).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WALDEN), the author of the bill, to explain the legislation.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4953. This is a bill that would promote important transportation infrastructure improvements to an economically depressed area of central Oregon.

Rapid population growth among the Bend and Redmond corridor in central Oregon has created a perpetual bottleneck along Highway 97, a vital north-south right-of-way and highway in central Oregon. H.R. 4953 would authorize the relinquishment of rights-of-way between Crook and Deschutes Counties and the Bureau of Land Management, in effect a swap. The BLM would simply relinquish their management right to the West Butte Road, transferring that right to the counties. The counties, in turn, would relinquish their management rights to the George Millican Road, transferring those rights to the Bureau of Land Management.

West Butte Road extends from Reservoir Road in Crook County to U.S. Route 20 in Deschutes County. This legislation would allow the counties to make improvements to West Butte Road, thereby providing real and meaningful access to U.S. Highway 20, which is a major transportation route in central Oregon. Improvements to the road would provide an alternative route for trucks and other vehicles that now travel on a very busy and congested U.S. Highway 97.

A recent survey conducted by the Oregon Department of Transportation estimated that 25 percent of the trucks that now past through Bend from Highway 20 would use this alternative route, which would save an estimated 1 hour in travel time and reduce air pollutants as a result.

Mr. Speaker, not only does H.R. 4953 alleviate traffic congestion in central Oregon, but it also spurs economic growth in Crook County, a county with a current unemployment rate of 8.2 percent. This unemployment rate is due to the dismantling of the timber industry and the exodus of industries linked to that industry. This legislation would divert the excess traffic on Highway 97, transferring to Highway 20, providing incentives to businesses, enticing them to move to Crook County. It also gives businesses currently located in Crook County a reason to stay, due to the long-term viability of its transportation infrastructure. The long-term effect would be to provide family-wage jobs, to increase economic development, reduce pollutants, reduce commute times and trucking times, and free up access on Highway 97.

This legislation is supported by both Crook and Deschutes Counties, the cities of Prineville, Bend and Redmond, the Oregon Department of Transportation and Central Oregon Area Transportation Committee.

I would especially like to thank my friend and commend Judge Scott Cooper, who has worked tirelessly to make passage of this bill a reality.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4953 is a perfect opportunity for us to step up our efforts in alleviating the County's traffic congestion problems, provide additional commerce routes in central Oregon and work to reduce unemployment. I urge passage of H.R. 4953.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The minority has reviewed this bill and we support the majority's explanation of it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4953, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MNI WICONI RURAL WATER SUPPLY PROJECT REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4638) to reauthorize the Mni Wiconi Rural Water Supply Project.

H.R. 4638

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. MNI WICONI RURAL WATER SUPPLY PROJECT, SOUTH DAKOTA.

Section 10(a) of the Mni Wiconi Project Act of 1988 (Public Law 100–516; 102 Stat. 2571), as amended by section 813 of the Mni Wiconi Act Amendments of 1994 (Public Law 103–434; 108 Stat. 4545), is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by inserting “(based on October 1, 1992, price levels) and $58,800,000 (based on October 1, 1997, price levels)” after “$263,241,000”;

(2) in the second sentence, by striking “2003” and inserting “2008”; and

(3) in the last sentence, by inserting “(with respect to the $263,241,000), and October 1, 1997 (with respect to the $58,800,000)” after “1992”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4953, the Mni Wiconi Rural Water Supply Authorization Act of 2002, will extend the completion date of the Mni Wiconi Rural Water Supply Project to 2008 and increase the appropriation ceiling by $58.8 million.

The Mni Wiconi project was originally authorized under Public Law 100–516 to construct a municipal, rural and industrial water system to serve the Pine Ridge, Rosebud and Lower Brule Indian Reservations and seven counties in southwestern South Dakota. The project was developed to overcome the shortage of good quality drinking water in the region.

While the overall appropriation ceiling for the project has not been reached, two of the primary components have reached their individual allocations. Without additional funding, these two project components will not be completed.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I read an article in today's CQ Daily Monitor with the following headline: “Dakota Water Project Marked by November Election Overtones.”

My purpose in supporting this legislation, however, is marked by the pressing need to keep our promise to Native Americans in South Dakota who need and deserve a safe and reliable water supply. That is my motive here, pure and simple. Native Americans deserve no less.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE), the author of this legislation.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN), the gentleman from California (Chairman CALVERT) and all the members of the Committee on Resources for their support of H.R. 4638, to extend the authorization of the Mni Wiconi Rural Water Supply Project, which I introduced earlier this year.

This legislation is absolutely essential to the completion of this critical project, which is now over 50 percent finished. H.R. 4638 will increase the authorization ceiling of the project by $58.8 million and extend the authorization of the project to 2008.

Mr. Speaker, Mni Wiconi translates into “water is life,” and I believe this is a fitting name for this project. Currently, many communities within the area of the Mni Wiconi project suffer from poor quality drinking water, which has been the cause of waterborne illnesses. The need for this project is simple: Clean, safe water.

The Mni Wiconi Rural Water Supply Project is also a great symbol of cooperation and compromise. The project is made up of four separate rural water supply systems: Oglala, Rosebud, Lower Brule and West River/Lyman-Jones.

This project will bring healthy, safe drinking water and the potential for greater prosperity to over 52,000 South Dakotans, many of whom live in some of the most economically depressed counties in America.

When complete, Mni Wiconi will cover more than 12,500 square miles, making it the largest water project in the Bureau of Reclamation in North America. To service an area of this size, the project includes 4,500 miles of new pipeline, 60 booster stations and 35 water storage reservoirs. I am pleased to report the water treatment facility is fully operational and able to treat over 13 million gallons of water per day.

Mr. Speaker, Mni Wiconi is not just a water project, it is a unique partnership between the Oglala, Rosebud and Lower Brule Sioux Tribes and non-tribal communities in Lyman, Jones, Stanley, Haakon, Jackson, Bennett and Pennington Counties.

During a hearing on H.R. 4638 in late May, each of the four project sponsors were represented in the audience and at the witness table. Their attendance illustrated the unified support this project has from the American Indian and the non-tribal communities through the Mni Wiconi tribal area and their willingness to put differences aside to fix a common problem, poor quality water.

□ 1600

Mr. Speaker, I want to again thank the Committee on Resources for their work to consider this critically important legislation. I would like to thank the gentleman from West Virginia for his work as well in making this possible and getting this legislation to the floor and enacted into law.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4638.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SANTEE SIOUX TRIBE OF NEBRASKA WATER FEASIBILITY STUDY

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4938) to direct the Secretary of the Interior, through the Bureau of Reclamation, to conduct a feasibility study to determine the most feasible method of developing a safe and adequate municipal, rural, and industrial water supply for the Santee Sioux Tribe of Nebraska, and for other purposes.

H.R. 4938

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. STUDY; REPORT.

(a) STUDY.—Pursuant to reclamation laws, the Secretary of the Interior (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary"), through the Bureau of Reclamation and in consultation with the Santee Sioux Tribe of Nebraska (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Tribe"), shall conduct a feasibility study to determine the most feasible method of developing a safe and adequate municipal, rural, and industrial water treatment and distribution system for the Santee Sioux Tribe of Nebraska that could serve the tribal community and adjacent communities and incorporate population growth and economic development activities for a period of 40 years.

(b) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT.—At the request of the Tribe, the Secretary shall enter into a cooperative agreement with the Tribe for activities necessary to conduct the study required by subsection (a) regarding which the Tribe has unique expertise or knowledge.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after funds are made available to carry out this section, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report containing the results of the study required by subsection (a).

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $500,000 to carry out this section.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4938 is authored by the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE), our colleague on the Committee on Resources. I yield to him such time as he may consume to explain this legislation.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for his support and for the support of the ranking member for this small, but critically important $500,000 feasibility study to address water quality and quality needs on the Santee Sioux reservation. This reservation is located on the Nebraska-South Dakota border of northeastern Nebraska; and as has been the case in many previous bills, what we have found is that the water quality on the reservation has really been degraded.

Currently, the system is antiquated and is not working well. It is dependent upon a great number of small wells and water treatment systems; and at times, the water quality is either terrible or the water supply is relatively nonexistent.

Currently, the water distribution systems are at maximum capacity, which limits housing expansion and deters economic development. In this particular case, this small tribe needs all of the housing and all of the economic development that they can possibly secure. So this is critical as far as they are concerned.

The feasibility study authorized by H.R. 4938 would be administered by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation and the Santee Sioux Tribe through a cooperative agreement. The study will identify safe, domestic water sources, water treatment requirements, water distribution renovations, and engineering recommendations based on a 40-year projection. A revitalized tribal water treatment and distribution system will serve the tribal communities and adjacent communities and will incorporate population growth and economic development activities in an area where economic development is desperately needed.

This bill addresses a critical need of the Santee Sioux reservation, and it has been allowed to go on far too long. I urge the House to pass this important measure for the people of the Santee Sioux Tribe, and I again thank the chairman for his support. I urge passage of H.R. 4938.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The minority has reviewed the legislation and agrees with the majority's explanation of it. We are glad to support the legislation by the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. OSBORNE).

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4938.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BURNT, MALHEUR, OWYHEE, AND POWDER RIVER BASIN WATER OPTIMIZATION FEASIBILITY STUDY ACT OF 2001

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 238) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to conduct feasibility studies on water optimization in the Burnt River basin, Malheur River basin, Owyhee River basin, and Powder River basin, Oregon.

S. 238

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Burnt, Malheur, Owyhee, and Powder River Basin Water Optimization Feasibility Study Act of 2001".

SEC. 2. STUDY.

The Secretary of the Interior may conduct feasibility studies on water optimization in the Burnt River basin, Malheur River basin, Owyhee River basin, and Powder River basin, Oregon.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 238 is similar to the House-passed bill H.R. 1883 introduced and authored by the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WALDEN).

I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. WALDEN) to explain this legislation.

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak in favor of S. 238.

This legislation would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to engage in feasibility investigations for the Burnt, Malheur and Owyhee River basins in eastern Oregon. It is the next step in the United States Bureau of Reclamation process now that their initial study has been completed. The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's earlier studies examined problems associated with such use as excess nutrients and surface water, sedimentation, high water temperatures, degraded fish habitat, low stream flows, and lack of adequate stream-side vegetation.

The feasibility studies that S. 238 authorizes would help find the most logical approaches to address these issues.

Mr. Speaker, the farmers and ranchers are the driving force behind this legislation and its companion that I sponsored here in the House, as they have proven over and over again that it is the farmers and ranchers who are some of our strongest conservationists. They care deeply about the land and water that they will use to grow the crops and raise the livestock that feed us all. This bill will set a process in motion that will allow the farmers to leave more water in-stream while maintaining their current yields.

The bill is supported by the Burnt River Irrigation District, the Powder Valley Water Control District, the Baker Valley Irrigation District, the Owyhee Irrigation District, the Owyhee Ditch Company, the Vale Oregon Irrigation District, and the Warm Springs Irrigation District. It is a simple, straightforward bill that deserves the support of my colleagues, and I ask for that.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have no objections to this measure, but it is our hope that an equally important water resource measure for Austin, Texas, will also be considered by the House in the near future.

My colleagues on the Committee on Resources may recall that when we met on July 10 to consider Senator WYDEN's bill for these river basins in Oregon, we also supported the bill of our colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), H.R. 4739. He works hard for his constituents and is to be commended for his leadership on this issue as well. The Doggett bill would authorize Federal financial assistance for a water recycling project in the Austin, Texas, area.

As I recall, the committee approved the Doggett bill without amendment and by unanimous consent. I have no doubt that S. 238 is meritorious. I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle might be able to now schedule this other equally important water legislation in the foreseeable future.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 238.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SANTA MONICA MOUNTAINS NATIONAL RECREATION AREA BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 640) to adjust the boundaries of Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 640 was introduced by the gentleman from California (Mr. GALLEGLY), our colleague on the Committee on Resources.

I yield to him such time as he may consume to explain this legislation.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Committee on Resources chairman, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), and subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH), for bringing this bill before the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation passed the House of Representatives on June 6 of last year by a voice vote and passed the Senate with an amendment by unanimous consent on August 1 of this year.

This bill, which I introduced with my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN), would adjust the boundaries of the Santa Monica Mountains Recreation Area to enhance and protect the principal wildlife corridor between the Simi Hills in my district and the Santa Monica Mountains in Mr. SHERMAN's district. It adds nearly 3,492 acres of private land in the recreational area at no cost to the taxpayer.

Of that, 2,797 acres that were previously donated to the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy, a State agency, will be transferred to the Park Service. Another 362 acres is publicly and privately owned open space. The rest, about 330 acres, is comprised of developed residential areas in the cities of Calabasas and Agoura Hills.

The changes made by the Senate exclude three parcels of private property whose owners wish not to have their property included within the boundary adjustment. The changes were made by Senator DIANE FEINSTEIN and Senator JEFF BINGAMAN at my request. I thank the Senators for helping ensure that the rights of these individuals are protected. All the other property owners impacted by this legislation have agreed to be within the proposed boundaries of the recreation area.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support these changes and this bill.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

We support the measure on this side of the aisle. I would also like to note the work of our colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN), who has been very supportive and worked hard for this legislation as well.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 640.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOS PADRES NATIONAL FOREST LAND EXCHANGE ACT OF 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4917) to provide for an exchange of lands with the United Water Conservation District of California to eliminate private inholdings in the Los Padres National Forest, and for other purposes.

H.R. 4917

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Los Padres National Forest Land Exchange Act of 2002".

SEC. 2. LAND EXCHANGE, LOS PADRES NATIONAL FOREST, CALIFORNIA.

(a) EXCHANGE AUTHORIZED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the United Water Conservation District of California (in this section referred to as the "District") conveys to the Secretary of Agriculture (in this section referred to as the "Secretary") all of right, title, and interest of the District in and to the lands described in subsection (b)(1), the Secretary shall convey to the District, in exchange for such lands, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the National Forest System lands described in subsection (b)(2).

(2) EXISTING RIGHTS.—The conveyance of National Forest System lands under this section shall be subject to valid existing rights and to such terms, conditions, and reservations as may be required by this section or considered necessary by the Secretary.

(3) TIME FOR EXCHANGE.—The Secretary and the District shall endeavor to complete the exchange in a timely manner.

(b) EXCHANGE LANDS.—

(1) LANDS TO BE CONVEYED BY DISTRICT.—The lands to be conveyed by the District under this section consist of approximately 340 acres as follows:

(A) "Tract A"—Approximately 40 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 16, NE¼SE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(B) "Tract B"—Approximately 40 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 16, SE¼NE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(C) "Tract C"—Approximately 80 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 16, S½SE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(E) "Tract E"—Approximately 20 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 15, N½SW¼SW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(2) LANDS TO BE CONVEYED BY SECRETARY.—The National Forest System lands to be conveyed by the Secretary under this section consist of approximately 420 acres as follows:

(A) "Tract 1"—Approximately 80 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 10, E½SW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(B) "Tract 2"—Approximately 40 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 15, NE¼NW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(C) "Tract 3"—Approximately 40 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 15, SW¼SE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(D) "Tract 4"—Approximately 10 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 22, SW¼SW¼NE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(E) "Tract 5"—Approximately 20 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 22, W½NW¼SE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(F) "Tract 6"—Approximately 40 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 22, SW¼SE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(G) "Tract 7"—Approximately 80 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 22, E½SW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(H) "Tract 8"—Approximately 20 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 22, N½NW¼SW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(I) "Tract 9"—Approximately 80 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 27, W½NE¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(J) "Tract 10"—Approximately 10 acres, located in township 5 north, range 18 west, section 27, NE¼SW¼NW¼, San Bernardino base and meridian.

(3) CORRECTIONS TO LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.—By mutual agreement, the Secretary and the District may adjust the legal descriptions contained in this subsection to correct errors or to make minor adjustments in the lands to be exchanged.

(c) PROCESSING OF LAND EXCHANGE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the Secretary shall process the land exchange under this section in accordance with Forest Service land exchange regulations in subpart A of part 254 of title 36, Code of Federal Regulations.

(2) TITLE STANDARDS.—The Secretary shall require that title to the District lands acquired by the Secretary under this section is in conformity with the title standards of the Attorney General of the United States.

(d) EASEMENTS AND ACCESS.—

(1) RESERVATION.—In the conveyance of the National Forest System lands authorized by this section, the Secretary shall reserve easements for all roads and trails that the Secretary considers to be necessary or desirable to provide for administrative purposes and to ensure public access to National Forest System lands. In particular, the Secretary shall reserve perpetual unrestricted rights of pedestrian access to the Potholes trailhead of the Los Padres National Forest.

(2) ACCESSIBILITY.—In the case of the District lands acquired by the Secretary under this section, the Secretary shall provide reasonable access to privately owned inholdings consistent with section 1323(a) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act (16 U.S.C. 3210(a)).

(3) CONSTRUCTION OF PARKING LOT.—As a condition on the receipt of National Forest System lands under this section, the District shall agree to construct a gravel parking area upon District lands for the Potholes trailhead of the Los Padres National Forest, subject to the following requirements:

(A) The District may reasonably regulate vehicular access to the trailhead in accordance with rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with applicable law.

(B) Foot traffic to the trailhead shall be perpetual and unrestricted.

(e) SPECIAL USE AUTHORIZATION AND EASEMENTS.—All special use authorizations and term easements issued by the Secretary with respect to the National Forest System lands described in subsection (b)(2) shall not be renewed or reauthorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(f) WATER RIGHTS.—The land exchange authorized by this section does not include any water rights owned by the District or the United States.

(g) CASH EQUALIZATION.—

(1) LIMITS WAIVED.—The District or the Secretary, as appropriate, may equalize the values of the lands to be exchanged under this section by a cash payment without regard to any statutory limit on the amount of such a cash equalization payment.

(2) DISPOSITION AND USE OF FUNDS.—Any cash equalization payment received by the Secretary under this section shall be deposited into the fund established by Public Law 90-171 (commonly known as the Sisk Act; 16 U.S.C. 484a). The payment shall be available to the Secretary for expenditure, without further appropriation, for the acquisition, construction, or improvement of administrative or recreational facilities for the Los Padres National Forest in Ventura County, Santa Barbara County, and San Luis Obispo County, California, or for the acquisition of land or interests in land in such counties.

(h) MANAGEMENT OF ACQUIRED LANDS.—The District lands acquired by the Secretary under this section shall be added to and administered as part of the Los Padres National Forest in accordance with the laws and regulations applicable to that national forest.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4917, which provides for an exchange of lands between the United States Water Conservation District of California and the U.S. Forest Service, was authored by the gentleman from California (Mr. GALLEGLY); and I yield such time as he may consume to him to explain this legislation.

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to again thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), the full committee chairman, and the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. MCINNIS), the subcommittee chairman, for helping bring this bill to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4917, the Los Padres National Forest Land Exchange Act, will facilitate a land exchange between the U.S. Forest Service and the United Water Conservation District, a local public agency.

Under this legislation, the U.S. Forest Service will convey 420 acres to United Water. Of that total, 290 acres are mud-flats surrounded by Lake Piru, 80 acres are campground, and 50 acres are primarily two separate sections of Blue Point Road. United Water will convey to the Forest Service 340 acres. The land is open space within the Los Padres National Forest previously leased for grazing.

Both the Forest Service and United Water benefit from the exchange. The Blue Point Campground, which has been closed by the Forest Service since 1995, will be opened on a limited basis by United Water. This will provide additional recreational opportunities for families and outdoor enthusiasts for frequent trips to the forest. In addition, United Water has pledged to increase patrols around the campground's arroyo toad habitat, which the Forest Service admits does not have the resources necessary to adequately patrol and maintain.

In addition, United Water will own all of the land surrounding Lake Piru. This will allow the United Water district to better manage its operations with less bureaucracy. The Forest Service will gain ownership over the entire western part of the Lisk Ranch, which is within the boundaries of the Los Padres and open space.

The cost of this exchange would be minimal. Both United Water and the Forest Service have agreed to share the cost of the appraisals and land surveys to be done after enactment. I believe this exchange is a win/win for the public, the Los Padres National Forest, and the United Water Conservation District; and I urge the House to adopt this measure.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. We on the minority side have no problems with the legislation and we support it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4917.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TONTO AND COCONINO NATIONAL FORESTS LAND EXCHANGE ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4919) to provide for the exchange of certain lands in the Coconino and Tonto National Forests in Arizona, and for other purposes, as amended.

H.R. 4919

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Tonto and Coconino National Forests Land Exchange Act".

TITLE I—TONTO AND COCONINO NATIONAL FORESTS LAND EXCHANGE

SEC. 101. FINDINGS; PURPOSE.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Certain private lands adjacent to the Montezuma Castle National Monument in Yavapai County, Arizona, are desirable for Federal acquisition to protect important riparian values along Beaver Creek and the scenic backdrop for the National Monument.

(2) Certain other inholdings in the Coconino National Forest are desirable for Federal acquisition to protect important public values near Double Cabin Park.

(3) Approximately 108 acres of land within the Tonto National Forest, northeast of Payson, Arizona, are currently occupied by 45 residential cabins under special use permits from the Secretary of Agriculture, and have been so occupied since the mid-1950s, rendering such lands of limited use and enjoyment potential for the general public. Such lands are, therefore, appropriate for transfer to the cabin owners in exchange for lands that will have higher public use values.

(4) In return for the privatization of such encumbered lands the Secretary of Agriculture has been offered approximately 495 acres of non-Federal land (known as the Q Ranch) within the Tonto National Forest, east of Young, Arizona, in an area where the Secretary has completed previous land exchanges to consolidate public ownership of National Forest lands.

(5) The acquisition of the Q Ranch non-Federal lands by the Secretary will greatly increase National Forest management efficiency and promote public access, use, and enjoyment of the area and surrounding National Forest System lands.

(b) Purpose.—The purpose of this title is to authorize, direct, facilitate, and expedite the consummation of the land exchanges set forth herein in accordance with the terms and conditions of this title.

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) DPSHA.—The term "DPSHA" means the Diamond Point Summer Homes Association, a nonprofit corporation in the State of Arizona.

(2) Federal land.—The term "Federal land" means land to be conveyed into non-Federal ownership under this title.

(3) FLPMA.—The term "FLPMA" means the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976.

(4) MCJV.—The term "MCJV" means the Montezuma Castle Land Exchange Joint Venture Partnership, an Arizona Partnership.

(5) Non-federal land.—The term "non-Federal land" means land to be conveyed to the Secretary of Agriculture under this title.

(6) Secretary.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Agriculture, unless otherwise specified.

SEC. 103. MONTEZUMA CASTLE LAND EXCHANGE.

(a) Land Exchange.—Upon receipt of a binding offer from MCJV to convey title acceptable to the Secretary to the land described in subsection (b), the Secretary shall convey to MCJV all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the Federal land described in subsection (c).

(b) Non-Federal.—The land described in this subsection is the following:

(1) The approximately 157 acres of land adjacent to the Montezuma Castle National Monument, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Montezuma Castle Contiguous Lands", dated May 2002.

(2) Certain private land within the Coconino National Forest, Arizona, comprising approximately 108 acres, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Double Cabin Park Lands", dated September 2002.

(c) Federal Land.—The Federal land described in this subsection is the approximately 222 acres in the Tonto National Forest, Arizona, and surveyed as Lots 3, 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, and Tract 40 in section 32, Township 11 North, Range 10 East, Gila and Salt River Meridian, Arizona.

(d) Equal Value Exchange.—The values of the non-Federal and Federal land directed to be exchanged under this section shall be equal or equalized as determined by the Secretary through an appraisal performed by a qualified appraiser mutually agreed to by the Secretary and MCJV and performed in conformance with the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions (U.S. Department of Justice, December 2000), and section 206(d) of the FLPMA (43 U.S.C. 1716(d)). If the values are not equal, the Secretary shall delete Federal lots from the conveyance to MCJV in the following order and priority, as necessary, until the values of Federal and non-Federal land are within the 25 percent cash equalization limit of 206(b) of FLPMA:

(1) Lot 3.

(2) Lot 4.

(3) Lot 9.

(4) Lot 10.

(5) Lot 11.

(6) Lot 8.

(e) Cash Equalization.—Any difference in value remaining after compliance with subsection (d) shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the Secretary or MCJV, as the circumstances dictate, in accordance with section 206(b) of FLPMA (43 U.S.C. 1716(b)). Public Law 90–171 (16 U.S.C. 484a; commonly known as the "Sisk Act") shall, without further appropriation, apply to any cash equalization payment received by the United States under this section.

SEC. 104. DIAMOND POINT—Q RANCH LAND EXCHANGE.

(a) In General.—Upon receipt of a binding offer from DPSHA to convey title acceptable to the Secretary to the land described in subsection (b), the Secretary shall convey to DPSHA all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land described in subsection (c).

(b) Non-Federal Land.—The land described in this subsection is the approximately 495 acres of non-Federal land generally depicted on the map entitled "Diamond Point Exchange—Q Ranch Non-Federal Lands", dated May 2002.

(c) Federal Land.—The Federal land described in this subsection is the approximately 108 acres northeast of Payson, Arizona, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Diamond Point Exchange—Federal Land", dated May 2002.

(d) Equal Value Exchange.—The values of the non-Federal and Federal land directed to be exchanged under this section shall be equal or equalized as determined by the Secretary through an appraisal performed by a qualified appraiser mutually agreed to by the Secretary and DPSHA and in conformance with the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions (U.S. Department of Justice, December 2000), and section 206(d) of FLPMA (43 U.S.C. 1716(d)). If the values are not equal, they shall be equalized by the payment of cash to the Secretary or DPSHA pursuant to section 206(b) of FLPMA (43 U.S.C. 1716(b)). Public Law 90–171 (16 U.S.C. 484a; commonly known as the "Sisk Act") shall, without further appropriation, apply to any cash equalization payment received by the United States under this section.

(e) Special Use Permit Termination.—Upon execution of the land exchange authorized by this section, all special use cabin permits on the Federal land shall be terminated.

SEC. 105. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

(a) Exchange Timetable.—Not later than 6 months after the Secretary receives an offer under section 103 or 104, the Secretary shall execute the exchange under section 103 or 104, respectively, unless the Secretary and MCJV or DPSHA, respectively, mutually agree to extend such deadline.

(b) Exchange Processing.—Prior to executing the land exchanges authorized by this title, the Secretary shall perform any necessary land surveys and required preexchange clearances, reviews, and approvals relating to threatened and endangered species, cultural and historic resources, wetlands and floodplains and hazardous materials. If 1 or more of the Federal land parcels or lots, or portions thereof, cannot be transferred to MCJV or DPSHA due to hazardous materials, threatened or endangered species, cultural or historic resources, or wetland and flood plain problems, the parcel or lot, or portion thereof, shall be deleted from the exchange, and the values of the lands to be exchanged adjusted in accordance with subsections (d) and (e) of section 103 or section 104(d), as appropriate. In order to save administrative costs to the United States, the costs of performing such work, including the appraisals required pursuant to this title, shall be paid by MCJV or DPSHA for the relevant property, except for the costs of any such work (including appraisal reviews and approvals) that the Secretary is required or elects to have performed by employees of the Department of Agriculture.

(c) Federal Land Reservations and Encumbrances.—The Secretary shall convey the Federal land under this title subject to valid existing rights, including easements, rights-of-way, utility lines and any other valid encumbrances on the Federal land as of the date of the conveyance under this title. If applicable to the land conveyed, the Secretary shall also retain any right of access as may be required by section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)) for remedial or corrective action relating to hazardous substances as may be necessary in the future.

(d) ADMINISTRATION OF ACQUIRED LAND.—The land acquired by the Secretary pursuant to this title shall become part of the Tonto or Coconino National Forest, as appropriate, and be administered as such in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations generally applicable to the National Forest System. Such land may be made available for domestic livestock grazing if determined appropriate by the Secretary in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations applicable thereto on National Forest System land.

(e) TRANSFER OF LAND TO PARK SERVICE.—Upon their acquisition by the United States, the "Montezuma Castle Contiguous Lands" identified in section 103(d)(1) shall be transferred to the administrative jurisdiction of the National Park Service, and shall thereafter be permanently incorporated in, and administered by the Secretary of the Interior as part of, the Montezuma Castle National Monument.

TITLE II—MENDOCINO NATIONAL FOREST LAND CONVEYANCE

SEC. 201. LAND CONVEYANCE, FARAWAY RANCH, MENDOCINO NATIONAL FOREST, CALIFORNIA.

(a) CONVEYANCE REQUIRED.—Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary of Agriculture shall convey to the owner of the property known as the Faraway Ranch in Lake County, California (in this section referred to as the "recipient"), by quitclaim deed, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following National Forest System lands in Mendocino National Forest in Lake County, California:

(1) "Faraway Ranch, Tract 39" (approximately 15.8 acres) consisting of a portion of lot 6 of section 4, township 18 north, range 10 west, Mount Diablo base and meridian, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Faraway Ranch, Tracts 39 and 40" and dated June 30, 2002.

(2) "Faraway Ranch, Tract 40" (approximately 105.1 acres) consisting of a portion of the N½SW¼ and lot 7 of section 4, and a portion of lots 15 and 16 of section 5, township 18 north, range 10 west, Mount Diablo base and meridian, as generally depicted on the map entitled "Faraway Ranch, Tracts 39 and 40" and dated June 30, 2002.

(b) TIME FOR CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary shall make the conveyance under subsection (a) not later than 120 days after the date on which the recipient deposits sufficient funds with the Bureau of Land Management, California State Office, Branch of Geographic Services, to cover survey work costs and with the Forest Service, Mendocino National Forest, to cover Forest Service direct transaction costs described in subsection (e).

(c) CORRECTIONS.—With the agreement of the recipient, the Secretary may make minor corrections to the legal descriptions and map of the lands to be conveyed pursuant to this section.

(d) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the recipient shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the fair market value of the National Forest System lands conveyed under such subsection. The fair market value of such lands shall be determined by an appraisal that is acceptable to the Secretary and conforms with the Federal appraisal standards, as defined in the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions developed by the Interagency Land Acquisition Conference.

(e) PAYMENT OF COSTS.—All direct transaction costs associated with the conveyance under section (a), including the costs of appraisal, title, and survey work, shall be paid by the recipient.

(f) USE OF PROCEEDS.—

(1) DEPOSIT.—The Secretary shall deposit the amounts received by the Secretary as consideration under subsection (d) in the fund established by Public Law 90–171 (commonly known as the Sisk Act; 16 U.S.C. 484a).

(2) USE.—Funds deposited under paragraph (1) shall be available to the Secretary until expended, without further appropriation—

(A) for the acquisition of land and interests in land for National Forest System purposes in the State of California; and

(B) for reimbursement of costs incurred by the Forest Service in making the conveyance under subsection (a).

(3) STATUS OF ACQUIRED LAND.—Notwithstanding Public Law 85–862 (16 U.S.C. 521a), any lands acquired under paragraph (2)(A) shall be managed as lands acquired under the March 1, 1911 (commonly known as the Weeks Act; 16 U.S.C. 480, 500, 515 et seq.), regardless of whether any of the lands conveyed under subsection (a) were reserved from the public domain.

(g) WITHDRAWAL.—Subject to valid existing rights, the lands to be conveyed under subsection (a) are hereby withdrawn from all forms of location, entry, and patent under the public land laws and the mining and mineral leasing laws of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this bill directs the Secretary of Agriculture to conduct two land exchanges, the Montezuma Castle land exchange in the Coconino National Forest, and the Diamond Point land exchange in the Tonto National Forest.

In the Montezuma Castle land exchange, the National Park Service will acquire some riparian areas which are part of the viewshed for the Montezuma Castle National Monument, and the Forest Service will acquire Double Cabin Park. In exchange, 122 acres of National Forest System land adjacent to the town of Payson Municipal Airport will be transferred to private ownership.

In the Diamond Point land exchange, the Forest Service will receive a 495-acre parcel known as the Q Ranch in an area where they have completed previous acquisitions and consolidated Federal lands. In exchange, the Diamond Point Summer Homes Association will acquire 108 acres of Federal land which has been occupied by the association's 45 residential cabins since the 1950s. The Tonto National Forest plan specifically recommends conveyance of the Federal land to the cabin owners.

The second part of this bill authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to convey certain lands in the Mendocino National Forest in California to correct recently discovered errors in the original survey. In the last few years, we have discovered many problems with surveys conducted in the late 1800s. In this case, the faulty survey has allowed unintentional encroachment of ranch structures into nearby national forest lands. This bill remedies outstanding encroachment issues by authorizing the transfer of 120 acres of adjacent national forest land in exchange for payment of the fair market value of these lands.

The payments will be deposited into the Sisk Act and used to purchase non-Federal lands adjacent to national forest lands in California. This is the text of H.R. 5032, authored by the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON), and ordered reported from the Committee on Resources on September 12.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of these measures, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, while I initially had some minor problems with H.R. 4919 when it was considered in committee, our colleague, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. PASTOR), came and spoke to me. In no uncertain terms he made it clear he would like to see this legislation passed. Therefore, I decided it would be a good idea to move it forward.

I would also note that the inclusion by our colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON), of his legislation in this legislation is facilitating its consideration on the floor today. The gentleman from California is to be commended for his leadership, and is a very capable and effective representative of his constituents. I salute him for his work on this particular bill.

Mr. HAYWORTH. I am grateful for the opportunity to speak today about my bill, H.R. 4919, the Tonto and Coconino National Forests Land Exchange.

This legislation authorizes two commonsense land exchanges that will benefit not only my constituents, but the U.S. Forest Service. Most importantly, this bill will authorize a land exchange that will allow the Town of Payson to purchase a portion of the conveyed property to create private sector business development and job opportunities. Payson is totally surrounded by national forest lands, virtually land-locking the community. Local officials feel that the lack of land for industry and affordable housing is the major obstacle to economic development in the region.

The legislation also authorizes the Forest Service to acquire a 495-acre parcel known as the Q Ranch, which is currently owned by The Conservation Fund. In exchange, the Diamond Point Summer Homes Association will acquire 108 acres of federal land that has been occupied by the group's 45 residential cabins since the 1950's.

The Tonto National Forest Plan has specifically recommended conveyance of the federal land. The exchange will transfer land of limited public use to the association in exchange for private lands that will increase management efficiency and enhance public access, use and enjoyment of the surrounding national forest lands.

In summary, the bill contains commonsense legislation that accomplishes goals that the Forest Service has stated are a priority. These land exchanges are endorsed by the Gila County Board of Supervisors, the Rim County Regional Chamber of Commerce, the Town of Payson, the Payson Regional Economic Development Corporation, and the National Park Service, among others.

I have been honored to serve the community of Payson in the House of Representatives for eight years. Due to redistricting, I will no longer have the opportunity to directly represent this beautiful part of Arizona. Nevertheless, even as congressional lines change, the issues remain the same, and I hope to convey to my friends in Payson that I will remain a strong advocate of their interests.

With that, I urge an "aye" vote on H.R. 4919.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4919, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MIAMI CIRCLE PARK FEASIBILITY STUDY

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1894) to direct the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a special resource study to determine the national significance of the Miami Circle site in the State of Florida as well as the suitability and feasibility of its inclusion in the National Park System as part of the Biscayne National Park, and for other purposes, as amended.

S. 1894

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—MIAMI CIRCLE SITE SPECIAL RESOURCE STUDY

SEC. 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the Tequesta Indians were one of the earliest groups to establish permanent villages in southeast Florida;

(2) the Tequestas had one of only two North American civilizations that thrived and developed into a complex social chiefdom without an agricultural base;

(3) the Tequesta sites that remain preserved today are rare;

(4) the discovery of the Miami Circle, occupied by the Tequesta approximately 2,000 years ago, presents a valuable new opportunity to learn more about the Tequesta culture; and

(5) Biscayne National Park also contains and protects several prehistoric Tequesta sites.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to direct the Secretary to conduct a special resource study to determine the national significance of the Miami Circle site as well as the suitability and feasibility of its inclusion in the National Park System as part of Biscayne National Park.

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) MIAMI CIRCLE.—The term "Miami Circle" means the Miami Circle archaeological site in Miami-Dade County, Florida.

(2) PARK.—The term "Park" means Biscayne National Park in the State of Florida.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the National Park Service.

SEC. 103. SPECIAL RESOURCE STUDY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date funds are made available, the Secretary shall conduct a special resource study as described in subsection (b). In conducting the study, the Secretary shall consult with the appropriate American Indian tribes and other interested groups and organizations.

(b) COMPONENTS.—In addition to a determination of national significance, feasibility, and suitability, the special resource study shall include the analysis and recommendations of the Secretary with respect to—

(1) which, if any, particular areas of or surrounding the Miami Circle should be included in the Park;

(2) whether any additional staff, facilities, or other resources would be necessary to administer the Miami Circle as a unit of the Park; and

(3) any impact on the local area that would result from the inclusion of Miami Circle in the Park.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 30 days after completion of the study, the Secretary shall submit a report describing the findings and recommendations of the study to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the United States House of Representatives.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title.

TITLE II—GATEWAY COMMUNITIES COOPERATION

SEC. 201. IMPROVED RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN FEDERAL LAND MANAGERS AND GATEWAY COMMUNITIES TO SUPPORT COMPATIBLE LAND MANAGEMENT OF BOTH FEDERAL AND ADJACENT LANDS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Communities that are adjacent to or near Federal lands, including units of the National Park System, units of the National Wildlife Refuge System, units of the National Forest System, and lands administered by the Bureau of Land Management, are vitally impacted by the management and public use of these Federal lands.

(2) These communities, commonly known as gateway communities, fulfill an integral part in the mission of the Federal lands by providing necessary services, such as schools, roads, search and rescue, emergency, medical, provisioning, logistical support, living quarters, and drinking water and sanitary systems, for both visitors to the Federal lands and employees of Federal land management agencies.

(3) Provision of these vital services by gateway communities is an essential ingredient for a meaningful and enjoyable experience by visitors to the Federal lands because Federal land management agencies are unable to provide, or are prevented from providing, these services.

(4) Gateway communities serve as an entry point for persons who visit the Federal lands and are ideal for establishment of visitor services, including lodging, food service, fuel and auto repairs, emergency services, and visitor information.

(5) Development in these gateway communities affect the management and protection of these Federal lands, depending on the extent to which advance planning for the local development is coordinated between the communities and Federal land managers.

(6) The planning and management decisions of Federal land managers can have unintended consequences for gateway communities and the Federal lands, when the decisions are not adequately communicated to, or coordinated with, the elected officials and residents of gateway communities.

(7) Experts in land management planning are available to Federal land managers, but persons with technical planning skills are often not readily available to gateway communities, particularly small gateway communities.

(8) Gateway communities are often affected by the policies and actions of several Federal land agencies and both the communities and the agencies would benefit from greater interagency coordination of those policies and actions.

(9) Persuading gateway communities to make decisions and undertake actions in their communities that would also be in the best interest of the Federal lands is most likely to occur when such decisionmaking and actions are built upon a foundation of cooperation and coordination.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title to require Federal land managers to communicate, coordinate, and cooperate with gateway communities in order to—

(1) improve the relationships among Federal land managers, elected officials, and residents of gateway communities;

(2) enhance the facilities and services in gateway communities available to visitors to Federal lands, when compatible with the management of these lands; and

(3) result in better local land use planning and decisions by Federal land managers.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) GATEWAY COMMUNITY.—The term "gateway community" means a county, city, town, village, or other subdivision of a State, or a federally recognized American Indian tribe or Alaska Native village, that—

(A) is incorporated or recognized in a county or regional land use plan; and

(B) a Federal land manager (or the head of the tourism office for the State) determines is significantly affected economically, socially, or environmentally by planning and management decisions regarding Federal lands administered by that Federal land manager.

(2) FEDERAL LAND AGENCIES.—The term "Federal land agencies" means the National Park Service, United States Forest Service, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Bureau of Land Management.

(3) FEDERAL LAND MANAGER.—The term "Federal land manager" means—

(A) the superintendent of a unit of the National Park System;

(B) the manager of a national wildlife refuge;

(C) the field office manager of a Bureau of Land Management area; or

(D) the supervisor of a unit of the National Forest System.

(d) PARTICIPATION IN FEDERAL PLANNING AND LAND USE.—

(1) PARTICIPATION IN PLANNING.—The Federal land agencies shall provide for meaningful public involvement at the earliest possible time by elected and appointed officials of governments of local gateway communities in the development of land use plans, programs, land use regulations, land use decisions, transportation plans, general management plans, and any other plans, decisions, projects, or policies for Federal public lands under the jurisdiction of these agencies that will have a significant impact on these gateway communities. To facilitate such involvement, the Federal land agencies shall provide these officials, at the earliest possible time, with a summary in nontechnical language of the assumptions, purposes, goals, and objectives of such a plan, decision, project, or policy and a description of any anticipated significant impact of the plan, decision, or policy on gateway communities.

(2) EARLY NOTICE OF PROPOSED DECISIONS.—To the extent practicable, the Federal land agencies shall provide local gateway communities with early public notice of proposed decisions of these agencies that may have a significant impact on gateway communities.

(3) TRAINING SESSIONS.—The Federal land agencies shall offer training sessions for elected and appointed officials of gateway communities at which such officials can obtain a better understanding of—

(A) agency planning processes; and

(B) the methods by which they can participate most meaningfully in the development of the agency plans, decisions, and policies referred to in paragraph (1).

(4) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—At the request of the government of a gateway community, a Federal land agency shall assign, to the extent practicable, an agency employee or contractor to work with the community to develop data and analysis relevant to the preparation of agency plans, decisions, and policies referred to in paragraph (1).

(5) REVIEW OF FEDERAL LAND MANAGEMENT PLANNING.—At the request of a gateway community, and to the extent practicable, a Federal land manager shall assist the gateway community to conduct a review of land use, management, or transportation plans of the Federal land manager likely to affect the gateway community.

(6) COORDINATION OF LAND USE.—To the extent consistent with the laws governing the administration of the Federal public lands, a Federal land manager may enter into a cooperative agreement with a gateway community to provide for coordination between—

(A) the land use inventory, planning, and management activities for the Federal lands administered by the Federal land manager; and

(B) the land use planning and management activities of other Federal agencies, agencies of the State in which the Federal lands are located, and local and tribal governments in the vicinity of the Federal lands.

(7) INTERAGENCY COOPERATION AND COORDINATION.—To the extent practicable, when the plans and activities of two or more Federal land agencies are anticipated to have a significant impact on a gateway community, the Federal land agencies involved shall consolidate and coordinate their plans and planning processes to facilitate the participation of the gateway community in the planning processes.

(8) TREATMENT AS COOPERATING AGENCIES.—When a proposed action is determined to require the preparation of an environmental impact statement, the Federal land agencies shall, as soon as practicable, but not later than the scoping process, actively solicit the participation of gateway communities as cooperating agencies under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

(e) GRANTS TO ASSIST GATEWAY COMMUNITIES.—

(1) GRANTS AUTHORIZED; PURPOSES.—A Federal land manager may make grants to an eligible gateway community to enable the gateway community—

(A) to participate in Federal land planning or management processes;

(B) to obtain professional land use or transportation planning assistance necessary as a result of Federal action;

(C) to address and resolve public infrastructure impacts that are identified through these processes as a likely result of the Federal land management decisions and for which sufficient funds are not otherwise available; and

(D) to provide public information and interpretive services about the Federal lands administered by the Federal land manager and the gateway community.

(2) ELIGIBLE GATEWAY COMMUNITIES.—To be eligible for a grant under this subsection, a gateway community may not have a population in excess of 10,000 persons.

(f) FUNDING SOURCES.—

(1) GENERAL AGENCY FUNDS.—A Federal land agency may use amounts available for the general operation of the agency to provide funds to Federal land managers of that agency to make grants under subsection (e).

(2) OTHER PLANNING OR PROJECT DEVELOPMENT FUNDS.—Funds available to a Federal land manager for planning, construction, or project development may also be used to fund programs under subsection (d) and make grants under subsection (e).

(3) COMBINATION OF FUNDS.—Federal land managers from different Federal land agencies may combine financial resources to make grants under subsection (e).

TITLE III—MOUNT NEBO WILDERNESS BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENTS

SEC. 301. BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENTS, MOUNT NEBO WILDERNESS, UTAH.

(a) LANDS REMOVED.—The boundary of the Mount Nebo Wilderness is adjusted to exclude the following:

(1) MONUMENT SPRINGS.—The approximately 8.4 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Monument Springs".

(2) GARDNER CANYON.—The approximately 177.8 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Gardner Canyon".

(3) BIRCH CREEK.—The approximately 5.0 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Birch Creek".

(4) INGRAM CANYON.—The approximately 15.4 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Ingram Canyon".

(5) WILLOW NORTH A.—The approximately 3.4 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Willow North A".

(6) WILLOW NORTH B.—The approximately 6.6 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Willow North B".

(7) WILLOW SOUTH.—The approximately 21.5 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Willow South".

(8) MENDENHALL CANYON.—The approximately 9.8 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Mendenhall Canyon".

(9) WASH CANYON.—The approximately 31.4 acres of land depicted on the Map as "Wash Canyon".

(b) LANDS ADDED.—Subject to valid existing rights, the boundary of the Mount Nebo Wilderness is adjusted to include the approximately 293.2 acres of land depicted on the Map for addition to the Mount Nebo Wilderness. The Utah Wilderness Act of 1984 (Public Law 94-428) shall apply to the land added to the Mount Nebo Wilderness pursuant to this subsection.

SEC. 302. MAP.

(b) MAP ON FILE.—The Map and the final document entitled "Mount Nebo, Proposed Boundary Adjustments, Parcel Descriptions (See Map #531)" and dated June 4, 2001, shall be on file and available for inspection in the office of the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture.

(c) CORRECTIONS.—The Secretary of Agriculture may make technical corrections to the Map.

SEC. 303. TECHNICAL BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.

The boundary of the Mount Nebo Wilderness is adjusted to exclude the approximately 21.26 acres of private property located in Andrews Canyon, Utah, and depicted on the Map as "Dale".

TITLE IV—BAINBRIDGE ISLAND JAPANESE-AMERICAN MEMORIAL SPECIAL RESOURCE STUDY

SEC. 401. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) During World War II on February 19, 1942, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066, setting in motion the forced exile of more than 110,000 Japanese Americans.

(2) In Washington State, 12,892 men, women and children of Japanese ancestry experienced three years of incarceration, an incarceration violating the most basic freedoms of American citizens.

(3) On March 30, 1942, 227 Bainbridge Island residents were the first Japanese Americans in United States history to be forcibly removed from their homes by the U.S. Army and sent to internment camps. They boarded the ferry Kehloken from the former Eagledale Ferry Dock, located at the end of Taylor Avenue, in the city of Bainbridge Island, Washington State.

(4) The city of Bainbridge Island has adopted a resolution stating that this site should be a National Memorial, and similar resolutions have been introduced in the Washington State Legislature.

(5) Both the Minidoka National Monument and Manzanar National Historic Site can clearly tell the story of a time in our Nation's history when constitutional rights were ignored. These camps by design were placed in very remote places and are not easily accessible. Bainbridge Island is a short ferry ride from Seattle and the site would be within easy reach of many more people.

(6) This is a unique opportunity to create a site that will honor those who suffered, cherish the friends and community who stood beside them and welcomed them home, and inspire all to stand firm in the event our Nation again succumbs to similar fears.

(7) The site should be recognized by the National Park Service based on its high degree of national significance, association with significant events, and integrity of its location and setting. This site is critical as an anchor for future efforts to identify, interpret, serve, and ultimately honor the Nikkei-persons of Japanese ancestry- influence on Bainbridge Island.

SEC. 402. EAGLEDALE FERRY DOCK LOCATION AT TAYLOR AVENUE STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of the Interior shall carry out a special resource study regarding the national significance, suitability, and feasibility of designating as a unit of the National Park System the property commonly known as the Eagledale Ferry Dock at Taylor Avenue and the historical events associated with it, located in the town of Bainbridge Island, Kitsap County, Washington.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after funds are first made available for the study under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Interior shall submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report describing the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the study.

(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDY.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the study under subsection (a) shall be conducted in accordance with section 8(c) of Public Law 91-383 (16 U.S.C. 1a-5(c)).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1894 went to the Subcommittee on National Parks, Recreation and Public Lands, chaired by the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH).

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH).

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Utah for yielding time to me, and I appreciate the opportunity to come to the floor and speak in favor of S. 1894, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would study the feasibility of including the Miami Circle archeological site within Biscayne National Park. This is a good bill, and deserves the support and endorsement of the House.

S. 1894 also contains a title that incorporates the text of H.R. 4622, which I introduced and which was passed in the Committee on Resources back in July. This title would help facilitate and improve the working relationship between gateway communities and Federal land management agencies.

Too often, Federal land management agencies take for granted local gateway communities in their planning and decision-making processes, and this bill would go a long way toward engaging gateway communities as meaningful partners in the planning process. The bill would also provide important assistance to these communities in order to allow them to be meaningful participants in the planning process.

Numerous examples have been provided throughout the country of how cooperative efforts have resulted in positive results, including valuable and important environmental benefits. These are real environmental benefits that would not have been realized if the Federal agencies had not consulted with the local gateway community. Some have made the inaccurate accusation that this bill would provide veto power to gateway communities to prevent Federal agencies from taking a particular action. This is simply not true. There is nothing in this bill that would do that.

However, the premise of the bill is that, just as Federal agencies formally consider impacts upon wildlife, issues of habitat, and natural resource and environmental issues before taking a proposed action, that they should also consider and include gateway communities in their decision-making process. Congress has repeatedly passed laws based upon the supposition that informed decision-making is good decision-making. This bill would simply ensure that that takes place. Cooperation and coordination ought to be the standard operating procedure, rather than simply anecdotal stories of where Federal agencies are doing what they ought to be doing anyway.

Ultimately, the Federal lands and their visitors will benefit from these requirements. For example, transportation plans for Federal lands will be vastly improved when Federal agencies understand, through coordination that has taken place from the earliest stages, where that community plans to direct its own resources and its own traffic outside the park.

It is also interesting to me that some have expressed concern that this bill is flawed because it does not impose new requirements upon a gateway community that would prevent them from going forward with an action unless they have certified that it would not impact a park unit. What this amounts to is that they would like to have veto authority over what takes place outside Federal lands if it is perceived to have an impact upon those lands, but at the same time refuse to allow that simple coordination that must take place with a community as part of the decision-making process.

I believe communities are most likely to take actions that are also in the best interests of the Federal lands when their decision-making rests upon a foundation of cooperation and coordination. Our public lands will be better served by a process that ensures that cooperation and coordination are a standard part of the process.

I am particularly pleased that the ranking Democrat member of the Subcommittee on National Parks, Recreation and Public Lands, the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Ms. CHRISTENSEN), has offered her strong support for this legislation. I appreciate the strong working relationship that we have had with the gentlewoman, and commend her for her efforts in fostering this working relationship. I also appreciate the strong support of the administration for this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for this bill.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as amended, S. 1894 is a package of four pieces of unrelated legislation. The underlying vehicle, S. 1894, authorizes a special resource study to determine the national significance of the Miami Circle, as well as the feasibility of including the site in Biscayne National Park.

In this body, the sponsor of this bill is our dear and departing colleague, the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK). She has worked tirelessly, and I mean tirelessly, on behalf of the House companion to this legislation, and we are eager to see this study move forward as a small part of the huge legacy that will remain once the gentlewoman from Florida retires after this Congress.

We shall miss the gentlewoman in this body, but we know we shall always have her friendship and wisdom as we continue to tackle the issues of this Nation.

Also included in S. 1894 is the text of H.R. 3747, introduced by our colleague on the Committee on Resources, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE). This provision would provide for a special resource study of the Eagledale Ferry Dock located on Bainbridge Island in Washington State.

This package also includes the text of H.R. 4622, legislation sponsored by our colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH). I remain unconvinced that H.R. 4622 is ready to be enacted. However, we support passage of S. 1894, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK).

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), and I want to thank the committee as well. I certainly want to thank him for the very kind remarks he made about me and about my tenure here in the Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Senate bill, S. 1894, which directs the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a feasibility study on the inclusion in Biscayne National Park, Florida, of the archeological site known as the Miami Circle. I am pleased to be a sponsor of the companion bill, H.R. 3630.

I want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) and the ranking member, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), the gentleman from California (Chairman RADANOVICH), and the ranking member, the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN), of the subcommittee, and their respective staffs, for the assistance and cooperation we received in getting this bill to the floor.

I also want to thank the south Florida delegation for their help toward this effort.

Mr. Speaker, to give just a little history on this particular site, in September of 1998, workers were preparing land for development at the mouth of the Miami River and they noticed this mysterious circular formation in the limestone bedrock that forms the foundation of the City of Miami.

Then the archeologists came and looked at this site, and they revealed that this particular site was utilized by the Tequesta civilization 2,000 years ago, perhaps serving as an astronomical tool or as a cultural center for their complex maritime society.

So we in Florida are very pleased to be a part of this archeological finding, bringing about the rediscovering of what happened with the ancient Tequesta Indians over 2000 years ago. I think we have a responsibility to preserve and study remains of our heritage, and S. 1894 would be an important step.

If the National Park Service will conduct a feasibility of this Miami Circle as part of the Biscayne National Park, it will be another fulfillment of what the Park Service should be doing to preserve this historically significant site.

Furthermore, the Miami Circle is not only a site of local and regional significance, but also of national significance. It is believed to be the only cut-in-rock prehistoric structural footprint ever found in North America. This archeological site, which potentially qualifies to be included in the National Register of Historic Places, connects all Americans in a special way to the first inhabitants of our continent. Thus, it is very appropriate, Mr. Speaker, that we study its inclusion to our National Park System. We must take seriously our responsibility as guardians of this cultural landmark.

Mr. Speaker, we need to get this important bill to the President's desk for signature before this Congress adjourns. After all, this is my last Congress, Mr. Speaker. I am disappointed that this amendment that is being placed on it is being proposed. All of these amendments are very good, of course. I would like to see this bill go forward as soon as possible. The inclusion of this other legislation I hope will add to it and not compromise the chances of getting this bill to the President.

I urge the chairman to find a way to get this noncontroversial Miami Circle bill to the President as soon as possible. I thank the chairman and the leadership for scheduling S. 1894.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1894, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GOLDEN GATE NATIONAL RECREATION AREA

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 941) to revise the boundaries of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area in the State of California, to extend the term of the advisory commission for the recreation area, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 941

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—GOLDEN GATE NATIONAL RECREATION AREA

SEC. 101. BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.

Section 2(a) of Public Law 92–589 (16 U.S.C. 460bb–1(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(a)" and inserting "(a) RECREATION AREA LANDS.—";

(2) by striking "The recreation area shall comprise" and inserting the following:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The recreation area shall comprise"; and

(3) by striking "The following additional lands are also" and all that follows through the period at the end of the paragraph and inserting the following:

"(2) ADDITIONAL LAND.—In addition to the land described in paragraph (1), the recreation area shall include—

"(A) the parcels numbered by the Assessor of Marin County, California, 119–040–04, 119–040–05, 119–040–18, 166–202–03, 166–010–06, 166–010–07, 166–010–24, 166–010–25, 119–240–19, 166–010–10, 166–010–22, 119–240–03, 119–240–51, 119–240–52, 119–240–54, 166–010–12, 166–010–13, and 119–235–10;

"(B) land and water in San Mateo County generally depicted on the map entitled 'Sweeney Ridge Addition, Golden Gate National Recreation Area', numbered NRA GG–80,000–A, and dated May 1980;

"(C) land acquired under the Golden Gate National Recreation Area Addition Act of 1992 (16 U.S.C. 460bb–1 note; Public Law 10–299);

"(D) land generally depicted on the map entitled 'Additions to Golden Gate National Recreation Area', numbered NPS–80–076, and dated July 2000/PWR–PLRPC; and

"(E) land generally depicted on the map entitled 'Rancho Corral de Tierra Additions to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area', numbered NPS–80,079A and dated July 2001.

"(3) ACQUISITION AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may acquire land described in paragraph (2)(E) only from a willing seller.".

TITLE II—ADVISORY COMMISSIONS

SEC. 201. GOLDEN GATE NATIONAL RECREATION AREA ADVISORY COMMISSION.

Section 5 of Public Law 92–589 (16 U.S.C. 460bb–4) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking "(b) The Commission" and inserting the following:

"(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission";

(B) by striking "Provided, That the" and all that follows through the period; and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (1) (as designated by subparagraph (A)) the following:

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—In appointing members to the Commission, the Secretary shall ensure that the interests of local, historic recreational users of the recreation area shall be represented."; and

(2) in subsection (g), by striking "thirty years after the enactment of this Act" and inserting "on December 31, 2012".

SEC. 202. MANZANAR NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE ADVISORY COMMISSION.

Section 105(h) of Public Law 102–248 (16 U.S.C. 461 note) is amended by striking "10 years after the date of enactment of this title" and inserting "on December 31, 2012".

TITLE III—YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK

SEC. 301. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The three elementary schools serving the children of employees of Yosemite National Park are served by the Bass Lake Joint Union Elementary School District and the Mariposa Unified School District.

(2) The schools are in remote mountainous areas and long distances from other educational and administrative facilities of the two local educational agencies.

(3) Because of their remote locations and relatively small number of students, schools serving the children of employees of the Park provide fewer services in more basic facilities than the educational services and facilities provided to students that attend other schools served by the two local educational agencies.

(4) Because of the long distances involved and adverse weather and road conditions that occur during much of the school year, it is impractical for the children of employees of the Park who live within or near the Park to attend other schools served by the two local educational agencies.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this title is to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide supplemental funding and other services that are necessary to assist the State of California or local educational agencies in California in providing educational services for students attending schools located within the Park.

SEC. 302. PAYMENTS FOR EDUCATIONAL SERVICES.

(a) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE FUNDS.—For fiscal years 2003 through 2007, the Secretary may provide funds to the Bass Lake Joint Union Elementary School District and the Mariposa Unified School District for educational services to students who are dependents of persons engaged in the administration, operation, and maintenance of the Park or students who live at or near the Park upon real property of the United States.

(b) LIMITATION ON USE OF FUNDS.—Payments made by the Secretary under this section may not be used for new construction, construction contracts, or major capital improvements, and may be used only to pay public employees for services otherwise authorized by this title.

(c) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF FUNDS.—Payments made under this section shall not exceed the lesser of $750,000 in any fiscal year or the amount necessary to provide students described in subsection (a) with educational services that are normally provided and generally available to students who attend public schools elsewhere in the State of California.

(d) ADJUSTMENT OF PAYMENTS.—Subject to subsection (c), the Secretary is authorized to adjust payments made under this section if the State of California or the appropriate local educational agencies do not continue to provide funding for educational services at Park schools at per student levels that are equivalent to or greater than those provided in the fiscal year prior to the date of enactment of this title.

(e) SOURCE OF PAYMENTS.—

(1) AUTHORIZED SOURCES.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), in order to make payments under this section, the Secretary may use funds available to the National Park Service from appropriations, donations, or fees.

(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Funds from the following sources may not be used to make payments under this section:

(A) Fees authorized and collected under the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 460l–4 et seq,).

(B) The recreational fee demonstration program under section 315 of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1996 (as contained in section 101(c) of Public Law 104–134; 16 U.S.C. 460l–6a note).

(C) The national park passport program established under section 602 of the National Parks Omnibus Management Act of 1998 (16 U.S.C. 5992).

(D) Emergency appropriations for Yosemite flood recovery.

(f) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this title, the following definitions apply:

(1) LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.—The term "local educational agencies" has the meaning given that term in section 9101(26) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

(2) EDUCATIONAL SERVICES.—The term "educational services" means services that may include maintenance and minor upgrades of facilities and transportation to and from school.

(3) PARK.—The term "Park" means Yosemite National Park.

(4) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 303. AUTHORIZATION FOR PARK FACILITIES TO BE LOCATED OUTSIDE THE BOUNDARIES OF YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK.

Section 814(c) of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (16 U.S.C. 346e) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting "and Yosemite National Park" after "Zion National Park"; and

(B) by inserting "transportation systems and" before "the establishment of"; and

(2) by striking "park" each place it appears and inserting "parks".

TITLE IV—ESTABLISHMENT OF GOLDEN CHAIN HIGHWAY AS A NATIONAL HERITAGE CORRIDOR STUDY

SEC. 401. STUDY; REPORT.

(a) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date that funds are first made available for this section, the Secretary of the Interior, in consultation with the affected local governments, the State government, State and local historic preservation offices, community organizations, and the Golden Chain Council, shall complete a special resource study of the national significance, suitability, and feasibility of establishing Highway 49 in California, known as the "Golden Chain Highway", as a National Heritage Corridor.

(2) CONTENTS.—The study shall include an analysis of—

(A) the significance of Highway 49 in American history;

(B) options for preservation and use of the highway;

(C) options for interpretation of significant features associated with the highway; and

(D) private sector preservation alternatives.

(3) BOUNDARIES OF STUDY AREA.—The area studied under this section shall be comprised of Highway 49 in California extending from the city of Oakhurst in Madera County to the city of Tuttletown in Tuolumne County, and lands, structures, and cultural resources within the immediate vicinity of the highway.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 30 days after completion of the study required by subsection (a), the Secretary shall submit a report describing the results of the study to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate.

TITLE V—JOHN MUIR NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT

SEC. 501. BOUNDARY ADJUSTMENT.

(a) BOUNDARY.—The boundary of the John Muir National Historic Site is adjusted to include the lands generally depicted on the map entitled "Boundary Map, John Muir National Historic Site" numbered PWR–OL 426–80,044a and dated August 2001.

(b) LAND ACQUISITION.—The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to acquire the lands and interests in lands identified as the "Boundary Adjustment Area" on the map referred to in subsection (a) by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, exchange, or otherwise.

(c) ADMINISTRATION.—The lands and interests in lands described in subsection (b) shall be administered as part of the John Muir National Historic Site established by the Act of August 31, 1964 (78 Stat. 753; 16 U.S.C. 461 note).

TITLE VI—SAN GABRIEL RIVER WATERSHEDS STUDY

SEC. 601. AUTHORIZATION OF STUDY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secretary") shall conduct a special resource study of the following areas:

(1) The San Gabriel River and its tributaries north of and including the city of Santa Fe Springs.

(2) The San Gabriel Mountains within the territory of the San Gabriel and Lower Los Angeles Rivers and Mountains Conservancy (as defined in section 32603(c)(1)(C) of the State of California Public Resource Code).

(b) STUDY CONDUCT AND COMPLETION.—Section 8(c) of Public Law 91–383 (16 U.S.C. 1a–5(c)) shall apply to the conduct and completion of the study required by this section.

(c) CONSULTATION WITH FEDERAL, STATE, AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—In conducting the study authorized by this section, the Secretary shall consult with the San Gabriel and Lower Los Angeles Rivers and Mountains Conservancy and other appropriate Federal, State, and local governmental entities.

(d) CONSIDERATIONS.—In conducting the study authorized by this section, the Secretary shall consider regional flood control and drainage needs and publicly owned infrastructure, including, but not limited to, wastewater treatment facilities.

SEC. 602. REPORT.

Not later than 3 years after funds are made available for this title, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives a report on the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the study.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 941, as ordered reported by the Committee on Resources, not only authorizes the expansion of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area and a 10-year extension of the Manzanar National Historic Site Commission, but it also incorporates the following four new titles:

title III is the text of H.R. 3421 as passed by the House of Representatives authorizing financial assistance for Yosemite National Park schools;

title IV is the amended text of H.R. 3425 as approved by the Committee on Resources authorizing a National Park Service suitability study on a portion of Highway 49 in California;

title V is the text of H.R. 3942 as adopted by the Committee on Resources authorizing a boundary adjustment for the John Muir National Historic Site; and title VI is the text from H.R. 2534 as adopted by the Committee on Resources authorizing a National Park Service special resource study of the San Gabriel River Watershed in California.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is supported by the majority and minority of the committee as well as the administration. I urge my colleagues to support S. 941 as reported.

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, September 23, 2002.

Hon. JAMES V. HANSEN,
Chairman, Committee on Resources,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for S. 941, an act to revise the boundaries of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area in the state of California, to extend the term of the advisory commission for the recreation area, and for other purposes.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contacts are Deborah Reis and Megan Carroll, who can be reached at 226-2860.

Sincerely,

BARRY B. ANDERSON
(For Dan L. Crippen, Director).

Enclosure.

S. 941—An act to revise the boundaries of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area in the state of California, to extend the term of the advisory commission for the recreation area, and for other purposes

Summary: S. 941 would adjust the boundaries of two units of the National Park System, require the National Park Service (NPS) to conduct two studies of potential additions to the park system or its affiliated areas, and authorize the NPS to make payments to certain school districts in California. Assuming appropriation of the necessary or authorized amounts, CBO estimates that implementing the legislation would cost about $21 million over the next five years. Because enactment of title III could increase direct spending, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply, but we estimate that any such increase would be less than $500,000 a year.

Title V of the legislation may contain an intergovernmental or private-sector mandate as defined in the Unfunded Mandates

Reform Act (UMRA), but CBO estimates that the costs of any such mandate would not be significant and would fall well below the thresholds established in UMRA. The thresholds in 2002 are $58 million and $115 million per year, respectively, for intergovernmental and private-sector mandates, adjusted annually for inflation.

Estimated Cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of S. 941 is summarized in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 300 (natural resources and environment).

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—
	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION [1]
Estimated authorization level	17	1	1	1	1
Estimated outlays	9	9	1	1	1

[1] Enacting S. 941 could also affect direct spending, but CBO estimates that such effects would be less than $500,000 a year.

Basis of estimate

Most of the legislation's budgetary effects would stem from changes in discretionary spending. In total, we estimate that implementing those changes would cost about $21 million over the 2003–2007 period.

Golden Gate National Recreation Area (GGNRA) Boundary Adjustment

Title I would expand the boundary of the GGNRA in California to include the 4,262-acre Rancho Corral de Tierra and the 500-acre Devil's Slide area.

Based on information provided by the NPS and assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts, CBO estimates that one-time costs to implement this title would be $15.5 million over the next few years. Of this amount, we estimate that the federal government would spend $15 million to purchase the Rancho Corral de Tierra from a local nonprofit organization. CBO estimates that acquisition of the Devil's Slide area would not have any impact on federal spending because we expect that this acreage would be donated to the NPS by California. The balance of one-time costs—about $0.5 million—would be incurred to develop the property acquired. Finally, we estimate that annual costs to administer the new lands would be between $0.1 million and $0.2 million (or about $1 million in total over the next five years), also assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts.

Yosemite National Park Education Improvement

For each of fiscal years 2003 through 2007, title III would authorize the NPS to pay a total of up of $750,000 to two California school districts that serve the families of Yosemite National Park employees. To make those payments, the title would authorize the agency to use appropriated funds, donations, or offsetting receipts from certain fees that it collects.

Assuming that the NPS would principally rely on appropriated funds to make the authorized payments (because very few collections and donations are available to spend on new activities), CBO estimates that implementing title III would cost $750,000 a year over the next five years, assuming the availability of appropriated funds. That annual discretionary amount could be lower if the NPS would choose to use funds from other authorized sources (such as fees and donations) to make the payments; if so, direct spending could increase. According to the NPS, the agency already has authority to spend nearly all such collections; hence, we estimate that any increase in direct spending of such fees under the legislation would be less than $500,000 a year.

Highway 49 Study

Title IV would require the NPS to prepare a special resource study of Highway 49, in California, to determine the suitability and feasibility of establishing it as a national heritage corridor. The legislation would require the agency to complete the study within one year of receiving funding and to report to the Congress on its findings 30 days later. Based on information provided by the NPS and assuming the availability of appropriated funds, CBO estimates that completing the required study and report would cost the federal government $200,000, mostly in 2003.

John Muir National Historic Site Boundary Adjustment

Title V would adjust the boundary of the John Muir National Historic Site and authorize the NPS to acquire the added 0.2-acre parcel of land by purchase, donation, or exchange. Based on information provided by the NPS, we expect the agency to condemn the small tract to establish its current ownership, which is unknown. Depending on the outcome of the condemnation proceeding, CBO expects that the NPS would then: (1) annex the property without further cost to the government (if no owner is located), (2) accept donation of the tract (if the owner is another government agency), or (3) purchase the property (if a private owner is located). In any event, CBO estimates that the cost of acquiring the property (including legal expenses) would be less than $50,000, assuming the availability of appropriated funds.

San Gabriel River Watersheds Study

Title VI would direct the NPS to conduct a study of two areas to determine the suitability and feasibility of establishing them collectively as a unit of the National Park System. The study areas are composed of certain segments of the San Gabriel Mountains and the San Gabriel River and tributaries in California. The bill would require the department to report findings and recommendations within three years of receiving funding for the study.

Assuming the availability of appropriated funds, CBO estimates that implementing title VI would cost the federal government less than $500,000 over the next three years to complete the required study and report.

Pay-as-you-go considerations: The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act sets up pay-as-you-go procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or receipts. Title III of this legislation, which would authorize the NPS to make payments to certain school districts from available donations or fees, could result in additional direct spending. CBO expects, however, that most of the funding would come from appropriations because very few receipts would be available for this purpose. In any case, we estimate that any increase in direct spending would be less than $500,000 a year.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: Title IV of S. 941 may contain an intergovernmental or private-sector impact as defined in UMRA, but CBO estimates that the costs of any such mandate would not be significant and would fall well below the thresholds established in that act. The annual thresholds in 2002 are $58 million and $115 million, respectively, for intergovernmental and private-sector mandates, adjusted annually for inflation.

Title IV would authorize the NPS to acquire a 0.2-acre parcel of land. Because the owner of this parcel cannot be found, condemnation may be the only course of action for the NPS to gain title. CBO has generally found that when legislation is expected to result in condemnation of property, it contains a mandate. The cost of such a mandate generally is equal to the value of the property. However, because in this case the NPS cannot identify the current owner of the parcel, CBO cannot determine whether this mandate would fall on a government, on the private sector, or on both. In any event, based on information provided by the NPS, CBO estimates that the value of the property is less than $50,000.

The other titles of this act contain no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Previous CBO estimate: CBO has prepared cost estimates for legislation nearly identical to all six titles of S. 941. On August 21, 2001, we submitted an estimate for S. 941 as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources on August 2, 2001. The Senate version of S. 941 contained language very similar to titles I and II of the House version, and the estimated costs for the two versions are identical. We have also prepared cost estimates for four bills as ordered reported by the House Committee on Resources: H.R. 3421, the Yosemite National Park Education Improvement Act, as ordered reported on March 20, 2002 (cost estimated transmitted on April 8, 2002); H.R. 3425, a bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of establishing Highway 49 in California, known as the "Golden Chain Highway," as a National Heritage Corridor, as ordered reported on March 20, 2002 (transmitted on March 28, 2002); H.R. 3942, the John Muir National Historic Site Boundary Adjustment Act, as ordered reported on May 22, 2002 (transmitted on June 14, 2002), and the San Gabriel River Watersheds Study Act of 2002, as ordered reported on July 24, 2002 (transmitted on July 31, 2002). The estimated costs of these earlier versions of legislation are the same as the provisions included in S. 941.

Estimate prepared by: Federal costs: Deborah Reis and Megan Carroll (226–2860); impact on state, local, and tribal governments: Marjorie Miller (225–3220); impact on the private sector: Lauren Marks (226–2940).

Estimate approved by: Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH), the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks, Recreation and Public Lands to explain the bill further.

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, S. 941, as reported by the Committee on Resources, incorporates a number of legislative initiatives affecting California, as just described by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN). For me and my constituents, however, S. 941 is very important for it includes language authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to provide supplemental funding and other educational services for Yosemite Valley, El Portal Elementary, and Wawona Elementary Schools located in or within Yosemite National Park.

Since the devastating 1997 Merced River flood, there has been a dramatic reduction in park employees, and thus, fewer school children attending these schools, and fewer State dollars are committed. The result is that the superintendent for Yosemite National Park and the concessionaire serving park visitors cannot attract first-class candidates to work in the parks because families are not provided adequate schools.

Also included in S. 941 is language authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to locate facilities, including transportation systems, outside the boundaries of Yosemite National Park. This important provision will help continue the successful operations of the Yosemite Area Rapid Transit System, otherwise known as YARTS, which operates in three counties surrounding Yosemite National Park and provides visitors with a convenient alternative transportation system to and from Yosemite National Park.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the other important part of S. 941 is language authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to conduct a feasibility and suitability study of a portion of State Highway 49 in Madera, Mariposa, and Tuolumne Counties, also known as the Golden Chain Highway, as a national heritage corridor.

I urge my colleagues to support S. 941, as amended. I also want to thank Senator FEINSTEIN for her work on this bill in the other body, and again I thank the chairman for yielding me the time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The measure has already been explained by the majority, but I simply want to note that this important legislation is sponsored by our colleagues, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS) and the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS) for her comments and commend her for her excellent leadership on this legislation.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of Senate bill 491, the Rancho Corral De Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act; and in particular, I am very pleased at the efforts made to include my bill, H.R. 2534, the San Gabriel River Watersheds Study Act, to be included in this package.

If passed, the bill directs the Department of Interior to study ways for the more than 2 million people to benefit from a potential recreational and rehabilitated area in the San Gabriel Valley along the San Gabriel River.

I want to personally thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), and the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH) and also the committee staff and in particular my staff person, Heather Taylor, for working tirelessly on this issue. I know that this took a lot of discussion and time, working with the ranking member and the different members of the committee, but it is something that I truly believe will help provide environmental justice to those communities that are currently underserved and would like to see a bit more of open space made available to those communities that are currently underserved.

I encourage Members to support Senate bill 941.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of Senate bill 941, the Rancho Corral De Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act.

In particular, I am very pleased of the efforts to include my bill, H.R. 2534, the San Gabriel River Watersheds Study Act to this important legislation.

If passed, this bill directs the Department of Interior to study ways for the more than 2 million people that reside in the San Gabriel Valley to preserve, restore and create recreational space along the San Gabriel River.

With more people and less space, we have to start planning so that we don't look around one day and realize that all we see are concrete buildings and unwanted development encroaching upon our open space.

This would not only be detrimental to the environmental landscape, it would also hurt the health of the surrounding communities and future generations.

It is time for us to look at ways to make sure that everyone has access to open and recreational space regardless of their socioeconomic background and ethnicity.

This bill is a community effort and benefits an area that is desperately in need of a restored and healthy environmental landscape.

As we move forward with this study, we realize that the road to restore our environment in the San Gabriel Valley will be a long one.

But the destination will be well worth the trip.

I'd like to thank Chairman HANSEN, Ranking Member RAHALL, Congressmen MILLER and RADANOVICH for helping me advance this bill in the interest of my community.

I also thank Senators BOXER and FEINSTEIN for their support of this measure and the people of San Gabriel Valley.

In addition, I'd like to thank my personal staff, Heather Taylor and Yvette Martinez and the Committee Staff—particularly Jim Zoia, Rick Healy, and David Watkins.

And community members like Lara Blakely of the San Gabriel Rivers and Mountains Conservancy and many other leaders that have stepped forward in support of this bill.

I encourage members to support S. 941 and reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS).

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to make a few comments about this legislation.

My legislation adds about 5,000 acres to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area. The beauty of this region is beyond description. A person's soul will soar when they see it. It is stunning panoramic scenery containing flora and ecosystems found nowhere else on the face of this planet.

The legislation will provide recreational opportunities for millions of our Bay Area citizens and visitors. It will link existing county, State, and Federal parklands into a 6,700 acre contiguous, publicly-accessible land. It will link miles of public hiking trails. It will protect four sensitive watersheds containing steelhead trout and coho salmon. It will protect rare and endangered plant and animal species. It will prevent development along our uniquely scenic California coastline, and it will protect sweeping panoramic coastal views and stunning headland scenery.

The legislation will be financed through a public-private partnership: 50 percent Federal funding, 50 percent private and State funding.

It is widely supported throughout our region. Our entire Bay Area congressional delegation are cosponsors of my legislation, as are both California United States Senators.

The legislation is endorsed by the National Park Service, the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors, the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, and Point Reyes National Seashore Advisory Commission and national and local environmental, conservation and civic groups.

I want to express my deep appreciation to my good friend from Utah, the chairman, and to my good friend who is the ranking member; and they have been so helpful in bringing this legislation forward. I want to thank all of my colleagues who have played a role in making this a reality.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of S. 941, the Rancho Corral de Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act. I am the principal sponsor of companion legislation introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives (H.R. 1953) which adds approximately 5,000 acres of pristine natural lands to one of our nation's most visited national parks, the Golden Gate National Recreation Area (GGNRA). The legislation is sponsored in the U.S. Senate by both California Senators DIANNE FEINSTEIN and BARBARA BOXER and has the strong and enthusiastic cosponsorship of the entire Bay Area Congressional Delegation.

Mr. Speaker, the GGNRA is a true national treasure. It provides open space and recreation in the midst of a densely populated urban area. The new addition to the GGNRA covered by this legislation will be accessible to more than 6 million people who live within a one hour's drive of the park and will provide national park programs and experiences to millions of national and international visitors.

The Rancho Corral de Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act will adjust the boundary of the GGNRA to permit the inclusion of breathtakingly beautiful lands along the Pacific Ocean. When combined with already existing state and county parkland it will create 6,700 contiguous acres of publicly accessible land for recreational use. These lands are marked by topographical extremes. They include a dramatic ascent from the Pacific Ocean, 2000 feet high in just over 1 mile—a spectacular sight not duplicated anywhere else in the Park and in few other places on the California coast. The upper parcels of land offer spectacular vistas, sweeping coastal and bay views and stunning headland scenery. On a clear day you can see the San Francisco Bay, the Marin headlands, Mt. Tamalpais, Mt. Diablo, Mt. Hamilton, the Farrallon Islands, Pillar Point and Pigeon Point. Inclusion of these lands would also protect the important habitats of several species of rare, threatened or endangered plants and animals.

This legislation contains three important additions to the GGNRA. The largest parcel, the Rancho Corral de Tierra addition, is one of the largest undeveloped parcels on the San Mateo coast. It is comprised of the four main peaks of Montara Mountain and rises 2,000 feet from sea level. This 4,262-acre property includes a panorama of amazing views, important watersheds, miles of public trails, and an incredible array of wildlife and plantlife. The Rancho Corral de Tierra shares three miles of boundary with the GGNRA. Its relatively untouched upper elevations preserve rare habitat for several threatened and endangered plant and animal species. The property also contains four important coastal watersheds, which proved riparian corridors for steel head trout, coho salmon and other aquatic species.

This legislation also authorizes the National Park Service to include within the GGNRA the Martini Creek-Devil's Slide Bypass right-of-way, which was purchased by the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) to build a highway across Montara Mountain. When San Mateo voters overwhelmingly decided in a local referendum in favor of building the Devil's Slide tunnel rather than the Martini Creek Bypass, this right-of-way became obsolete. This property covers approximately 300 acres and divides the Rancho Corral de Tierra property and connects the proposed additions to the GGNRA to existing State parkland, creating a seamless belt of parkland. Once the GGNRA boundary is adjusted through this legislation to include this right-of-way, Caltrans will be able to donate the property to the National Park Service.

The legislation authorizes the National Park Service to include within the GGNRA boundaries approximately 500 acres of land along the Devil's Slide section of Coastal Highway 1, the scenic highway that winds its way along the entire California coast. These properties will make a logical addition to the park by filling in gaps to adjacent and existing State and Federal parkland. Caltrans either already owns or will acquire these lands when it builds the Devil's Slide tunnel and will then donate these properties for open space use after the tunnel is built. It is not the intention of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, to interfere with Caltran's responsibility for building the tunnel at Devil's Slide. This legislation will simply make it possible for Caltrans or any other state or local agency to donate these properties to the National Park Service when the Devil's Slide tunnel is completed and when the National Park Service has determined that the acquisition of these lands is appropriate.

Mr. Speaker, the Rancho Corral de Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act provides the federal government a unique opportunity to place approximately 5,000 acres of pristine land under permanent protection for the enjoyment of Bay Area residents and visitors. The Peninsula Open Space Trust (POST) acquired the 4,262 acre Rancho Corral de Tierra site for $29.75 million to save the site from development and to preserve it as a natural area. POST is a local land conservancy trust in the San Francisco Bay Area and has a remarkable track record in working with and assisting the federal government with the protection of other important open space in the Bay Area. In 1994, POST negotiated the acquisition and inclusion of the 1,300 acre second-growth redwood-forest Phleger Estate within the GGRNA. POST provided one-half the purchase price of the Phleger Estate through private donations. POST also assisted the federal government with the protection and acquisition of Bair Island, an important wildlife refuge in San Francisco Bay that is now managed by the US Fish and Wildlife Service.

Mr. Speaker, we can accomplish permanent protection of these lands through a unique public-private partnership. Under this legislation, Rancho Corral de Tierra will be preserved through a tripartite partnership between the National Park Service, California State Parks and the Peninsula Open Space Trust. For the Rancho Corral de Tierra property, we will seek 50% of the acquisition from the federal government and 50% through state and private contributions. POST has offered to donate a significant amount towards the federal acquisition of the Rancho Corral de Tierra property through private donations.

Mr. Speaker, the inclusion of these lands on the San Mateo Coastside enjoys strong local support. The Golden Gate National Recreation Area and Point Reyes National Seashore Citizens Advisory Commission adopted a resolution endorsing this legislation after holding a public hearing and receiving public comment from local residents. The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors also passed a resolution supporting enactment of this legislation. The legislation also has the strong support of local environmental advocacy and preservation groups. The proposed additions were studied by POST in accordance with National Park Service criteria and in consultation with National Park Service staff. The study found that the three tracts of land meet the criteria for additions to units of the National Park Service. The study found that the properties will preserve significant natural, scenic and recreational resources that are equal to or unparalleled in the Golden Gate National Recreation Area. The National Park Service testified before Congress that it supports adjusting the boundary of the GGRNA to include these lands.

This legislation will also reauthorize the Golden Gate National Recreation Area and Point Reyes National Seashore Citizens Advisory Commission for an additional 10 years. The Advisory Commission has been an invaluable resource for park management since its inception in 1972. It provides an important forum for the gathering and receipt of public input, public opinion and public comment and allows the park to maintain constructive and informal contacts with both the private sector and other federal, state and local public agencies. The Advisory Commission aids in strengthening the spirit of cooperation between the National Park Service and the public, encourages private cooperation with other public agencies, and assists in developing and ensuring that the park's general management plan is implemented.

Mr. Speaker, preserving our country's unique natural areas must be one of our highest national priorities, and it is one of my highest priorities as a Member of Congress. We must preserve and protect these unique and rare areas for our children and grandchildren today or they will be lost forever. Adding these news lands to the GGNRA will provide greater recreational opportunities for the public to enjoy and will allow us to protect these fragile natural areas from encroaching development or other inappropriate uses which would destroy the scenic beauty and natural character of this key part of the California coast. The California coast is a true national treasure and passage of this important legislation will preserve it for the generations that follow us. I urge my colleague's support of S. 941, the Rancho Corral de Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act of 2001.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 941, the Rancho Corral de Tierra Golden Gate National Recreation Area Boundary Adjustment Act, which will add approximately 5,000 acres to the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, also known as the GGNRA.

First, I thank Chairman RADANOVICH for his work in moving this bill along.

As I've told him any times, this bill is very important to my constituents and all residents of the San Francisco Bay Area.

The strong local support is reflected by the fact that every member of the Bay Area delegation has cosponsored the House companion measure, H.R. 1953, introduced by Representative LANTOS whom I thank for bringing this bill to the floor.

As the Bay Area has grown, our constituents have recognized how precious open, recreational spaces are to the community. Our past leaders had the foresight to create the GGNRA for this purpose.

These ventures don't just happen. It takes people of vision at the local level to recognize the need, to develop a response, and rally support. I'm proud that we have the best . . . Audrey Rust, the President of the Peninsula Open Space Trust (POST). I've had the privilege of working with Ms. Rust on two other major land acquisitions in the Bay Area—the Phleger Estate and Bair Island.

This bill, like the other efforts, is the result of Audrey's leadership and initiative. She spurred the effort to negotiate a deal to purchase land from willing sellers and she gathered community support. She deserves our commendation and our lasting gratitude.

Today, we have the relatively simple task of approving a boundary extension for the Golden Gate recreation area because the hard work was done at the local level.

It's critical that we do so. When we do, we will ensure that adequate recreational space is provided for the public because more than 6 million Bay Area residents live within an hour of the GGNRA.

It's also important to the local environment to acquire this land which is a habitat for ten threatened, endangered, and rare species. With this bill, we can do that. We need to seize this chance or risk losing it, perhaps forever.

Lastly, I note that a number of extraneous provisions, including one regarding Yosemite National Park, have been added to this bill. This means that the bill must go back to the Senate once more. I hope that these new provisions will not mar the laudable Golden Gate provisions.

I'm very pleased, Mr. Speaker, that this bill has been brought to the floor today and I urge all my colleagues to join me in voting for it.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 941, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VICTIMS OF TERRORIST ATTACKS MEMORIAL ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2982) to authorize the establishment of a memorial within the area in the District of Columbia referred to in the Commemorative Works Act as "Area I" or "Area II" to the victims of terrorist attacks on the United States, to provide for the design and construction of such a memorial, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2982

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. AUTHORIZATION OF MEMORIAL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Advisory Board established in section 2(a) is authorized to establish a memorial (referred to hereafter in this Act as the "Memorial") in accordance with this Act on Federal lands administered by the National Park Service in the District of Columbia and its environs (as defined in section 2(e) of the Commemorative Works Act (40 U.S.C. 1002(e)) to victims who died as a result of terrorist acts against the United States or its people, at home or abroad, except those individuals identified by the Attorney General of the United States as participating or conspiring in terrorist-related activities.

(b) DETAIL OF EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary of the Interior (referred to hereafter in this Act as the "Secretary") shall detail to the Advisory Board such support staff as are necessary to assist the members of the Advisory Board in carrying out its responsibilities.

(c) RELATIONSHIP TO THE COMMEMORATIVE WORKS ACT.—The Commemorative Works Act (40 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) shall apply to the Memorial, with the exception of section 3(c) of that Act which shall not apply to the Memorial.

SEC. 2. ADVISORY BOARD.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established an advisory board to be known as the "Victims of Terrorism Memorial Advisory Board" (referred to hereafter in this Act as the "Advisory Board").

(b) MEMBERS.—The Advisory Board shall consist of 13 members who shall be appointed, not later than 3 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, by the President (in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Defense) from interested persons, including representatives of organizations dedicated to assisting victims of terrorism and their families.

(c) CHAIRPERSON.—The Chairperson of the Advisory Board shall be one of its Members elected by a majority of the Members at the first meeting of the Advisory Board.

(d) TERMS; VACANCIES.—Members of the Advisory Board shall serve for the life of the Advisory Board. The President shall make appointments to fill any vacancies that occur.

(e) DUTIES.—The Advisory Board shall—

(1) raise necessary funds to establish, design, construct, and maintain the Memorial; and

(2) begin consultation under section 7 of the Commemorative Works Act not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(f) DONATIONS.—The Advisory Board may accept donations on behalf of the United States for the establishment, design, construction, and maintenance of the Memorial.

(g) TERMINATION.—The Advisory Board shall terminate not later than 120 days after completion of the Memorial.

(h) FACA.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to the Advisory Board.

SEC. 3. DEPOSIT OF EXCESS FUNDS.

If, upon payment of all expenses of the establishment of the Memorial (including the maintenance and preservation amount provided for in section 8(b) of the Commemorative Works Act), or upon expiration of the authority for the Memorial under section 10(b) of that Act, there remains a balance in the funds received under section 3(f) for maintenance of the Memorial, the Chairperson of the Advisory Board shall transfer the amount of the balance to the Secretary of the Treasury for deposit in the account provided for in section 8(b)(1) of that Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 2982, introduced by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER), who has worked so tirelessly on this legislation, and sponsored by myself and over 121 Members of the House of Representatives, would establish a memorial to the victims who died as a result of terrorist acts against the United States or its people.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER) went out of his way to do an exceptionally fine job on this legislation. One of the most interesting hearings we have had in the Committee on Resources was put on by him. It included Lisa Beamer whose husband Todd was part of Flight 93 that crashed in Pennsylvania and coined that phrase, "Let's roll," with the President standing there in front of the Chair where he sat.

Mr. Brady Howell, whose wife, Liz, works for us in the Committee on Resources. Brady was the all-American boy. He was an Eagle Scout. He was a four-point student. He was the quarterback. He was the student body president. He was a missionary for his church. He did everything one can imagine and had a great sense of humor.

Mr. Joe Finley, a New York firefighter, who, with most of his squadron was killed on that tragic day.

Lieutenant Colonel Terry Andersen, who went into the Pentagon and saved many people and worked diligently. So many illustrations of honor.

This bill would authorize a memorial to victims who died as a result of terrorism against the United States or its people at home or abroad, except those individuals identified as participating or conspiring on terrorist-related activities.

Mr. Speaker, the great memorials that dot the landscape of our Nation's capital reflect the course of American history and are a constant reminder of our commitment to freedom, justice and democracy. We see these shared values in our monuments to great leaders, and we see them in our memorials to the soldiers who died in great wars fought in Europe, in the Pacific, in Korea and in Vietnam.

The new war of the 21st century, this war on terrorism, will not be marked by one geographic location. It is a global war that has been, is being, and will be fought at home and abroad. Already thousands of people have lost their lives to terrorist attacks on the United States. These victims of terrorist attacks deserve solemn tribute, for they died at the hands of enemies of America because they were simply Americans.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2982 would authorize the establishment of an advisory board to raise funds for the design, construction, and maintenance of a living memorial, and to work with the National Capital Memorial Commission and the Secretary of the Interior on the placement of the memorial.

H.R. 2982 will honor those Americans whose lives have been lost to terrorism and will symbolize the great struggle in which we are now engaged. Someday this memorial will mark the time and the course of history when freedom and respect for the dignity of man overcame tyranny and hate and evil. Indeed, it will stand for the age when America faced its greatest challenge.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2982, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, while the text of this legislation refers to a memorial intended to honor anyone who has ever been the victim of a terrorist attack on the United States, our hearings on this measure focused on the victims of the September 11 hijackings and attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. Those events are the catalysts for this legislation.

While it has been said often, it cannot be said often enough: our thoughts and prayers continue to go out to those affected by the events of that awful day. While we as a nation have attempted to go on with our lives, the tragedy and loss of that day are never far from our hearts or minds.

The scope and severity of that terrible tragedy make it difficult to know how best to memorialize those who were lost.

Mr. TURNER's bill is one approach and we will support it, but there may be others.

It is our hope that, over time, we may all gain the wisdom and perspective to devise a memorial, or series of memorials, that will tell the story of these attacks, the people who were lost, their families and our resulting efforts to end the threat of terrorism, in such a way that future generations will never forget these events.

Better yet, if we do it right, perhaps such a memorial could, in some small way, reduce the chance that a future generation will have to endure such a tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER), who is the author of this legislation, who has worked so hard; and I commend him for bringing this legislation to us today.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an occasion when we all would join together in remembrance of those who lost their lives on September 11, as well as those who have lost their lives in other incidences to the acts of terrorism, and I want to thank the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) for joining with me in sponsoring this bill. We have had numerous Members who have joined together with us and who contributed to the product that we have before us today.

I particularly want to thank the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), the ranking Democrat, for his leadership. I want to thank the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH), and the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN), the ranking member of the subcommittee. Each of them contributed to the product that we have before us today, along with the 121 cosponsors who have joined with us.

I also want to acknowledge the help of some outstanding staffers, the majority staff member Ron Howarth who has worked so hard to be sure that this bill was in the proper form because of many complex issues that we deal with when we establish a memorial here in Washington. I also want to thank Trent Ashby and Amy Valentine of my staff for their work.

We know that 2 weeks ago we observed the one-year anniversary of the September 11 attacks on our Nation. It was on that date in 2001 that our Nation was made acutely aware of the threats posed by those who seek to destroy our way of life.

Since then we have come together as a Nation and remembered those who lost their lives and we have pledged jointly an unwavering resolve to win the war on terrorism no matter what the cost and no matter how long it takes. This legislation which was introduced by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and me would authorize the establishment of a national memorial to all the victims of terrorism in attacks against the United States or its people including those who died on September 11.

It has been said that the war on terrorism may be known as the first war of the 21st century. It will not be marked by any specific geographic location because it is global. It has been and will be fought at home and abroad. This national memorial created by this bill will be dedicated to the memory of those victims who lose their lives and have lost their lives at the hands of terrorists. The memorial will reflect, in my view, the history of the struggle in which we are engaged, and it will remind future generations of the challenges that we faced and the challenges that we have overcome through courage and bravery of the American people.

As the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) mentioned, this legislation creates a 13-member advisory board appointed by the President and includes representatives from organizations dedicated to assisting the victims of terrorism. The advisory board is charged with the duty of raising the funds from private sources to establish, design, construct and maintain this memorial. In accordance with the Commemorative Works Act, the advisory board will consult with the appropriate commissions already provided by existing law regarding the site selection and design of this memorial.

When the House Committee on Resources held its hearing on this bill, we were honored, as the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) mentioned, to hear from several outstanding Americans whose lives, like so many Americans, were personally and forever changed on September 11. Their testimony spoke eloquently of the significance of a national memorial to the victims of terrorism.

Liz Howell, who is on the staff of the Committee on Resources, whose husband, Brady, died at the Pentagon, said so eloquently "I believe a national monument to terrorism would become a hallowed place for the people of this generation to remember and grieve. Perhaps even more importantly, it will teach future generations about the heroism, the sacrifice, and the patriotism that surrounded the deaths of people who simply died because they were Americans." That quote from Liz Howell represents, I think, so very eloquently the purposes embodied in this legislation.

We heard from Lisa Beamer, whose husband Todd was among the heroes of flight 93. We had Joe Finley, a New York firefighter, who testified on behalf of this legislation, who lost many in his fire house who sacrificed their lives at the World Trade Center. Lt. Col. Ted Anderson, who rushed into the fiery flames of the Pentagon, saving many of his friends and colleagues there, spoke of a need for a national memorial. They all shared their hopes that this memorial would not only be a tribute to those who lost their lives but a constant reminder to the American people of the importance of courage, bravery, and patriotism.

It is my hope that at some point in the future this memorial will mark a time in the course of our history when freedom and respect for the dignity of man overcame hate and evil. It will stand for the period in our history when our country stood tall, persevered and protected peace and civility for all mankind.

Mr. Speaker, we hope that the House will join us in unanimously supporting this legislation to create this memorial to the victims of terrorism.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I want to offer my thanks to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), who is a cosponsor of this bill with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER), and of course to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) for bringing this bill forward. I think we owe special thanks to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER), whose initial idea this was. I owe particular thanks to the gentleman.

First, let me say that this was not just a bright idea. Memorializing the victims of the war on terrorism is the least we can do. But I very much appreciate the spirit in which the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER) has approached this bill unintentionally in the beginning largely because most Members do not deal with the Commemorative Works Act. This bill came forward in the way one might expect, but inherent in it were three violations of the Commemorative Works Act and now two of three of those violations are gone because the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER) in fact has diligently consulted with the National Capital Planning Commission, with other Members of Congress.

Initially there was a violation of the 25-year rule, had Congress approving the location, and the legislation had a specified area. All that may seem reasonable to Members of Congress, but Congress in its wisdom, because it knew that bills would come forward all of the time like this and that somebody had to referee where on the limited space the memorial should go, gave that responsibility over to an agency that could look at the whole mall, the National Capital Planning Commission, the Fine Arts Commission. The reason the monumental presence is monumental is because we do not micromanage it.

I am going to support this bill with some reservation that it continues to violate the 25-year rule. I want to give Members some context for that. A bill was brought forward early in this Congress to establish a Ronald Reagan memorial on the mall. The Bush administration did not support it because it did not want to set that precedent and it is sufficient to say did not support violating the 25-year rule. Nobody who remembers the tenure of Ronald Reagan both in this city and out of the country can doubt that his legacy will withstand the 25-year rule. The World War II memorial is going up now, more than 25 years after World War II. No one has pressed forward an Oklahoma City memorial though that was one of America's great tragedies of the 20th century. The Martin Luther King memorial could not be built until 25 years after his death.

I say all this because the House needs to understand the context and why it is this way. We lost a number of residents in 9/11. A number of those working in the Pentagon came right from the District of Columbia. The most visible ones were three children and their three teachers. I certainly want to see them memorialized on the mall. The context, though, we have to understand is what is happening to the mall. We literally are in danger in one generation of using up virtually all the prime space of the mall. Yet the mall was meant for eternity. That is why there is a 25-year rule. We must not get to where London is now. London is having to tear down memorials in order to allow memorials to go up. That is not the only reason Commemorative Works Act has a 25-year rule that says to Congress step back, and the reason that Congress has stepped back in each and every occasion, the pain of a memorial may be fresh, the reputation of a personage needs time to gel. History needs to inform us and see in context what it is we want to do.

The Chair of the National Capital Planning Commission, John Cogbill, III, appointed by President Bush, did send to the House a letter in which he took exception to the bill on the basis of the three violations I have noted. I am very, very pleased that most serious of the exceptions that the bill initially put forward have been rectified. We know that memorials are best when there is a nationwide competition, when people who have looked at memorials over time can look and bring their expertise to bear, and that is going to happen here. We know that we cannot sit here and say where a memorial should be built, that we have got to trust those with whom we have delegated this responsibility. That is gone.

I will submit for the RECORD the letter of Mr. Cogbill so that the RECORD can be fully informed with respect to these three problems that the initial bill has.

Mr. Speaker, I want to once again express my appreciation to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and certainly to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER) for the great sensitivity they both have shown in designing this bill. I support the bill with the reservations I have noted.

The letter previously referred to is as follows:

NATIONAL CAPITAL PLANNING COMMISSION
Washington, DC, March 19, 2002.

Re Terrorism Memorial
Hon. JAMES V. HANSEN,
Chairman, Committee on Resources,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN HANSEN I am writing to express the concerns of the National Capital Planning Commission with regard to H.R. 2982, a bill that would authorize a memorial in Washington, D.C. to victims of terrorist attacks on the United States.

The Commission mourns the tragic loss of life resulting from terrorist attacks on the United States, including the atrocities committed on September 11th, when terrorists orchestrated the most devastating attack on American soil in our nation's history. We share the desire to find appropriate ways to remember and honor the victims, but we urge that, consistent with the Commemorative Works Act (CWA), sufficient time be allowed to pass so that these tragic events are put in proper historical perspective before commencing the process of locating and designing such an important national memorial.

As you are aware, the process for establishing memorials in the Nation's Capital is governed by the CWA. By setting forth criteria for the subject matter, location, and design of memorials, the CWA is intended to preserve the integrity of the L'Enfant and McMillan Plans for the Nation's Capital, while protecting and maintaining the limited amount of open space available on and around the Mall.

The Commission is concerned that H.R. 2982 circumvents one of the key provisions of the CWA, the 25-year waiting period for the authorization of new memorials in the Nation's Capital. The purpose of this provision, which states that a memorial "shall not be authorized" by Congress until at least 25 years after the death of the individual or event, is to ensure that enough time passes following an event for policymakers and historians to gain an appropriate historical perspective before establishing a permanent memorial in the Nation's Capital.

Just as with other tragedies in American history—from Gettysburg to Pearl Harbor to Oklahoma City—a more meaningful and appropriate place to honor victims at this time might be at the sites of the tragedies themselves. Congress has already authorized legislation for a memorial at the Pentagon, and permanent memorials at the World Trade Center and at the Pennsylvania crash site are currently being considered.

Other provisions of H.R. 2982 are also inconsistent with the CWA. In order to help preserve the limited number of sites available in area I (sites on or near the Mall), the CWA requires passage of a separate act of Congress, following a recommendation by the National Capital Memorial Commission, before locating a memorial in this prominent area. Yet this bill directly authorizes the memorial to locate in area I, overriding the requirement for a second round of consideration by Congress. In addition, the bill suggests that any specific location for the memorial be "approved by the Congress," again contrary to the CWA, which delegates to the federal land-holding and review agencies decisions as to the specific location and design of new memorials.

The Monumental Core of our Nation's Capital has evolved over the centuries into a powerful expression of our nation's values, achievements, losses, and challenges. By respecting the process established by the CWA, we can ensure that the victims of terrorist acts against our country are properly memorialized and, at the same time, the historical integrity of our grand Monumental Core is preserved.

Sincerely,

JOHN V. COGBILL, III,
Chairman.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2982, the Victims of Terrorist Attacks Memorial Act which will establish a memorial in Washington, DC to honor those Americans whose lives were tragically taken as a result of terrorism.

At the Murrah Building in Oklahoma, the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and in the fields of Pennsylvania, our Nation has witnessed the best and the worst of humanity. These despicable and cowardly terrorist acts were valiantly countered with the incredible heroism and courage of not only our firefighters, law enforcement officers, and emergency personnel but also our fellow citizens.

Accordingly, it is incumbent upon our Nation to honor those departed heroes. Establishing a memorial in honor of those deserving men and women will be a fitting tribute to their memory and their contribution to our Nation's freedom. Moreover, it will act as a permanent reminder to our Nation and the world that our Nation is engaged in an ongoing battle in the name of those who were taken from us to rid the world of these most heinous of crimes. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2982. This legislation will authorize a memorial in Washington, DC, to commemorate American victims of terrorist attacks. The desire to memorialize the victims of the September 11th terrorist attacks was the driving force behind this bill, and as an original cosponsor, I applaud my colleagues bringing this bill to the floor today.

I have met with families in my district who lost loved ones in the attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, and I have tried to help them with legislation that will ease their financial burden. I am hopeful that this bill will help them in a different way. I want them to know that the American people support them, and this memorial will show them that their husbands, wives, sons, daughters, brothers and sisters will never be forgotten.

This memorial, however, is not only for the victims of terrorist attacks and their families. It is a memorial for every person in our nation. It will give the people of the United States a site to pay their respects to the victims. It will serve as an area for mourning. It will also be a place to remember. I am hopeful that the memorial will also be a space were people can see the American spirit, which cannot be defeated, to take comfort in America's resolve and the inevitable triumph of freedom.

The September 11, 2001 attacks changed every American life. It was the saddest and most enraging day in many of our lives. It is appropriate that we build this memorial to commemorate not the attacks, not response, not the war, but the victims of the attacks.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2982, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

ALLEGHENY PORTAGE RAILROAD NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE BOUNDARY REVISION ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4682) to revise the boundary of the Allegheny Portage Railroad National Historic Site, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4682

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Allegheny Portage Railroad National Historic Site Boundary Revision Act".

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) HISTORIC SITE.—The term "historic site" means the Allegheny Portage Railroad National Historic Site in Blair and Cambria Counties, Pennsylvania, established pursuant to Public Law 88–546 (78 Stat. 752; 16 U.S.C. 461 note).

(2) MAP.—The term "Map" means the map entitled "Allegheny Portage Railroad National Historic Site, Blair and Cambria Counties, Pennsylvania", numbered NERO 423/80,014 and dated May 01.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the National Park Service.

SEC. 3. REVISION OF HISTORIC SITE BOUNDARIES.

(a) LANDS EXCLUDED FROM AND ADDED TO HISTORIC SITE.—The boundary of the historic site is hereby revised—

(1) by deleting—

(A) the approximately 3.09 acres depicted on the Map as tracts 105–21 and 105–15; and

(B) the approximately 7.26 acres depicted on the Map as tract 102–42; and

(2) by adding—

(A) the approximately 42.42 acres depicted on the map as tract 101–09; and

(B) the approximately 15 acres depicted on the map as tract 104–07.

(b) AUTHORIZATION FOR ACQUISITIONS.—

(1) ACQUISITION 1.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire, from willing owners only, the approximately 98 acres depicted on the Map as tract 103–07 in exchange for the approximately 108 acres depicted on the Map as tracts 102–38 and 103–04.

(B) EQUALIZATION OF VALUES.—If the values of the tracts to be exchanged under subparagraph (A) are not equal, the difference may be equalized by donation, payment using donated or appropriated funds, or the conveyance of additional land.

(2) ACQUISITION 2.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire by exchange or donation, from willing owners only, the lands included within the boundary of the tract described in subsection (a)(2)(B).

(c) REVISION OF BOUNDARIES AFTER ACQUISITIONS.—Upon completion of the exchange under subsection (b)(1), the boundaries of the historic site shall be revised, as appropriate—

(1) by, adding the land acquired by the United States; and

(2) by deleting the land that is no longer owned by the United States.

SEC. 4. AVAILABILITY OF MAP.

A copy of the Map shall be on file and available for inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

SEC. 5. ADMINISTRATION OF ACQUIRED LANDS.

Lands and interests in lands added to the historic site under this Act shall be administered by the Secretary as part of the historic site in accordance with applicable laws and regulations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

H.R. 4682, introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) would revise the boundary of the Allegheny Portage Railroad National Historic Site. The Allegheny Portage Railroad, located in southwestern Pennsylvania, was the first railroad constructed over the Allegheny Mountains. The railroad helped to facilitate trade in the area and open the interior of the United States to settlement and was considered a technological wonder of its day because of its unique construction. The bill authorizes the acquisition of approximately 98 acres in exchange for nearly 108 acres. This will help facilitate access for a property owner that had previously been landlocked.

The bill authorizes the Secretary to acquire a tract from the State of Pennsylvania Game Lands Commission to help facilitate the development of the Harrisburg to Pittsburgh Millennium Trail. The bill comes to the floor with an amendment correcting some technical errors.

This is a good bill and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

This bill sponsored by my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), that alone makes it worthy of consideration by this body. I commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his excellent effort on behalf of this important national historic site, and I urge passage.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4682, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLARIFYING TAX TREATMENT OF BONDS AND OTHER OBLIGATIONS ISSUED BY GOVERNMENT OF AMERICAN SAMOA

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1448) to clarify the tax treatment of bonds and other obligations issued by the Government of American Samoa, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1448

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. CLARIFICATION OF TAX TREATMENT OF BONDS AND OTHER OBLIGATIONS ISSUED BY GOVERNMENT OF AMERICAN SAMOA.

(a) EXEMPTION OF ALL BONDS FROM INCOME TAXATION BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—Subsection (b) of section 202 of Public Law 98-454 (48 U.S.C. 1670) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) EXEMPTION OF ALL BONDS FROM INCOME TAXATION BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The interest on any bond or other obligation issued by or on behalf of the Government of American Samoa shall be exempt from taxation by the Government of American Samoa and the governments of any of the several States, the District of Columbia, any territory or possession of the United States, and any subdivision thereof.

"(2) EXEMPTION APPLICABLE ONLY TO INCOME TAXES.—The exemption provided by paragraph (1) shall not apply to gift, estate, inheritance, legacy, succession, or other wealth transfer taxes.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This Act shall apply to obligations issued after the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1448, a bill to clarify the tax treatment of bonds and other obligations issued by the Government of American Samoa. This bill, introduced by the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA), permits interest earned on bonds issued by the American Samoa Government to be exempt from both State and local taxation. Passage of H.R. 1448 will provide American Samoa parity in the tax treatment of their bonds with all of the other U.S. territories.

The bill was considered by both the Committee on Resources and the Committee on the Judiciary, which both reported out the identical text which is before the House today. I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) for his cooperation in scheduling this bill today, and I ask Members to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) to explain the legislation, and commend the gentleman for his leadership.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, this legislation has taken a roundabout journey through our committee system, particularly because the issue involves the issuance of bonds. As such, the bill was referred concurrently to the Committee on Ways and Means, as well as to the Committee on the Judiciary. But I am extremely happy and gratified that H.R. 1448 has received the approval and referral from the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on the Judiciary to the Committee on Resources, and I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) and the ranking member, the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL), for their approval and referral of H.R. 1448 to the Committee on Resources.

Mr. Speaker, I also thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), of the Committee on the Judiciary for their support and referral of this legislation.

In particular, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT) of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law for the comprehensive work they have done to ensure that H.R. 1448 will not conflict with other Federal laws relative to bond issues.

I want to commend these gentlemen and their staffs for all of the work that they have done to bring this bill not only before the Committee on Resources, but now for House consideration.

Mr. Speaker, under U.S. law, the territories of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands currently have the authority to issue municipal bonds to foster a broad range of economic activity. These bonds are exempt from income taxation by the Federal Government, State governments, territorial governments, municipal governments and the District of Columbia government.

However, the U.S. Territory of American Samoa also has the authority to issue bonds, but the interest earned from American Samoa bonds is subject to taxation by State and municipal governments. H.R. 1448 amends U.S. law and provides parity and equity for American Samoa by allowing interest earned on bonds issued by the American Samoa Government to be exempt from State, local and territorial taxation. In other words, H.R. 1448 will grant to American Samoa the same authority already held by the Northern Mariana Islands, Guam, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. This legislation will make American Samoa bonds more attractive to investors, and can provide an additional source of funds for the American Samoa Government.

The Governor of the Government of American Samoa has indicated that the local government could have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest costs if the interest on the bonds the government issued in 2000 would have been tax exempt.

The local power authority, a semi-autonomous government agency, would also like to sell bonds to purchase new diesel generator sets to accommodate the territory's growing population and utility needs. This legislation will lower the interest costs of these prospective sales, and will enable the local government to address deficiencies in its current infrastructure.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1448 is an early step toward providing the Government of American Samoa with additional assistance in improving the government's financial condition, which will have a direct and positive impact on the people of American Samoa.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation deserves support of this body, and I ask my colleagues to vote in favor of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, we have an expression on the islands, and this may be the last time I have a chance to say a few words in this body, and the saying is "aua e te seluselu mai a'u," which means do not try to comb my hair or do not try to butter me up. I realize that this may not be the last piece of legislation that the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) will be chairing or managing on the floor of the House, but I want to say to my colleagues, for almost 14 years, serving as a member of the Committee on Resources, it has been my privilege and personal honor to have known the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN). The gentleman from Utah served previously as the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, and having served as the ranking member at that time, I enjoyed tremendously not only the gentleman's outstanding leadership qualities, but also that he was always fair with me on many, many series of hearings and deliberations that were held when the gentleman served as the subcommittee chairman.

Even in the gentleman's capacity as full committee chairman, I want to say that the gentleman from Utah has always been willing to assist members with their proposed bills, and his demonstrated leadership in this institution will certainly be missed, certainly by this Member, and I am sure that the same feeling exists among all Members.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that I have no more alumni from the University of Utah to pick on, especially when Utah always loses to the BYU Cougars. I want to say on behalf of this Member, Mr. Speaker, we are certainly going to miss the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1448, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

VANCOUVER NATIONAL HISTORIC RESERVE AUTHORIZATION

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2099) to amend the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 to provide adequate funding authorization for the Vancouver National Historic Reserve, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2099

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INCREASE IN AUTHORIZATION FOR RESERVE.

Section 502(d) of division I of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (16 U.S.C. 461 note; 110 Stat. 4154) is amended by striking "$5,000,000" and all that follows through the period and inserting "$15,000,000 for development costs associated with capital projects consistent with the cooperative management plan, except that the Federal share of such development costs shall not exceed 50 percent of the total costs.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2099, introduced by the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD) and amended by the Committee on Resources, increases the funding authorization for the Vancouver National Historic Reserve to $15 million for development costs associated with capital projects consistent with the cooperative management plans for the site, and the Federal share of such costs will not exceed 50 percent of the total costs. The changes made by the committee concur with the actions by the other body on S. 1649.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2099, as amended, is supported by both the majority and the minority. I urge Members to support H.R. 2099, as amended.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the majority has already explained this legislation. We support it. I urge its passage, and I commend the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD) for the gentleman's leadership in bringing this bill to our attention.

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2099, legislation that would increase by $10 million the authorization for federal spending on preserving and rehabilitating the Vancouver National Historic Reserve.

Fort Vancouver, located on the banks of the Columbia River, is perhaps the most significant historic site in the Pacific Northwest. It is rich in national historic and cultural significance, pre-dating the arrival of Lewis and Clark through the mid-20th century. Before the arrival of the American traders and well before the Lewis and Clark expedition arrived, this site on the shore of the Columbia River was home to a variety of Native American Indian tribes for over 10,000 years, including the Cascades, Chehalis, Chinook, Clallam, Cowlitz, Klickitat, Nisqually, Tillamook, and Shasta tribes. Fort Vancouver was also headquarters for the Hudson's Bay Company's Columbia Department, embracing present-day British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Idaho. The trading post, which was the center of the region's fur trading enterprise, represented Britain's business and governmental interests in competition with the United States. The 1846 treaty between Great Britain and the United States established today's northernmost boundary at the 49th parallel.

The Vancouver Barracks was established in 1849 when the first contingent of U.S. Army troops arrived in the newly acquired American lands. From 1849 until World War I, during which time some of the Army's most promising officers (including Ulysses S. Grant, Phillip Sheridan, George McClellan and George C. Marshall) were stationed at Vancouver, the barracks was the principal military headquarters for the Pacific Northwest. As a result of its national significance, the site was designated by Congress as a National Historic Monument in 1948, and later as a National Historic Site. The 55-acre Vancouver Barracks contains 32 structures, many of which have been determined to be eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places, including several rare examples of military architecture.

The Vancouver National Historic Reserve was designated by Congress in 1996 for the coordinated preservation, public use and management of historic sites within the Vancouver area. The Reserve was established as a partnership among the landowners in the Reserve, which include the National Park Service, the City of Vancouver, the U.S. Army and the Washington State Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation. The 366 acre Historic Reserve contains the Fort Vancouver National Historic Site, Vancouver Barracks, Officers Row, Pearson Field, the Water Resources Center and portions of the Columbia river waterfront.

H.R. 2099 seeks to preserve the Vancouver Barracks for future generations. The 1996 Act that created the Historic Reserve provided an initial $5 million authorization for capital projects, which has been fully appropriated. It is important to note that a provision was included in the Fiscal Year 2002 Interior Appropriations bill which essentially says there would be no further federal appropriations for capital projects within the Vancouver National Historic Reserve unless and until a new "authorization" for capital projects is approved by Congress. Of great importance to my congressional district, to the Pacific Northwest and our nation, H.R. 2099, as amended by the House Resources Committee, would increase from $5 million to $15 million the authorization of appropriations for development costs associated with capital projects at the Vancouver National Historic Reserve.

For over half a century local, state and federal government agencies, along with numerous private individuals and organizations, have been collaborating to preserve and interpret the history of the Vancouver area and the region. During the past 15 years, in excess of $30 million has been invested in property improvements and projects within the present Historic Reserve boundaries. The federal government has provided approximately 25% of the capital funds for these efforts. The remaining 75% has been provided by local and state governments, foundations such as the locally based Vancouver National Historic Trust, and numerous other individuals, businesses and not-for-profit organizations.

The Vancouver Barracks adaptive Reuse and Economic Analysis completed in early 2000 determined the need for additional rehabilitation of buildings and adaptations necessary for new uses in the West Barracks area. The City of Vancouver has committed $6 million for infrastructure improvements, the state of Washington has committed $6 million for educational uses, and private donations will make up an additional $8 million for building preservation efforts. The increase in federal authorization of $10 million that is contained in H.R. 2099 will be used to match nonfederal funding for the West Barracks project. This federal funding has been deemed key to successful private fund-raising efforts, securing tenants for the property, minimizing the impact of inflation and avoiding additional serious property deterioration.

Finally, I would like to give a word of thanks to our partners who have helped us get to this point. I would be remiss if I did not thank Chairmen HANSEN and RADANOVICH and Representatives RAHALL and CHRISTENSEN for their assistance in bringing this bill to the House floor for consideration. On behalf of all the community leaders who have worked on this project. I want to especially thank Vancouver Mayor Royce Pollard and Bruce Hagensen, the former Mayor and current Board Member of the Vancouver National Historic Reserve Trust.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage passage of H.R. 2099.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2099, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK LAND EXCHANGE

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1105) to provide for the expeditious completion of the acquisition of State of Wyoming lands within the boundaries of Grand Teton National Park, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1105

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK LAND EXCHANGE

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) FEDERAL LANDS.—The term "Federal lands" means public lands as defined in section 103(e) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1702(e)).

(2) GOVERNOR.—The term "Governor" means the Governor of the State of Wyoming.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

(4) STATE LANDS.—The term "State lands" means lands and interest in lands owned by the State of Wyoming within the boundaries of Grand Teton National Park as identified on a map titled "Private, State & County Inholdings Grand Teton National Park", dated March 2001, and numbered GTNP/0001.

SEC. 102. ACQUISITION OF STATE LANDS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION TO ACQUIRE LANDS.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire approximately 1,406 acres of State lands within the exterior boundaries of Grand Teton National Park, as generally depicted on the map referenced in section 101(4), by any one or a combination of the following—

(1) donation;

(2) purchase with donated or appropriated funds; or

(3) exchange of Federal lands in the State of Wyoming that are identified for disposal under approved land use plans in effect on the date of enactment of this Act under section 202 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1712) that are of equal value to the State lands acquired in the exchange.

(b) IDENTIFICATION OF LANDS FOR EXCHANGE.—In the event that the Secretary or the Governor determines that the Federal lands eligible for exchange under subsection (a)(3) are not sufficient or acceptable for the acquisition of all the State lands identified in section 101(4), the Secretary shall identify other Federal lands or interests therein in the State of Wyoming for possible exchange and shall identify such lands or interests together with their estimated value in a report to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives. Such lands or interests shall not be available for exchange unless authorized by an Act of Congress enacted after the date of submission of the report.

SEC. 103. VALUATION OF STATE AND FEDERAL INTERESTS.

(a) AGREEMENT ON APPRAISER.—If the Secretary and the Governor are unable to agree on the value of any Federal lands eligible for exchange under section 102(a)(3) or State lands, then the Secretary and the Governor may select a qualified appraiser to conduct an appraisal of those lands. The purchase or exchange under section 102(a) shall be conducted based on the values determined by the appraisal.

(b) NO AGREEMENT ON APPRAISER.—If the Secretary and the Governor are unable to agree on the selection of a qualified appraiser under subsection (a), then the Secretary and the Governor shall each designate a qualified appraiser. The two designated appraisers shall select a qualified third appraiser to conduct the appraisal with the advice and assistance of the two designated appraisers. The purchase or exchange under section 102(a) shall be conducted based on the values determined by the appraisal.

(c) APPRAISAL COSTS.—The Secretary and the State of Wyoming shall each pay one-half of the appraisal costs under subsections (a) and (b).

SEC. 104. ADMINISTRATION OF STATE LANDS ACQUIRED BY THE UNITED STATES.

The State lands conveyed to the United States under section 102(a) shall become part of Grand Teton National Park. The Secretary shall manage such lands under the Act of August 25, 1916 (commonly known as the "National Park Service Organic Act") and other laws, rules, and regulations applicable to Grand Teton National Park.

SEC. 105. AUTHORIZATION FOR APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the purposes of this title.

TITLE II—JAMES V. HANSEN SHOSHONE NATIONAL TRAIL

SEC. 201. SHOSHONE NATIONAL TRAIL.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) APPROPRIATE SECRETARY.—The term "appropriate Secretary" means—

(A) the Secretary of Agriculture when referring to land under the jurisdiction of that Secretary; and

(B) the Secretary of the Interior when referring to any land except that under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

(2) MAP.—The term "Map" means the map entitled "James V. Hansen Shoshone National Trail" and dated April 5, 2002.

(3) TRAIL.—The term "Trail" means the system of trails designated in subsection (b) as the James V. Hansen Shoshone National Trail.

(b) DESIGNATION.—The trails that are open to motorized use pursuant to applicable Federal and State law and are depicted on the Map as the Shoshone National Trail are hereby designated as the "James V. Hansen Shoshone National Trail".

(c) MANAGEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this title, the appropriate Secretary shall manage the Trail consistent with the requirements of a national recreation trail in accordance with—

(A) the National Trails System Act (16 U.S.C. 1241 et seq.); and

(B) other applicable laws and regulations for trails on Federal lands.

(2) COOPERATION; AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall cooperate with the State of Utah Department of Natural Resources and appropriate county governments in managing the Trail. The appropriate Secretary shall make every reasonable effort to enter into cooperative agreements with the State of Utah Department of Natural Resources and appropriate county governments (separately, collectively, or in an any combination, as agreed by the parties) for management of the Trail.

(3) PRIMARY PURPOSE.—The primary purpose of this title is to provide recreational trail opportunities for motorized vehicle use on the Trail. The Trail shall be managed in a manner that is consistent with this purpose, ensures user safety, and minimizes user conflicts.

(4) ADDITION OF TRAILS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Secretary may add trails to the Trail in accordance with the National Trails System Act and this title. The Secretary shall consider the Trail a national recreation trail for the purpose of making such additions.

(B) REQUIREMENT FOR ADDITION OF TRAILS ON NON-FEDERAL LAND.—If a trail to be added to the Trail is located on non-Federal land, the appropriate Secretary may add the trail only if the owner of the land upon which the trail is located has—

(i) consented to the addition of the trail to the Trail; and

(ii) entered into an agreement with the appropriate Secretary for management of the additional trail in a manner that is consistent with this title.

(5) NOTICE OF OPEN ROUTES.—The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall ensure that the public is adequately informed regarding the routes open for the Trail, including by appropriate signage along the Trail.

(d) NO EFFECT ON NON-FEDERAL LAND AND INTERESTS IN LAND.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect ownership, management, or other rights related to any non-Federal land or interests in land, except as provided in an agreement related to that land entered into by the landowner under subsection (c)(4)(B)(ii).

(e) ACQUISITION OF LAND AND INTERESTS IN LAND.—The appropriate Secretary may acquire land and interests in land for the purposes of the Trail only from willing owners.

(f) MAP ON FILE; UPDATED.—The Map shall be—

(1) kept on file at the appropriate offices of the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture; and

(2) updated by the appropriate Secretary whenever trails are added to the Trail.

SEC. 202. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this title.

TITLE III—MCLOUGHLIN HOUSE PRESERVATION

SEC. 301. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this title, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) ASSOCIATION.—The term "Association" means the McLoughlin Memorial Association, an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of such Code.

(2) CITY.—The term "City" means Oregon City, Oregon.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Interior.

SEC. 302. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) On June 27, 1941, Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior W.C. Mendenhall, under the authority granted the Secretary under section 2 of the Historic Sites, Buildings and Antiquities Act (16 U.S.C. 461 et seq.), established the McLoughlin Home National Historic Site located in the City.

(2) Since January 16, 1945, the site has been known as McLoughlin House National Historic Site.

(3) The McLoughlin House National Historic Site includes both the McLoughlin House and Barclay House, which are owned and managed by the Association.

(4) The McLoughlin House National Historic Site is located in a Charter Park on Oregon City Block 40, which is owned by the City.

(5) A cooperative agreement was made in 1941 among the Association, the City, and the United States, providing for the preservation and use of the McLoughlin House as a national historic site.

(6) The Association has had an exemplary and longstanding role in the stewardship of the McLoughlin House National Historic Site but is unable to continue that role.

(7) The McLoughlin House National Historic Site has a direct relationship with Fort Vancouver National Historic Site due to Dr. John McLoughlin's importance as the Chief Factor of the Hudson Bay Company's Fort Vancouver, the headquarters for the Hudson Bay Company's Columbia Department, and his subsequent role in the early history of the settlement of the Oregon Territory to the extent that he is known as the "Father of Oregon".

(8) The McLoughlin House National Historic Site has been an affiliated area of the National Park System and is worthy of recognition as part of the Fort Vancouver National Historic Site.

SEC. 303. BOUNDARY OF FORT VANCOUVER NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE.

In recognition of the Secretary's role and responsibilities since June 27, 1941, and in order to preserve the McLoughlin House National Historic Site, the Secretary is authorized to acquire the McLoughlin House, consisting of approximately 1 acre, as generally depicted on the map entitled "McLoughlin National Historic Site", numbered 007/80,000, and dated 12/01/01, as an addition to the Fort Vancouver National Historic Site. The map shall be on file and available for inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

SEC. 304. ACQUISITION AND ADMINISTRATION.

(a) ACQUISITION.—The Secretary is authorized to acquire the McLoughlin House from willing owners only, by donation, purchase with donated or appropriated funds, or exchange, except that lands or interests in lands owned by the City may be acquired by donation only.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—The Secretary shall administer the McLoughlin House as an addition to Fort Vancouver National Historic Site in accordance with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System.

TITLE IV—PRESIDENTIAL HISTORIC SITE STUDY

SEC. 401. PRESIDENTIAL HISTORIC SITE STUDY.

(a) STUDY AND REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date funds are made available, the Secretary of the Interior shall—

(1) carry out a study on the suitability and feasibility of designating the William Jefferson Clinton birthplace home located in Hope, Arkansas, as a national historic site; and

(2) submit to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate a report describing the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of the study.

(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDY.—Except with regard to deadline for completion provided in subsection (a), the study under subsection (a) shall be conducted in accordance with section 8(c) Public Law 91-383 (16 U.S.C. 1a-5(c)).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 1105 would provide for the expeditious completion of the acquisition of the State of Wyoming lands in the Grand Teton National Park.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Wyoming (Mrs. CUBIN) to explain this legislation.

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Speaker, the Grand Teton National Park Land Exchange Act was introduced by Senator THOMAS and cosponsored by Senator ENZI, and is supported by all five of the Wyoming State elected officials, along with the National Park Service and the local communities. The measure passed the Senate on October 17, 2001, by unanimous consent.

This bill presents a very unique opportunity regarding Federal land management in our national parks that will greatly benefit the American people, as well as Wyoming school children. Grand Teton National Park was established in Congress on February 29, 1929, to protect the natural resources of the Teton range and the Jackson Hole area's unique beauty. On March 15, 1943, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt established the Jackson Hole National Monument, which is adjacent to the Grand Teton National Park. The Grand Teton National Park was expanded to its present size by Congress on September 14, 1950, to include a portion of the land from Jackson Hole National Monument, which is probably a little more than Members wanted to know.

Now comes the important part. The park currently encompasses about 310,000 acres of wilderness and some of the most amazing mountains anywhere in our country. However, when Wyoming received its statehood in 1890, sections of land were set aside for school revenue purposes. All income from the State lands, rents and grazing fees, sales or other sources, is placed in a special trust fund for the benefit of the public schools in Wyoming. The establishment of these sections predates the creation of most national parks in the United States.

Currently, over 1,406 acres of State surface and mineral lands are held by the State of Wyoming in isolated plots within Grand Teton National Park itself.

This legislation would allow the State of Wyoming to trade or sell these precious State lands locked up inside the park for other Federal lands, minerals or appropriated dollars to address public school funding needs. Further, the American public can then consolidate under the National Park Service all of the lands within the Grand Teton National Park's borders and protect them from development pressures. There are still some inholdings in Grand Teton National Park that are privately owned, and I think we can all agree we need to buy those or get easements on those privately held lands that are within the park, too, to prevent development.

Mr. Speaker, this is a win/win situation for all of the groups involved. Basically, S. 1105 identifies approximately 1,406 acres of State lands and mineral interests within the park and makes them eligible for exchange for other Federal assets such as mineral royalties, appropriated dollars, or Federal lands set aside for disposal under FLPMA. It can even be a combination of all three of these elements.

Within 90 days after this bill is signed, the land would be valued through an agreement by the Wyoming Governor and the Secretary of Interior. If there is no agreement, then an appraisal process would start so that the value of the minerals or the lands in question would be assured fairness in all cases. There would also be an appeals process on the value to ensure fairness if any of the parties feel that it is not the right price. Within 100 days after the land value is determined, the Secretary of Interior, in consultation with the Governor, will exchange the Federal assets of equal value for the State lands.

Mr. Speaker, I respectfully request that the House of Representatives act favorably upon the Grand Teton National Park Land Exchange Act. I think this body has an incredible opportunity to allow the consolidation within Grand Teton National Park borders, and to allow the State of Wyoming to capture fair market value for their property to benefit their schools.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as has already been noted, S. 1105, as amended, is a package of bills which have been previously approved by the Committee on Resources. I would like to take this opportunity to make note of the fact that the Grand Teton National Park provisions in this bill have been advanced by our colleague, the gentlewoman from Wyoming (Mrs. CUBIN).

□ 1715

Her Senator passed this bill out of the other body and she has greatly assisted the movement of this legislation in this body. The gentlewoman from Wyoming is a wonderful person to work with. I appreciate her willingness to work with me on issues of mutual concern. She is indeed a distinguished Representative of the State of Wyoming. I appreciate her leadership.

Another provision of this bill would establish the James V. Hansen Shoshone National Trail in honor of our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Utah. I sponsored the amendment in committee to name the trail after the gentleman from Utah. He resisted at first. He was willing to settle on having some outhouse in Glacier National Park named after him, but I insisted on my amendment instead.

I would further note that this measure includes the text of H.R. 3434 sponsored by the gentlewoman from Oregon

(Ms. HOOLEY) which authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to acquire the McLoughlin House National Historic Site in Oregon and to administer it as part of the existing Fort Vancouver National Historic Site. Her leadership has been invaluable on this. I appreciate her working with us as well.

The legislation also includes the text of H.R. 3815 introduced by the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. ROSS) to authorize a study of the suitability and feasibility of designating the William Jefferson Clinton birthplace home located in Hope, Arkansas, as a national historic site.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I appreciate my good friend from West Virginia, who has been a joy to work with over the years in explaining the other parts of this bill which are very important. He did amend the Shoshone bill to somehow put my name on it. I explained to him another piece of legislation that I had my heart set on but, bless his heart, he was able to do that. I appreciate very much his kindness and his understanding. I appreciate the gentlewoman from Wyoming and all the work she has done on our committee, especially on this piece of legislation and many others.

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANSEN. I yield to the gentlewoman from Wyoming.

Mrs. CUBIN. I would just like to make the offer, Mr. Chairman, in exchange for the Martin's Cove issue that was quite controversial in my State, we are building a new maximum security prison. If the gentleman from West Virginia wanted to amend his amendment, we would probably be happy to name our new maximum security prison after him.

Mr. HANSEN. If I may ask, is the gentlewoman suggesting that I may spend time there?

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. HOOLEY).

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation and specifically the amended version of S. 1105 that includes H.R. 3434, the McLoughlin House Preservation Act. The McLoughlin House Preservation Act will extend the boundaries of Fort Vancouver to include the McLoughlin House National Historic Site to be managed and maintained by the National Park Service. Fort Vancouver and the McLoughlin House have a long and storied history that goes back to the early 1800s and the early settlement of the Oregon Territory.

Since the early 1900s, the McLoughlin House has been maintained and managed by a nonprofit McLoughlin Memorial Association. For almost 100 years, the association has done yeoman's work to preserve and maintain this historic treasure so that thousands of people could tour the site. By extending the boundaries of Fort Vancouver to include the McLoughlin House, we will continue to build on a relationship that began over 180 years ago; and we will preserve in perpetuity the cultural, educational and historical benefits of this historic site for future generations.

In closing, I would like to convey my sincere appreciation to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH), and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) for so generously agreeing to work with me on this bill and in helping to move it forward. I would also like to extend my gratitude to all the staff that helps out here, Luke Johnson and David Watkins of the Committee on Resources for their tireless efforts on behalf of this bill, thanks to John Salisbury and the McLoughlin Memorial Association for all of their hard work to preserve this Oregon treasure; and lastly I would like to thank Tracy Fortmann for her advocacy on behalf of the McLoughlin House over the years. She has done a fantastic job. We are extremely lucky to have her at Fort Vancouver.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1105, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES HISTORIC PRESERVATION AMENDMENTS ACT

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1606) to amend section 507 of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 to authorize additional appropriations for Historically Black Colleges and Universities, to decrease the matching requirement related to such appropriations, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1606

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DECREASED MATCHING REQUIREMENT FOR HISTORIC BUILDING RESTORATION AND PRESERVATION AT HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES; AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) DECREASED MATCHING REQUIREMENT.—Section 507(c) of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–333; 16 U.S.C. 470a note) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following new paragraph:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Secretary may obligate funds made available under subsection (d) for a grant with respect to a building or structure listed on, or eligible for listing on, the National Register of Historic Places only if the grantee agrees to provide, from funds derived from non-Federal sources, an amount that is equal to 30 percent of the total cost of the project for which the grant is provided."; and

(2) by striking "(2) The Secretary" and inserting the following:

"(2) WAIVER.—The Secretary".

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 507(d) of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (16 U.S.C. 470a note) is amended—

(1) by striking "Pursuant to" and inserting the following:

"(1) 1996 AUTHORIZATION.—Pursuant to"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) ADDITIONAL AUTHORIZATION.—In addition to amounts made available under paragraph (1), pursuant to section 108 of the National Historic Preservation Act, there is authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.".

(c) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT.—Subsection (c)(1) of section 507 of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996, as amended by subsection (a), shall apply with respect to—

(1) funds made available under subsection (d)(2) of such section, as added by subsection (b); and

(2) funds made available under subsection (d)(1) of such section, as amended by subsection (b), that remain unobligated as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. H.R. 1606, introduced by the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN), will authorize appropriations for the restoration and renovation of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. In addition, it would decrease matching requirements.

Many of the buildings at these schools are listed on the National Register and, because of their age, are in immediate need of remodeling and renovation. GAO identified in a report to Congress the buildings needing attention and the estimated cost. This estimate provides the foundation for the authorized level prescribed in the legislation. While funds have been previously appropriated to help meet restoration needs at some of these schools, the matching requirement has proved to be a difficult barrier to meet. This bill would lower that barrier by lowering the matching requirement and enable these schools to take advantage of these restoration opportunities. The historic quality of these buildings makes it important that we aid in their preservation.

The bill contains an amendment to extend the new matching requirement to schools where funds have already been appropriated but have been left unobligated due to a failure to raise enough funds to meet the matching requirement.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation has significant support on both sides of the aisle. I urge my colleagues to support this worthy piece of legislation. I appreciate the gentleman from South Carolina for all the excellent work he has done on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1606, introduced by my good friend and colleague Representative JIM CLYBURN, is an important initiative that builds upon the work started in 1996 with the passage of the historically black colleges and universities' historic preservation program.

The program has been the catalyst for the preservation of historic structures at these institutions of higher education. Unfortunately, the program has used up all of its existing authorization of funds and while its accomplishments to date have been great, the work that still needs to be done is even greater.

Many of the buildings that have been and will be assisted by this program are integral elements of the school campus and their preservation will not only preserve buildings but also the history and spirit of these pioneering institutions.

In hearings before the Resource Committee on H.R. 1606 last November we received moving testimony from Representative CLYBURN and others on the importance of this program in furthering historic preservation at institutions that have played a vital role in the advancement of African Americans and others.

I want to commend in particular my colleague Representative JIM CLYBURN for his strong leadership and vision on this legislation. Representative CLYBURN has been a tireless champion of H.R. 1606. As a former educator himself, he well understands importance of this program not only to the schools themselves but to the entire nation.

Last week this House passed H. Res. 523 recognizing the contributions Historically Black Colleges and Universities have made and continue to make in the education of African-Americans. However, H. Res. 523 just talked the talk, but it is H.R. 1606 that walks the walk.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1606 is a substantive measure that will benefit these institutions and the nation at large. I strongly support the measure and urge its adoption by the House.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN) whose determination, dedication and true vision have brought this legislation to the floor today. He is a good friend to all of us and a former educator himself. We realize the importance of this legislation not only to Historically Black Colleges and Universities but to the Nation.

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time and for his kind words.

Mr. Speaker, I want to express my gratitude to the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN), the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL), the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH), and the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN) for the tremendous bipartisan support H.R. 1606 has received to date. I very much appreciate the opportunity to speak today on behalf of my legislation to extend authorization of the Historically Black Colleges and Universities Historic Preservation program. This is a day that has been several years in the making.

As a former high school teacher, I have always possessed an acute appreciation for history and have enjoyed its study for many years. It was part of what motivated me to introduce legislation establishing the South Carolina National Heritage Corridor, and I thank the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. GRAHAM) for joining me in support of that legislation which Congress authorized in the 1995 Omnibus Parks Act. It is also what motivated me to work to appropriate funds for a 3-year study of the Gullah culture along the sea islands of South Carolina and Georgia. This is a culture very unique and very much at threat of extinction. Hopefully this study will give us recommendations on how to preserve and interpret what most scholars say is the closest African roots of any native-born Americans.

I have worked very closely for many years and on many issues with Dick Moe of the National Trust for Historic Preservation and was overjoyed when the national trust, acting on the nomination of the Southeast Regional African American Preservation Alliance, listed the 103 HBCU campuses as a category on its 1998 list of the 11 most endangered historic sites in the country.

I say these things to explain how important historic preservation is to me personally. But of all the things I have worked on in preservation, I am most proud of this HBCU historic preservation program. Many of these campuses today date back for a century or more. The history contained within the hallowed halls of these institutions is as rich and diverse as the students who passed through them.

The HBCU historic preservation program has had a profound impact on three universities in South Carolina's sixth district. But I want to tell you what it meant to me as a student of history to see a treasure such as Arnett Hall on Allen University's campus in Columbia, South Carolina, saved from the brink of destruction. This structure, which had been boarded up for almost 40 years, was designed by an African American architect, built by the students themselves, and completed in June 1891. At the time we were authorizing the original $29 million for this program, the South Carolina Department of Archives and History, our State's SHPO, listed Arnett Hall as the most endangered historic site in South Carolina. I am happy to report today the building has been saved, preserved to the Secretary of the Interior's standards, and shines as a beacon in that part of Columbia. The same is true for two other historic buildings in my district that have benefited from this program, Ministers Hall on Claflin University's campus in Orangeburg and Massachusetts Hall on the campus of Voorhees College in Denmark.

In 1997, the Congressional Black Caucus requested the GAO conduct a study to determine the projected cost of preserving all threatened historic sites on the 103 HBCU campuses. I was asked to coordinate that study with the GAO. The study took one solid year to complete, but it was very comprehensive and very objective. The GAO identified 712 historic sites on those campuses with a projected preservation cost of $755 million. That is a lot of money, even in this town. But the need has been documented, and over time I believe the schools and this body will respond appropriately and adequately.

The vast majority of these colleges have had a very difficult time raising the required dollar for dollar match which the previous legislation required. Consequently, many of them would like to have a grant. But I believe it is important for the schools themselves to feel vested in the project. So my bill requires a 30 percent match. The Park Service allows 70 percent of funding for planning and survey projects funded from the historic preservation fund, so there is a precedent for this ratio and it is a formula that is sorely needed.

Mr. Speaker, this authorization will allow the campuses with structures identified for preservation to do strategic planning. If these schools were able to point to the Federal Government's commitment to cover 70 percent of the preservation costs, alumni and potential donors would be more amenable to contributing the matching funds for the projects.

Mr. Speaker, should this bill become law, it will take many years and a strong commitment to meet the need the GAO has documented. But without this bill becoming law, we cannot even begin.

Mr. Speaker, I know this body has shown strong support for preservation, and I pledge to do all I can for the historic preservation community. There is no issue regarding cultural or historic preservation that is more important to our Nation's fabric, the Congressional Black Caucus, and to me personally than H.R. 1606.

☐ 1730

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. CLEMENT).

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time and for everything he has done over the years as a great member on the Committee on Resources and also a great colleague and member on the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, because he has truly made a difference.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say to my good friend, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN), it has been a pleasure over the years working with him. He sure has done a lot of things to make things happen when it comes to supporting our Historically Black Colleges and Universities. I appreciate very much the gentleman from Utah (Chairman HANSEN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH) for being so helpful and always being there to listen and be supportive.

I have been involved in this cause for a long time because I am a former college President myself at Cumberland University, a small, private, independent college in the State of Tennessee. I am proud to be able to say that we have six colleges and universities that fall in this category when we talk about Historically Black Colleges and Universities in the great State of Tennessee, and that is Fisk University, Meharry Medical College and Tennessee State University, all located in Nashville, Tennessee. Then we have Lane College in Jackson, Tennessee; Lemoyne Owen College in Memphis; and Knoxville College in Knoxville, Tennessee.

For well over a century, Historically Black Colleges and Universities have made their mark as vital institutions of higher learning. Generations of African American educators, physicians, lawyers, scientists and other professionals have found the knowledge, the experience and encouragement they needed to reach their full potential at these Historically Black Colleges and Universities. They have compiled an enviable record of achievement, educating almost 40 percent of our Nation's black college graduates. They have educated millions of young people and have prepared African American students for the challenges and opportunities of this new century.

I might say also that what the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN) said a while ago is very true: A lot of them have had a lot of difficulty struggling for those dollars to make a difference. That first impression at a college or university is so vitally important. When they see a college or university that is run down, they are not going to give. They are not going to be able to raise any private gifts for the university. But if they see a university where their buildings are in good shape and good condition, it really does make a real difference. I found that at Cumberland University where I was president, and I sure have found that at the other colleges and universities in the State of Tennessee and around the country that have fallen into that category.

I will never forget when I first got here, Dr. Henry Ponder, who was then president of Fisk University, we used to walk those halls, and this is before some of you even were here, and we walked those halls and tried to get people interested in our Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Now we have a lot of new help, and I appreciate that, both Democrats and Republicans alike, that realize the importance and significance of what I call seed money, and that is what it is, seed money, because those are dollars that we are able to share now and those are dollars we are able to utilize in order for these colleges and universities to keep educating our young people; but not just young people, but our working adults that want to go back to our colleges and universities.

I commend our Historically Black Colleges and Universities for their dedication to academic excellence and commitment to educational opportunity for all.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK).

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, my colleague and fellow freshman, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN), and I came to the Congress together. Since then he has been the driving force behind a movement to improve our Historically Black Colleges and Universities. For that he is to be strongly commended.

HBCUs, as we call them, remain a critical part of our education system. These institutions have significantly increased educational access for thousands of economically and socially disadvantaged Americans, particularly among young African Americans. Yet our Historically Black Colleges and Universities need to maintain and improve their facilities in order to continue to meet the needs of their students.

I bet you, Mr. Speaker, if a poll were taken, each Member of this House would have an historically black college or university somewhere near their district or in some way they have helped an historically black college or university. That is extremely important.

Mr. Speaker, as I noted last week when we passed H. Res. 524 recognizing the contributions of Historically Black Colleges and Universities, it is critical that we honor Historically Black Colleges and Universities with our deeds, not just our words, by taking such steps as funding them properly in our appropriations process. That is what the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN) is talking about. By passing this bill, we make good on our commitment to our Historically Black Colleges and Universities and honor them with our deeds by making it easier for them to preserve their facilities and thereby serve their students and their communities.

I commend the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN) for this excellent bill, ask for our continued effort in this regard, and urge all of my colleagues to support it.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 6½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL) for yielding me time, and I also want to commend the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and the ranking member of this committee for the outstanding work they do all the time on the Committee on Resources. I am not a member of this committee, but I often watch its deliberations and pay attention to what it is doing, and I think that they, obviously, do an outstanding job. I especially want to commend them for bringing this legislation to the floor.

I also want to commend the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN), a man who has almost singlehandedly in terms of his zest and seal, who has been tremendously focused on the problems, attributes and contributions of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. As a matter of fact, he talked so passionately about those in South Carolina until sometimes I wish that I had been a South Carolinian and had the opportunity to attend one of them.

I did not attend one in South Carolina, but I did grow up in Arkansas, and I attended what is now the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff. The bell tower on that campus, which is the tallest structure in that area, they do not have tall buildings in Arkansas, but the bell tower is probably the tallest structure in that community, and, for as long as I can remember, it has stood as a symbol of educational opportunity for African Americans, especially in that area. The alumni association is currently trying to replace it, brick by brick.

As a matter of fact, when I was there we had an outstanding President that we fondly called "Prexy," President Lawrence Arnett Davis, Sr., whose son now is the chancellor, Chancellor Lawrence Arnett Davis, Jr. They both have become institutions.

So I say to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN), when you help preserve these institutions, which are indeed struggling but have one of the greatest histories and one of the greatest legacies in this Nation, and to think that the leaders of many of them were newly-freed slaves, individuals who had just come out of slavery when the Moral Act was passed and then its subsequent amendments, so, yes, they have done exceedingly well. But, again, I commend all of those who have had a hand in and who have spoken so passionately about their impact.

Again I commend the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. CLYBURN) and commend the chairman and ranking member of this committee.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1606, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the 22 bills just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

RECOGNIZING HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF 100 YEARS OF KOREAN IMMIGRATION TO UNITED STATES

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 297) recognizing the historical significance of 100 years of Korean immigration to the United States.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 297

Whereas missionaries from the United States played a central role in nurturing the political and religious evolution of modern Korea;

Whereas in December 1902, 56 men, 21 women and 25 children left Korea and traveled across the Pacific Ocean on the S.S. Gaelic and landed in Honolulu, Hawaii on January 13, 1903;

Whereas the early Korean-American community was united around the common goal of obtaining independence from their colonized mother country;

Whereas members of the Korean-American community have served with distinction in the Armed Forces of the United States during World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict;

Whereas on June 25, 1950, Communist North Korea invaded South Korea with approximately 135,000 troops, thereby initiating the involvement of approximately 5,720,000 personnel, both military and civilian from South Korea and the United States, who worked to stem the spread of communism in Korea;

Whereas casualties in the United States Armed Forces included 54,260 dead, of whom 33,665 were battle deaths, 92,134 wounded, and 8,176 listed as missing in action or prisoners of war;

Whereas in the early 1950s, thousands of Koreans, fleeing from war, poverty, and desolation, came to the United States seeking opportunities;

Whereas Korean-Americans, like waves of immigrants that came to the United States before them, have taken root and thrived in the United States through strong family ties, community support, and hard work;

Whereas Korean immigration has invigorated businesses, churches, and academic communities in the United States;

Whereas according to the 2000 United States Census, Korean-Americans own and operate 135,571 businesses across the United States that have gross sales of $46,000,000,000 annually, and employ 333,649 individuals;

Whereas the contributions of Korean-Americans to the United States include the development of the first beating heart operation for coronary artery disease, the development of several varieties of the nectarine, and achievements in engineering, architecture, medicine, acting, singing, sculpture, and writing;

Whereas Korean-Americans play a crucial role in maintaining the strength and vitality of the United States-Korean relationship;

Whereas the partnership of the United States and South Korea helps maintain peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region and provides economic benefits to the people of both nations and to the rest of the world; and

Whereas beginning in 2003, more than 100 communities throughout the United States will celebrate the 100th anniversary of Korean immigration to the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) recognizes the achievements and contributions of Korean-Americans to the United States over the past 100 years; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States and interested organizations to observe the anniversary with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 297.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Concurrent Resolution 297 recognizes the contributions of Korean Americans during the past 100 years, and it asks the President to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States and interested organizations to observe this anniversary. I commend the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA) for introducing this important resolution.

January 2003 will mark the 100th anniversary of the arrival of 56 men, 21 women and 25 children from the Korean Peninsula to Honolulu, Hawaii. These brave people left Korea and traveled across the Pacific Ocean on the SS Gaelic on January 13, 1903. This trip initiated a century of Korean immigration to the United States, and America has benefited tremendously from the hard work and loyalty of Korean immigrants and their sons and daughters.

Korean Americans have served in the United States Armed Forces with distinction during World War I, World War II, and the Korean conflict in the early 1950s. In particular, the U.S. and South Korea worked together to keep communism from covering the Korean peninsula during those difficult times.

Korean Americans have made many contributions to the United States and have had a lasting impact on their communities. Hard work, strong families and cultural influence are just a few of the qualities that Korean Americans are known for and continue to thrive today. Korean Americans have played a crucial role in advancing the United States-Korea partnership, which helps provide peace and stability in the Asia Pacific region.

Among the many contributions of Korean Americans are the first beating heart operation for coronary artery disease, the development of several varieties of the nectarine, and achievements in engineering, architecture, medicine, acting, singing, sculpture and writing.

According to the 2000 census, over 135,000 American businesses are owned and operated by Korean Americans across the country, with gross sales and receipts of $46 billion. These businesses employ over 330,000 individuals.

Mr. Speaker, the Korean community is alive and well in my Congressional District out in Northern Virginia, at Bailey's Crossroads, Annandale, Fairfax and Woodbridge.

☐ 1745

These immigrants have chosen America for the freedom and opportunity this country offers, and they are making lasting contributions to our community and communities across the country.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with the gentleman from Virginia in consideration of this resolution honoring the significance of Korean immigration.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON).

Ms. WATSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to join my colleagues today in honoring the contributions of Korean Americans to our national heritage.

On January 13, 1903, the S.S. Gaelic arrived in Honolulu, marking the beginning of the documented history of the Korean-American experience. Mr. Speaker, 102 Korean immigrants walked off that ship almost 100 years ago. Many of them probably expected that they would spend a few years in Hawaii and then return home. In the 100 years since then, the Korean-American population has grown to over 1 million and has become a vital and dynamic part of our American family.

No account of Korean-American heritage would be complete without listing the accomplishments of several American heroes of Korean descent, like Colonel Young Oak Kim, the first Asian American to command a combat battalion. To date, Colonel Kim is also the most decorated Asian-American soldier, earning two Purple Hearts, a Silver Star, and the Distinguished Service Cross. Or Dora Yum Kim, a pioneer in developing social services for California's poor and disadvantaged citizens. And Dr. Sammy Lee, Olympic diver and swimming coach, physician and veteran. Dr. Lee was not only the first Asian-American to win an Olympic gold medal, but also the first American to win two Olympic gold diving medals, the oldest person to win a gold in diving, and the first male to win back-to-back gold medals in diving as well.

I am proud to represent a congressional district with a vibrant Korean-American community. My congressional district is also home to a number of institutions that stand as a testament both to the determination and success of Korean-Americans, but also to the richness of Korean-American heritage.

The Korean-American Museum presents exhibitions that serve to bring the role of Korean-Americans in our history to the public at large. The Korean Heritage Library at the University of Southern California holds a wealth of history of Korean-American life. And one cannot forget the many churches, community groups, and businesses that make up the fabric of everyday life in the Korean-American community.

The Korean-American story is above all an American story, a story of our country, our communities, and our neighborhoods. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution to celebrate 100 years of Korean-American contributions to our Nation.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. HOEKSTRA).

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for his helping in moving this bill to the floor and getting it up for a vote today.

Mr. Speaker, H. Con. Resolution 297 recognizes the contributions of Korean-Americans and the contributions that they have made over the last 100 years. Since that first day when Korean-Americans immigrated and landed in Honolulu, they have become an integral part of the diverse fabric that makes up American society. They have contributed economically; but beyond economic contributions, they have eagerly embraced our commonly held American ideals.

The first Korean-Americans were united in the cause of achieving freedom for their annexed homeland and for her people. And in this present day, Korean-Americans remain united in their hopes for the reunification of their ancestral homeland and the reunification of families torn apart by war and for an end to the dictatorial oppression of their fellow Koreans in North Korea.

By organizing through churches, associations, and other groups, Korean-Americans have built strong mutual-support networks and strong communities. Perhaps most importantly, at the center of Korean-American life are strong family ties and hard work. This has allowed Korean-Americans to prosper and make innumerable contributions to American life and society.

In January of 2003, there will be more than 100 communities across America celebrating the 100th anniversary of Korean-American immigration. It is both deserving and important that Congress recognize the significance of this fact, and encourage schools, civic groups, and all levels of government to take part in planning activities and events surrounding this major milestone.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the pioneers of the Korean community in the United States were a small group of political and social reformers, expelled from Korea following an unsuccessful attempt to overthrow the government, who arrived as exiles in San Francisco. Among them was Suh Jae-pil, who later adopted the American name Philip Jaisohn. Mr. Jaisohn became the first Korean to become an American citizen and the first Korean-American to receive an American medical degree.

In 1886, 4 years after getting his medical degree, Mr. Jaisohn established the first Korean newspaper. He became involved in the fight to keep Korea independent of China and, after 1910, to liberate it from Japan. Dr. Jaisohn devoted the majority of his life to the cause of Korean independence. His work in medical research and pathology and for Korean causes gained respect in both his homeland and in the United States.

Mr. Jaisohn, like thousands of other Koreans who immigrated to the United States, played a central role in nurturing the political and religious evolution of modern Korea.

Members of the Korean-American community have served with distinction in the Armed Forces, have helped the development of the first beating heart operation for coronary artery disease, and own and operate more than 135 businesses in the United States with gross sales of $46 billion annually.

Korean-Americans play a vital role in maintaining the strength and vitality of United States-Korean relationships. The partnership between the United States and South Korea has helped to maintain peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region.

This year, 100 communities throughout the United States will celebrate the 100th anniversary of Korean immigration to the United States, including a large Korean community on the north side of the city of Chicago and in other areas spread throughout the city.

Mr. Speaker, my former legislative director is Korean. Her name is Courtni Pugh. She and her twin sister were featured on the cover of a Korean magazine about 3 years ago as premier young Korean or Asian activists in the United States. So I take this opportunity to convey greetings to them and all of my Korean friends throughout the metropolitan area of Chicago. Again, I commend the gentleman for introducing this resolution, and I am pleased to share its movement with my colleague, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution appropriately recognizes Korean-Americans and their contributions to this country. It seeks to celebrate 100 years of immigration by supporting events and ceremonies by marking this important date in 2003, and I am proud to support this resolution.

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor support House Resolution 297 recognizing the historical significance of 100 years of Korean immigration to the United States. In 1902, 102 Koreans arrived in Hawaii after a month-long journey across the Pacific Ocean. Since that time, the Korean-American presence has grown to more than 100 communities with a population of about 1.1 million people, and has made immense contributions to our nation.

Abroad, members of the Korean-American community served with valor and distinction in the Armed Forces of the United States, notably during World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict, where they helped defend South Korea from Communist North Korea's invasion. Their sacrifices helped to preserve the freedom and democracy that we have today.

At home, Korean-Americans, like other waves of immigrants to America, have spurred the growth of new businesses, churches, and academic communities. They have also made tremendous contributions in areas such as athletics, literature, the arts, medicine, architecture, and engineering.

As Chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, and as an immigrant, I am proud to recognize these achievements.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 297.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

RECOGNIZING AND COMMENDING MARY BAKER EDDY'S ACHIEVEMENTS AND THE MARY BAKER EDDY LIBRARY FOR THE BETTERMENT OF HUMANITY

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 458) recognizing and commending Mary Baker Eddy's achievements and the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 458

Whereas the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity will officially open on September 29, 2002, in Boston, Massachusetts, thereby making available to the public the Mary Baker Eddy Collections, one of the largest collections of primary source material by and about an American woman;

Whereas the namesake of the Library, Mary Baker Eddy, achieved international prominence during her lifetime (1821–1910) as the founder of Christian Science and was the first woman in the United States to found and lead a religion that became an international movement with members in 139 countries;

Whereas historians compare Mary Baker Eddy to nineteenth-century women reformers like Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, who took leadership roles at a time when women infrequently did so;

Whereas Mary Baker Eddy founded and served as the pastor of her own church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, and established a publishing organization that produces numerous publications, including "The Christian Science Monitor", an international daily newspaper that has won seven Pulitzer Prizes;

Whereas in recognition of the numerous achievements of Mary Baker Eddy, the Women's National Hall of Fame inducted her into its membership in 1995 for having made "an indelible mark on society, religion, and journalism";

Whereas the Mary Baker Eddy Library, a facility of 81,000 square feet, provides a place for people to come together to explore ideas and offers on-site and online educational experiences, programs, and exhibits;

Whereas the Mary Baker Eddy Collections consist of more than 100,000 documents, artifacts, photographs, and other media that chronicle the development of Mary Baker Eddy's ideas and offer an unequalled resource to scholars in women's history and mind-body medicine;

Whereas the Library's initiative to make the previously unpublished materials in the Mary Baker Eddy Collections available to the public is exemplary of, and in full accord with, the intent of the provisions of title 17, United States Code, relating to the publication of previously unpublished materials; and

Whereas the Mary Baker Eddy Library will establish an Institute for the Rediscovery and Preservation of the History of Women in Seneca Falls, New York, the birthplace of the first Women's Rights Convention, in order to showcase new research on the forgotten histories of women and offer educational programs for students: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress recognizes and commends—

(1) Mary Baker Eddy for her outstanding achievements and contributions, particularly her contributions to the advancement of women's rights as a public figure and role model in the early stages of the women's rights movement; and

(2) the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity, which will open to the public on September 29, 2002.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 458.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia for yielding me this time.

I think it is appropriate to point out that the acting Speaker pro tempore now is the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. BASS), the State where Mary Baker Eddy was born.

Mr. Speaker, I support House Concurrent Resolution 458, recognizing and commending Mary Baker Eddy's life and achievements and the opening of the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity.

Mary Baker Eddy was a notable 19th century public figure and role model in the early stages of the women's rights movement. Historians often compare her to other 19th century reformers, like Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, women who took leadership roles at a time when women infrequently did so.

Mary Baker Eddy was an author, a successful businesswoman, a publisher and editor of monthly and weekly magazines, the president and founder of a teaching college, and the founder and leader of a worldwide church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, which today has congregations in 139 countries.

Remarkably, at age 87, Mary Baker Eddy founded an international daily newspaper, the Christian Science Monitor, which has won seven Pulitzer Prizes.

The Mary Baker Eddy Library in Boston, which opens on September 29, will make available to the public one of the largest collections of primary-source material by and about American women. The library will provide opportunities to explore the ideas and life of this 19th century pioneer and will showcase her previously unpublished writings.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Members of the House to support this resolution.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Civil Service, Census, and Agency Organization, I am pleased to support H. Con. Res. 458, a bill recognizing and commending Mary Baker Eddy's achievements and the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity, and I want to commend the gentleman from Texas for his introduction of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, Mary Baker Eddy is regarded as a major religious speaker and as a notable example of the emergence of women in significant leadership roles.

□ 1800

When Mrs. Eddy was inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in 1955, it was noted that she had made an indelible mark on religion, society, and journalism.

Born in 1821 on a farm in Bow, New Hampshire, Mary Baker Eddy spent most of her youth in ill health. Although raised with Puritan values, daily Bible reading, and the talk of God's healing power, she spent years looking for healing in the many remedial methods available at her time.

In 1866, Mary Baker Eddy, through reading Jesus's healings in the New Testament, came to discover the science of Christianity which she named "Christian Science."

In 1875, she first wrote and published "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," the textbook of Christian Science. It is published in 17 languages and Braille; and in audiocassette, CD, and computerized form. Over 9 million copies have been sold, and it remains a bestseller each year.

In 1879, Mrs. Eddy established the Church of Christ, Scientist, and subsequently founded its various periodicals and activities. In 1895, she published the first edition of the Manual of the Mother Church. One of her last and greatest accomplishments was founding the Christian Science Monitor in 1908.

In 1992, the Women's National Book Association named "Science and Health" as one of 75 books by women, and I quote, "whose words have changed the world."

Before Mrs. Eddy died in 1910, the religion she established had spread around the world, and she had become one of the most recognized public figures in America; a truly great woman.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of this resolution, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the House consider House Concurrent Resolution 458, introduced by my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH). This resolution recognizes and commends the achievements of Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Church of Christ, Scientist, and the opening of the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of Humanity in Boston, Massachusetts.

Mr. Speaker, on September 29, 2002, the Mary Baker Eddy Library for the Betterment of humanity will officially open in Boston. The opening of this library will allow the public access to the Mary Baker Eddy collections, one of the largest collections of primary-source material by and about an extraordinary American woman.

Born in 1821, Mary Baker Eddy was a reformer and a woman who introduced bold new concepts to 19th century society and beyond. Mrs. Eddy achieved international prominence as the founder of Christian Science. She has the distinction of being the first woman in the United States to found and lead a religion that became an international movement. The Church of Christ, Scientist, has members in 139 countries.

In an era when women faced severe limits, Mary Baker Eddy rose from obscurity, poverty, and illness to become a renowned author, healer, thinker, religious leader, and publisher.

In 1866, she was healed of a serious injury as she read the account of one of Jesus' healings in the New Testament. This led her to discover what she came to understand as the science of Christianity, which she named Christian Science.

In 1875, she wrote and published "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures." It is published in 17 languages and Braille, and in audiocassette, CD, and computerized form. Over 9 million copies have been sold, and it remains a bestseller each year.

In 1879, Mrs. Eddy established the Church of Christ, Scientist. In 1895, she published the first edition of the "Manual of the Mother Church." One of her last and greatest accomplishments was founding the Christian Science Monitor in 1908.

I urge my colleagues to support the resolution, and I commend the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) for introducing this important resolution. Mary Baker Eddy had a profound impact on American life and religion. Her life as healer, thinker, and reformer is remarkable.

I urge my colleagues to support the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 458.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERIODIC REPORT ON NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO THE NATIONAL UNION FOR THE TOTAL INDEPENDENCE OF ANGOLA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I am providing a 6-month report prepared by my Administration on the national emergency with respect to the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) that was declared in Executive Order 12865 of September 26, 1993.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, September 23, 2002.

CONTINUATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO NATIONAL UNION FOR THE TOTAL INDEPENDENCE OF ANGOLA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations:

To the Congress of the United States:

Section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1622(d) provides for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmit to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency declared with respect to the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) is to continue in effect beyond September 26, 2002, to the Federal Register for publication. The most recent notice continuing this emergency was published in the Federal Register on September 25, 2001 (66 Fed. Reg. 49084).

The circumstances that led to the declaration on September 26, 1993, of a national emergency have not been resolved. The actions and policies of UNITA pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States. United Nations Security Council Resolutions 864 (1993), 1127 (1997), and 1173 (1998) continue to oblige all member states to maintain sanctions. Discontinuation of the sanctions would have a prejudicial effect on the prospects for peace in Angola. For these reasons, I have determined that it necessary to maintain in force the broad authorities necessary to apply economic pressure on UNITA to reduce its ability to pursue its military operations.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

PLAN COLOMBIA/ANDEAN COUNTER DRUG INITIATIVE, SEMI-ANNUAL OBLIGATION REPORT—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107-267)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to section 3204(e), of Public Law 106-246, I am providing a report prepared by my Administration detailing the progress of spending by the executive branch during the first two quarters of Fiscal Year 2002 in support of Plan Colombia.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, September 23, 2002.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until approximately 6:30 p.m.

Accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 7 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until approximately 6:30 p.m.

□ 1831

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BASS) at 6 o'clock and 31 minutes p.m.

REPORT ON H.R. 5431, ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2003

Mr. CALLAHAN, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107-681) on the bill (H.R. 5431) making appropriations for energy and water development for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2003, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). All points of order are reserved on the bill.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, the Chair will now put the question on motions to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today in the order in which that motion was entertained.

Votes will be taken in the following order:

H. Con. Res. 472, by the yeas and nays;

H. Con. Res. 301, by the yeas and nays;

H. Res. 533, by the yeas and nays.

Proceedings on the following measures will resume tomorrow:

H.R. 2982, by the yeas and nays;

H. Con. Res. 297, by the yeas and nays.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first such vote in this series.

□ 1915

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BASS). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

CAN WE AFFORD THIS WAR?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, a casual analysis of the world economy shows it rapidly deteriorating into recession, with a possible depression on the horizon. Unemployment is sharply rising with price inflation rampant, despite official government inflationary reports. The world's stock markets continue to collapse, even after trillions of dollars in losses have been recorded in the past 2 years. These losses already have set historic records.

With government revenues shrinking at all levels, we find deficits exploding. Our national debt is currently rising at a $450 billion per year. Confidence in corporate America has shrunk to levels usually reserved for governments alone.

Government spending in all areas is skyrocketing, much of it out of the control of the politicians, who show little concern. Yet we are expected to believe our government leaders who say that we are experiencing a recovery and that a return to grand prosperity is just around the corner. The absence of capital formation, savings and corporate profits are totally ignored.

Evidence abounds that our $350 billion DOD budget and the $40 billion spent on intelligence gathering and our immigration policies have failed miserably in protecting our homeland. In spite of the rhetoric and new legislation attacking our civil liberties, we are as vulnerable to outside attack as before.

Our military is drastically smaller than a decade ago, and we are spread around the world and involved in world conflicts more than we have ever been before.

We have run a huge current account deficit for 15 years and massively expanded our money supply. No one should be surprised that the dollar is weakening and the commodity, natural resources and precious metal prices are rising.

Oil prices are over $31 a barrel, and predictions are that they can easily go up another $15 to $20 if international tensions grow.

But the only talk here in the Nation's Capital is about when, not if, we must initiate a war that even the administration admits could cost $200 billion. Some are not even embarrassed to gloat about the political benefits for those who preach war over those who prefer negotiations, diplomacy and containment. The fact that the Arab nations are overwhelmingly opposed to an attack on Iraq and are joined by the European Community is of no concern to those who demand war regardless of any circumstance.

Eighty percent of the American people now report that they believe that a war with Iraq will increase the chances of our suffering from a new terrorist attack. If this is true, we become less secure with an attack on Iraq, since little has been done to correct the deficiencies in the intelligence gathering agencies and our immigration policies.

No credible evidence has been produced that Iraq has or is close to having nuclear weapons. No evidence exists to show that Iraq harbors al Qaeda terrorists. Quite to the contrary, experts on this region recognize Hussein as an enemy of the al Qaeda and a foe to Islamic fundamentalism. Many other nations pose much greater threats to world peace. Yet no one is clamoring for war against them. Saddam Hussein is now weaker than ever.

Reports are now appearing that we are negotiating with allies to share in the oil bounty once Iraq is occupied in order to get support for our invasion from various countries around the world.

Our national debt is over $6 trillion and is increasing by nearly half a trillion dollars a year. Since Social Security funds are all placed in the general revenues and spent and all funds are fungible, honest accounting, of which there has been a shortage lately, dictates that a $200 billion war must jeopardize Social Security funding. This is something the American people deserve to know.

Since there are limits to borrowing and taxing, but no limits to the Fed printing money to cover our deficit, we can be assured this will occur. This guarantees that Social Security checks will never stop coming, but it also guarantees that the dollars that all retired people receive will buy less. We have already seen this happening in providing medical services. A cheap dollar; that is, an inflated dollar, is a sinister and deceitful way of cutting benefits.

Rest assured, a $200 billion hit on the economy will have economic consequences, and the elderly retirees on fixed incomes, and especially Social Security beneficiaries, will suffer the greatest burden of policy, reflecting a belief that our country is so rich that it can afford both guns and butter. Remember, we have tried that before.

The tragedy is that once the flaw in policy is discovered, it is too late to prevent the pain and suffering, and only finger pointing occurs. Now is the only time we can give serious attention to the true cost of assuming the burden of an endless task of being the world's policeman and starting wars that have nothing to do with defense or national security.

A nation suffering from recession can ill afford a foreign policy that encourages unnecessary military action that will run up huge deficits. Congress ought to pause a moment, and carefully contemplate the consequences of the decisions we are about to make in the coming days.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO OFFER MOTION TO INSTRUCT CONFEREES ON H.R. 3295, HELP AMERICA VOTE ACT OF 2001

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 7(c) of the rule XXII, I hereby announce my intention to offer a motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 3295 tomorrow.

The form of the motion is as follows:

Mrs. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendments to the bill H.R. 3295 be instructed to take such actions as may be appropriate to ensure that a conference report is filed on the bill prior to October 1, 2002.

PAYING ATTENTION TO ECONOMIC PROBLEMS IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, there is an old saying about whether people are able to walk and chew gum at the same time. We are chewing on a lot of war, but we certainly are not walking with our economy.

I have come to the floor, in case one does not know it, to announce that the Dow Jones Industrial Average reached its lowest level in 4 years, down 189 points today. Let us pay attention. Even more serious, the Fed's Open Market Committee had two dissenters, something that rarely happens, two dissenters from the decision to hold the Fed funds rate steady.

The Fed repeated its concerns about the slow pace of the recovery of the economy, and it went so far as to indicate that there was a concern about war in Iraq. I am going to quote from that concern: "Considered uncertainty persists about the extent and time of the expected pickup in production and employment owing in part to the emergence of heightened geopolitical risks. You stand forewarned," we stand forewarned.

At the middle and lower end of the income spectrum, the Annual Report of the Census Bureau came out today, and the Census Bureau reported that 1.3 million people slipped below the government's official poverty line. We know that that official poverty line is 20 years old and all the analysts say it is outdated, so there are obviously more than 1.3 million.

Perhaps of greatest importance to the Members of this body, because most of our constituents are middle income, the Census Bureau reported that the median household income, median, fell 2.2 percent last year, and that that was the first decline in median income in our country since 1991.

Everybody lost, my friends. All but the top 5 to 10 percent of households by income lost. The only Americans to gain last year were those with incomes above $150,000.

Why are we not paying any attention to the American economy? Why is the only attention of this body and of this administration on Iraq, thousands of miles away? Can we not talk about Iraq and talk about what the American people talk about every day as well, how their own household income is plunging and going down?

Watch your constituents; watch your district. If you are from the Midwest, your median income fell 3.7 percent. If you are from the West, it fell 2.3 percent. Are my colleagues paying attention to what is happening in their face, in their districts, to their own constituents? Is there not something we can do for them before this House recesses?

I am as worried about war as the next person. I am in a city that has every reason to worry about war. But there are a lot of worries on my mind.

Another worry needs the attention of this body at least as much, and that is the economy of our country and the living standards of our constituents. That, my friends, is getting no attention from this body. That, my friends, is getting all the attention at home after they turn off all of the war talk.

I hope that the pressure that I feel, the pressure of the economy, the decline of the Dow Jones today, the rise in the number of Americans falling below the poverty line, the reduction, the worst reduction in more than a decade, in the median income of American families, I hope that is enough to get our attention before it is too late.

□ 1930

One has to be able to walk and chew gum if one is a Member of Congress. If all we can do is talk about one subject, if all we are worried about is Iraq and not around the corner from where we live, then when we go home, those of us who insist upon a single focus will be punished and should be punished. Let us listen to what most worries the American people. Let us listen to household incomes.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1646, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEARS 2002 AND 2003

Mr. SESSIONS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–682) on the resolution (H. Res. 545) waiving points of order against the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 1646) to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal years 2002 and 2003, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 4691, ABORTION NON-DISCRIMINATION ACT OF 2002

Mr. SESSIONS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–683) on the resolution (H. Res. 546) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 4691) to prohibit certain abortion-related discrimination in governmental activities, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H. Res. 540, EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE HOUSE THAT CONGRESS SHOULD COMPLETE ACTION ON H.R. 3762, THE PENSION SECURITY ACT OF 2002, AND H. RES. 544, EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE HOUSE ON PERMANENCY OF PENSION REFORM PROVISIONS, AND H. RES. 543, EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE HOUSE THAT CONGRESS SHOULD COMPLETE ACTION ON H.R. 4019, MAKING MARRIAGE TAX RELIEF PERMANENT

Mr. SESSIONS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–684) on the resolution (H. Res. 547) providing for consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 540) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that Congress should complete action on H.R. 3762, the Pension Security Act of 2002; for consideraton of the resolution (H. Res. 544) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives on permanency of pension reform provisions; and for consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 543) expressing the sense of the House that Congress should complete action on H.R. 4019, making marriage tax relief permanent, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

THE RAMIFICATIONS OF INCREASING THE PUBLIC DEBT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, we are in a predicament in Congress right now, and that is finishing the appropriations bills. The appropriations process goes from fiscal year to fiscal year, that is, October 1 to October 1. So in just another week we are hitting the new fiscal year. So tomorrow, what we are going to do is pass what is referred to as a CR; it stands for a "continuing resolution." We are now sort of arguing and trying to decide whether continuing spending for the next few weeks should be at the level it was this current fiscal year or whether it should be increased somewhat in terms of spending to accommodate inflation.

The problem is that there are a lot of people in Congress, in the House and in the Senate, that want to spend more money. So what has happened in this Congress, in this government, is spending has been going up faster than inflation. I brought this chart and made up this chart quickly, and we can see how the spending line tremendously has increased over the past 5 or 6 years in terms of spending.

Spending has some consequences in terms of its effect on the economy. The Republican Policy Committee met with Art Laffer, who I consider a very good economist in this country. We met last week. One of my questions to Art was, What is worse as far as its negative effect on economic growth, would it be increasing the debt or having tax increases? He said, in his opinion, they are both about the same kind of negative effect. Tax increases maybe have a greater economic effect in the short run; but in the long run, increasing the debt, that means we are going to take a lot of money out of circulation which, eventually, has just a negative effect on the economy.

A lot of people are saying, well, look, we should be paying more attention to the economy. One way this Congress can pay more attention to allowing the economy to operate the way it should is be a little less overzealous in terms of regulation on business, in terms of our taxes on individuals and business, and when I say taxes on individuals, most of the businesses, the small businesses in the United States pay that individual income tax. So as we become more intrusive in that tax, it has a tendency of discouraging small economic growth, which is really the backbone, the mainstay of employment in the United States.

That brings to mind a question I think that this body must deal with and must consider, and that is how big should the government be in terms of a percentage maybe of gross domestic product. How fast should expenditures rise? Is it reasonable to have the budget of the Federal Government increase three and four times as fast as inflation increases?

And the conclusion is, as we are concerned about the economy, the answer is no, that we should hold the line on spending so we do not have to increase taxes and so we do not have to increase the Federal debt. Politicians have found out, however, that it ends up being to their advantage politically, it increases their chances of being reelected, if they spend more money, so they go home with more pork barrel projects; and they get on television and in the newspaper cutting the ribbon for the new pork that they brought home to their district, or they come up with more social programs to help relieve some problem in the United States. No one can say there are not a lot of problems, no one can say that the spending in the Federal Government probably does not do some good for somebody, but the tendency has been to expand government spending.

Tonight I want to talk a little bit about the ramifications of increasing our public debt. What is the public debt? We have heard people brag that we have paid down part of the debt to the public in the last few years. The fact is that the total debt of the Federal Government has continued to increase every year. The debt can be divided into two portions. It is the Wall Street debt, the amount of money that we borrow from individuals that are at weekly Treasury auctions, and it is the money that we borrow from the trust funds, Social Security being the biggest one. So the money coming in from Social Security when we were pretty overzealous in the amount of increase in the Social Security taxes that we passed in 1983. We now are bringing in from that FICA tax, that 12.4 percent that we charge on everybody's wages for Social Security, we are bringing in $515 billion a year. Out of that $515 billion, this current year, in Social Security benefits, it is immediately sent out, that is, it comes in one week and it is out the next; and Social Security benefits are costing $452 billion, so there is a little extra money.

What we did for a couple of years when we had the balanced budget, when the budget balanced, we used that little extra money to pay down some of the debt held by the public. But since we were borrowing that money from Social Security to pay down another debt, it is sort of like using one credit card to pay down some of the debt of another credit card; the total debt, the total obligation of this country continued to increase.

The tendency has been to have government grow much faster than inflation, and if we project that increase out over several years, it is going to result in government getting way too big.

Let me review a couple of the statistics. In 2001, the debt as a percentage of GDP, gross domestic product, was 33.1 percent, in 2002 it was 33.9 percent, and the projection for 2003 is 34.1 percent. So the Federal debt, even in terms of a percentage of our economy in this country, is growing. That means that we are leaving less money in the pockets of the American worker, the people who earned that money. Somehow, Congress is convincing more and more people that it must be good for them if we are coming up with more social programs, if we are coming up with more government programs to help them out, but the fact is that it is tremendously inefficient taking money away from my home State of Michigan or your home State of wherever, bringing it to Washington, running it through this bureaucracy, this political maze, and then what is left we send back to help out some social program of people that need help.

When I am asked what projects or programs would I cut, it is difficult, because that is the predicament Congress now finds itself in, is arguing how big the appropriations bills should be. An election is coming up November 5, and the big spenders are going to criticize those who want to put a lid on spending and try to spend not more than what the President has recommended; they are going to go back to some of those special interests and say, well, look, those guys on that side of the aisle, probably it is the Democrats saying the Republicans, did not want to give you any more money for your very good project. So politics has come into the picture in terms of trying to get a handle on spending. Like I said earlier, most Members of Congress that come up with more pork barrel spending, that come up with more programs to help out some problem some place, probably have a greater tendency to be reelected. So there is really a lesser of a safeguard on increased spending than there should be.

Here is another problem that we have developed as far as the progressivity of our tax system. Right now, 50 percent of Federal Government benefits go to individuals that pay less than 1 percent of the Federal income tax. So here is 50 percent of the people that are getting a lot of benefits for a little effort in terms of the percentage of the income tax that they pay; and so there are a lot of people in this country who say, well, a little bigger government, a few more programs that might help me would not be all that bad. That is the contest that we are running into as far as the Federal Government.

Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago, we went up to the Federal Hall in New York City, the first time in over 200 years that Congress has moved a session of this body or the Senate out of the location of Washington, D.C. We met at Federal Hall where the Bill of Rights was passed; in 1789 where the first Congress met, where they passed the Bill of Rights, where George Washington was sworn in as our first President. It is my guess as I review the Constitution that our forefathers felt that government should be minimal, that mostly what was passed into law should be at the State level and not the Federal level, so there was some very precise language limiting what the Federal Government could do. We have sort of circumvented that effort, and we have passed more laws and more bills as we have claimed that more and more things are really involved in interstate commerce and, therefore, are a proper role of the Federal Government.

Let me review for my colleagues the interest on the Federal debt. The interest on the Federal debt is becoming one of our largest expenditures. The interest on the Federal debt this year is $331 billion. In 2012 the projection is that the interest on the Federal debt is going to be $513 billion. The problem I think that bothers me and maybe the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) the most is the hoodwinking of the American people in confusing the American people about what the Federal debt really is.

☐ 1945

So as we talk and brag sometimes about the fact that we are paying down the debt, this chart represents the total Federal debt. It represents the fact that the total Federal debt, that what we owe, whether we owe it to Social Security, we have to pay it back; or whether we owe it to somebody that bought a bond on the weekly market of Treasury, it is a debt and obligation of this country. Even more than this, we do not discuss unfunded liabilities.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT), for some comments on trying to be honest with what the Federal debt is.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

In a former life I was a teacher for 24 years, Mr. Speaker. An old adage in teaching is that repetition is the soul of learning. So, at risk of repeating something that the gentleman said, I want to go through just a brief explanation of the debt as I understand it.

The total debt owed by our country is called the national debt. That is made up of two parts. That is roughly $6 trillion. That is made up of two parts. One part is the public debt. We have heard a lot about the public debt, and I will come back to that in a couple of minutes.

The other part of it is the trust fund debt. Lockboxes and paying down the debt, let us talk about that for a moment and see what really happened.

We put a lockbox first on Social Security, and then we decided, since that was such a great idea, we would put one on Medicare. I have had people who ought to know better say that somehow we secured or protected Social Security and Medicare by putting a lockbox on them. Let me explain what that lockbox did.

What the lockbox did was simply to say that if we have a surplus, and we do, for the moment, have a surplus, Mr. Speaker, in these two funds, if we have a surplus, we cannot use that surplus for ordinary spending; we must use it to pay down the public debt.

Now, all of the trust funds are invested in nonnegotiable U.S. securities. We need to understand what happens when monies come into the trust fund. They come into the trust fund. In this day of big computers and instantaneous moving of information around, it probably stays there a nanosecond or two, and then the computer takes it out and replaces it with a nonnegotiable U.S. security. It is nonnegotiable because we cannot cash it in, and it just represents a debt that the collective taxpayers owe to the trust fund.

Now, that is debt. It is going to have to be paid. That money is taken and paid down with the lockbox, and then pays down the public debt. So for every dollar that the public debt goes down, the trust fund debt goes up a dollar.

So if we are looking at the total of these two debts, which is the national debt, it has not changed at all. But there are trust funds for which we have no lockbox. There are 50 or so trust funds. Two of them have a lockbox. Many of them do not have a lockbox, and we happily took that money and spent it, so the total debt, the national debt, kept going up.

Way back a number of years ago, it started with Lyndon Johnson with his guns and butter. He was running such horrific deficits that he wanted to hide the magnitude of the deficits, so he put the trust funds on budget and then coined the perfectly silly statement that the Social Security surplus offsets the deficit. What that means is that when we were told what the deficit was, they did not include in that number the monies that were borrowed from the trust funds. That is about $200 billion a year.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. They came up with this phrase "unified budget" when the gentleman and I came to Congress.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. That is correct. The budget that was balanced was the unified budget. That is all the money that comes into Washington and all the money that leaves Washington, but about 10 percent of the money that comes into Washington should not be Washington's money to spend because they have taken it from the citizens, presumably to put in trust fund for them, but they take and spend that money anyway, and make the silly statement that the Social Security surplus and the other surpluses offset the deficit.

They did offset the advertised deficit, but they did not bother telling us that what this amounted to was a monumental intergenerational debt transfer. Our kids and our grandkids are going to have to pay this.

Now, we cannot run the government today on current revenues; we cannot do it. For all the while, these last 3 or 4 years, that we were told that the budget was balanced, the budget which was balanced was the unified budget, but they were taking about $200 billion a year of trust fund monies that we owe to the trust funds, they are going to have to be paid back by our children and our grandchildren, and they were using those to run the government.

I talked with OMB. If the government keeps its books on an accrual basis, and if a person is a businessperson and has more than $1 million a year going through his company, he has to keep his books on the accrual basis; and we handle more than $1 million in the Federal Government, so presumably we ought to keep our books that way; and if they kept the books on an accrual basis, there never was a moment in time when in fact the national debt went down. Now, it is true that the public debt went down, but for every dollar the public debt went down, the trust fund debt went up

$1, so the collective debt, the national debt, went up.

I kept telling people who would listen that surely their sin will find them out, because what will they tell the people when we have to raise the debt limit ceiling?

See, all the while we were telling the American people that the budget was balanced and we were paying down the debt, and we were paying down the public debt; but all the while, the trust fund debt was going up even faster, which meant that there was an increase in the national debt. All the time we were telling them that, the debt was in fact getting bigger, and soon it reached the debt limit ceiling; so then the government, in order to borrow money to run the government, it would have to raise the debt limit ceiling.

Then we had an interesting day and a half with that, and we were here all night, because we put language in one of the bills that said that they should protect the good faith and credit of the United States. That was a euphemism for "please raise the debt limit ceiling." Those folks on the other side of the aisle, pretty bright people, found that out pretty quickly and they harangued for about a day and a half on that. We finally settled. I got home at 4:30 in the morning.

The reason I am so concerned that the American people understand this is I do not think they want us to run a deficit. I think they want the budget balanced, and I do not think they want us to balance the budget by increasing taxes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. In fact, if the gentleman will yield, that is what was decided: The only way we can increase the deficit is by increasing by congressional action the debt ceiling. So the idea was to make it difficult, and for us to have to think through, do we really want to increase the debt on our kids and our grandkids, to make them pay back what we think should be our standard of living now?

Just how fast this has grown, when the gentleman from Maryland and I, we came into Congress the same year in 1993, and at that time the Federal debt was $4 trillion. Today, the Federal debt is $6.2 trillion, almost a 50 percent increase. Ten years from now, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that the way we are going by covering some of these overexpenditures with increased borrowing, it will increase by 50 percent again, and the debt will be $9 trillion.

What do we do? How do we hold the line? We start out by being honest with the public, with the American people, on what this debt really is, and that it has a very negative effect on their lives, because here is government taking this money out of circulation. Here is money being bid up, if you will, whatever the bid is on interest rate, and saying, look, whatever the bid is, we will up it one because we have to have this money to satisfy the overzealous spending of Congress.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. That is an interesting thing that happened as a result of the fiscal responsibility that we had, not enough to really balance the budget, but enough so that we could make do largely with monies from the trust fund surpluses.

What happened was we were not going to the marketplace for dollars, as we were before, so interest rates went down. That is a positive for borrowing from the trust funds to pay down the public debt.

But the negative of that is that the reality is that we cannot run this government on current revenues, so what we are doing is borrowing from our children and our grandchildren's futures. When it comes their turn to run the government, they are not only going to have to run it on current revenues, they are going to have to pay back all the money that we borrowed from their generation.

When I ran for Congress, and I started running 11 years ago, I said I was going to conduct myself in Congress so my kids and my grandkids were not going to come and spit on my grave because of what I have done to their country. Mr. Speaker, I am still trying to do that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, it was Adam Smith, who I consider another great economist, that in trying to figure out what was prudent, what was the right thing to do fiscally in government, said, what is prudent in one's own personal life is the prudent thing to do as far as running government.

In our personal lives, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) and I are both sort of farmers, and the tradition in farming where we grew up was we tried to pay down the mortgage to give our kids a little better chance.

We are doing just the opposite: We are adding more burden to our kids and grandkids, and jeopardizing their future because somehow we think our spending and our needs today must be greater than what their needs are going to be 20, 30, 40 years from now.

That is ridiculous, it is not fair, and it is something that eventually the American people have to realize when they go to the ballot box this November or whatever November. Some of the questions they have to be asking their candidates are: How deep do you want to go in debt? How much taxes do you want to raise? How much are you going to increase government spending? So do not stand there and brag to me all of the things you are going to do for me with my money as it is filtered through the bureaucracy in Washington.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Milton Friedman made the observation that the government spends all the money we give it, plus as much more as it can get away with. What the American people need to do is to make it very difficult for Congress to spend more money.

When we are told what deficits are going to be and when we will turn the corner and finally have a surplus, this is all on the basis of the unified budget. So add roughly $200 billion a year to all of the deficit figures, and push into the future, and I do not know how far into the future, push into the future the date that we will in fact balance the budget.

I think that the American people want us to have a balanced budget. I do not think they want us to balance the budget by raising taxes; I think they want us to balance the budget by cutting spending. That is what we do in our family: We look at where the money is going and where we can cut expenses so we can live within our budget.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And especially in an emergency. If we have an emergency in our business or family, then we cover that emergency and cut down on spending. Right now we have an emergency in the Federal Government. When we have a war on our hands, a war on terror, a war to make sure that we have security in this country, if there is ever a time when it is reasonable to hold the line on other spending, to start prioritizing a little on where we spend the money, it is now.

Let us spend the money. Let us make sure that, to the best of our ability, that we have the security. Let us beef up our military where we are comfortable with that level. But with the rest of the spending, let us not demand, like we have in past years, that we just continue to spend as if there is no emergency facing us, and that is what we are doing.

What was just handed me, and I do not know if the gentleman can see it, it is the line that projects the increased debt up through 2012. We will see from the 1940s on the debt stayed relatively flat. Traditionally, even the so-called liberal Democrats did not want to increase the debt. In fact, we did not have a fixed debt limit. Every time they increased the debt up until 1983, they said that this was going to be temporary, and at some point it was going to revert back to the previous level of debt, because they did not want to permanently increase the obligation of their kids and their grandkids and great grandkids.

But in 1983, they said, well, maybe we have to increase it permanently. Back in 1970, just 30 years ago, the debt of this country was $380 billion. So after the world wars, the Korean War, the Vietnam War, the Civil War, the War of 1812, the Great Depression, many financial hardships, 32 years later we have gone by what is prudent in the way we handle our personal affairs, and the way we handle our congressional affairs is to the point where we now pay $330 billion every year just on servicing that debt, just on the interest of that debt.

So to hoodwink the American people and suggest that we are paying down the debt to the public when really we are borrowing more money, if you will, from another credit card as we borrow from the trust funds, maybe, I say to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT), it would be good to help everybody understand what these trust funds are.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. The trust funds are money that are taken from the American people for such things as Social Security, and we now do not need all the money we collect. In the future, we will need a whole lot more than we will be collecting then.

□ 2000

In fact, the second biggest trust fund is the Civil Service Retirement trust fund, and then there is the Medicare trust fund. There is the Transportation trust fund, and there are about fifty of these trust funds, and collectively, the current surpluses in those trust funds are about $200 billion a year; and as I mentioned previously, the only thing that can be done under law by those moneys is to invest them in nonnegotiable U.S. securities, and we are not going to bury that out in the back forty or put it under our mattress. We are going to spend it.

The present law really needs to be changed, and we have got to have something else to do with trust fund surpluses or we will always be running deficits because that law prescribed that the only thing we can do with a surplus is to invest it in nonnegotiable U.S. securities which assures that the debt will increase.

I would just like to note that the interest on the debt now is nearly as large as our budget for the military.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. That is correct, $331 billion is the national debt; and now we have upped the military spending to about $360 billion.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, every year that we fail to balance the budget and the debt goes up and the interest goes up makes it that much more difficult to balance the budget the next year because now we have got bigger interest payments. By and by, it will be impossible to really balance the budget if this keeps on going forever, and it cannot.

At some point we have to draw a line and say enough is enough. Government spending cannot continue to increase two or three times faster than the rate of inflation. Ultimately that will bury our economy, and now we are taking from the average American worker 52 percent of all the money they make.

I have not seen it this year but a year ago tax freedom day was May 10. That was the day we finish paying all our State, Federal and local taxes but do not rest easy that on May 11 we can work to make some money for our families because for the next 7 weeks last year, it will be a little different this year, every American worked full time to pay the cruelest tax of all. It is the most regressive tax, the favorite of my liberal friends, by the way. It is the tax for which the poorest of the poor get no exemption or no deduction. They have to pay just as certainly as the richest of the rich, and this is unfunded Federal mandates.

What that is is laws that the Federal Government passes that require a State or a school district or a city or a business to do something that costs money but the Federal Government does not provide the money for it. Last year, July 6 was Government Freedom Day. Fifty-two percent of the working time of every American goes to support the Federal Government. I do not think it is unconscionable to talk about raising taxes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the property taxes throughout the United States, the people have demanded that their property tax be lowered, and I think part of that is because every year they have to reach into their pockets and come up with the money to pay the property tax. So it has been shifted in Michigan, for example, to an increase in the sales tax. If we had a system where people had to reach into their pockets to pay their Federal income tax rather than having it deducted from their paycheck that they never see, the people would be outraged.

Mr. Speaker, I call on every worker in America to look at the stub of their paycheck for their next paycheck and look at this 52 percent-odd in and out that is being deducted from the money they earn. So at what point do the American people rise up and say, look, enough is enough, Congress, get your act together?

Let me just add to my colleague's comment in terms of the unfunded mandates that we put on States and that is trying to pass off and we say we want to do this good thing and then go home and brag about it but we make local jurisdictions pay the costs. We pass a bill that says you have got to do all these things, but you are going to pay for it.

Added to that is the unfunded liabilities, what we owe from promises we have made on Social Security, on Medicare, on the retirement for public service; and let me just read these unfunded liabilities for the next 75 years: $15 trillion more money that we are going to have to come up with for Medicare, and that does not take into consideration expanding Medicare coverage for prescription drugs; $9 trillion we are going to have to come up with extra from someplace to pay Social Security benefits; $800 billion for the public service retirement system.

If we change the system to say we are going to have a unified budget and what we owe the trust funds does not make any difference, then what we are going to see Members of Congress do, politicians do, is sort of increase the FICA tax a little bit, increase what the Army and Navy and civil service have deducted from their paychecks so there is more money coming in that is being used that will be spent by the Federal Government so the Federal Government can brag and say, look, we have a balanced budget.

We only have a balanced budget if we consider the unfunded liabilities, if we consider the obligations that we have from the trust funds because that money going into the trust funds is going to help solve the long-term demographic problems in both Medicare and Social Security.

Just a footnote here, that the money in the Social Security trust fund would cover Social Security benefits for about 2 years. So for somebody to suggest that if government would pay back that money, everything would be okay, it is going to take more than that. It is going to take some dramatic changes in Social Security to try to get a better return on that money than the 1.7 percent. It has got to be optional.

We will probably take it up after the first of the year, but it is easy to demagogue on the campaign trail. So many campaigns are saying, well, my opposing candidate wants to ruin Social Security. So it is a scare tactic, and seniors that depend on this program sometimes do get nervous and do get scared. Some say deficits do not matter; that is not true. The spiralling debt will lead to eventual economic disaster. We need to deal with it.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, when my colleague noted the unfunded liability for Social Security, that depends on when we put the money into the system. The earlier we put the money in, the longer it will collect interest and the less we have to put in; but I have seen some data which indicates that Social Security, if we put no money in, it will run in the red something like $100 trillion during the retirement of the baby boomers. These are big, big numbers. Neither Medicare nor Social Security are solvent for the long haul. We must address both of those.

The encouraging thing is that today we can talk about Social Security. Five years ago to mention Social Security was interpreted by seniors as being a threat to Social Security and they would vote against you. So we could not even talk about it 6 years ago, but now we are talking about Social Security.

We have not done anything about it, and I am sorry that some people believe that the lockbox had anything to do with Social Security. The only thing it could possibly have to do with it is we have paid down something of the public debt which might make us more debt worthy so that we could more easily borrow money, but I have not noticed we had any problem borrowing money. That is the only possible link we could make between the trust fund lockboxes and Social Security.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, what it was, probably, is a gimmick and it was. It was Democrats and Republicans. Vice-President Gore in some of his speeches said the lockbox is great, but Republicans did the same thing. The lockbox was a gimmick to make people believe that somehow we were making Social Security more secure is just not the case. The money was borrowed from Social Security. The money will be paid back, but the consequences of coming up with that money to pay back.

My colleague mentioned $120 trillion; $120 trillion is the extra money that we are going to have to come up with over the next 75 years to meet Social Security benefits, what we have promised over and above what is coming in from the Social Security, or FICA, tax. If we put $9 trillion in an investment fund today, drawing 5 percent, then that $9 trillion that we put from that trust fund into an investment fund today would accommodate the $120 trillion over the next 75 years.

The challenge is to reduce spending now, to hold the line on spending now so that we do not increase taxes, so we do not increase the debt. Maybe we should have a law that says we only can spend what we tax, and therefore, we would have to have a balanced budget. There have been several attempts to put a constitutional amendment in for a balanced budget. I think if we have to increase taxes and take away money out of the American workers' pockets, as Congress wanted, to spend more there would be more of a public outrage in understanding that big government and the expansion of government, as fast as it is growing, is coming at the sacrifice of money being taken away from families in America.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, my colleague's suggestion that if we stopped withholding, that the citizens, when they sat down at the end of the month to make their mortgage payment and the payment on their car, they would also have to write a check to the tax collector, that they would be a whole lot more aware of the size of the tax bite, we are probably not going to get that through Congress.

Let me tell my colleague something that might get through that might have a beneficial effect. What I would like to do is to move tax day to the day before election. Pay taxes on the first Monday in November and vote on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. Does my colleague think that if we paid our taxes on Monday and voted on Tuesday that more people might vote and they might vote differently?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, as my colleague said earlier, I encourage everybody to look at their payroll stub of how much is being taken out for Social Security, how much is being taken out for Medicare, how much is being taken out for local taxes, city taxes, how much is being taken out for the mammoth Federal tax bite that we reach into the American workers' pockets to accommodate expanded Federal Government.

We have got some basic responsibilities. We are in a war and are going to pay for that war. There has been comments from the other side of the aisle that if we just had not had that tax cut, then maybe we would have had enough money to do all of the spending for the war on terrorism plus all of the increased spending that this body has been accustomed to. The fact is that the tax cut only represented 13 percent of the deficit problem this particular year, and according to most economists the positive effect on the economy of having tax reductions more than offset what we lost from simply projecting what the taxes might have been if there was no positive effect on the economy.

The fact is, and Art Laffer said it very dramatically, tax cuts help stimulate the economy. So we cannot say we have got to have more government spending, more government services and someone over, with the other hand, saying Congress has got to deal with encouraging economic expansion and economic recovery.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, there never has been a time in history when a tax increase has stimulated the economy.. If that were true, we have got to believe that a tax decrease does stimulate the economy. It is called dynamic scoring and we cannot do that by law. We really need to change that law. For instance, capital gains tax, every time we have reduced the rate on capital gains tax, the revenues from capital gains taxes have gone up, but we cannot score it dynamically. We have always got to score it as a loser, and the same thing is true of a general tax cut. We have always got to score it as revenue loss, when in reality what my colleague said is exactly true. Tax cuts stimulate the economy and there could be a larger revenue stream as a result of the tax cut and we cannot roll back the hands of time to prove to those who think otherwise; we cannot do history two times, but history tells us that tax increases depress the economy.

If we had a 100 percent tax, how much tax does my colleague think we would collect? Of course, it would be zero because nobody would work. If we have a zero percent tax, we also are going to collect no taxes. Somewhere between zero and 100 percent is the optimum level of taxation where the level of taxation is not going to so suppress the economy, discourage people from working, that they are just going to say I would rather play golf than work because the government is going to take 80 percent of my money.

A man the other day told me that 79.8 percent of all the estate that he has accumulated is going to be taken and he cannot pass it to his grandchildren. This concerns him very much, and I know we have had jobs lost in this country because people have looked at where they are, looked at the enormous tax burdens, looked at how little of their estate they are going to be able to pass on to their children and grandchildren, and they just quit. They are tired of working, they are tired of the responsibility and there is no reward for it and so they quit, and so lots of good jobs have been lost because of that.

The American people do not need more taxation.

The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) talked about the possibility of raising the FICA tax. On many pay stubs that is now the biggest tax item. It is going to be really tough to convince the American people we need to raise that tax.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. As a matter of fact, almost 70 percent more American workers now pay more in the FICA tax than they do in the income tax. I mentioned earlier that we went to New York a few weeks ago to the Federal Hall where the Bill of Rights was developed and our first Congress met. Our Constitution gave the incentive that has made this country so great over the last 226 years. It was a system where those individuals that worked hard, that tried, that learned, that applied that learning, that saved and invested were better off than those that did not. So that kind of an incentive was what made this country great, and we have been redistributing income; so as our taxes have been more progressive and saying, well, if one is successful or if they are a young couple and they want to work another 8 hours to do better for their family, we have a system now that says we are not only going to continue to tax them at the same rate but if they go out with a second job and earn more, we are going to tax them at a higher rate. So like the 100 percent, the more we tax, the more it discourages that kind of saving, that kind of investment. It is a challenge that this country is going to have to face up to.

And the demographics are startling. As we look at the demographics, as we look at more and more people, the so-called baby boomers going out of the working, production, paying-their-taxes mode and apply for Social Security and Medicare to the taking-out position, we are faced with dramatic challenges of the survival of Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid. So the result without some real responsibility in spending is going to increase taxes on everybody else. So when I go to high school classes, I tell them, look, they are the generation at risk. They should be yelling and screaming. They should be going to these political meetings. They should be asking those candidates what they intend to do as far as holding the line on spending and therefore holding the line on taxes that they are going to have to pay, holding the line on debt that they are going to have to pay the interest on every year but eventually they are going to have to pay off that debt.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make two observations. One is that about the time of the Reagan administration, there were a lot of bumper stickers I saw out there that said "no trillion dollar debt." Now it is more than six times that big, and we have not had any six-fold inflation since that time, and where is the outrage? Where is the outrage that we are passing this heritage on to our children and our grandchildren? I thought I had remembered that during the Eisenhower years that our government first reached a $100 billion budget, I thought, gee, $100 billion is a lot of money. So I had the staff go back and check, and it was a couple of years after Eisenhower actually before we spent $100 billion. Look at America then and America now; and we are spending what now, over $2 trillion.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. $2 trillion.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. More than 20 times as much. And our country is not 20 times bigger. Our needs are not 20 times bigger. What has happened to us since those Eisenhower years when we were spending less than $100 billion and we are now spending 20 times that amount of money? We really need to stop and take a long look at where we are and where we are going, and we cannot continue to have this kind of a debt increase. We cannot continue to have this kind of an increasing debt that we are passing on to our children and our grandchildren. We are a rich country, but there is a limit to what we can do; and I really would like to see tax day moved to the day before election. There was an interesting little song several years ago, "We'll remember in November, when I go in that booth, I'm going to vote for anyone but you," and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) may have noted that tax day is about as far on the other side of the calendar as they can get it from election day, is it not? Not very many people remember from April 15 clear around to November, but if it was the day before election, almost everybody has a memory that long; and I think a lot more people would vote and they would vote very differently, and I think we would quickly come to grips with this budgetary problem in our country.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, winding this up, there are some real obligations of the Federal Government. It is the defense, it is the security, it is the health, it is education; but now we have expanded into so many social programs that in many ways take away the incentive of working hard and saving and investing and doing for themselves. We discourage investment. We say, look, if they earn some money and invest it in something and the value goes up, we are going to tax them again.

It is interesting. Our system says to a person, look, after they have earned this money, if they go to Las Vegas and live it up with wine, women, song, gambling, and spend all that money in gambling and waste and expenditures, we are not going to tax them anything; but if they give some of that money to their kids and their grandkids to help in their education, to help in their success, help their development to contribute to this economy, we are going to tax the heck out of them.

Our system of taxation needs to be reviewed, especially when we compare it to other countries, other countries that do not have a capital gains tax, other countries that encourage savings and investment more than we do. The challenge is before us, and it is not going to be an easy road. And I compliment the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) for his willingness to stand up against the easy road to say, look, we are going to be okay, we are going to pay everybody's benefits, we are going to come up with all these programs that do everything they want us to do. The fact is that sometimes it is very difficult to say, look, that should not be a Federal Government responsibility, that should be a State government responsibility, a local government responsibility, or an individual's responsibility. So it is hard choices in a situation where everybody is running for political office and the tendency is to try to please everybody.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, the Bible says it is more blessed to give than to receive, and the government has largely usurped the role of philanthropist. Several years ago in our church, our kids did not go trick or treat. They would go out before and they would leave a bag; then they would go pick it up and the ladies would help them make food baskets to give to poor families on Thanksgiving. So one of our ladies called the local welfare people and said, We would like the names of some poor families that need food so that we can give them some food.

And the welfare worker was indignant. What do you mean poor families that need food? What do you think we are here for? There are not any poor families that need food. Of course that is not true. There are some who fall through the cracks. But this was just evidence of how broad the role of the Federal Government has gotten.

When I look back at those Eisenhower years, $100 billion budget, 62 percent of that budget, 16 percent of GDP, went for defense. Today it is 15 percent of our Federal budget and less than 3 percent of GDP that goes for defense. Now relatively we are spending only one-fifth as much on defense today, but we are spending 20 times as much as that Eisenhower budget in our total government.

And the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is right. Here in this Congress we vote on only about one-third of all the money that is spent. The rest is called entitlements. It runs on auto pilot and every year it goes up and up, and we need to address both the entitlements and the discretionary spending, and America will not be solvent and our children will not look forward to a bright future until we have done that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. A wise man once said that "if you are in debt, you are not free." So whether one is an individual or a business or the Federal Government, we have got to pay attention to debt and eventually have some kind of a plan to pay that debt off.

Again, I would thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT).

THE NEED FOR A NEW BUDGET PLAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PLATTS). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PHELPS) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. PHELPS. Mr. Speaker, I represent the 19th district of Illinois. I am honored to be here in my second term in Washington, D.C.; and, Mr. Speaker, tonight as one who is honored to be a member of the Blue Dog Democratic Coalition, we will be joined by hopefully several other members of the Blue Dog Coalition tonight; and we want to focus our time on discussing the budget situation, the negative consequences of a return to deficits and debt, and the Blue Dog message about the need for a new budget plan.

It is one thing to have a budget plan as we started this session and this budget year and as the President outlined in his budget plan. It is one thing to head in the direction we intend to go and meant to go, but then unanticipated obstacles, unfortunate happenings and incidents, dreadful experiences deter the plans and get us off the path and the goals in which we intended when we outlined our first intentions. Part of that we know was the recession, deeper than any wanted to acknowledge or to accept; and of course September 11, the impact that it has had we are still feeling and will for some time: tax cuts, spending. All that goes together in affecting that original plan that the President set forth in the budget resolution.

So part of our job as elected people is to make sure, at least in my estimation, that we are flexible enough to adjust to situations that get us off that direction that we started. And our discussion tonight, at least from the Blue Dogs' perspective, hopefully will be to point out how far we have gotten off that path and to hopefully make suggestions as to how we can modify our direction and stay within the confines of a balanced budget, which, by the way, has not had any discussion in the 4 years I have been here, soon to be. I have not seen a balanced budget resolution brought to the floor, and I would think that we, as near a bipartisan group as one can almost get, meaning that one party does not have a super majority over another in either Chamber, that should mean that we are working together more because we have to, and the numbers dictate that. However, I have not seen that happening in the last few months, in a couple of years at least.

Mr. Speaker, to get started on our focus and discussion of the budget situation and the negative consequences of a return to deficits and debt, our message is about a new budget plan and why we need to usher in as quickly as possible to make sure we acknowledge some of the things that happened that are not necessarily the fault of anyone and we should not be pointing our fingers at each other at this time. That is for sure. We can debate and talk about what happened, but we need to acknowledge that it is a different situation now than it was September 11, 2001.

So we, as Members of Congress, try to depend and must depend on authentic numbers, sound numbers that tell us how much resources we have to work with, what is in the bank, what we owe, what we can anticipate to come in from various sources of revenue, and what we know are going to be expenses that we are obligated to pay and as we go through a budget year in trying to reach a budget agreement before we adjourn for this session, trying to anticipate what the costs will be in this budget agreement. So we have a general outline. How we reach the end of that process depends on how much we work together and all the facts that come to us that were not there in the beginning of the presentation such as I alluded to with the President's budget resolution.

So we find ourself in a new time, new day, new circumstances. Our plea as Blue Dogs is we would acknowledge this as a body which has been elected from every State in the country, and even within my own State the great diversity that we face should help us instead of prevent us in coming to a reasonable agreement.

We have fiscal reporting offices, bureaucracies, and departments to give us an idea of our situation in the past few months, what we thought we had and could depend on, what we have presently to depend on with revenues and outlook, and what our plans should embrace depending on the information we can best conjure up for the future, the short term as well as the long-term future.

So most of the discussion about the budget, the tax cuts, the receipts, the revenues and everything in the last 4 or 5 years has been about a 10-year projection, which I personally feel is a false premise to begin with. How in the world would anybody have anticipated September 11 or the recession making as much impact as it did on our economy?

So we need to weigh all those things now in a different light. So we do have the Congressional Budget Office, which confirms what we have to work with as Members of Congress so we can relate to our constituents, the voters, the taxpayers, the citizens, just exactly how we should be guided through the process that we were elected to do to arrive at a financial, sound way of managing the resources that this country produces and gives to the government sector, to give back through the process of which we decide priorities that are outlined by everyone's discussion here, the input that comes from individual Members. That is why we are in the greatest deliberative body in the world right here in the House of Representatives.

So the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, that is the fiscal reporting group that should not be swayed or influenced and was put in place by one party or the other, or leadership or those that are more powerful to the seniority years. Those things are very important for us to take into consideration when we receive the information from the Congressional Budget Office.

So the Congressional Budget Office confirms that the surpluses projected last year have been replaced by deficits and growing debt. The CBO, which I will refer to the Congressional Budget Office as, has released updated economic and budget projections for the next 10 years. There again we are on this 10-year kick which I feel is shaky ground.

The report documents the continuing deterioration in the 10-year budget outlook. Last year the CBO projected that the government would run a budget surplus of $3.4 trillion, excluding the Social Security surplus, meaning the Social Security revenue, FICA, that comes in from those who work every day, coming from their earnings to pay into the Social Security and Medicare Trust Fund.

That surplus was excluded from the $3.4 trillion surplus. The CBO now projects that the government will run a non-Social Security, that means not counting the Social Security receipts and revenues, budget deficit of $1.5 trillion. That is reversal of nearly $5 trillion in a year and a half.

The CBO projections do not include costs of additional tax cuts or increased spending proposed by the President or being considered here in Congress. Extending the expiring provisions of the 2001 tax cut law would add more than $600 billion to the deficit projections over the next decade, in which this Congress has chosen to choose the way to project budget, give tax cuts, obligate spending and look at debt.

The first major violation occurred in our agreements over the last several years when we broke the lock on the lockbox and raided Social Security. For the past couple of years the other side has made promises to protect Social Security. This budget is far from protecting Social Security, and I defy any Member to prove to me otherwise. Many of my constituents depend on Social Security as a means of comfort after they have worked hard all their life, over the many years that they have labored in their occupation.

This budget calls for tapping the Social Security Trust Fund to support other government programs every year for the next 10 years for a total of $1.5 trillion. Now, I am concerned about that, and that is why I am spending my time trying to communicate the situation to the American people and those who I represent in the 19th Congressional District of Central and Southern Illinois.

Our Nation cannot afford to put our Social Security system at risk when it is depended on by so many of our citizens. Social Security and Medicare are the two crown jewels of social programs in the history of our Nation. They have been very successful, but yet we have not managed them properly, and we are about to get to that breaking point where it is going to be unmanageable.

Let me just talk about running up the national debt before I introduce my colleague. During the budget debate last year, Republicans in Congress claimed there was a danger that the government would pay off the debt held by the public too quickly, something I laughed at and thought, my, what a great fortune that would be. Little more than 1 year later, the Congressional Budget Office now projects that the publicly held debt will increase from $3.32 trillion at the end of fiscal year 2001 to $3.865 trillion by the end of 2006, a $545 billion increase in the debt.

As a former teacher, as a father and a grandfather, I have always tried my best to do what is right for the next generation, the future generations even beyond the next generation. We cannot afford to leave our children in a mess that they cannot clean up. The administration says the publicly held debt will begin to gradually decline in 2005. Even if that is true and even if the debt does start to decline and the government does its part in beginning to pay it down, we still need to remember the impact this is having on our system of Social Security. This is where our children are going to be impacted the most.

From my understanding, the total debt of our Nation is going to continue to increase. That is right. Even though the administration suggests that the publicly held debt will begin to decline, the fact is that the total debt will continue to rise due to the fact that we have not kept the commitment to save the Social Security Trust Fund surplus. We all made that commitment. We have broken that commitment. That is just fact. That is just the truth.

The statutory debt limit, which has increased by $450 billion to $6.4 trillion just 2 months ago, will need to be increased again next year. I would gather that is why we are probably going to find ourselves in a lame duck session because too many of these facts are too severe for some of us to want to face and to tell the American people the truth about the situation we face. So it is time to regroup. It is time to go back to the table and say let us acknowledge what has happened. Before it is too late, let us look at another plan. The Blue Dogs presented that several months ago, and we have yet to receive or be responded to in a serious nature from the other side of the aisle or from the administration or from leadership here in the House.

Mr. Speaker, let me introduce a member of the Blue Dog Coalition who came to Congress the same year I did, is a member of my same Congressional class, and is one of my closest friends, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL).

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PHELPS) for his leadership on this particular issue. I have come to know the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PHELPS) now in the last 4 years, and he is in fact a dear friend of mine and we have shared a lot of stories together. I have also come to respect his honesty and integrity. When the gentleman says something, you can put it in the bank that the facts have not been massaged and it is the truth. What the gentleman said a few minutes ago is right on the mark and I applaud the gentleman and what he does for his constituents back home in Illinois.

Mr. Speaker, I had an opportunity and challenge to get elected to the Indiana legislature back in 1982, and during that time I will never forget it, we went into a special session right away. In that special session the legislature raised taxes to overcome budget deficits that they were having in the State of Indiana.

Here in Washington during that time there was a new President who was advocating tax cuts and increased military spending. In the process of doing that, huge budget deficits occurred. It seems to me that we are in that same situation now because if we look around the Nation, all over America, State governments are increasing their taxes while Congress is cutting Federal taxes, increasing the military spending dramatically, and in many ways justified because of the war on terrorism, and we are starting to run up huge deficits all over again. It is deja vu all over again, just like it was in the 1980s. These are policies that have been put in place that are getting in my view undesired results because deficits are a problem.

During the 1990s, we changed course from the 1980s and we adopted new economic policies. Our emphasis was on debt reduction. We were largely successful in the 1990s for reversing those policies of the early 1980s.

□ 2045

In the late 1990s when the gentleman from Illinois and I came to Congress, we actually experienced budget surpluses for the first time in many, many years. Then there was a Presidential race, of course, in the year 2000. This Congress and this administration has returned to the policies of the 1980s which again are resulting in huge budget deficits. Some called it supply side economics. At one time it was called voodoo economics. I do not know what to call it, but all I know is we are running up huge deficits once again.

The Blue Dogs are a group of 33 Members of Congress, the gentleman from Illinois and I are two of those 33, that believe that we ought to be fiscally responsible and try to get us back on a path where we do pay our debts just like every American family does all across America.

I have been back in the district for the last several weekends, and I have discovered that people are hurting. The economy is not doing so well. The families back in the ninth district in Indiana who are not doing so well are changing their budgets to reflect the bad economic times that they are having. They know, the good folks of southern Indiana, just like the good folks in south central Illinois, that when you fall upon hard times, you have got to readjust your budgets in order to pay your bills. That is the honest way to do things. That is the forthright thing for people to do. By and large, the good people of southern Indiana that I have the fortune to represent redo their budgets to reflect the times.

Congress for some reason feels like it does not have to do that. As a matter of fact, we are spending money like it is growing on trees again. The Blue Dogs are a group of 33 that thinks that we ought to sit down as Democrats and Republicans in a bipartisan fashion and try to come up with a plan to get us out of this deficit, just like families back in southern Indiana do; they come up with a plan to get us out of these deficits. Congress needs to do the same thing. The Blue Dogs have been a strong voice calling for a budget summit, for us to come down as Republicans and Democrats to figure out a way how we are going to get out of this budget crisis that we are in.

I would like to cite some statistics. Last year, CBO, the Congressional Budget Office, projected that the government would run a budget surplus of $3.4 trillion excluding the Social Security surplus. The Congressional Budget Office now projects that the government will run a non-Social Security budget deficit of $1.513 trillion, a reversal of nearly $5 trillion in only a year and a half. So those huge budget surpluses that we experienced in the late 1990s are gone in a year and a half, and we are accumulating a $1.513 trillion reversal.

The Congressional Budget Office projects the government will run a unified deficit of $157 billion in the current fiscal year. When the Social Security surplus is excluded, CBO projects an on-budget deficit of $314 billion, $162 billion higher than that projected in January. For fiscal year 2003, the CBO projects a unified budget deficit of $145 billion and an on-budget deficit of $315 billion when Social Security is excluded. The government is projected to borrow virtually all of the Social Security surpluses to finance deficits in the rest of this budget.

The gentleman from Illinois was talking about how many of us, myself included, pledged to put a lockbox around Social Security and not spend the Social Security surpluses, to use Social Security for only what it is supposed to be used for, and that is Social Security. If you ask your people back home if that is the right thing to do, I guarantee you overwhelmingly people will say that is the right thing to do. We should not be using these Social Security surpluses to finance the debt that we are incurring. It is irresponsible. Nearly $1 trillion, $964 billion to be exact, over the next 5 years and more than $2 trillion by the end of this decade will be used from Social Security surpluses. That is wrong.

During the budget debate last year, some Members of Congress actually came to this microphone and claimed that there was a danger that the government would pay off the debt held by the public too quickly. As we think about that today, that was just plain laughable. Little more than 1 year later, CBO projects that the publicly held debt will increase from $3.32 trillion at the end of fiscal year 2001 to $3.865 trillion by the end of 2006, a $545 billion increase.

I would assume that most people who are listening to these budgetary figures, their eyes have got to be glazing over now. These are numbers that nobody understands. So let me try to put it in perspective a little bit better. If this holds true, if these deficits hold true, it will be the largest increase in debt in the history of this country in one year, the largest increase in the history of this country. So we have returned to the early 1980s and those economic theories, where you cut taxes here, the States have to raise taxes back in our homes, we increase funding for military spending and we run up huge deficits again. It is deja vu all over again.

The real problem is that the budget is projected to continue to run on-budget deficits requiring the government to raid Social Security and Medicare trust funds even after the economy recovers and returns to strong growth. We face long-term budget problems that go far beyond the impact of the war on terrorism or the downturn in the economy. Running deficits and increasing the debt over the next decade and leaving in place long-term fiscal shortfalls will make it even harder to meet our commitments to workers who will retire in the next decade and beyond. Higher debt means higher spending on interest payments. You want a tax cut? Pay down the debt so that we can reduce interest, so that people can buy their homes and their cars and make their loans more cheaply. That is money in everybody's pocket.

The government will spend nearly $2 trillion paying interest on the debt over the next 10 years. We will spend $170 billion in interest payments just this year. And spending on interest will continue to increase through 2007. Spending on interest on the debt is the most wasteful use of taxpayer dollars. The amount of the budget consumed by spending on interest takes away resources that could be used for other priorities, such as defense, health care, education, et cetera.

More than $1 trillion of the national debt, roughly one-third of the publicly held debt, is held by foreign investors. In 1998, the U.S. Government paid $91 billion in interest payments to foreign investors. The national debt places a drag on the economy and a burden on the family budget by keeping interest rates higher than they would otherwise be. Budget deficits and a large national debt have a major negative impact on the economy and the finances of American families by keeping interest rates high. Continuing to allow the national debt to grow will impose an increasing tax burden on future generations to pay for the current consumption. The President must work with Congress to put its fiscal house back in order, just as families back in Indiana facing financial problems must work with the bank to establish a financial plan in order to get approved to refinance their debts.

In short, we need a budget summit, as the gentleman from Illinois has already outlined. We need to reach out, Republicans and Democrats, within the Congress of the United States and to the President, to try to come up with a plan like families back in Indiana do themselves, coming up with a plan to try to get us out of the problem that we face, and it is a problem.

Mr. Speaker, our young men and women are fighting terrorism all over the world right now as I speak. Of course we need to support them. It is immoral for us to require them to fight these wars and then to come home and in the later years when they are in the Congress of the United States, be responsible for somehow figuring out how we pay this debt off that we, our generation, has incurred. It behooves me and this Congress and the people who might be listening, certainly the people of southern Indiana, to get our fiscal house in order by calling a summit, asking Republicans and Democrats to come together to figure out a way how we are going to return to fiscal responsibility.

Mr. PHELPS. I thank the gentleman from Indiana. Let me just say, knowing this gentleman for the last 4 years, we came in, as I said, the same year. You would think as very enthusiastic freshmen, honored to be elected and serve in this great body, naturally we shared some of the same commitments and priorities as education and health care, those things that are basic to our well-being and our communities and our families, both of us, as well as all the Blue Dogs.

But as freshmen Members, I remember having the discussion how important Social Security and Medicare protection was to us as freshmen. As far beyond any other thing that we were concerned about, that was at the top of the list. It was not rehearsed. It was not something we conjured up. That is the way we felt when we first entered this body. Now we find ourselves in this situation, and we have seen it decline; As I said before, some of it is not our fault. It is out of our own power that things have happened, and circumstances.

But it is within our power to recognize and acknowledge a problem and say, what can we do together from here knowing this situation happened 9–11, the recession was deeper, we want to acknowledge or at least accept; and the tax cuts, how much impact did all of that have and the projections of 10 years being too rosy, painting a rosy picture, downplaying the liabilities. That is what has got us in this situation. So it is not time, even though it is right before the election, to start pointing fingers and say that it is your fault, it is your fault, but it is our fault if we do not recognize it is time to come together and acknowledge and embrace a new plan that will reflect what has happened to us.

With that let me thank the gentleman. If he would like to interject anything from now to the end of our time allotted, feel free. We can have open discussion, but it is my honor to now introduce, I started to say the oldest Blue Dog, but I will just say the most senior of the Blue Dogs who actually was instrumental in forming this coalition which, I think, has had its impact on the Nation and someone who has been a mentor to me, even though we come from extreme distances away, from Texas to Illinois, believe me, it is scary how close our thinking is on line together, my dear friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank my friend from Illinois, and I thank my friend from Indiana for their discussions tonight. I want to begin by building on the major points that they made in their conclusions. We are here tonight not for fingerpointing, but in an offer to work in a bipartisan way for a solution. We offered ours last year in the budget debates and we were turned down. That is perfectly the prerogative of this body. The majority can ignore the minority anytime you would like. You passed your economic plan. We thought it was poorly conceived, but you did not. And now we have the results. Today the stock market reached the lowest point that it has been in 6 or 7 years. Unemployment is beginning to move up. We have a lot of concerned people around this country, concerned about whether or not their jobs are secure, their savings are secure; and we still have the very real concern about Social Security, because we can talk all about, we can blame all we want to, and I am a little bit perturbed with both sides regarding the Social Security arguments that are taking place today, but the one thing we cannot say is that anybody is doing anything about it.

If you are perfectly satisfied with running the largest deficit in the history of our country, then continue to come to this floor and demand to continue to follow the economic game plan that we are now under and that is a perfectly honest position to take and then assume the responsibility for what that policy brings. Because that is what is happening today. We cannot undo it, what has happened to this point; but we can make a difference in what is going to happen from this day forward.

That is where I think the market is crying out for some direction and leadership and for us in this body to quit the finger pointing.

We had two sense of Congress resolutions on the floor last week that were, with all due respect, ridiculous; us, we in the House of Representatives, who have only passed five appropriations bills, blaming the Senate because they have not passed a budget, and the only thing that divides us is $9 billion. $9 billion is what the finger pointing is all about, and this body and the wonderful leadership we have here is saying it is all the Senate's fault.

Now, that is laughable. From where I come from in Texas and from where I think the gentlemen from Illinois and Indiana come from, if you are going to finger point, my people want me to say okay, then what would you do differently?

Well, here we have offered and we will continue to offer what we would do differently. We need a summit on the budget. We need to sit down and put everything on the table and work ourselves out of a very difficult situation this country finds itself in, very difficult. But there seems to be no interest in that.

You know, here we had some safeguards, some policy procedures, that were put into effect in the 1997 budget, even going back to the 1990 budget, in which we suggested that having caps on spending agreed to would be helpful to resolving our budget differences. Now, this year the Blue Dog Democrats said, in agreement with the majority, that the $759 billion number is a good number and we are prepared to support our colleagues on that number, or at least some of us are.

Pay-go, we have had a pretty good little budget process in which if you are going to propose increasing spending, then pay for it. If you are going to propose additional tax cuts, pay for it. Do not borrow it on our children's and grandchildren's future. That expires September 30. I am told, and I hope I am wrong, and I would love to be proven wrong and have someone come to the floor of the House and say right now, Charlie, you are wrong; we are going to reimpose the pay-go rules. We are going to have those rules, and, by the way, instead of ignoring them, as this body has done for the last 2 years, we are going to live up to them.

It is kind of amusing to me sometimes, we are out here arguing for pay-go rules, and we waive them every time a rule comes to the floor that has something to do with sense of Congress resolutions, or with spending resolutions, or the favorite is tax cutting resolutions. If we are going to have a rule of the House, live by it.

We are prepared to back the majority party, and we will propose on the CR tomorrow, or the next day, when we have the continuing resolution, which is an indication of a failure of this body to do our work, when we cannot pass 13 appropriations bills and send them to the other body. If we passed our 13 and sent them to the other body and the other body did not act, then we would have the right to criticize the other body. But the gall of my friends on the majority side who will stand up and be critical of the other body when we have not done our work, it just defies my imagination.

Mr. Speaker, we increased the debt ceiling earlier this year, and at the rate we are borrowing money now and with the projected additional spending over and above what is in current law, the gentleman from Indiana a moment ago stated it correctly, this Congress is going to preside over the largest single increase in our Nation's debt in the history of this country, and yet the majority claims they are conservative.

Now, that, with all due respect, is argumentative, and I would love to see a serious debate on some of these issues, other than just the stone-walling and the blaming and the finger pointing that is going on and trying to blame the other body because of inability of this side to pass appropriations bills.

Whatever happened to the legislative process in which you have differences of opinion and you sit down and work them out together? If you have got the votes, you pass them, and, if you do not have the votes, you fail them. That is kind of what the majority is doing today, I suppose. But yet you seem to not be willing to assume the responsibility of the actions that you continually vote out of this body, and you seem to be wanting to blame the other body.

I do not understand that. I do not understand the logic of that. That is why the Blue Dogs are going to be on the floor day after day after day until we are adjourned asking the simple question, what is wrong with a budget summit? What is wrong with sending a message to the investment community, the investors of this Nation, saying we are going to sit down and actually work on some new solutions, or come to the floor and say we have the perfect solution and we want to continue and we want the results to be our responsibility.

Social Security: I have been in this body now for almost 24 years. When I was first elected in 1978, 2011 was a long time away. Today, 2011 is 9 years away. 2011 is when the baby-boomers, the greatest generation, those that we rightfully pay homage to on a regular basis for their tremendous patriotism and support in the winning of World War II, it is when the baby-boomers begin to retire, that the largest single drain on the economy of the United States in paying off the debt to the trust funds that we must honor will begin to come due.

Instead of us dealing with that as the Blue Dogs asked and pleaded last year when we were talking about a $5.6 trillion projected surplus, we were emphasizing that is projected; do not spend money that is not there. But we were not heeded.

We suggested taking half of that projected surplus and paying down the debt, then the other half of that surplus divided equally between tax cuts targeted for purposes that will benefit the economy and the other one-fourth or half of the remaining projected surplus, increased spending in priority areas which started with defense and then veterans and then healthcare and then education and then rural America. That was our priorities.

But we also said before we do any of that, let us sit down as a body, Democrats and Republicans, and work out the answers to the future of the Social Security system and the Medicare system and the Medicaid system. We have got a crisis out there in our nursing homes all across this Nation, in my home state and in every other state, and instead of us dealing responsibly with trying to come up with policies that will answer the nursing shortage and the tort reform and the malpractice reform and all of the things we need to be doing, what are we doing? We are going to pass a CR, a continuing resolution, and we are going to punt into the next election, and we are going to poison the well on all of these issues that will make it even more difficult to deal with it next year.

We said, let us deal with it last year, but, again, the majority said, no, we have got a better idea. And that is the prerogative, Mr. Speaker, of the majority. Many times I come to the floor and I will get a few calls that will come in and say, you Democrats are just spouting sour grapes. Well, if that is your opinion, I respect everybody's opinion. But we are sincerely here tonight, as we were last week, as we will be tomorrow, saying we have got a problem.

No one, no one in the entire United States today, argues that there is not a problem with the Social Security System, in the future. No one. We all agree. We have got different solutions. I have got mine. I worked with the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE) for the last 6 years on a proposal. We know what we are for, or what we think we are for.

But I respect anyone that has got an opinion. If we would just spend some time in this body in the committees dealing with that problem, instead of bringing sense of the Congress resolutions to the floor of the House saying that it is really all the other body's fault, and doing that with a clear, unsmiling face.

We are this body. We are the House of Representatives. We are the people's House. We are the ones that are elected by a majority of the people within our district. And, just as my colleague from Indiana said a moment ago, the people in Indiana are asking us to come up with a solution.

Why are we not? What is it about politics today that has all been turned over to our promoters and issues, and no one ever, ever asks us to be accountable for our actions except the blame game?

Well, Social Security and the trust fund and the trust fund problem are very, very real, and I venture to say that not a single one of the 435 of us in this body tonight, both sides of the aisle, would disagree with that very calm statement. But when you are in the minority, you cannot effectuate the direction of policy. Only the majority can determine what can come to the floor and how it comes to the floor.

Yes, we are a little bit testy on the Blue Dog side, because when we come to the Committee on Rules and ask to have some of our ideas considered and voted upon, we have been denied and denied and denied. What is it that the majority party of this body today that calls itself conservative is suddenly afraid of ideas and letting ideas come to the floor and be voted upon? What is it? I do not know. But I am a little bit frustrated. But that comes with being in the minority, I am told, and that is the way our system is supposed to work.

We are living in some very trying times, and I will predict that there is going to be tremendous support for our President when we deal with matters of tremendous importance and seriousness regarding international affairs. We certainly will find strong bipartisan support for standing with the young men and women that were mentioned a moment ago that we will send perhaps into harm's way, as we already have in Afghanistan. And, yes, there is a cost, a tremendous cost. War is not something that should ever be taken for granted or expressed in simplistic terms. It is one of the most serious matters to come before this body, and we will deal with it in this body, and I have every confidence that this is one issue that will have adequate airing and discussion in the people's House.

But tonight we talk about the lack, the lack, of allowing serious debate of a change of economic policy for this country. Again, if we are wrong and we do not need this change and we do not need a summit, then so be it. Obviously that is the answer coming from the majority side. That is obviously the answer. "We like the game plan we are under and we are perfectly willing to stand up to that game plan because it is working."

Well, that is the kind of debate that we ought to have in a little more open way, instead of the blame game. I hope tomorrow and the day after that that we will get away from these sense of the Congress resolutions, trying to blame somebody else for the inability of this House to deal with our own problems. I will not call us a do-nothing House, because we have done something. We have passed some resolutions. We have done some good. But it is the big undone good that we have tonight that we focus on as Blue Dogs, because by not facing up to the economic problems of this country, by not facing up to the ticking time bomb of 2011, by ignoring the interests of those who cannot vote, our children and grandchildren, those who do not have a vote today, by continuing to insist that the economic plan that we are under is good and that they should be the ones to pay for the debt that we are building up today, and standing on the floor as some are tempted to do and saying the debt really has not gone up, when we know it has gone up and will go up this year, the largest single increase in the Nation's debt in one year in the history of our country, is coming under the economic game plan that we seem unwilling or unable to make any changes in.

The gentleman from Illinois, I thank him for taking this time tonight, and I look forward to hopefully in the days ahead joining in a spirited debate. Tonight, since we cannot seem to do it in the regular hours of the day, we cannot seem to find it in our heart to be in legislative session on anything but after 6:30 on Tuesdays and going home on Thursdays, and yet we are blaming the other body for not doing their work, that maybe we could have a little time in these hours at night to have a serious discussion, and perhaps maybe some of our friends from the other side of the aisle, and we have many, and there are many more agreements in this body than there are disagreements, but it is the call of the leadership that determines the manner in which we debate it. That is my frustration.

So if we get another hour tomorrow night, I hope maybe we will be joined by some of our colleagues, and we can have a good discussion as to why it is somebody else's fault that we are not doing our job.

Mr. PHELPS. Mr. Speaker, there is not a more aggressive leader in terms of how we deal with the budgetary challenges in this body than the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM). Both sides of the aisle will tell us in the corridors of this Chamber that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) has provided leadership that is unique, courageous; and the greatest compliment that one can have here is when they say that someone tells the truth. Even when we are into debate openly, many will not give credit for those terms; but the gentleman from Texas has earned that right, and I thank him very much, my friend and colleague, for his input and for his leadership to those of us who are new in the Blue Dog Coalition in terms of telling us how to communicate the urgencies at hands. I thank the gentleman for his input and for allowing me this time to manage the time tonight. It is a great honor for me.

I will continue on my points that I was outlining before I turned it over to my colleagues, and the third point is that the deterioration of the budget outlook demonstrates the danger of making commitments based on uncertain budget projections, as I began my remarks tonight of how we have embraced this 10-year projected outlook of budgets, debts, obligations, priorities and everything else which I think is a false promise to begin with.

But when Congress considered the budget last year, the Blue Dogs warned then about the danger of making long-term commitments for tax cuts or new spending programs based on projected surpluses and proposed setting aside of half of the on-budget surplus for a cushion to protect against unforeseen changes. The President and the Republicans here in Congress promised that we could afford to fund priorities such as defense, prescription drugs, agriculture, education, and many other priorities, and enact the President's tax cuts, and save the Social Security surpluses, and pay off the national debt. Well, the new budget reports indicate that the government will return to deficit spending and raid the Social Security trust fund, confirming that the warnings made by the Blue Dogs last year about the dangers of making expensive budgetary commitments based on these uncertain projections now are taking place. With the new budget outlook, any increases to fund the war on terrorism or other priorities will result in additional borrowing from the Social Security trust fund and increase the debt.

While deficits may be inevitable in the short term, the real problem is what has happened to the long-term budget outlook.

The primary source of the deterioration of the budget outlook in the short term is the economic downturn and spending for the war on terrorism. I completely understand, and united we stand behind this President on the war against terrorism and the need for spending what is necessary to win the war on terrorism and ensure the protection of our fellow Americans here at home. However, we need to work together in developing a plan that will fight the war on terrorism, but will also protect the Social Security trust fund and benefit our future generations. We really need to start thinking about our children's future.

The real problem is that the budget is projected to continue to run on budget deficits, requiring the government to raid the Social Security and Medicare trust funds, even after the economy recovers, hopefully, when it does, and returns to strong growth. We face long-term problems that go far beyond the impact of the war on terrorism or the downturn of the economy. The CBO, the Congressional Budget Office, estimated that the estimated budgetary impact of September 11 plus associated interest costs represents only about 11 percent of the more than $5 trillion total deterioration of the surplus since last year.

Similarly, the CBO found that the economic downturn is responsible for just 10 percent of the deterioration of the budget projections and that the deficits will continue long after the economy is projected to return to strong growth. Running deficits and increasing the debt over that decade and leaving in place long-term fiscal shortfalls will make it even harder to meet our commitments to workers who will retire in the next decade and beyond.

Higher debt means higher spending on interest payments. The most wasteful spending possible is spending on interest payments on the debt. The government will spend nearly $2 trillion paying on interest on the debt over the next 10 years. We will spend $170 billion in interest payments this year alone, and spending on interest will continue to increase through 2007. Spending on interest on the debt is the most wasteful, as I said, use of the taxpayers' dollars. The amount of the budget consumed by spending on interest takes away resources that could be used for our priorities such as defense, health care, education, et cetera.

More than $1.2 trillion of the national debt, roughly one-third of the publicly held debt, is held by foreign investors. In 1998, the U.S. Government paid $91 billion in interest payments to foreign investors.

The national debt places a drag on the economy and a burden on the family budget by keeping interest rates higher than they otherwise would be. Budget deficits and a large national debt have a major negative impact on the economy and the finances of American families by keeping interest rates high. Congress must also enact rules or extend rules enforcing budget discipline. Strong budget enforcement rules are important, as the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) said, as a component of restoring fiscal discipline and making sure that the budget remains in balance.

Mr. Speaker, having the privilege to go back to my home district every weekend since I have been a Member of Congress is one of those things that just maintains one's sanity, and I am sure the gentleman from Texas agrees; going back to the real world where the real problems are discussed. Just this weekend, where I direct the music in my home church, Sunday evening we had a church-wide groundbreaking for a new building project of a Christian life center. Less than 9 years ago, we broke ground for a new auditorium that seats nearly 500 people, the third building program we have had since I have been a member and known anything about that program, and building a church, the Star General Baptist Church there in North Eldorado, Illinois, where my grandfather was pastor way before I was born.

And at that groundbreaking, the best news that we all, as Democrats, Republicans, Independents, and we do not even know party affiliations and most do not care, all those who I grew up with and know and worship with and serve in the community with and live with, that night we celebrated the fact that we would start several $100,000 building programs with a debt-free building program behind us. Debt-free. We even purchased a parsonage in the last couple of years, paid off, debt-free. We did not do that by fooling ourselves, knowing that the mortgages and the debts that we created were incurred and that we would not be foolish enough to take on a new project, knowing that we could compromise our debt that we have at our local bank. That is integrity. That is about family values. We are teaching our children there. One does not start something bigger than what one already has that one has to pay for.

Now, I realize in this body it may not be quite that easy, at least it has not appeared to be. But surely, as a group of reasonable elected people, we can acknowledge the magnitude of the problem. It is funny that the gentleman from Texas mentioned the blame game, because my pastor mentioned that Sunday morning, the blame game, shirking your responsibility, side-stepping, telling someone else it is their fault what has happened. Well, I do not think so. My son just turned 21 a couple of weeks ago, and he knows by now life's hardest lessons, to accept your own destiny, make your own decisions, and live by them. That is what we are doing now.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that we can come to grips with coming together and fashioning a Federal budget in the face of an economy that has been impacted in ways in which we did not anticipate, which is no one's fault; but let us acknowledge it is time to come to an agreement with a new plan to save Social Security and Medicare, pay down our debt, and still finance the priorities of the war on terrorism, education, health care, and those things that we have all promised, prescription drugs, and everything else that we would said that we would do.

IMPORTANT ISSUES FACING CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WILSON of South Carolina). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. TANCREDO) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, as I was sitting here preparing my remarks, I listened to the remarks of my colleagues; and it is encouraging, to say the least, to think that there are people on both sides of the aisle who have concern about the fiscal house that we try to keep in order around here. It is discouraging to think about the fact that regardless of who happens to run this place, the Republicans or the Democrats, it appears to me, anyway, as we look over the numbers over the last couple of decades, that it really hardly matters most of the time; that we are spending certainly more than we should and that our deficits are a result of our inability as a body, not as a party, but as a body, to control our appetites, to control the willingness, the desire, the need to respond to a plethora of programs and supporters of programs throughout the Nation that constantly demand more. Nonetheless, I am glad to hear it, and I am always hopeful that we will be able to actually change the situation around here when it comes to spending. I do not hold much hope out for it, but I have that spark of hope that does remain alive.

Mr. Speaker, before I get on to the issue that usually brings me to the floor of the House, which is, of course, immigration and immigration-related issues, I would like to just for a few moments talk about something that I am also very, very concerned about and also, I think, should be a concern of the Members of the body, and that is the situation in Sudan, a country that has experienced at least a decade, actually 2 decades of incredible internal conflict, a country that has experienced more casualties of its population, 2 million dead at the present time, more than 4 million displaced. These are numbers that are far higher and far more significant, frankly, than any other country since the Second World War.

Yet, little is known about the situation in Sudan. Unfortunately, relatively few people seem to care. But there are folks who do care. Since this past Wednesday, people have been gathering in Galvez Park here in Washington, D.C. to pray and stand for the people of Sudan, who are subjects of a brutal, genocidal campaign.

Saturday, September 21, high school and college students led an all-day vigil. These young people represent the best of American ideals. They are acting on behalf of the people that they have never met, but whom they know are being oppressed. We should marvel at their commitment, but more so, we should join them.

I stand here today to talk about what has brought these young people from across the country here to the Nation's capital, and to talk about how the government of the Sudan, the National Islamic Front, has for years and continues today mercilessly to drive back Christians and animists from their homes, starve them, kill them because they are not Arab Muslims.

I want to tell the Members about the bombing. The government of Sudan has converted Russian cargo planes into primitive bombers called Antonovs. These planes regularly fly over villages and towns in southern Sudan, far from the front lines of the fighting. These villages have no military value, the only people who live there are civilians; yet, still the bombers come. Sometimes they drop bombs; sometimes they do not. That is part of the terror campaign the government is waging. No one in southern Sudan knows if they will be next.

When the planes drop bombs, they are not precision weapons, like we used in Afghanistan, to avoid civilian casualties. Rather, they are crude homemade bombs, sometimes 55-gallon drums packed with explosives and nails, designed to maximize civilian casualties.

These primitive bombs are rolled out of the back of planes, falling at random on those below. These bombs maim and kill, they destroy crops and homes, they fall on hospitals and churches. No one in southern Sudan is immune from their reach, and it may be only a matter of the shifting winds whether you or your neighbor is hit by a bomb.

The first country I visited as a Member of Congress, and I had only been here as a Member of this body for a few months, and this was a little over 3½ years ago, the first country I ever visited was Sudan. I went there with a delegation led by Senator BROWNBACK.

I will never forget, we went into a little town called Yei. When we got there, all the kids in the village gathered around us very closely, and they would hardly move. As we tried to move through the village, they were almost stuck to us. They were yelling something. Of course, I did not understand it. I asked our guide to interpret for me, what was going on; why were they clustering around us so closely. He said, it is because they believe that because you are an American Congressman, they won't be bombed; they cannot be hit by a bomb, if one flies over; that they won't bomb you because you are here from the United States. Of course, I was hoping the same thing, to tell you the truth.

The reality is, of course, there was no such discrimination, and there were bombs that fell, even while we were there. They destroyed hospitals and they destroyed schools and they destroyed people.

The government targets churches, relief compounds, hospitals, markets, fields, and homes. It rains bombs down on villages with no military value except to further the government's campaign of terror. The barbaric bombing is going on as we speak.

On September 9, the bombs came down on the town of Yabus, killing two children, ages 4 and 7, and wounding eight. Yabus has no military value, but is one of the major staging areas for the relief workers in Sudan.

Last Thursday, the government bombed the town of Lui, the site of no military installations, but of a large hospital run by Samaritan's Purse, a Christian relief organization headed by the Reverend Franklin Graham. This is the only hospital serving approximately 400,000 people. Yet, the town has been bombed repeatedly. These attacks are appalling, and they are plainly directed at killing civilians, either directly, or by denying them food and medical aid. It is an unimaginable horror.

The people in Galvez Park prayed all week for the victims of these bombings. We must join with them. We cannot tolerate the Khartoum regime's brutal actions. We must stand firm with the people of Sudan in their quest for peace and for life.

Mr. Speaker, this House passed a bill that I sponsored called the Sudan Peace Act. It went to the Senate, where it has languished. Senator BROWNBACK has introduced an amendment to the bill that I hope will be the thing that actually does allow it to move forward. I believe that will happen relatively soon. I hope it will happen in time to save the lives of the people who are now so directly affected by this campaign of terror, the most recent campaign of terror.

Only a few days ago, really, I had the opportunity to meet with some representatives of the Khartoum government in Sudan. They assured me that there was no such action; that they were being cautious in the way they advanced the efforts on the part of the military, and that the bombing of civilians and the strafing of civilians was absolutely prohibited. But, of course, that is apparently not true.

I do hope that the good Lord hears the prayers of the people that have been gathered here in Washington all week for those in the Sudan who hunger for nothing but peace, but who, for now a generation, have heard nothing but war and seen nothing but war.

I hope that the Sudan Peace Act quickly comes back to the House and we are able, in a conference committee, we are able to address this issue as a body, as a Congress, I should say; and that the President will sign it, and that will affect the outcome of this war, that it will bring it to a quick close.

Let me now talk about another issue that of course is of great concern to me, and is oftentimes an issue that is not very well addressed, or not very well amplified, either in the media or even here in the House. That is the issue of immigration and immigration reform.

In my own district, Mr. Speaker, over the last week or so, a little over a week now, we have had the most extraordinary discussion, I guess I should put it that way, public discussion in the press and in the media in general. Of course, on the radio and talk shows everybody is talking about a couple of things that I want to address tonight, address to the Members tonight.

As a matter of fact, the issues have spread beyond my district. They are now being discussed, as I see the clips coming into my office, they are being discussed in cities all over the country. These are two events in Denver, Colorado. Let me briefly review them.

A little over 1½ months ago, the Denver Post, which is the major newspaper in Colorado, printed a story, a front-page story, about a family, the Apodaca family. It was a story, according to the author of that particular piece, that was brought to the Post by the Mexican consulate in Denver. The name of the family was provided by the consul, and the purpose of this collaboration was to set the stage for a more general debate on an issue of state politics.

In this particular case, we are talking about whether or not people in the State of Colorado and in the United States, for that matter, illegally, that is to say, people who came into this country without our permission, whether they should be given the same opportunities for subsidized educational expenses, in this case, higher education, as a citizen of the State of Colorado and as a citizen of the United States of America.

This is not unique to Colorado, this is happening all over the country. Legislatures in Utah, Texas, and California are dealing with this. Some have dealt with it already, and passed laws that will allow people who are here illegally to attend institutions of higher education and have their education subsidized by the taxpayers of the State.

This is being pushed by immigration advocates, immigration advocate groups all over the country. It is being pushed even by representatives of the Mexican government; as I say, the Mexican consul.

The story focused, as I say, on one family, the Apodaca family; in particular, the oldest boy of this family, who wanted to go to the University of Colorado, but could not afford it if he did not have that experience paid for by the taxpayers of the State. It presented them in a very sympathetic light.

They are, apparently, by all accounts very fine people, a nice family. The father is employed in some business that was not identified in Greeley, Colorado. They have, I think, maybe four or five kids. This particular young man that wanted to go on to school was an A student. So certainly, the story appealed to the emotional side and said, look, here are folks who have been here, they are hard-working, the kids have been in school. Why should we not give them access to higher education at taxpayer expense?

This goes along with the agenda or this is part of an agenda throughout the country to obtain all kinds of benefits for people who are here illegally: driver's licenses, welfare, tuition payments, and the like. The hope or the desire is that eventually we will eliminate all of those things in this Nation that would distinguish one as being here illegally.

That is to say, if they can come into the country illegally but have their children educated, as they can today; go through the public school system at our expense, at taxpayer expense; if they can have access to all of the social services that any other citizen of the United States has access to; if they can obtain a driver's license as their sort of passport into society, which a driver's license is in our country; if they can have all of these things, then there is very little, if anything, that can distinguish them as someone here illegally. They are just here. They are just simply in the United States, and therefore, they have all the rights and privileges of a citizen of the United States.

That is the desire of the folks who push this agenda. They used the Apodaca family perhaps willingly; that is to say that, for all I know, the Apodaca family was quite willing to expose themselves to the public as being here illegally, as having entered this country without our permission. But they did not really have, or it did not seem from the story that they had a very big concern about that.

In a way, of course, we can understand why they could have been encouraged to come forward without some great fear of repercussions. There are 9 million to 13 million people living in this country illegally. The INS has done little if anything about it. This government has done little if anything about it.

There are many reasons why we have shirked our responsibility as a Federal government to assure the sanctity and integrity of our own borders, but for all the reasons that exist that have caused this situation to occur, we now see, as I say, people willing to come forward in the press and say, I am here illegally; essentially, what are you going to do about it?

I do not know about the Speaker, but here is what I thought when I read that article. I thought, is it not amazing? I am sure the Speaker, like every other Member of this body, is confronted by people in his office who is asking us to help them adjust their status in the United States; to obtain some sort of INS recognition that would allow them to stay legally.

We all know that there are literally millions of people around the country trying to come to the United States legally. We know there are people that have spent years in the process, filling out the forms, taking language courses, doing everything that we ask them to do to become American citizens legally. They do it. God bless them for doing it.

I speak to these folks as often as I get a chance. I have spoken to groups that have become citizens of the United States when they are taking their oath of citizenship; and I tell them, first of all, welcome to the United States, almost. Secondly, I thank them for doing this the right way, for coming here and working through the process to become an American citizen even though I know it is challenging, it is onerous; but I thank them for doing it the right way.

It was ironic in a way that several days after this story appeared, there was a very small story that appeared in both papers in Denver about all of the immigrants that were being sworn in as legal citizens of the United States, a small story relative to what this family, who chose not to come that route, but to come here illegally, small, small story compared to what the Apodacas got.

I thought that was unfair, simply and basically unfair. If a person comes to this country legally and they go through the process to have the newspapers showcase a family who has done it the other way, snuck into the country, albeit these folks are I am sure fine people, I have nothing against them. They seem like, from what I read in the paper, to be people we would be happy to have as neighbors and friends, but that is irrelevant to the situation. The situation is they came here illegally, and they are being showcased; and we are being asked to give them a special advantage, an advantage that we give usually to citizens.

So we are telling all of the people who have come here the right way that they are nothing but suckers and that really they could have saved themselves a lot of time and money and certainly a lot of brain damage going through the bureaucratic hoops that they are put through to come here legally by simply sneaking into the country, staying under the radar screen, eventually we will give them all the same amenities, all of the privileges of citizenship. That is what that story said to me. It was unfair.

About a month after the story appeared, I called the INS in Denver, the head of the INS, a gentleman by the name of Mr. Comfort; and I said to Mr. Comfort, I have a question for you, a hypothetical question, and that is, What would you do if somebody came up to you on the street today, as you were exiting your building, and said you know, I am a good guy, I have a wife and family and a job and everything but I am here illegally and so is my family, what would you do about that if they confronted you with it? Well, of course, I would have to take them into custody, and I said, Really? He said, Yes. I said, Then what would happen? He said, Then we would have to go through a hearing process and if they were determined to be here illegally then, of course, we would set up deportation arrangements.

I said, Well, that is interesting. What did you do about the family that told you that in the paper about a month ago, the Apodaca family? He said, Well, we have not done anything about it. He said, We really do not have the resources; it is really not the same because it is not coming up to me on the street, even though, yes, it is on the front page of the Denver Post, and they tell you the name and where they are. He said, It is not the same. He said, And I do not have the resources to go after them. I said, I am not really asking you to send in the SWAT team or devote any resources away from the very important tasks with which you are involved, catching terrorists and felons who are here illegally; but I do wonder whether or not you would not just send a letter, why would you not just send a letter maybe to the family and ask them to come in and talk to you because they are saying that they are here illegally and you want to talk about the status.

He agreed that that could be done and that that would be done, and I hung up the phone.

The next day, the Denver Post printed another story and the headline was "Congressman Tancredo Demands Deportation of Jesus Apodaca." Although I never mentioned him nor did I demand anything, that is the way the Post chose to portray this story; and they ran a picture of this young man, again a very sympathetic figure in this whole thing. He came here, of course, as a young kid with his parents. He had no choice in the matter, and I can certainly understand his plight.

This grew into a huge, huge debate in Colorado with everybody taking sides and the media getting involved and that sort of thing, the media actually promoting it certainly, because here we had set up this interesting debate; and it was worthy, I think, of the interest of the media, not to mention the way in which a portion of the media, in this case the Denver Post, chose to spin the story.

I assure my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, that if the Apodaca family is here illegally as they claim to be, of course I do not know whether they are or not. I do not know whether they were put up to this or not. They may be perfectly legal, but they were used in order to advance this agenda that I was talking about of getting tuition and driver's licenses and all the rest of it; but if they are, in fact, here illegally, as they claim to be, then the law says they should face deportation hearings, and if the judge says that they should be deported, they should be deported. I am absolutely in support of that process.

I have no great hope that the INS will diligently pursue this, knowing the INS; but I think they should at least do what they told me they would do, that is, to write a letter to the family, ask them to come in and discuss this issue with them.

This, as I say, was playing out in the paper over several days when all of the sudden another story appeared. This was a front page, above-the-fold story again in the Denver Post. This was, I think, last Thursday or Friday. Apparently, according to the Post, two people came into the Post, the Denver Post, and identified themselves as being here illegally, in and of itself an interesting situation. I mean, do people really just advance that? Of course they do because they were put on the front page of the paper and no big deal; but they went one step further, and they said not only are we here illegally, but we are felons. We falsified the documents that we supplied to our employer so that we could get hired. That is a felony. They said we were hired by a company, a construction company that eventually did work in Congressman TANCREDO'S basement. They put in a home theater and finished our basement.

So the above-the-fold headline, banner headline in the Denver Post, remember this story took precedent over the situation we were in with Iraq, the economy, a variety of things that I actually consider to be even more important, but the Post did not. The Post thought this was deserving of that kind of placement, and the headline was something like Tancredo Hires Illegal Aliens to Finish His Basement.

Of course, no one knows the truth of that story and the reality is, Mr. Speaker, that that story could not have passed the discretion of a high school newspaper editor because, of course, what do we have here? We have an allegation made by two people who were not identified about their relationship to a company that I hired to finish my basement, a situation over which, of course, I have absolutely no control. I did not hire the folks that actually did the labor. I hired the contractor. It is a reputable firm in Denver. According to the newspaper, they have all of the documentation necessary by the law to confirm that these people were here illegally.

What do we have? What is this story? This is a fascinating thing. The story is that two people alleged, and they are themselves alleged to exist. I do not know that they exist. I do not know even if two people came to the Denver Post and claimed that they, in fact, were ever in my home. Let us face it, Mr. Speaker, this is a very, very emotional issue. It is possible that people would even make up something like that in order to advance a particular agenda. It is possible. I am not saying it happened. It is possible. I do not know what happened. Neither would I suggest does the Denver Post.

Of course, there is no way to tell. No one can judge the merit, the truth of this matter because they will not tell who these people are. They are withholding their names because the Post said they fear that these people will then be prosecuted. So the Denver Post, if they believe these people, they are harboring felons who have given false information in order to be hired.

Again, I do not know whether the people who worked in my basement, who were employees of the company that I did hire, were here legally or not. I have not the foggiest idea, to tell my colleagues the truth. It is not my responsibility to try and do that.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, if I were to go to them and ask them after they were hired, let us say they are working in my basement and I heard them down there and said I am just going to go down there and find out if these folks are here illegally, and if I went down there and said, hey, stop for a second, are you legal, I want to see your papers, of course, I would be sued. Of course, I can be sued under the Civil Rights Act because you cannot ask people like that. Only the employer can request that kind of documentation. Even the employer cannot say things like, are you here legally. They can say I need the documentation that you are a citizen. I have to fill out an I-9 and need Social Security and driver's license. If you are presented with that as the employer, that is what you keep on file, which according to the newspaper, this particular company I hired, has on file.

I do not where this will go. I have no idea. Will the INS investigate? I cannot get them to. I have a hard time getting them to actually do anything about people who are here illegally and that have been absconders; 360,000 people so far have been ordered deported already from the United States for various violations from rape, robbery, murder, just name it. They have been ordered to be deported. They have simply walked away from the courtroom, and the INS has never found them or gone after them.

So I doubt very much whether the INS is going to get too involved in either of these two cases; and as I say, I certainly do not want them and I do not rank these cases on the same level as the potential terrorists that are here, the felons that are here. I want them to devote a lot of time to that; but they should not ignore this case, either one really now because this is such big news. They certainly should not ignore the Apodacas.

I have not yet seen in the paper any company that comes and says, I would like you to showcase me because I hire illegal aliens, but they are all nice guys; so we should change the law. I have not seen that. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that should that be on the front page of the Post, I will call the INS and I will say, I would like to know, what are you going to do about this? I cannot demand anything because frankly I cannot. It is an executive branch agency. But I can inquire and I would inquire if some company did what the Apodacas did. I would inquire. I would say here are people that are blatantly claiming their status as illegal and/or claiming to have violated the law by knowingly hiring people who are here illegally. Either of those two cases, I think, demands a little bit of attention, if it is nothing more than a letter.

But the Post has written in the last 10 days, I think 28 articles so far. There have been 28 articles, editorials and/or commentary about this. I have never seen really anything command so much attention as long as I have been in political life, which has been a long time, and I am a very controversial figure; but I do not remember anything like this. That is just that newspaper. The Rocky Mountain News has also written story after story. It has been on the news. I get clips from California and Texas and Chicago and calls from all over the country about these two stories, the Apodaca case and my basement.

The issue of course is not the Apodacas. The issue that we should be really debating and discussing is not just the companies out here that are alleged to have hired illegal aliens or the companies that do, because of course we all know there are plenty of them. I do not doubt for a moment that I have had dinner at a restaurant and been served by or had my meal prepared by someone who was in fact here illegally. I would bet any money that has happened. I would bet that I have gotten in a cab in this city and have been driven to a location by someone who is here illegally. We all know this happens.

The issue is not just the individual who has done that. The issue is the whole concept of immigration, immigration reform, and the integrity of borders. That is what we have to talk about tonight, and I hope night after night after night after night and day after day that is what we have to talk about because the ramifications of illegal immigration into this country, massive immigration, both legal and illegal, are enormous. As I have said on many occasions, they will determine not just what kind of country we are, that is to say, balkanized, factionalized, or united; but it will also determine if we will be a country. That is why I devote as much time and attention to this issue as I do.

It is not an issue that is easy for us to talk about. The stories that I have just described that were in the paper have caused a lot of people a lot of pain. The company that I hired was identified. It has received calls from people who have threatened them and left messages of the most vial nature. Families, a lot of people have been affected by it. Certainly I guarantee that our office has received a similar type of response along with, of course, an overwhelming number of people who are supportive of our efforts in this regard.

This is an issue America is talking about whether we want to talk about it or not. It is an issue that Americans care about whether we care about it or not. It is an issue that Americans want us to deal with whether we want to deal with it or not. Poll after poll after poll tells us that the American people want us to crack down on illegal immigration, want us to crack down on employers who are employing these people, want us to reduce the number of people coming into the country even legally because they know there is something happening in the United States that needs discussion and warrants their concern. We choose not to deal with it because we are fearful of the consequences. We are fearful of the kind of response that the stories in the Denver Post and Rocky Mountain News have elicited, the vitriolic antagonistic sort of communications that we get when we start talking about this. Nobody likes this stuff, Mr. Speaker. Certainly I do not. Nobody likes being called names. Nobody likes being vilified in the press or anywhere else, I assume. And I assure that if I did not think that this issue merited the attention of this body and of this government, I would not bring it up. There are other things that I also believe are important; but this issue has, as I say, an overwhelming importance I think to the American public and to me, and it has got nothing to do with race and it has got nothing to do with ethnicity, although that is always the card that is played when one talks about it.

But what is interesting, Mr. Speaker, is that I went on a television station in Denver, I think it was yesterday morning, as a matter of fact, and did just a 2- or 3-minute explanation of this issue, and as I was leaving, a young man came up to me who was evidently a staff person there, who had on a little microphone thing and earphones. He came up to me as I was leaving and he spoke with a bit of an accent, and he said to me, Congressman, I want to tell you that I absolutely agree with you, 100 percent agree with you. You know what I had to go through to get here legally, and I just got my papers a little bit ago.

And I thought this guy speaks for millions of people who do not get publicized by the Denver Post. His picture will not be on the front of the Denver Post. He did it the right way. But there are millions of people out there who recognize the injustice here, the unfairness of a system that in fact sets up these huge barriers and tells people that if they come to the United States and they want to be a citizen, here is what they have got to do. It is a very heavy responsibility, and here are all of the things that one must do to become a citizen and here are all the papers one has to fill out to become a citizen, and we will have to wait for years and we will go through processes, and one might have to go to court and might have to spend thousands and thousands of dollars to become a citizen, to come here legally; and yet people do it. While at the same time, the same government turns a blind eye to all of the folks coming across that border at their will?

Am I the only person who sees the injustice here, the unfairness of it? I guarantee I am not because I guarantee, Mr. Speaker, that we have heard from thousands of people in my office over the course of time who feel exactly the same way, and I know there are millions of people out there who also feel the same way. But we ignore it; we pretend it does not exist because there are all kinds of political pressures here. The Democratic Party does not want to deal with this issue because they know it means votes and the more folks they can bring in here, legally or illegally, the more folks will eventually end up in the camp of the Democratic Party. That is their experience; that is what they believe.

On the other hand, the Republican Party is loath to discuss this issue because there are of course workers, laborers who come here and compete for jobs and therefore keep wages low; and so as long as we can ensure the flow of low-skilled, low-wage workers, we will have the Denver Post and certainly the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal pressing for more and more immigration, both legal and illegal. We have the administration that wants to make it a wedge issue in the next election; and, Mr. Speaker, even though we have gone through all of the debates in this body in the last several months over things like amnesty for people who are here illegally and we have been able to stop it from happening, I assure that after this next election when things quiet down and we have 2 more years before we have to face our electorate, there will be another push to provide amnesty for people who are here illegally and to essentially open the borders.

Here is what I suggest that we all do. I suggest that we have a larger debate on the topic of borders: whether or not they should exist, whether or not we should have them. What is the purpose? What purpose do borders serve? Are they anachronisms as some of our colleagues would suggest? Are they simply impediments to the free flow of goods and services? Or are they meaningful? Do they distinguish nation states? Do they indicate and actually give as an example what sovereignty is all about?

I think borders are important, but I may be in the minority, Mr. Speaker. Maybe a majority of the people in this House and the President of the United States believe that borders are of no significance. That could be. If that is the case and my side of this debate comes up short of the votes to sustain our position, so be it. That is the Nation in which we live. That is the democracy we all here take an oath to support. But let us at least have a debate. Let us at least have the bill. I want to see people go on record. I want to see people stand up and make a vote as to whether or not they want borders or they do not. Because, Mr. Speaker, if we have them, if we decide to have them, then that means something. It means they have to have integrity. It means they have to be defended and not in the halfway measures that we are presently doing, not just putting some folks down on the border putting their lives in peril as we are doing.

One young man a little over a month ago, Kris Eggle, 28 years old, a park ranger in Arizona, Organ Pipe Cactus National Park. Mr. Eggle and a border patrol agent interdicted a couple of people coming across the border from Mexico who had just killed four people in Mexico as a result of some drug war-type of thing. And Mr. Eggle got out of his car to go over and stop these people to put them under arrest. They got out of their car with automatic weapons and killed him. Mr. Eggle's face has not appeared on any newspaper that I know of, and his story has not been told by any major newspaper of which I am aware, but he died in the line of service to this country. He died because we told him to go down there along with his comrades in the border patrol and the custom agents and the U.S. Forest Service. We told him to protect our borders, protect the sovereignty of the Nation. But, Mr. Speaker, we do not believe in that war. We sacrificed Kris Eggle. And 2 weeks ago, two FBI agents were dragged across the border into Mexico and beaten almost to death with rocks. They are now in a hospital in Texas, both of whom, as I understand, in critical condition in a coma.

Their faces have not appeared on any major newspapers that I have seen. The story has not been told. May 27, a Mexican vehicle from the Mexican Army, a Mexican Humvee comes across into the United States, is confronted by a border patrol agent and is fired upon by Mexican military. The bullet goes through the rear window of the vehicle and ricochets off the metal screen that separates the cab and the back and goes out the right window.

A foreign power, the military of a military power comes into the United States, and what they are doing, frankly, is protecting drug shipments. Many of the people on that border, many of the Mexican military and Mexican police are actually working for the drug cartels and protecting drug shipments into the United States.

On the northern border, we have drug shipments coming across in huge proportions. There are cartels up there that are run by Muslim individuals. There are 25,000 Muslims living in Calgary, Canada. A portion of them are involved with a drug trade into the United States, according to Mr. HUTCHINSON, our drug czar. A portion are involved with smuggling drugs into the United States, mostly methamphetamine components, which are cooked down here, sold down here, the funds go back up there, and they support terrorist activities throughout the world.

Both of our borders are places of warfare. The Denver Post and newspapers all over this land want to portray the face of illegal immigration as the Apodaca family, benign, good citizens, sympathetic in every respect. That is what they want Americans to believe is the face of illegal immigration. But the face of illegal immigration on the borders is something much uglier. It is the face of murder, of rape, of robbery, of drug cartels, drug smuggling, and of people coming into this country for the purpose of doing us great harm, terrorist infiltration. Go to the southern borders and the northern borders, see what I have seen. Look in the faces of the Border Patrol who know that they have been asked to hold back a flood, and have been given a sieve. They know that their lives are in danger, and we do not give them any support.

We do not really want to close those borders because it would mean the end of the flow of cheap labor, and the end of the flow of potential voters for the Democratic Party. How vile the motive. That is why we do not do it.

If people cared about these folks, if people really cared about the safety and security of even the people coming across illegally, they would stand with me to try and stop that illegal immigration. It is a dangerous thing for these folks. They hire people, called coyotes, who bring them up to the United States, and sneak them in. Often the women are raped, the men are robbed and they are pushed into the United States into some desert area where they perish. Hundreds have perished. They are abused on the way, they are abused when they get to the border, and they are abused many times by unscrupulous employers in the United States who take advantage of them. Knowing that they are here illegally, they will pay them less, and not give them the benefits that they deserve, and they are cast aside.

If we cared about them, we would do something about our borders and we would do something about our immigration policy. We would create a guest worker program that would allow people to come into the United States legally to take the jobs that, quote, no one else will take, which we have heard and which I will challenge. If there are such jobs, fine. There are ways in which people can come into this country legally, that their rights can be protected. They do not have to hire coyotes. They do not have to come up here and be abused by employers. We can tell who they are, how long they are here, who they are working for, and when they return. But no, that program will not be adopted. I have a bill for that purpose. It will not be heard because it is easier, of course, to simply ignore the folks coming across illegally.

It is easier to hire them. People do not have to go through all of the paperwork. Just open your door and say where is your green card, where is your work permit, and those things are purchasable at just about any flea market in America. You can buy your Social Security card and any other kind of identification you want. So employers would just as soon not have that kind of burden.

Of course as I have stated already, there are a lot of people here who want to simply abolish the borders. If we have a true guest worker program, then you need borders. Borders mean something then because then you are distinguishing who can come across them and who cannot. But if you do not want borders, then why would you want a guest worker program. You would not. What you want is to allow as many people as possible into the country, then chip away at every single law in the country that distinguishes someone as a citizen, that confers some right on them as a citizen. There are municipalities in this Nation, in this city, as a matter of fact, that are pushing for voting privileges for people here illegally.

Okay, as I say, Mr. Speaker, if that is where we are going, fine. Just make a decision. Make a conscious decision as to the direction this Nation is going. Abandon the borders or protect them. That is really and truly the choice we have. As long as we ignore it and as long as we maintain this half-baked posture, we are abandoning them. That is exactly what is happening. We are doing that, I think, to our peril.

I have a dear friend by the name of Hugh Fowler. Hugh and Shirley Fowler have been friends of ours for 30 years or more. They gave me a great book. It is called "Crowded Land of Liberty" by Dirk Chase Elderidge, and I certainly recommend it to anyone. It talks about the impact of massive immigration.

There are all kinds of ramifications, as I mentioned, Mr. Speaker. Certainly just in terms of the numbers, the growth in our population, and everyone wonders how it is in Colorado we have this huge number of people coming into the State every year. Growth has gone wild. We are building highways and schools and hospitals. California has to build a school a day to keep up with the numbers. Where are they coming from? Is this the natural birth rate of the country? No, of course not. Our natural birth rate is almost replenishment level. It is almost 2.1. The increase in population in this country is as a result of immigration. Immigrants coming in, immigrants having children. That is the population increase. There are ramifications. Crowded conditions, crowded public lands. Rocky Mountain National Park, Yellowstone, which you cannot get to any more. You have to wait in long lines. Pretty soon you will have to have reservations to go to scenic spots in America, and there are not that many scenic spots left any more because houses are popping up where there once was pristine grasslands. This is happening because of population pressure, population growth. Where is it coming from? It is coming from immigration.

Now, it could be okay. That may be absolutely all right with everybody, but it should be a condition that we establish in this country followed by an honest debate over a controversial issue.

Mr. Speaker, these are difficult issues. There is certainly no two ways about it, and difficult for us to discuss and deal with. I just want to say from a personal standpoint, it is good for us all to kind of stand back once in a while and think about things that put everything in perspective because we have a tendency for all of us to get wrapped up in this stuff.

A little over a week ago my youngest son and his wife had a baby. My daughter-in-law gave birth to a little boy named Gabriel. I went out to California the Saturday before last to see him. When my son walked out of the delivery room carrying him and handed him to me and I took him in my arms, I thought, This does put the world in perspective. It is for Gabriel and it is for Thomas, my oldest grandson, and for William, his brother, that we do all of these things, that we try all of us, not just Members of Congress, everyone I know, that is what we labor for. It is the future. And it is for them, Mr. Speaker, that I do in fact try to advance this issue. I believe it is an important one. I want to leave them a country as good if not better than the one I grew up in. That is why we labor here.

WAGING THE PEACE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. AKIN). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, how we wage peace should be the agenda priority as we close out the 107th Congress. To attack or not to attack Iraq should not be the issue which dominates the final work of this Congress. To attack or not to attack should not be the question which overwhelms the minds of America at this critical hour as we move toward very important elections on November 5.

If September 11, 2001, has made the American people preoccupied with security and safety from terrorism, then let us examine all of the components and elements of a program to make our Nation more secure and more safe: Action involving Iraq, whether it is United Nations inspections or military offensive, at the conclusion of either one, we will still face major questions of security and safety from terrorism.

Only serious attention to the full agenda of the Congress can accomplish our continuing mission to make this Nation secure and safe. Our Nation is most secure not when we wage war but when we mount a sustained peace offensive. We must pass laws, we must appropriate money which supports the increase of prosperity and peace. Security and safety are enhanced when we have a foreign policy and a foreign aid program which promotes peace.

Our Nation's security is threatened when we conduct silly and wasteful sessions of Congress like the present session. The present session includes days like today when we voted on three resolutions. One was Recognizing the 100th Anniversary of the 4-H Youth Development Program, another was on the Sense of Congress Regarding American Gold Star Mothers, and another was Welcoming Madame Chen Wu Sue-Jen, the First Lady of Taiwan, three resolutions that got all 435 votes, three resolutions which could have been handled with a voice vote of no substance, and we have been doing this for the last 3 or 4 weeks as we close out this Congress.

We need to focus on vital programs, such as senior prescription drug benefits, an increase in the minimum wage, minimum funding for school repairs, pension reform which stops corporate stealing and retrieves the millions of dollars swindled from ordinary workers. If we spend the remaining weeks and days of this Congress with a total focus on Iraq instead, we will engage in a major betrayal of our constituents.

I think the Iraq question is very important. I think we cannot escape a conclusion on the matter as soon as possible. But to attack or not to attack Iraq should not be the issue which obliterates all other discussion of all other issues, all of the other issues all very much related to the question of security and safety from terrorism.

We should have learned from the past the lessons of the Vietnam War and previous wars. We should understand certain important matters that need to be put back on the table. We cannot have too much discussion. People have chosen to forget that there was a Marshall Plan which waged the peace where we took the initiative against forces that were gathering after World War II, forces that would have made for chaos and a lot of conflict between nations, forces that might have paved the way for a Communist takeover of bankrupt economies in Europe; and we waged peace and we won. If we wage the peace instead of waging war at this particular time, we might find we are more secure and we are more safe from terrorism.

Let us just take two examples. If we focus instead of on the nation of Iraq and the need to attack Iraq because some say it poses some kind of danger to us, and I will come back to that later, if we focus instead on Pakistan, another Muslim nation, and looked at the fact that Pakistan, the leadership there, has taken a great chance in agreeing to serve as our allies in the fight against terrorism. Instead of spending 60 billion or more dollars in a war with Iraq, why do we not spend more money to improve the democracy in Pakistan? Pakistan already has nuclear weapons. Pakistan has, by the most conservative estimate, 150 million people, some say 180 million people. Pakistan has already declared as our allies in the war against terrorism as they were our allies in the war in Afghanistan against the Soviet Union, as they have been in the Cold War over the years.

So why not approach the present problem with an overwhelming embrace of a Muslim nation like Pakistan; and by doing great things for Pakistan, improving the education and a number of other things, we would do far more to secure the world against Islamic fanaticism than we will by attacking Saddam Hussein in Iraq.

I have gotten quite a number of letters, as most of us have, communications from various constituents; and I want to read some of those tonight as well as talk about the need to wage the peace as an answer to those who want to wage war. I want to talk a little bit about who is going to fight the war if the war has to be fought. It is the young men and women out there who need the minimum-wage increase. Wars in America have always been fought by people in the low-income brackets. They are the ones who go out and die. We ought to take care of their minimum-wage needs. We ought to take care of their needs for safe places to work in. We ought to deal with the corporate empires that have been cheating them out of their pension funds. We ought to deal with the fact that many of our veterans are now suffering greatly because they do not have adequate health care. And among the items they need is some help with their prescription drugs. I am going to come back to that and talk about how we wage the peace, how we deal with making ourselves safe and secure from terrorism by waging that peace.

I have no illusions about the menace that Saddam Hussein represents. I think Saddam Hussein has a lot in common with Hitler. Since he does not possess a German war machine behind him, however, he does not pose an overt military threat to America as Hitler did. But the same brutal egomaniacal mind-set is at work in Saddam Hussein and we can see that, so I think we need to find ways to deal with Saddam Hussein, but I do not think that going to war as is being proposed by our President is the way to do it. I think we run the risk of making matters worse. We could cause the evil that this tyrant represents to actually mushroom. An action against Saddam Hussein might unleash the dogs of chaos in a new world order of disorder. Any well-armed nation could target a weaker nation and charge them with menacing action before launching a preemptive preventive military attack. That would be the worst kind of world to live in.

Before I go on, I would like to recognize the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding, and I thank him for this opportunity to have an exchange with him on some very vital issues and engage our colleagues in a debate that I think is enormously important. You mentioned something as I was coming to the floor and was listening to why are we here and why are we here in this Congress and what are the important issues. And particularly on the issue of going to war with Iraq, you captured the sentiment of many of my constituents.

This weekend I held a citizens forum on Iraq with an enormous amount of participation from my district but more importantly very wise and informed experts that we had from a number of our academic institutions, Texas Southern University, the University of Houston and St. Thomas University; but one of the things that came out of the audience is the fact that the young men and women that will go to war are our children and that in large numbers, a war with Iraq as it seems to be intended by this administration will be a bloody war with a great deal of loss of life, of American lives. At the same time, of course, it will compound the loss of lives of women and children and men, families, in Iraq. The question becomes, how do we deal with the prominence that the United States has gotten as the only and singular world power? Does it in any way diminish the United States to engage in diplomacy?

And so the question has to go to the administration as to why we are rushing so fast to war. What is the entrance and exit strategy that we would have if we engaged in a war in Iraq? What is the answer to the question the American public will ask, is it 75,000 or 300,000 men and women on the ground in Iraq? We are already paying $12 billion a month in Afghanistan. Many of us joined with the President to support going after the terrorists and I stand by that resolve because we were attacked on our soil. The representation that we need to go to war with Iraq because there is an imminent danger has not been proven. Even today in Prime Minister Blair's remarks, and it is a long document, which I have read and reviewed, and he spoke before the Parliament and he gives the case made by the British Joint Intelligence group, the BJI, who for over 60 years has worked on behalf of the British Government. There is a long list of statements about weapons of mass destruction and having to go back in. I agree with that. We need United Nations inspectors to go in unfettered.

But the one thing that the Prime Minister said is that I think we should listen. Our case, he says, is simply this, not that we take military action come what may, but that the cause for ensuring Iraqi disarmament as the U.N. has stipulated is overwhelming.

And to utilize the position of Britain and the Prime Minister as war-war-war seems to be incorrect based upon his remarks. He documents that he believes that there are weapons of mass destruction, but at the same time he also acknowledges that intelligence is often open to question. And so what we really need to have happen is that the United Nations inspectors need to go in unfettered, and the better route for the United States to take is the diplomatic route which is the route of saying, let us join in with the United Nations, let us adhere to the provision 51 in the charter that says that striking first preemptively, making the first strike, is illegal; and let us not violate, if you will, the international law.

Mr. OWENS. Is my colleague implying that the British Prime Minister does not agree with the President? I think the Chancellor of Germany has gotten into serious trouble by not agreeing. Is it likely that there is going to be a falling out between the British Prime Minister and the President?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I appreciate the distinguished gentleman's question. I hope that the President will listen and actually read the text of the remarks made by the Prime Minister. He lays out a case. But in two simple lines, he says our case is simply this, not that we take military action.

So I believe that where the Prime Minister now stands is almost where we have just heard former Vice President Al Gore stand. Multilateral actions, working with your allies, and working with the United Nations, which many in this Congress, we do not all agree, Democrats and Republicans, but we heard a collective voice of suggesting that if we are going to be part of the world family, then we need to not undermine the United Nations, we need to shore it up and to be part of it.

Some people have argued, we don't have the United Nations telling us what to do. You are absolutely right. If there was a cause that we felt that we were about to be imminently attacked, then obviously we have a right to defend ourselves and provision 51 under the U.N. charter provides that leeway. But we are using individuals who are saying one thing, but in fact I believe the Prime Minister has probably heard a lot from his party members to realize that we need to be deliberate, not that we have not acknowledged and the distinguished gentleman from New York said it very eloquently. You described who Saddam Hussein is. We do not make the point of putting him up as a saint, but the real question is disarmament, avoiding destabilization of the world in the region because we have Syria and Turkey and Iran and Saudi Arabia surrounding Iraq. We have no response, if you will, to what happens if we destabilize that area.

Let me pose a question to you, as I indicated. We are already spending $1 billion a month in Afghanistan. That is to fight the war. That is not necessarily to rebuild the country. Afghanistan some 20 years ago was maybe, not the most prosperous and technologically, if you will, competent nation; but it certainly was a nation that was standing on its feet, I would say more than 20 years ago, in its own way. It is now a mere semblance of a nation which we have to rebuild. The question is, who will rebuild Iraq? What is the upcoming government that will take over if we are talking about, one, an attack; two, a destruction of the government and destruction of the infrastructure and destruction of the country itself? I believe it would be just foolish to suggest that in fact we are talking about Iraq rebuilding itself. We would have to be engaged in rebuilding it.

Mr. OWENS. I think my colleague has made a very good comparison of Afghanistan versus Iraq. Afghanistan, versus Iraq, you might say, is a rather primitive country. It was when the Soviet Union attacked Afghanistan. But the Soviet Union found after 9 years that it could not subdue the people of Afghanistan. It had to give up. It lost a lot of lives. It brought the government down in the Soviet Union, also. Iraq has far more sophistication, is far more densely populated, will be impossible to occupy. The problem is not can you wipe out Saddam Hussein, can you wipe out his Republican Guard, his immediate military machine. That could be accomplished fairly quickly. But what do you do after that? Occupying the country is where you would have to draft thousands of American men to go in there. You are talking about hundreds of thousands who would be there for a long time and who would face guerilla warfare and all kinds of menacing situations from some of the governments and populations around Iraq as well as in Iraq itself. So you have no choice after fighting the war and losing lives but to try to finish it. Whether you are talking about nation-building or just occupying the territory, either way it will drain resources and it will drain lives away for a long, long time. It is going to be no easy matter.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I think you have captured it well. You are absolutely right. First of all, if we look at our maps, we realize that Iraq is huge. It would require massive occupation by either U.S. troops or allies. That is one of the reasons that it would certainly be misdirected and wrongheaded to talk about any kind of unilateral effort. As you well know, I think to this point the administration has not moved from its position that if the U.N. does not act, we will act. I think I would say to my colleagues and certainly what I said to my constituents, is that we are no wimps here, that I call everyone a patriot, because we have all rallied to unify behind the administration on the fighting of terrorism and we have been grateful for the fact that our allies have joined us as well.

They realize the new wars of the 21st century will be fought differently from World War II. In fact, there will be probably more wars of terrorism. The question is, have we finished the job on fighting terrorism with our allies? Have we found Osama bin Laden? Have we stabilized Afghanistan with the jeopardy the new President is in in Afghanistan every day?

Then we turn our attention to Iraq, $100 billion to be spent immediately if we begin a war, with no case being made on the imminence of their attacking the United States, with evidence suggesting that they do not have any missiles that would reach the continental area of the United States, and that the United Nations is prepared under the present resolutions to go in and Iraq has suggested that they can come in unfettered.

I just want to offer, you mentioned the Soviet Union. It is interesting for those of us who either read it in the history books or were here to talk about the Cold War, many of the young people today do not know about that. But just imagine if everybody at that time said let us just do a preemptive unilateral strike on the Soviet Union.

Mr. OWENS. There were people that counseled that, I am sure.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. There were people who I understand advised that. But I guess cooler heads prevailed, as we heard our good colleague and friend, former Member Dellums, give us a really detailed explanation on some of these issues, and we have a situation now that we did not go to war and in essence we saved ourselves from the immediacy of a third world war at that time.

Why not now have disarmament and containment, getting allies? Diplomacy and dealing with the United Nations seems to be the better direction of the day. Because I do not see with respect to the President's position any way that we can be victorious in winning this war in a limited short period of time with a minimal loss of life. I just truly believe that with better study, we would have a resolution of this question.

Mr. OWENS. You offer very strong and glaring examples. If we outlasted the Soviet Union and we outlasted China, all of these evil empires that it appeared we were going to inevitably have military conflict with are now, if not our allies, then certainly civil partners or neighbors. If we outlasted the threats that they posed, then surely we can outlast the threat that Iraq poses also.

Yes, we are going to have to learn in this world to live with a new kind of threat, a new kind of risk. And getting rid of Saddam Hussein and Iraq will not free us from having to live with that risk, because there are nations like Pakistan, a friendly nation at this point, possessing nuclear weapons, and on very shaky grounds in terms of the turmoil in that nation could lead to an overthrow of the government. It could be in unfriendly hands tomorrow, so you could have the possibility of nuclear weapons being stolen from there or transmitted from there.

Even if a nation does not have nuclear weapons, the possibility of a rogue nation selling it to them that we do not even know about, or the possibility of being stolen. The Soviet Union has lost a lot of nuclear materials through theft, or Russia, since the Soviet Union was dismantled. All these things exist. We have some threats and some risks that we are going to have to live with. So why do we suddenly consider Saddam Hussein an imminent threat that must be taken care of in an unlawful use of force?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Immediately. If the gentleman would yield, you raise several very important points that could be part of the solution, and that is whether they are rogue nations or others, how is Saddam Hussein getting some of this so-called material for a so-called creation of a nuclear bomb on the black market?

Would it not be better for us to address some of these issues, of countries that may be our allies or we are engaged with who are actually providing this material to Iraq for them to function with materials from the black market?

Mr. OWENS. I thank the gentlewoman for making part of my speech unnecessary. I was going to deal with the question of have we done enough to confront diplomatically our allies and the people in the world who are furnishing Saddam Hussein with what he needs? The sanctions have not been carried out. We should have confronted France, the Russians and a number of other nations for not cooperating with the United Nations imposed sanctions. Iraq has continued to sell oil on the black market. Everybody knows it.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Absolutely.

Mr. OWENS. Somebody is buying it. It is not just small countries, it is large countries. We have not confronted them. The rule of law, which we think is so important, the rule of international law is just as important as any other rule of law, but they are just thumbing their noses at the rule of law as far as the United Nations is concerned. We have not confronted these nations and demanded that they stop doing what they are doing.

There is a lot of talk about children dying in Iraq because of the U.S.-imposed or UN-imposed sanctions. That is a lot of nonsense. Saddam Hussein is selling oil. He has billions of dollars to spend as he wishes to spend. He is spending it on trying to acquire weapons materials. He could buy medicine, he could buy food. If children are dying in Iraq, people are dying for lack of medicine, it is Saddam Hussein's fault, nobody else's, because he certainly has the money and resources, because the rest of the world has not bothered to enforce the law or to try to enforce the law as they should, the sanctions and the conditions that Iraq agreed to that were imposed on Iraq.

Why is Iraq special and not different from any other nation with an evil regime, with a dictator? Because they agreed in order to save themselves to certain items and signed an agreement with the United Nations, and they have proceeded not to abide by that agreement. That makes them different and a special case. But the case has not been made for a military attack on Iraq.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. If the gentleman would yield, you are absolutely right, and that is where we have faltered and made great mistakes diplomatically, is we have not insisted that our allies enforce the sanctions. We have not insisted that the United Nations remain strong on some of the resolutions that they have passed.

You can contain and isolate Saddam Hussein, and, frankly, we have not done that. We have given him great latitude. Of course, with everyone's eyes on his oil reserves, he has had a certain degree of freedom.

Our unilateral attack is not going to help the situation. In fact, it is going to make the region more volatile. It is going to again take away from us the high moral ground. So who are we to stop any incursion or any sort of conflict between India and Pakistan, between China and Taiwan? Who are we to say to Israel if they are attacked during the time we start a unilateral war, if they are attacked by Iraq, who are we to say, even though we were successful in doing that in 1991, because we asked in advance and had the allies, and by the way, let me distinguish in the 1991 resolution, I was not here, but obviously everyone knows Iraq attacked Kuwait.

On the limited premise that an ally was attacked, you could argue that we went in to aid our ally, Kuwait. We have no such circumstance here.

Mr. OWENS. We did not go in alone. That was a resolution of the United Nations.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. The gentleman is absolutely right. We had the allies. Who are we to begin this whole new metamorphical change or 180 degree change, if you will, to suggest now that our policy is totally regime change, and that we can go anywhere as the United States and say we do not like our neighbor and we want them to change? I believe that is a path that we do not want to take.

We did not take it under Democratic or Republican Presidents, to suggest that we, the most powerful Nation in the world, can now go around and attack any regime we so desire, even those that are ugly, that we do not like, and that should be moving toward a path of change. But we must follow international law and begin to look ahead as to what will happen, and people, other nations, allies, foes and friends, will begin to say, you did it, why can we not do it?

That is, I think, the deliberations that I have not heard debated here, that I have not heard the administration make its case. And I might simply say, though I hear of pending resolutions coming, that is why it would be more appropriate for us to hold a special session and for this debate to be carried on singularly with nothing else on the Congress' agenda. It is so crucial, it is wrapped with so many major changes for this Nation, that I frankly believe the American people are done a disservice if we do not give them all of the facts.

I have heard, as the gentleman has heard, not only e-mails and letters, but

I am hearing there is a growing sense of opposition, irrespective of political party or political philosophy or region, as people begin to understand the facts. And they see what the gentleman stated earlier, what I have joined in to say, that thousands upon thousands of young lives will be lost, and might I say young men and women who will go anywhere to defend this Nation. It is not them. Our military men and women are superb, as our veterans are. They will go anywhere to defend our freedoms. But the question is, have we thought about the thousands upon thousands of lives, young men and women, our children, whose lives will be lost, and who by our vote, the singular vote that any Member makes, can cast them into harm's way, and for what reason? What imminency? What international law will they be abiding by? What solution will they provide, if you will? How will they bring closure to this?

We had closure in World War II. We went on to the Marshall Plan and we had the moral high ground. Many think we should have started earlier with the allies. Out of that came NATO.

But what do we have now that would suggest that this is the right direction to take, rather than, as the gentleman indicated, and I have totally agreed, the enforcing of the UN sanctions, the going in with the inspectors, the building up of allies, the containing and disarming of him? That is the approach to do, and then we will find our way on the moral ground and also with our allies making an actual difference as opposed to, I believe, doing what we are intending to do at this point.

Mr. OWENS. I thank my colleague from Texas for joining me and emphasizing again that we cannot have too much debate on this subject.

When we talk about going to war, we say we are going to war, we mean not just the decisionmakers in the White House or decisionmakers here in Congress. We mean all of America is going to war. So we cannot take too much time to discuss this issue and look at all the ramifications. We cannot take too much time and review history, because some obvious lessons of history are being forgotten right now.

We seem to have forgotten the lessons of Vietnam. We seem to have forgotten a lot of lessons of all the wars fought in America in terms of who fights them, who goes to war, who are the ones who die.

Perhaps we should stimulate the discussion by making a whole new set of rules related to Selective Service, because inevitably there is going to have to be a draft. If you occupy Iraq, thousands and thousands of men and women will be needed. There will have to be a draft.

We should make rules that nobody gets exempted from the draft except people who physically are disabled. Everybody else has to go. We should make a rule that everybody who is in the military must do a year in the combat zone. We should learn from the past lessons and not drop the burden of a war that is questionable on the backs of the people who have the least amount to say about it or do anything. We should not drop the war on the backs of people that we will not get passed the minimum wage increase for.

If you look at the Vietnam Wall, and among the war monuments in the world there is none nothing greater than the Wall of the Vietnam Memorial. That wall lists every person who died, every soldier who died in Vietnam. There are no more unknown soldiers. You talk about the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, wondering who the soldier is. Everyone gets listed. Let us name them one by one. They deserve to be listed, in order to develop habits which do not encourage war. If we have to see them named one by one, we understand that this is what war means. 57,000 almost are listed on that wall.

In the Civil War we lost 600,000, more or less, on both sides. More lives were lost in the Civil War in America than any other. We lost enormous amounts of lives in World War II and World War I. All of the statistics will show when you break them out that the overwhelming majority of the lives lost were poor, rural, big city, young men who had to be the cannon fodder for the war. They deserve more than to have us callously make decisions about how their lives are going to be lost, and they deserve us to pay more attention to their needs right now on the domestic agenda of the Congress.

We should deal with working conditions, we should deal with the economy, we should deal with the fact that the pension funds are cheating workers out of their rights.

But let us get back to the war for a moment and hear the voices of some of my constituents. I think it is very important that, like many others who have received communications, mail, e-mail, and telephone calls is becoming overwhelming about this matter, and they will continue. But I like the quality of some of the communications that I received so much that I thought I would share a couple of them tonight. Here is one that is very simple. It is handwritten, but it gets right to the point, and I am going to read it and submit it for the RECORD when I finish.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN OWENS: As a constituent of your district, I urge you to oppose the war on Iraq. A strike on Baghdad is unjustified, illegal, and immoral. The issue of weapons inspectors can be handled by the U.N. in a peaceful and lawful manner. With a sinking economy, the American people cannot bear the burden of another war. Please focus on investing in people, not war.

This is written by Michael Feldman and Jeanette Feldman, who are constituents in my district. A very simple statement, and I will enter the entire letter for the RECORD.

One other letter which is not so simple, but written by one of my constituents and obviously she has given a great deal of thought to this letter, and I appreciate the thinking here; and I want my colleagues to hear the connection here with September 11 and how she weaves all of this together and understands very clearly the mood of America. The mood of America is anger; the mood of America is hurt; the mood of America is fear. But we should not let the mood of anger, hurt, and fear drive us into reckless actions that will make matters worse.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE OWENS: I am writing to you because I feel so helpless to stop what seems to be inevitable: war with Iraq. Like you and every New Yorker, I tasted war on September 11. It wasn't pleasant, and I am not eager to experience it again. For hours I could not find my husband who worked across the street from One World Trade Center. Fortunately, he returned home safely after witnessing unspeakable carnage. But many of our friends and neighbors weren't so lucky. That evening I walked down 7th Avenue in Park Slope, Brooklyn, to get a handle on the losses. The stench from burning buildings, computers and bodies was pervasive and the smoke cast an erie haze over our little community. Everywhere I went I learned of more losses. Twelve firemen from squad one on my block, loved ones of students, and a teacher at the Park Slope Dance Studio, parents with kids at 321, Berkeley Carol, and St. Ann's School, members from church, a former colleague, and many of our neighbors were all among the missing. At 7 p.m. that day, we foolishly held out hope that some would be found in area hospital's, but unfortunately, they weren't.

Weeks later I attended the memorial service for my friend Jeff Hardy, who was killed because he happened to be working on the 101st floor of Tower 1. Hours after I attended Jeff's service, a woman at 7th Avenue and Carroll approached me and asked me to sign a petition opposing the war in Afghanistan. I refused. I supported the war in Afghanistan and have been grateful that our allies have worked with us to round up terrorists worldwide.

However, I have seen absolutely no evidence that Iraq had anything to do with this attack. The rumor that Mohamed Atta met with an Iraqi intelligence agent has been denied by the Czech government. I am not aware of one Iraqi who fought with the Taliban,, although I know the citizens of many of our allies fought with the Taliban or members of al Qaeda and were on those planes on September 11, and continue to threaten America and other foreigners every day, particularly in Pakistan.

My hope is to destroy al Qaeda and stop the spread of Islamic religious fundamentalism and hatred for the United States, for Christians, for Jews. To fight the Islamists, we need the cooperation of all of our allies and all countries in the Middle East. I am afraid that this fragile alliance will dissolve if we attack Iraq without provocation and we may not get the help we need. Invading Iraq will only inflame anti-American rhetoric and could even jeopardize our friends in the Middle East. I am deeply worried about the welfare of President Musharraf and concerned that if anything happens to him, religious fanatics could take control of Pakistan, which > we know has both nuclear weapons and al Qaeda members. Musharraf is already under attack in his country because of his support of the U.S., and the New Yorker reported this week that a recent car bomb that killed 12 people was intended for him. I truly think declaring war on Iraq will put more U.S. citizen in harm's way.

This is a letter from a constituent of mine.

I would like to conclude the letter which I think is very thorough and thoughtful.

> Following the tragedies of September 11, we were a city in mourning. We spent months going to funerals in neighborhoods completely shut down when funerals for firefighters were held. The physical and emotional damage contributed to the economic downturn here. I run a small but successful public relations firm and I booked 93 percent of my revenues in 2001 on projects that were completed before September 11, and only 7 percent after September 11. My situation was not unusual. Small businesses, graphic designers, contractors, beauticians, photographers, everywhere in the metropolitan area, they suffered from the same fate. Large companies like my husband's were evacuated from lower Manhattan, never to return. His company had to rebuild complete systems within days to be able to compete with the markets open the following Monday and use AOL and other carriers to communicate by e-mail because the company's service was destroyed. We all limped along. Our woeful city tax revenues are enduring evidence of the economic damage we experienced. This country and especially this city have not yet digested the economic and emotional fallout from September 11. New York City is still struggling to get back on its feet and continues to get hammered by low tax revenues, the recession, stock market volatility and corporate scandals. The economy cannot take another shot like a war with Iraq and its unknown consequences. We have so much unfinished international business that to go forward with a war with Iraq right now would be irresponsible. I share the same concerns that King Abdullah of Jordan has that invading Iraq will lead to a further destabilization of the Middle East, including possibly a civil war, at a time when we need to be rebuilding Afghanistan and seeking a solution to the Israeli-Palestinian war. Even the Kurds are begging us not to invade. We still haven't found Osama bin Laden and Mullah Omar yet. How are we going to round up Saddam Hussein and his secret weapons, particularly without the support of our allies? It's suicidal. I'm reminded of our many unsuccessful attempts to oust Fidel Castro. Besides the economic and diplomatic problems of a war with Iraq, I have a serious moral problem with killing innocent people in that country. I know what it feels like when innocent lives are lost. Even Representative Dick Armey was quoted today in the times as saying that an unprovoked attack would violate international law. However, this administration will not listen to its allies and is only fueling anti-Americanism worldwide.

Mr. Speaker, I will place the entire letter from Gail Donovan in the RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, my message is that we should wage peace instead of being overwhelmed by concerns with war. In this country we have a lot of mechanisms of war. We have West Point, we have several military universities, we have the Naval War College and the Army War College and several mechanisms for preparing the best minds in the world to wage war, and maybe that is as it should be. A great Nation leading the world should have the best minds and the best equipment, the best Armed Forces. But on the other hand, we do very little to prepare our population to wage peace. We have no equivalent to West Point where we train people in diplomacy and in ways in which to wage peace.

We do not even bother to look closely at our successes in the world, like the Marshall Plan. With the expenditure of money that could have been spent fighting wars, we were able to stop the spread of communism in Europe and to rebuild prosperous economies in the nations of Europe.

If we had a peace college or a peace university, peace universities, maybe they would look at questions like the relationship between war and those who make the decisions about war and those who fight the wars. It is worth examining. I have studied it and I have made speeches on this floor before offering the statistics related to the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam War in terms of the number of people who died and where they came from.

The pattern is clear. In the Civil War, if one was drafted or scheduled to be drafted, one could buy one's way out and somebody else, a poorer person, would take your place and die for you in that war. We lost the largest number of Americans in the Civil War, approximately 600,000. Modern weapons were not invented at that time, so more people got killed as cannon fodder in face-to-face, bayonet-to-bayonet contact, so on.

In World War I, the same pattern: The people who died came from the rural areas and the big cities, the poorest populations in the big cities. In World War II, the same as in World War I; and in Korea, and in Vietnam. The names on that wall over there, two-thirds of them are from low-income communities. A disproportionate number on the Vietnam Wall are also minorities.

The people who are going to die deserve to be included in this debate. If we attack Iraq, if we are successful, as we will be, in destroying their military forces, we will have to occupy Iraq. That is where large numbers of men and women will be needed to carry out such an occupation. We will have to have a draft, eventually.

Let us take a look at that and see in a democracy how we might improve upon the process of making war by examining the process by which we draft people to go off and fight the wars. Maybe we should start talking, now, about changes in the Selective Service approach. If we reinstitute the draft, maybe there should be a definite qualification that nobody gets exempted, except only those who are physically disabled. Everybody who is eligible, who is in the category to be drafted, should be drafted. They all should serve the same amount of time in a combat zone.

In Vietnam, the latter part of the Vietnam War, a man had to spend only a year, and after a year he was allowed to go home out of the combat zone. There should be some kind of understanding that one's life is at risk, and those kinds of rules and practices maybe should be made up ahead of time. Congress should take a close look at it. Everybody goes. The grandsons and great-grandsons of the people who make decisions to go to war must be on the front lines as well as the rest of the population.

Also, the way we treat our population: If we are going to have a draft, then certainly the issues that are not being dealt with in this Congress are important for consideration. If we are going to have a draft, we have no right to draft men and women that we do not want to provide job opportunities for.

Our minimum wage is such now that, at $5.15 an hour, one can work a 40-hour week all year long and make less than $12,000. No family of four or even three, barely two, can live off of that small amount of money. Yet, large amounts of Americans make only the minimum wage. This Congress has refused to address any consideration of raising the minimum wage.

If we cannot raise the minimum wage for those young men and women who are going to have to go to war, if we cannot provide decent working conditions in their places of work, instead of attacking OSHA as the first act of a the new administration, and eliminating the ergonomics regulations, we should have been bolstering the safety and health conditions of the workplace, because those are the men and women who are, in the ultimate defense of the country, going to be the ones on the front lines.

We should pay homage to them. We should at least guarantee that when they grow old, as veterans of World War II and Vietnam are now old, they should not have to worry about prescription drugs. Why should a veteran who risked his life in Vietnam or Korea or World War II, why should they have to worry about having to not eat, to forgo a meal, in order to get the prescription they need to stay alive?

A great nation should address the full agenda of items. We should not shut down this Congress and fail to address that agenda because we are considering a war that might secure us against terrorism and make the Nation safe. We are safe only when we do all of these things. We have to walk, chew gum, dance, and do a lot of other things at the same time. We are not secure unless we mount a sustained peace offensive. Our peace offensive must consist of passing laws and appropriating money which supports the increase of prosperity and peace.

Let us just take the Muslim nation of Iraq versus the Muslim nation of Pakistan for a moment. Pakistan has always been our ally, always been our ally. In the Cold War, in the Afghanistan war against the Soviet Union, always Pakistan has been there. Again, in this very controversial and dangerous situation, the Pakistan administration has chosen to ally itself with the United States.

We have given Musharraf and the government of Pakistan I think something like $800 million, not even $1 billion, but $800 million in aid. Pakistan has a population of no less than 150 million people, some say up to 180 million, but no less than 150 million people. If we were to make Pakistan a firm ally and make certain that everything is done that can be done to prop up that administration, to help our ally, to make sure that Musharraf and his government will survive, to make certain that a communication goes out to the whole Muslim world that we are not into fighting a religious war, we are not anti-anybody because they are Muslim. We can have strong Muslim allies as we have Muslim enemies, those who chose to make themselves our enemies.

But instead, we are going to expend billions of dollars in the war against Iraq, instead of billions to help Pakistan. For very tiny amounts of money, more aid to Pakistan to help it get its economy on the feet, to help it provide a more legitimate education system, a lot of their youngsters were drained off into the al-Qaeda movement. They went off to Afghanistan and became part of the terrorist movement because they were hungry, and they were given three meals a day and fed hate and taught how to fight, and given some purpose in life. They should not have that as the only alternative.

I happen to have a large Pakistani community in my district, so I am personally familiar with Pakistan. I went there and visited 2 years ago. Pakistan is not at all a backward Nation, backward-thinking Nation in any way. The fact that it is Muslim does not mean that it does not appreciate its women. I saw or visited several girls' schools. In one class, girls were taking a math exam. They were not just learning minor matters, they were learning science and engineering, just as the men were. It is a nation that needs more schools, and they need more help with their education system.

So let us wage peace by getting closer to Pakistan, by embracing Pakistan. We have given the Pakistani-American population a very difficult time here in this country. They have rounded them up. A lot of Pakistanis have been put in detention as a result of immigration problems, and they have been treated as if they are enemies of the people.

Not a single Pakistani has been identified at this point as a terrorist. They have not found a single Pakistani terrorist. They have found some al-Qaeda people in Pakistan, but they are not Pakistani. They have found no Pakistani-American who was involved in any way with money laundering or any aspect of terrorism; yet, the Pakistani community in America is under great pressure right now.

We should embrace them, instead. We should wage peace by understanding who our allies are and by rewarding our allies, by appreciating our allies. I think we ought to have some kind of amnesty for the Pakistani-Americans who have problems with immigration.

□ 2320

I think we ought to show some sort of special concern with respect to exchange students from Pakistan. We ought to go all out. Pakistan is not the largest Muslim nation; Indonesia is. Indonesia has more Muslims than Pakistan. Pakistan is in a transitional situation where it is receptive. Their graduate students, students of science and engineering, come here. I am certain the nuclear scientists who created the nuclear bomb in Pakistan went to American universities. We know who some of them are. They have the nuclear weapons capability now, Pakistan.

The great danger is that if we do not embrace them, if we do not prop them up, if we are not capable of waging the peace by making them special allies, we may lose control of Pakistan, and the nuclear weapons that they have would fall into the hands of unfriendly people. We would have a clear and imminent danger then that we would have to deal with.

So I want to conclude by saying that this debate deserves to continue and to include as many people as possible. The American people, those who lived through the war in Vietnam, some are still around from World War I, certainly World War II, the Korean war, we should not take their wisdom lightly. We should look at their contributions and listen to their voices. A war in Iraq would not be fought in the quagmires and jungles like a war in Vietnam, but it would be the worst human quagmire that we could possibly contemplate.

We would not be going to war against Iraq. It would eventually be a war against the entire Muslim world. Through the gates that are open in Pakistan we could become allies, have allies and friends from the entire Muslim world. Why close that gate down and suffer from excessive preoccupation for the use of military force in Iraq? We have the United Nations. We have deliberations going on there. There is no great hurry. There is no imminent threat from Saddam Hussein. However monstrous Saddam Hussein might be, he does not have the capacity to inflict any great hurt on America at this point. We have time. We have time to wage peace instead of rushing into war. I hope we will listen to the wiser voices among us and not rush into a war with Iraq.

Mr. Speaker, the letters mentioned previously are as follows:

BROOKLYN, NY,
September 3, 2002.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN OWEN: As a constituent of your district, I urge you to oppose a war on Iraq. A strike on Baghdad is unjustified, illegal, and immoral. The issue of weapons inspectors can be handled by the U.N. in a peaceful and lawful manner. With a sinking economy, the American people cannot bear the burden of another war. Please focus on investing in people, not war.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL FELDMAN.
JEANETTE FELDMAN.

BROOKLYN, NY,
August 9, 2002.

Rep. MAJOR OWENS,
House of Representatives,
Brooklyn, NY.

DEAR REP. OWENS: I am writing to you, because I feel so helpless to stop what seems to be inevitable—War with Iraq.

Like you and every New Yorker, I tasted war on September 11. It wasn't pleasant and I'm not eager to experience it again. For hours I couldn't find my husband who worked across the street from 1 World Trade Center. Fortunately he returned home safely after witnessing unspeakable carnage, but many of our friends and neighbors weren't so lucky. That evening, I walked down 7th Avenue in Park Slope, Brooklyn, to get a handle on the losses. The stench from burning buildings, computers, and bodies was pervasive and the smoke cast an eerie haze over our little community. Everywhere I went I learned of more losses—12 firemen from Squad 1 on my block, loved ones of students and a teacher at the Park Slope Dance Studio, parents with kids at 321, Berkeley Carroll, and St. Ann's, members from church, a former colleague, and many of our neighbors were all among the missing. At 7 p.m. that day, we foolishly held out hope that some would be found in area hospitals, but unfortunately there weren't.

Weeks later I attended the memorial service for my friend, Jeff Hardy, who was killed because he happened to be working on the 101st Floor of Tower 1. Hours after I attended Jeff's service, a woman at 7th Avenue and Carroll approached me and asked me to sign a petition opposing the war in Afghanistan. I refused. I supported the war in Afghanistan and have been grateful that our allies have worked with us to round up terrorists worldwide

However, I have seen absolutely no evidence that Iraq had anything to do with this attack. The rumor that Mohamed Atta met with an Iraqi intelligence agent has been denied by the Czech government. I am not aware of one Iraqi who fought with the Taliban, although I know the citizens of many of our allies fought with the Taliban, are members of Al Qaeda, were on those planes September 11, and continue to threaten Americans and other foreigners every day, particularly in Pakistan.

My hope is to destroy Al Qaeda and stop the spread of Islamic religious fundamentalism and hatred for the United States, Christians, and Jews. To fight the Islamists, we need the cooperation of all of our allies and all countries in the Middle East. I am afraid that this fragile alliance will dissolve if we attack Iraq without provocation and we may not get the help we need. Invading Iraq will only inflame anti-American rhetoric and could even jeopardize our allies in the Middle East. I'm deeply worried about the welfare of President Musharraf and concerned that if anything happens to him, religious fanatics could take control of Pakistan, which we know has both nuclear weapons and Al Qaeda members. Musharraf is already under attack in his country because of his support of the U.S. and the New Yorker reported this week that a recent car bomb that killed 12 people was intended for him. I truly think declaring war on Iraq will put more U.S. citizens in harm's way than containment.

To me this administration's warmongering is further evidence of the "Kremlinization" of Washington under Bush. This administration thrives on secrecy. In the beginning of the term we saw cronyism and secret agreements among the elites in government and business. Now there is lavish federal spending in Florida where the president's brother happens to be running for re-election. According to a recent New Republic article, even questionable SBA loans are being made in Florida at a time when several businesses with which I have worked that were located at or near ground zero have been denied SBA assistance.

After September 11, we had secret arrests and detentions of more than 1,000 individuals. Even Reagan-appointed, federal judges have been appalled by this. We have seen civil rights being applied arbitrarily with some American citizens who happen to be poor and of color like Jose Padilla being denied the right to legal counsel and the American justice system, while prosperous Americans like John Walker Lingh, who actually fought American soldiers, received them. No investigation has been allowed into the intelligence failures before September 11. Time magazine this week has a scathing article about how this administration ignored terrorist threats prior to the attacks, but we can't examine this. Free speech has been chilled because any elected official who dares criticize or stand in the way of the administration has been called unpatriotic and obstructionist and in some cases compared to Saddam Hussein in newspaper ads. The government is asking ordinary citizens to spy on one another, reminiscent of something out of a Solzhenitsyn novel. The attorney general has ignored the Supreme Court's 1939 opinion on the Second Amendment and has decided to apply his own, wildly different interpretation and also won't allow gun checks on suspected terrorists. I won't even get into what started all of this, the election of 2000 and how the voter registration lists were "scrubbed" and the failure of the Supreme Court to honor a presidential candidate's request to count votes as allowed under Florida law. Now this administration is invading countries without adequate discussion or support.

Following the tragedies of September 11, we were a city in mourning. We spent months going to funerals and neighborhoods completely shut down when funerals for firefighters were held. The physical and emotional damage contributed to economic downturn here. I run a small, but successful public relations firm and I booked 93 percent of my revenues in 2001 on projects completed before September 11 and only 7 percent after September 11. My situation was not unusual. Small businesses—graphic designers, contractors, beauticians, photographers, etc.—everywhere in the metropolitan area suffered the same fate. Large companies like my husband's were evacuated from lower Manhattan never to return. His company had to rebuild complete systems within days to be able to compete when the markets opened the following Monday and use AOL or other carriers to communicate by email because the company's servers were destroyed. We all limped along. Our woeful city tax revenues are enduring evidence of the economic damage we experienced.

This country and especially this city have not yet digested the economic and emotional fallout from September 11. New York City is still struggling to get back on its feet and continues to get hammered by low tax revenues, the recession, stock market volatility, and corporate scandals. The economy can't take another shock like a war with Iraq and its unknown consequences.

We have so much unfinished international business that to go forward with a war with Iraq right now would be irresponsible. I share the same concerns that King Abdullah of Jordan has that invading Iraq could lead to a further destabilization of the Middle East, including possibly a civil war, at a time when we need to be rebuilding Afghanistan and seeking a solution to the Israeli/Palestinian War. Even the Kurds are begging us not to invade. We still haven't found Osama bin Laden and Mullah Omar yet, how are we going to round up Saddam Hussein and his secret weapons, particularly without the support of our allies? It's suicidal. I'm reminded of our many unsuccessful attempts to oust Fidel Castro. Besides the economic and diplomatic problems of a war with Iraq, I have a serious moral problem with killing innocent people in the country. I know what it feels like when innocent lives are lost. Even Rep. Dick Armey was quoted today in the Times as saying that an unprovoked attack would violate international law. However, this administration will not listen to its allies and is only fueling anti-Americanism worldwide.

I am a conservative Democrat and was highly supportive of President Clinton and particularly his economic policies because he gave everyone a seat at the table of opportunity, cut budget deficits, and supported free trade. (Unlike Bush who has caved to special political interests on steel, the farm bill, tax cuts, energy, the environment, etc.) I don't trust these people in the White House now. Unfortunately, they seem to be unstoppable. Please help stop them.

Sincerely,

GAIL DONOVAN.

SENATE—Wednesday, September 25, 2002

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable JACK REED, a Senator from the State of Rhode Island.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, Sovereign of this Nation and Lord of our lives, in each period of history, You have blessed us with great leaders who have exemplified love for You and dedication to our country. Today we celebrate such a man. Thank You for Senator STROM THURMOND.

By Your providential care, on May 25, 1997, he became the longest serving Senator in our Nation's history. Yet, it is not just the quantity, but also the quality of these years service motivate our admiration. So today we join with all Americans in thanking You for his outstanding service to the Senate, to his beloved South Carolina and to the Nation.

Thank You for the enrichment of our lives by this man. He has shown us the courage of firm convictions, the patriotism of love for this Nation, and true commitment to the Senate. We praise You for the personal ways he has inspired each of us. He is an affirmer who spurs us on with words of encouragement. Your Spirit of caring and concern for individuals shines through this remarkable man.

Gracious God, may Senator THURMOND know of our affirmation, feel our love, and be encouraged by Your blessing. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable JACK REED led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, September 25, 2002.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable JACK REED, a Senator from the State of Rhode Island, to perform the duties of the Chair.

ROBERT C. BYRD,
President pro tempore.

Mr. REED thereupon assumed the Chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, this morning there will be a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m., with the time equally divided between the two leaders or their designees. At 10:30 a.m., the Senate will vote on the Byrd amendment regarding firefighting and drought on the Interior Appropriations Act. If cloture is not invoked, there will be an immediate vote on cloture on the Lieberman substitute amendment to the Homeland Security Act. If cloture is not invoked on the Lieberman amendment, the Senate will remain on the Homeland Security Act, and Senator GRAMM will be recognized to offer an amendment.

Mr. President, I would also say the vote is scheduled at 10:30, and I have been asked by a number of Senators to keep it that way. There are important committee hearings going on and which need to go on. So if there is a request to extend the time, if I am not on the floor, I would hope the Presiding Officer would object in his capacity as a Senator from the State of Rhode Island because it is important to keep the time for the vote at 10:30.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, and the time to be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees.

The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted 15 minutes, if necessary, to complete my remarks.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE ECONOMIC SECURITY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I have spent many hours in the last few weeks looking at matters of national security.

As the Presiding Officer knows—he is also a member of that committee—the hearings we have held, thanks to our outstanding chairman, Senator LEVIN of Michigan, have been invaluable. I also thank the administration for providing us with briefings and meetings to give us the best possible understanding of the situation we face.

I also serve as a member of the Governmental Affairs Committee. I have spent the last couple months on the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. I pay tribute to the chairman of that committee, Senator LIEBERMAN, who is also the author of that legislation. I think it is tragic that legislation has been hung up here in the Senate for matters of political grandstanding rather than substantive disagreement.

But there has been very little attention paid on the Senate floor or in Washington recently to the economic security of the American people. Frankly, if this administration has its way, I think there will be no attention paid to economic security at all over the next 6 weeks. If you look at the condition of the economic security of this Nation, for most Americans, you can understand why the White House wants to do anything possible to change the subject.

Yesterday's papers, alone, had one day of economic news that would say we ought to put the economic security of this country on the highest level of alert, a code red, for disaster, disaster, disaster.

As the papers reported yesterday, the Nasdaq exchange fell to its lowest level in 6 years, 77 percent below its high in the year 2000; a 39-percent drop in this year alone.

The S&P 500 dropped near its 5-year low, 45 percent below its high just a couple years ago, and a 27-percent drop in this year alone.

The newspapers yesterday said the stocks were surging in July and August of this summer. There was hope, optimism for an economic recovery being underway. But what happened? War scare happened. The Dow Jones has dropped almost 1,400 points since August 22 of this year, a 14-percent drop in its entire value in just 1 month.

Why? Well, yesterday's Washington Times said: "On concerns about the economy and a war."

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

The Washington Post said: Uncertainty in the economy and a possible war in Iraq. The Times and the Post agree.

According to the chief strategist for Lehman Brothers, the stock market is now heading toward its third consecutive down year, which would be the first time since World War II—the first time in over half a century—that the stock market has dropped for 3 consecutive years.

That means the 401(k) account or the IRA or the private savings accounts of many Americans are worth half, or even less than half, of their value when President Bush took office.

Unfortunately, Mr. President and Members, it is more likely to get worse than better.

A Wall Street Journal headline yesterday said: "Is Your Portfolio Ready for War?—Iraq Attack Could Slash S&P 500 by 10%." That is another 10 percent in addition to what has happened already.

Crude oil prices were reported yesterday as topping $30 a barrel, the highest level in 19 months. The number of Americans out of work in this country since February of 2001 has increased by 2,300,000 of our fellow citizens. Let me say that again. The number of Americans out of work in this Nation has gone up since February of 2001 by 2,300,000; and we can't get an extension of unemployment benefits passed in the Senate to protect those who have lost their jobs and are suffering the drastic financial consequences.

Unfortunately, it is not likely to get any better, because the leading economic indicators fell in August for the third straight month.

The Wall Street Journal said their consensus economic forecast for the last quarter of this calendar year—2002—has dropped 16 percent, and it also has been revised downward for the beginning of next year.

The chief economist for Wells Fargo Bank—a good Minnesotan, Mr. Suysoh said a war with Iraq could bring oil prices to over $40 a barrel and cause a major recession.

Some have said the administration decided to make the possibility of a war with Iraq the main topic this fall, because the economic condition of this country was so bad. Well, they have succeeded in making the war with Iraq the main topic, and they have succeeded in making the state of our Nation's economy even worse.

Those comments about orchestrating the timing are not mine. They are the words of the White House Chief of Staff, Mr. Andrew Card, reported on September 7 that the White House waited on its PR offensive about the possibility of war until after Labor Day. He said:

> From a marketing point of view, you don't introduce a new product in August.

That is one heck of a product. This Senator's judgment, as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, is that Mr. Card is being honest.

I have seen no new information and I am aware of no imminent threat to this country. The war scare that is going on now. The hurry-up-and-vote pressure on the Senate right now. The pressure to OK the first preemptive attack in this Nation's 213-year history. They are the first installment of a doctrine which the President announced in June, the right to a preemptive strike by the United States of America.

What would happen in this world if every other nation followed suit with a preemptive strike against a possible future threat? What about India and Pakistan, who both possess nuclear weapons? What about Israel and the Palestinians, China and Taiwan, or North Korea and South Korea?

Does anyone stop to think whether this doctrine of preemptive strike would make the world more or less secure?

Mr. Card, the White House Chief of Staff, is right. This new product has caused quite a PR sensation. It is taking over the headlines—it has replaced the stock market with Saddam Hussein. Talk about going from bad to worse. The trouble is that the stock market is also going from bad to worse.

The number of unemployed in America has gone from bad to worse. The economic outlook of this Nation has gone from bad to worse. The Federal budget forecast has gone from bad to worse. The economic security for most Americans has gone from bad to worse.

I can understand why the White House might not be aware of all this, because the contributions to the Republican political committees are at record highs.

Yesterday's headline again: "GOP Committees See a 40-Percent Increase in Soft Money." Their bank accounts outweigh the Democrats by more than 2 to 1. Their contributors have good reasons to be grateful.

The Brookings Institute reports that the top 1 percent of American taxpayers—the wealthiest 1 percent of the people in this country—got 37 percent of last year's tax cut. They pay 26 percent of the taxes, and they got 37 percent of the tax cut. The average tax cut for the wealthiest 1 percent of the people in this Nation under last year's bill was over $45,000. The average pretax earnings of the top 1 percent is over $1.1 million, and they got an average tax cut of over $45,000.

I have to say that this administration does have an economic recovery plan. The trouble is it is limited to the wealthiest 1 percent of Americans. For the rest of America, we are in a real-life survival show. They lose their jobs. The losers lose their health insurance. They lose their retirement investments. And the winner of the show is someone like Jack Walsh, former chairman of General Electric. He has an annual pension of $9 million. I hope that was indexed to inflation.

General Electric shareholders, which include retirees whose portfolios, as I said earlier, dropped by 50 percent in the last 2 years, also pay for Mr. Walsh's car and driver and for his floor seats at the New York Knicks basketball games. They pay for his boxes at both the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees baseball games. They pay his fees to four country clubs, and more.

I tell you, some corporate executives are no longer satisfied with golden parachutes. They take the whole airplane.

American taxpayers ought to be asking themselves: Why does this guy need a tax cut? Why did this administration insist on squandering over $2.2 trillion over the next 10 years on tax cuts where over one-third of the benefits go to the wealthiest 1 percent of the people in this country? It will cost the Federal Government $500 billion more over the next 10 years just on the higher interest payments on the Federal debt. That is $500 billion more in taxes to pay for fiscal irresponsibility. That provides nothing for homeland security. That provides nothing for special education; nothing for anything that benefits the people of America.

In 1 year, the non-Social Security budget of this country has gone from a 10-year forecast a $3.1 trillion surplus to a $700 billion deficit. That is an almost a $4 trillion drop in 1 year. Not even Arthur Andersen can hide that number.

Yesterday's paper reported that the Vice President is indignant about suggestions that this war scare, this "warphoria" has been timed for political benefits this fall.

I wouldn't be indignant. I would be outraged, if the White House Chief of Staff is correct in what he said—that the White House waited to introduce its "new product" until the fall of a midterm election. Only the people who were responsible for those decisions know why they made them.

But the American people will ultimately hold them responsible for those decisions. The war scare has wiped the economy off the headlines. It has also wiped any economic recovery for this country off the map. It has wiped many Americans' jobs out of existence, and wiped many Americans' prosperity from comfort to despair. If all of this is absolutely necessary, it is unfortunate. If it is not, it is unforgivable.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. President. I will be very brief. I was going to ask the Senator from Minnesota a question.

I will be brief because I know my colleague from Wyoming is waiting.

I wanted to first compliment him for his remarks and pose a thought and a question. I would be interested in what he has to say.

The President thinks strongly that Saddam Hussein must go, and go quickly. All of us are thinking about that and wrestling with that. I am not going to comment yes or no on that. The President should be spending time and effort focusing on it. It is a very important issue. I don't begrudge him for doing that. He is spending maybe half of his time on it. It seems to me the other half of his time is spent on going around the country campaigning—half his time on the war effort, and half his time going around the country campaigning for candidates, and the economy is not getting any of the President's attention.

As my friend from Minnesota has correctly laid out, it is going down, down, down. Every day there is a new headline. We have one in New York. The securities industry is going to lay off many more people at a time when we can't afford it. In every part of the country, you see this down, that down, and this down.

I make a plea to the President. Spend your time focusing on Saddam Hussein, but what about spending the rest of the time—instead of traveling around the country going to political events—focusing on the economy. We are a great Nation. We can do both. We can examine what we ought to do in Iraq. At the same time, we can start focusing on the economy and things such as getting people back to work, extending unemployment insurance, and lowering the cost of prescription drugs.

The President has been absent on every one of those issues. One doesn't exclude the other.

I ask my colleague: Does he agree with those sentiments? Am I not correct when we read that the President is spending one-half of the week going to different parts of the country simply campaigning, and that I haven't heard him pronounce a thing about the economy and what we are going to do about it in all too long a period of time? Then, when he says with sort of verbiage and nothing substantive, I do not know if they have a single plan.

I don't know if they have a single plan, even though they withdrew the tax cuts they proposed for the very wealthy. I ask my colleague, in light of his excellent remarks, would he agree with me that all Americans, Democrats and Republicans, Independents, want the President to come back home and spend some time focusing on the economy; that he can do both, we can do both, deal with the war issue and focus on the economy?

Mr. DAYTON. I absolutely agree with the Senior Senator from New York. What I find particularly disturbing is, as I know from experience in Minnesota, where the President has been to my State three times in the last year in the midst of my colleague's very difficult election campaign, the President has come in, raised a couple million dollars, and has charged part of the cost of this trip to the American taxpayers. He gives one 20-minute policy speech somewhere and then goes on to raise millions of dollars for campaigns, and the American taxpayer is paying the bill.

I agree with the Senator, the President ought to stay at home. He should focus on the economy, in addition to Iraq. And if he does travel for political reasons, the American taxpayer should not be paying the bill.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SCHUMER. I am happy to yield to my friend from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I was astounded to see some of the recent news coming out on the economic front, the gap between the middle class and the wealthy, the gap between the rich and the poor, the fact we see in many categories the worst economy in 50 long years in terms of jobs lost in the private sector, in terms of the sluggish growth of the GDP, the number of foreclosures. It is stunning. One has to be concerned that this administration is giving this no attention whatsoever, which was my friend's point.

We look at a President who is spending half his time on foreign policy; that is fine. This Congress is going to help in that area because we have a lot of ideas on how to meet the threat Iraq poses. On our side of the aisle, there will be different opinions on how to meet that threat, which will show the strength of our democracy, and that this party is, in fact, a broad umbrella, which is healthy in the long run for the country.

The other half of the time seems to be spent on the road campaigning. I agree with my friend. Given the economic statistics—the stock market, we are looking at maybe a $4, $5 trillion loss, the worst in 50 years, and the fact pensions are down—does my friend believe we ought to perhaps come up with something specific to ask the President?

For example, he keeps calling us to talk about foreign policy. Why doesn't he call us to the White House to talk about this economy, to get the best ideas of Republican Presidents and Democratic Presidents? This isn't partisan. People are suffering out there, Republicans and Democrats, Independents, young and old, for different reasons. So would my friend think that might be a good way for this President to show he cares as much about the everyday issues our people are facing as he does about electing Republicans, and perhaps this would be a way to break through on this economy?

Consumer confidence is down. Perhaps that would give a spur to our people and bring us together just as we get together on foreign policy.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank my colleague for her question and comments. She is right on the money. It is a great idea. We are called, our Democratic leadership, along with Republican leadership, to the White House on numerous occasions to discuss the war effort. That is good. That is how America should work, particularly when it comes to wartime. But in a sense we have an economic war here at home, as my good friend from California has enumerated: people losing income; people losing jobs; people worried about the future; pensions way down.

Why are we not being called to the White House for an economic summit on what to do there? I speak for all of us: We would be happy to meet the President halfway or a good part of the way in terms of doing things because the people are languishing. To ignore the economy and spend all this time running around the country campaigning is a dereliction of duty. He is not even up for election.

I thank my colleague for the question.

Ms. STABENOW. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHUMER. I am happy to yield for the last time.

Mr. THOMAS. Could the Chair tell me what the system is this morning? Are we going to have one side have all the time?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York has the floor. There are 10 minutes allotted to each Senator. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. THOMAS. How much time remains?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. THOMAS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. SCHUMER. I yield the 1 minute to the Senator from Michigan.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New York.

Every economic indicator we want to go up is going down, and every one we want to go down is going up. The Senator and I have worked together on one of the most critical issues that affect Americans, their pocketbook and quality of life, which is access to prescription drugs. I share the concern that we do not see the focus on the economy and what needs to happen in the economy. The Schumer-McCain bill, now in the House of Representatives, which would lower prices for prescription drugs, is one very important piece of that economic puzzle. When we see that more people are lower income, their health care costs are rising, I appreciate his leadership on that issue.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator for her leadership as well.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming.

SENATE AT A STANDSTILL

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, it is interesting. I wanted to visit a little bit about where we are on the floor and the fact we are not moving. We have been in the same place for 4 weeks.

I understand the frustration of the folks on the other side of the aisle. I recognize, too, that we are in the full swing of an election year. It is blame-game time, where we all stand up and blame the President for what is going on when there is no effort on the other side of the aisle to move off where we are and take up some of the issues we ought to be addressing.

We talk about prescription drugs. Prescription drugs is not on the floor because the leadership has not moved from where we are to make time to get it up here. I get a little exasperated, using all this time for political comments when there are no ideas of what to do coming from the other side of the floor.

Actually, that wasn't why I came here, but I have to tell you it is pretty frustrating to continue to hear that sort of thing—blaming the President when these folks have no idea what they want to do and no suggestions, no leadership coming from the Senate. What are we going to do about it?

What we have done is continue to work on two bills for about 4 weeks now. Homeland defense is one of the most important issues we have before us, and it has been stalled. Although we have differing views on how it ought to proceed, that is fine, that is part of the system here. We ought to take a vote on those views and move forward, but instead of that, we have had stalling on the other side, no chance to vote on amendments, simply wanting to always vote on cloture, which is what we are faced with today.

The unwillingness of the majority leadership to allow votes on certain amendments has created a standoff. We keep hearing about what else you want to talk about over there, but we won't move off where we are. It is pretty frustrating. It seems as though that is the political moment. We have to really get down to what it is.

The same thing is true of Interior appropriations. It has been on the floor for 4 weeks. Yet we can't seem to move it to get some of the things done. For those of us in the West, it is very important—public land fees and, so on, in which we are so involved. Maybe even more important than that, the more immediate issue, there is some drought relief in this bill. There is something on forest fire suppression. We can do those things. But have we moved? No.

We continue to stall and to have votes on cloture, which does not resolve the issue. All we need to do is have a vote on the amendments. If you don't like the amendments, have a vote to table them. That is where we ought to be. That is the system.

To get up and start spending all of our time blaming the President for an economic slowdown that began under the Clinton administration, according to all the people who are familiar and knowledgeable about it, is to be a little tiresome, when we have an opportunity to move forward. There are a lot of things we ought to be doing in the relatively short time we have left.

Obviously, homeland defense is one that has to be done.

We need to debate the Iraq resolution, which is going to take some time. We need a CR if we are going to adjourn on the 19th of October. We have an energy bill which we ought to move forward. We talked about pharmaceuticals and Medicare. We could have done something in our committee, but the majority leader pulled it out of the committee. We will not have time to accomplish these items as long as we remain on the pending bills.

It seems to me it would be very frustrating to want to spend the time blaming the President for the economy when the Senate is not doing what we can and moving forward.

I will not take any more time. We ought to look at what we are accomplishing instead of trying to put the blame on everybody else when we have not succeeded in doing what we ought to be doing. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I understand the distinguished Senator from Michigan would like 5 minutes so she can then assume the Chair. I will be happy to defer to her for 5 minutes, if I can then be recognized after her and have the attention of the body. I will be happy to accommodate her.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Michigan.

THE ECONOMY

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I thank my friend for his courtesy this morning, and I appreciate the opportunity to speak for a few moments before assuming the Chair. I did want to follow up on the discussion this morning on the economy. A few minutes ago, I indicated that every economic indicator that should be going down is going up: job losses; health care costs; foreclosures; national debt; interest rate costs; Social Security trust fund raid. Every part of the economy we wish to be going up is going down: economic growth, down; business investment, down; the stock market, down; retirement accounts, down; consumer confidence; minimum wage.

We have a very disturbing situation. I wish to speak for a moment about one piece of the economy that is so critical in the quality of life of American families and American businesses which are struggling to pay the costs. Let me speak to one piece of the economic record of the last 18 months, and that is that workers' payments for health insurance is soaring.

We are seeing that the cost of insurance to cover a family has gone up 16 percent, and the cost of an individual has gone up 27 percent, over one-fourth increase in their costs. The costs are going up. Their savings are down, their investments are down, and at the same time, we are seeing the biggest part of the reason for that health care cost going up as a result of the cost of prescription drugs.

We are seeing overall prescription drugs going up over three times the rate of inflation. This is a critical part of the economic pie, the costs for consumers right now. It is not inconsequential. It is not like buying a new pair of tennis shoes or "Gee, I would like to have a new coat." This is lifesaving medicine, the difference between life and death, or whether a person goes into a nursing home or is able to live at home. I am very concerned about this. What is the response?

We in the Senate have been focused on Medicare prescription drug coverage and lowering prices for everyone. We have been successful in passing a bill that, in fact, lowers prices and creates more competition in the marketplace once a patent expires. But what is the response of the pharmaceutical industry within this context, with the struggles that are going on for families, businesses, and farmers across the country? What is their response right now? A new PR campaign, not putting the millions of dollars into lower prices and making prescription medications available, lowering the premiums for small businesses. They have gone on a huge PR campaign.

We are seeing ads that I find, I have to say, absolutely outrageous. One says: "Pray for a Miracle." It uses the picture of a child who, obviously, is deathly ill. It says: "Pray for a Miracle," because they say generic drugs will never cure him.

In the small print it says: "They don't do research." Of course they do not do research. They do not do research. They do not have to do research. The idea of generic drugs is to take the formulas and the patents after the research has been done, after the American people have helped to pay for that research through NIH funding, tax deductions, and supporting the companies with a 20-year patent so they do not have competition in recovering their costs.

The whole point of generics is the American public made a deal that, once the 20 years is up, once those subsidies are up, they will have that formula available so generic companies can manufacture those drugs and lower the prices.

Instead of working with us to have a system that works both for brand name companies to develop these new brand name drugs and also for the American people to get the bargain they are supposed to get, which is lower prices, the companies are putting millions of dollars into a front senior citizen group, ads on the air, getting involved in elections and running ads scaring people that somehow if we let the system work as we created it over the years in a bipartisan way, if we let the system work, this child, who is obviously seriously ill, will somehow be hurt. I find that absolutely outrageous.

I am concerned in the context of this economy and the debate and the American people trying to figure out when they sit down in the morning what they are going to pay for—are they going to be able to afford the health care premium? Is that senior going to be able to afford their medicine? Are they going to be able to pay for the clothes kids need for school? Are they going to be able to do the other things they need for their family?

Instead of working with us, the companies have chosen an outrageous PR propaganda campaign. I urge them to work with us to do the right thing. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. EDWARDS). The time of the Senator has expired.

The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

INTERIOR APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I have been listening to some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle saying the economic problems we have are somebody else's fault. They blame the President. Unfortunately, in this instance, the President cannot pass legislation. The President was successful in working with us to pass the beginning of tax relief which took effect in 2001, and most responsible economists I know suggest that helped lessen the impact of the downturn which began in 2000, beginning as early as the first quarter of 2000 and hitting its peak the end of 2000 and the beginning of 2001.

We could do some things in this body. We could pass some laws that would make a difference and help the economy get going. Frankly, one of the great frustrations I feel is we cannot get about the business that we are supposed to do on the Senate floor. If the majority leadership had allowed the Senate Energy Committee to work its will on an energy bill, the committee would have reported out a proposal to allow drilling on 2,000 acres in the barren northlands above the Arctic Circle in Alaska. That is called ANWR.

ANWR not only has the potential to replace the oil we must now buy from the malevolent, deadly dictator Saddam Hussein, ANWR could put up to three-quarters of a million people to work throughout the country, not just in the drilling and work in ANWR, but providing the materials, making the steel and turning it into equipment, pipelines, providing the infrastructure through the private sector that we need to bring that oil down from ANWR.

I am still hoping we can get ANWR in the energy bill, a tremendous boost for the economy. Where else do we need a boost for the economy? In large construction projects. There are construction projects shut down all around the country because they cannot get insurance against terrorism.

Terrorism risk insurance was dealt with in the Banking Committee on a bipartisan basis. I understand they reported out a good bill to provide that the Federal Government would be a backstop, on a sharing basis, for the reinsurance of terrorism risk.

The majority leadership took it away. We cannot get a terrorism risk insurance bill through this body because the majority leadership has changed it into something that provides great new opportunities to sue the victims of terrorist attacks for punitive damages. Punitive damages are not a way to build the economy. Those are two pieces of legislation we could have gotten finished to help the economy get going. Making the tax cut permanent would be a third way of doing it.

I came to the floor to express what I believe is a great sense of frustration by all of us. The Senate is stuck in neutral.

I have only been in the Senate 16 years, and by some standards that is a pretty short time. We honored our distinguished senior colleague from South Carolina yesterday, and we know of the record of great service of others in this body, but in the short time I have been here I have never seen this body so dysfunctional. It is time we talked about why we are dysfunctional. What is happening? What has gone wrong? Why are we here? Quite simply, it is because some do not want to let us vote. This is the basic motivation and it is cloaked with all the talk about cloture and filibuster, but we are still on an Interior bill amendment which was offered 3 weeks ago. We are stuck because the majority leadership does not want us to vote on that amendment.

There is plenty of time to vote, but for some reason some are apparently afraid to vote. It is no more complicated than that. If we vote, we could get to the remaining amendments, pass the bill, and move on in the next day or two. If the majority does not like it, they could move to table it and we could have a vote; might win, might lose. We could at least have a vote.

I have worked a long time on appropriations bills. I have worked very diligently with the Senator from Maryland, the excellent chairman of the VA/HUD Committee. We have a bill we would like to present to the Senate because it deals with some very important things for veterans, for housing, for the environment, for economic development in our communities, for science, for space, for emergency management. We are ready and willing, and there are nine other bills that are ready, but when we spend more than 3 weeks on one appropriations bill, we are not going anywhere. We cannot get there until the Senate does what it is paid to do, which is to vote up or down, win or lose, and let the will of the Senate prevail.

Some are suggesting—and this, I believe, is truly outrageous—the sponsors of the amendment should pull the amendment so some do not have to cast a difficult vote. Yes, this is a political season and it is tough, but that is what we get paid to do. We have cast 223 votes this year, and I do not believe another one will make or break or overburden any of us.

The Senator from South Carolina and the Senator from West Virginia each have cast over 15,000 votes. They have shown they are not afraid to make hard decisions, and the hard decisions they have made have not taken them away. The sponsors of the Craig-Domenici amendment have had people die in their States. They have had millions of acres of trees, including old-growth trees, habitat, and wildlife, ruined by fire. Houses have burned. A sound and responsible solution has been put forward based on good science and sound forestry management. The Senate should have the courtesy, if not the common sense, to vote on it.

How poorly are we willing to treat the Senators from these Western States? I believe these Senators and their constituencies deserve a vote. If Senators want to vote against them, vote against them. They will have to explain it if they vote for them or if they vote against them.

Senator CRAIG does not have an opportunity to slip this provision into a conference report, so he is doing what the Senate should allow him to do and what we are paid to do, which is to offer amendments and have an up-or-down vote. Maybe they want a commitment to drop the amendment in a conference report. Why can't we vote?

There are a lot of reasons why appropriations bills are difficult to resolve, but this should not be one of them. This is not a question of how much money we have available. We should have voted 3 weeks ago. We could have completed four or more bills in this time, but we are at a stalemate.

Given the choices, this should be an easy call. Should the sponsors be asked to ignore their burning States, the danger of horrific, catastrophic forest fires, and set their amendments aside, or should the people who are preventing a vote decide they should let the Senate do what we are here to do, what our constitutional responsibility is to do, which is to make decisions on hard choices and then vote?

We have been in session for over 3 weeks, since Labor Day, and we have cast a whooping 16 votes. Six of these votes were unanimous. So we have cast 10 votes on contentious issues, which is less than 1 vote per day. That is not exactly heavy lifting. This time of year, we could probably do two, three, or even four votes a day and not work up a sweat, but we are not able to do that. We cast 5 unanimous votes, and we cast a unanimous vote on procedure in 16 days, which leaves 10 votes.

Some are saying maybe we ought to come in on Saturdays. Unless we are permitted to vote, what good is that going to do? If we cannot vote on Wednesday, what makes my colleagues think we could vote on Saturday, unless the objection to voting was lifted?

I do not want to shut off any debate, but when the debate is over, we should vote. If anyone has anything to add after 3½ weeks of debate, then I think they may have missed their opportunity.

I have spoken a couple of times. Obviously I have not moved many souls or they would all be stampeding to say, let's restore sound forestry management. Maybe they were not listening, maybe I was not persuasive, but I have had my shot. I think it is time we get on with it.

I compliment the Senator from South Dakota for figuring out a way to protect his State. What he did was sound forestry management. I simply want to see other people who live around the forests have the same opportunity as the people in South Dakota, which is to be free from the danger of catastrophic forest fires.

I have farmers who want farm aid. South Dakota has an interest, I am sure. I voted on farm aid. It was not germane or relevant to the bill, but I voted for it. Why can't the Senators whose States are on fire have a vote on something that is directly relevant to the Interior bill before us? I have not heard one substantive, rational explanation as to why Senators whose States are on fire should not be entitled to vote, even a negative vote.

I say to our distinguished leadership, explain to the people of the Western States that are on fire why they do not deserve a vote. The amendment is pending. Let's vote up or down; table it or not. South Dakota got special protection. Are Colorado, California, Montana, or Utah any less important than South Dakota? I think not.

Have the national interest groups gotten so powerful—and let me say, when we are talking national interest groups, I will let everyone in on a secret. It is the Sierra Club. Have the national interest groups and the Sierra Club gotten so powerful they can prevent Senators from standing up for the safety of people in their own States?

I note that the groups that oppose this amendment are very important and powerful, but until now I did not think they were powerful enough to shut down the Senate. I understand why the authors of the amendment would not want to pull their amendment because their States are on fire and in danger of being on fire. Given all the important matters funded in Interior, given that $5.9 billion in drought assistance for fire suppression money, I do not understand why we cannot vote. Substantively or politically, what is more important than assistance to prevent fires and assistance for drought-stricken ranchers? It is clear to those who follow the Senate, there is bad politics for some who may not want to vote.

I appreciate some activists do not want this passed—that is their right—but we are not obliged to skip votes because an outside group does not want to see a vote on it. They have their right to voice their opposition on the amendment, but they should not have the power to stop the Senate from voting. That is a shame. This matter should be resolved in the way it should be resolved, with a vote; move to table and vote up or down. I think Senator CRAIG's effort to prevent forest fires is worth the Senate's time.

We have lots of forests the size of New Jersey. Firefighters and innocent citizens in South Dakota are protected. But Idaho, New Mexico, Montana, and Missouri should be, too.

I plead with those objecting to voting to permit us to do what the people have sent us here to do.

Before I conclude, I call to the attention of my colleagues in the Senate an editorial from yesterday's Wall Street Journal. It says the Democratic leadership is:

> . . . now blaming Republicans for stalling the appropriations bill. In fact, the bill would clear quickly if he'd just hold a vote on the Craig amendment. But the Majority Leader knows a vote would force his party either to side with Mr. Craig (thereby alienating greens), or repudiate forest cleanup (thereby alienating voters this fall). We think it was a famous Democrat, JFK, who once said that to govern is to choose.

I ask unanimous consent that this article from the Wall Street Journal be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DASCHLE'S BURNING SENATORS

If you want to know why Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle can't get a spending bill for the Interior Department passed this year, look no further than his home state's Black Hills.

Those South Dakota mountains are at the center of a growing political debate over forest fires. All summer Senator Tim Johnson, also a South Dakota Democrat, had been taking heat from the state's rural communities for allowing green groups to stymie forest cleanup, a recipe for fires. So in July, to give Mr. Johnson a boost in his tight reelection fight against Republican John Thune, Mr. Daschle slipped a rider into a bill exempting his state from the very environmental regulations he'd long championed.

It took about a nanosecond for Western Senators, their own states in flames, to seize on this flip-flop and demand equal treatment. Idaho Republican Larry Craig offered an amendment to the Interior bill that would enact much of President Bush's new fire plan, as well as a South Dakota-style legal exemption for 10 million at-risk acres of forestland. Mr. Daschle—now trying to get back in green good graces—has tried twice to close Senate debate without considering Mr. Craig's amendment, and has lost both times.

And no wonder. This year's fires, and Mr. Daschle's rider, have become an enormous political liability for Western Democrats. They've had to explain to angry constituents why Chainsaw Tom was allowed to save his state's forests, while theirs were left to burn. And, with 6.5 million acres in ashes and more than 25 people dead this year, none of them want to oppose Mr. Craig's much-needed forest cleanup plan. California's Dianne Feinstein and Oregon's Ron Wyden, both Democrats, had even been trying to work out a compromise with Mr. Craig.

Mr. Daschle is now blaming Republicans for stalling the appropriations bill. In fact, the bill would clear quickly if he'd just hold a vote on the Craig amendment. But the Majority Leader knows a vote would force his party either to side with Mr. Craig (thereby alienating greens), or repudiate forest cleanup (alienating voters this fall). We think it was a famous Democrat, JFK, who once said that to govern is to choose.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. STABENOW). The Senator from Montana.

FIREFIGHTING FUNDS

Mr. BURNS. Madam President, I rise today to address this third vote on cloture on the Byrd amendment directing the replenishing of firefighting funds for the Departments of Agriculture and Interior.

This vote really hinges on our desire to get drought relief to the West.

In my opinion, that is not what this debate is about. Drought relief has already been agreed to almost unanimously by this body. In other words, there were 69 votes for it. There is strong support in the Senate. I am a strong supporter for that relief.

What is happening here is the majority is saying it is our way, or the highway. America's farmers and ranchers know that is not the way we do business, or get business done. Solving problems takes compromise. I worked with the majority to get the ball rolling. I worked with the administration to get the ball rolling. We worked with the administration and the other side—not only the other side—for release last week of money for livestock producers in drought-stricken areas. But now we see no compromise for realistic solutions. Every American has watched our forests burning every night on television. Yet the other side is reluctant to do anything about it—they have no conscience.

It does not change any law. It allows us to manage forest lands for the prevention of the disasters that we have had since 1998.

Come to my State and talk to the farmers and ranchers who have had drought for 4 years. Then, turn around and talk with people who love those forests. They have seen the forests burn for the last 4 years. And then tell me we should not have a vote in order to clean them up.

Have people lost their senses? They do not understand what happens in this biological world when we grow a renewable product—a renewable product. Have we had nothing in our schools that teach us?

I am like the old preacher who walked by a ranch one day. It was a nice Sunday morning. He said: Nice looking ranch you have got here.

The old rancher says: Yes, it is. You should have seen it while the Lord had it to himself.

We have people in this ecosystem.

These little groups, I might add, that have very little dirt under their fingernails—very little—are telling us to leave it alone, and Mother Nature will take care of it. The American people have seen that kind of management for the last 25 years. They have seen the results of it. It burned.

What is being denied here is a vote. We are being denied a vote on an issue that, sort of tongue in cheek, burns in the hearts of Americans. They don't like this. They do not want to see their forests go up in flames and have a renewable resource wasted when it can be prevented. That is what it is about.

We will reject cloture until the majority is willing to work on a compromise that will actually make a difference to Americans.

I want to associate myself with the words of our assistant leader on our side. Cloture is a terrible arrow in the quiver during these times on appropriations bills. It seems as though when we struck the deal for South Dakota less than 3 or 4 months ago, it was the right thing to do. It exempted all the laws.

Do we have a double standard here? Should those of us in other States who represent public lands which produce a renewable product not be afforded the same standard? We are not even asking for that much change. We are not exempting any law. We are not exempting anything.

What we are saying is make your case. Invoke a double standard, and then premise the argument that this is a vote against drought aid for American agriculture? It is absolutely absurd.

Any clear-thinking American who has watched the deterioration of our forests and who has seen the results can stand there, and who in this body can look them in the eye and say, well, that is the way it is?

I will tell you how many votes they will get against their proposal. I have heard maybe three or four will come down and give the reasons they are opposed to it to justify their vote, and to answer some of the questions we have.

It is not right. It is not only not right, but it is not fair.

I have real people living in my State, too, just like everywhere else. But the unwillingness to give us a vote, which is our right and a constitutional need to get the House of Representatives and the President a vote to actually pass laws, has brought us to a standstill in this body.

It is not right. It is not fair.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BURNS. I am happy to yield.

Mr. NICKLES. You mentioned drought aid. Am I not correct that drought aid cannot pass unless the bill passes?

Mr. BURNS. That is correct.

Mr. NICKLES. If one wanted to get drought aid to farmers, would it make sense, since that has been agreed to in the underlying bill, to have a vote on the Craig amendment, and it could be an up-or-down vote or a motion to table, dispose of the Craig amendment one way or another, and pass the bill?

Mr. BURNS. And move on. That is correct.

Mr. NICKLES. And every Member on this side of the aisle is willing to do that. No one on this side of the aisle is filibustering this bill.

Mr. BURNS. That is right. No preconditions. No either/or. If we are really serious about it, give us a vote. That is what we are fighting for, the privilege of voting. That is all. Defeat us if your conscience allows. But give us a vote.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute on each side. Our side is up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FEINGOLD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I have listened to my friend from Montana and my dear friend from Oklahoma. You cannot change the Senate rules. They can say all they want that they are not filibustering this bill. This is the fourth week we are on the bill. If they want to get disaster aid to the farmers, they should allow us to go forward on this legislation. We can offer their amendment on other matters, if they really care about the farmers; 79 Senators said they did. Those people are waiting for relief as we speak. They should go ahead and allow us to pass this bill. In the meantime, the farmers get nothing.

It is not as if we are not fighting fires. There is $800 million that Senator BYRD and Senator STEVENS put in this bill for fighting fires. It is a question of their wanting to do away with judicial review, which we are unwilling to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. If people want to pass this bill, the way to pass the bill is to do it the way Senator REID and I used to manage the bill, and that is to vote. We get paid to vote.

For whatever reason, some people are afraid to vote on the Craig amendment. If we get on the bill, maybe someone will move to table the Craig amendment. We need to vote. The Senators from Montana, North Dakota, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas, and other States that have fires are entitled to have forest management improvements just like South Dakota. What the Craig amendment is asking for is not as much as South Dakota received.

We are entitled to a vote. You can file cloture all you want, but we are going to have a vote. We are going to have a vote. To file cloture, so we do not even get a vote on the Craig amendment, will not happen. If cloture is invoked, we can still offer the amendment, so we are getting nowhere fast. We are not going to finish this bill until we get a vote.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2003

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 5093, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5093) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2003, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Byrd amendment No. 4472 in the nature of a substitute.

Byrd amendment No. 4480 (to amendment No. 4472), to provide funds to repay accounts from which funds were borrowed for emergency wildfire suppression.

Craig/Domenici amendment No. 4518 (to amendment No. 4480), to reduce hazardous fuels on our national forests.

Byrd/Stevens amendment No. 4532 (to amendment No. 4472), to provide for critical emergency supplemental appropriations.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the clerk will report the motion to invoke cloture.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate on the Byrd amendment No. 4480, as amended, to H.R. 5093, the Department of Interior Appropriations bill, 2003.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the Byrd amendment No. 4480 to H.R. 5093, the Interior appropriations bill, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are required under rule XXII, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. TORRICELLI) is necessarily absent.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) is necessarily absent.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 51, nays 47, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 51. The nays are 47. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The majority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, can we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will come to order. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which cloture was not invoked on the Byrd amendment No. 4480, as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The motion is entered.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 5005, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5005) to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Lieberman amendment No. 4471, in the nature of a substitute.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate on the Lieberman substitute amendment No. 4471 for H.R. 5005, the Homeland Security bill.

NOT VOTING—2

Helms
Torricelli

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Nebraska). On this vote, the yeas are 49, the nays are 49. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which cloture has not been invoked on the Lieberman substitute amendment No. 4471 to H.R. 5005, the homeland security legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is entered.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 4738

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 hours of debate on the Gramm amendment, with the time to be equally divided between the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Connecticut or their designees.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM, for himself, Mr. MILLER, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. STEVENS, and Mr. HAGEL, proposes an amendment numbered 4738.

Mr. GRAMM. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I wanted to take a few minutes of leader time this morning, before we get into the debate on the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas, to talk about a concern that I have wanted to avoid talking about for weeks. I am very saddened by the fact that we have debated homeland security now for 4 weeks. I have noted on several occasions that there is no reason, on a bipartisan basis, this body cannot work together to overcome our differences and to pass a meaningful and substantive bill dealing with homeland security.

Some have suggested that the delay has been politically motivated, and I have said: I am not willing to believe that. In fact, yesterday I said: We intend to give the President the benefit of the doubt.

Over the course of the last several weeks, as we have debated national security, the issue of war in Iraq has become more and more prominent. And again, as I go back to my experience in 1991 and 1992, during a similar period—the fall and winter prior and after an election—I expressed the concern that our politics in this climate could easily create a politicized environment and, in so doing, diminish, minimize, degrade the debate on an issue as grave as war.

No one here needs to be reminded of the consequences of war. No one here should have to be admonished about politicizing the debate about war. But, Mr. President, increasingly, over the course of the last several weeks, reports have surfaced which have led me to believe that indeed there are those who would politicize this war.

I was given a report about a recommendation made by Matthew Dowd, the pollster for the White House and the Republican National Committee. He told a victory dinner not long ago—I quote—"The No. 1 driver for our base motivationally is this war."

Dowd said war could be beneficial to the GOP in the 2002 elections. And then I quote: "When an issue dominates the landscape like this one will dominate the landscape, I think through this election and probably for a long time to come, it puts Republicans on a very good footing."

I thought: Well, perhaps that is a pollster. Perhaps pollsters are paid to say what is best regardless of what other considerations ought to be made. Pollsters are paid to tell you about the politics of issues. And were it left with pollsters, perhaps I would not be as concerned.

But then I read that Andy Card was asked: Well, why did this issue come before Washington and the country now? Why are we debating it in September? Where were we last year? Where were we last spring? And Mr. Card's answer was: "From a marketing point of view, you don't introduce new products in August."

New products? War?

And then I listen to reports of the Vice President. The Vice President comes to fundraisers, as he did just recently in Kansas. The headline written in the paper the next day about the speech he gave to that fundraiser was: CHENEY talks about war: electing Taff would aid war effort.

And then we find a diskette discovered in Lafayette Park, a computer diskette that was lost somewhere between a Republican strategy meeting in the White House and the White House.

Advice was given by Karl Rove, and the quote on the disk was: "Focus on war."

I guess, right from the beginning, I thought: Well, first it was pollsters, and then it was White House staff, and then it was the Vice President. And all along I was asked: Are you concerned about whether or not this war is politicized? And my answer, on every occasion, was: Yes. And then the followup question is: Is the White House politicizing the war? And I said: Without question, I can't bring myself to believe that it is. I can't believe any President or any administration would politicize the war. But then I read in the paper this morning, now even the President—the President is quoted in the Washington Post this morning as saying that the Democratic-controlled Senate is "not interested in the security of the American people."

Not interested in the security of the American people?

You tell Senator INOUYE he is not interested in the security of the American people. You tell those who fought in Vietnam and in World War II they are not interested in the security of the American people.

That is outrageous—outrageous.

The President ought to apologize to Senator INOUYE and every veteran who has fought in every war who is a Democrat in the Senate. He ought to apologize to the American people.

That is wrong. We ought not politicize this war. We ought not politicize the rhetoric about war and life and death.

I was in Normandy just last year. I have been in national cemeteries all over this country. And I have never seen anything but stars—the Star of David and crosses on those markers. I have never seen "Republican" and "Democrat."

This has to end, Mr. President. We have to get on with the business of our country. We have to rise to a higher level.

Our Founding Fathers would be embarrassed by what they are seeing going on right now.

We have to do better than this. Our standard of deportment ought to be better. Those who died gave their lives for better than what we are giving now.

So, Mr. President, it is not too late to end this politicization. It is not too late to forget the pollsters, forget the campaign fundraisers, forget making accusations about how interested in national security Democrats are; and let's get this job done right.

Let's rise to the occasion. That is what the American people are expecting. And we ought to give them no less.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I commend the distinguished Democratic leader for the position he has taken here today. I commend him for the restraint he has shown in his remarks.

I, too, was astounded upon reading this story in the Washington Post this morning. It reads as follows in part:

> As he seeks to boost Republican candidates in the midterm elections, President Bush is increasing his emphasis on terrorism and national security, shedding his previous determination to demonstrate his concern about the flagging economy.
>
> Four times in the past two days, Bush has suggested that democrats do not care about national security, saying on Monday that the Democratic-controlled Senate is "not interested in the security of the American people." His remarks, intensifying a theme he introduced last month, were quickly seconded and disseminated by House Majority Whip Tom DeLay (R–Tex.).
>
> At a fundraiser for GOP House candidate Adam Taff in Kansas Monday, Vice President Cheney said security would be bolstered if Taff were to defeat Rep. Dennis Moore (D–Kan.). "Cheney talks about Iraq at congressional fundraiser/Electing Taff would aid war effort," read the headline in the Topeka Capital-Journal.

Mr. President, are we to believe this? Are we to believe that this President said what I have just quoted? This is the President who was going to change the tone in Washington.

I am terribly disappointed. We are entering an election. War clouds loom over this country. Yet the President would say the Democratic-controlled Senate is "not interested in the security of the American people."

What about MAX CLELAND? Is he interested in the security of the American people? What about DANNY INOUYE? Is he interested in the security of the American people?

I am disgusted by the tenor of the war debate that has seemingly overtaken this capital city. Here is the President of the Senate, the Vice President of the United States, out campaigning. The President is campaigning using war talk to win the election. The Vice President of the United States is barnstorming for Republican candidates. There, in at least one instance, he was telling voters that electing Republicans would aid the war effort.

Is the President determined to make his party—that great party of Abraham Lincoln—the war party? What would Abraham Lincoln have to say if he were here?

This war strategy seems to have been hatched by political strategists intent on winning the midterm election at any cost, even if that cost places this Nation on the brink of battle and the Nation's sons and daughters there on that brink. It is despicable. The distinguished majority leader used the word "outrageous." He is exactly right. It is despicable that any President would attempt to use the serious matter of impending war as a tool in a campaign war.

I am not going to continue to be silent. The blood of our sons and daughters, our soldiers, sailors, and airmen, has far more value than a few votes in a ballot box.

There is nothing more sobering than a decision to go to war, but the administration has turned the decision into a bumper sticker election theme. That is what I felt I saw in the beginning of this war on terrorism. It was being used politically also. It is clear now. It is out in the open. There it is.

For the President to suggest the Senate is not interested in the security of the American people is outrageous. It is insulting. It is wrong, wrong, wrong. To suggest that one is unpatriotic simply because one is affiliated with a certain party and may oppose a war that may have horrendous consequences is irresponsible—irresponsible. It is the worst kind of political opportunism.

I have been in this Congress 50 years. I have never seen a President of the United States or a Vice President of the United States stoop to such low level. It is your blood, your sons and daughters. Those who are looking at the Senate through the electronic lenses, it is your blood, your treasure.

For the first time in the history of the Republic, the Nation is considering a preemptive strike against a sovereign state. I will not be silenced. I have no brief for Iraq, but I am not going to be silenced. I will not give the benefit of the doubt to the President. I will give the benefit of the doubt to the Constitution. I will give the benefit of the doubt to the American people who will soon be called upon, if this President has his way, to give their sons and daughters, the blood of this country.

I do not defend the Iraqi regime. I do not justify its actions. But I also do not want to commit our sons and daughters to battle without a thorough understanding and a thorough debate. You silence me, if you can. There are others in this body who are going to speak up for their people.

This administration is making the war their battle cry. That is their bumper sticker politics. They are putting it front and center. They don't want to talk about domestic issues. They don't want to talk about those things. So they choose to make the war center stage. OK.

"Lay on, McDuff. And damn'd be him that first cries, "Hold, enough!""

My people in West Virginia expect me to speak out. If the Lord lets me live, I shall do that.

I also do not want to commit our sons and daughters to battle without a thorough understanding of the motivations, the strategies, the repercussions of that battle.

America fights wars, but America does not begin wars. This is my battle cry. This is yours. Each of you has sworn to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies foreign and domestic. There it is. That doesn't give this President, that doesn't give this Nation, a right to launch an unprovoked attack on a sovereign nation. America fights wars, but America does not start wars.

The American people have serious questions. The Nation's allies have serious questions. Members of this body have serious questions. These must be answered before going to war, and it is not now, nor was it ever, unpatriotic to ask questions.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator INOUYE have 5 minutes of my leader time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I certainly do not object to any time Senator INOUYE wants, but we have come to debate an amendment on the homeland security bill, and I would like to have an opportunity to speak on it. I do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Senator INOUYE.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, the gentleman who resides at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is the President of the United States of America, and although the Constitution does not specifically state it, his most important chore is to keep our people united, to keep our Nation united.

Accordingly, this morning I am saddened by the reports of my leader, the majority leader, and my leader, Senator BYRD of West Virginia, because it appears that our administration and our President are making statements that only serve to divide our people.

I have been honored to serve as chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee. Four weeks ago, this subcommittee reported a bill unanimously. It is a Democratically controlled subcommittee, but it reported a measure unanimously. It went to the full committee, chaired by the Senator from West Virginia, and the committee reported that measure unanimously. It was reported to this floor, and by an almost unanimous vote—three Members had questions—it passed the Senate. That was 4 weeks ago. That was carried out by a Democratically controlled Senate.

There are a few footnotes in history that I think we should recall. I listened to all the talk shows on Sunday. I am a good listener. I very seldom speak on the floor. One statement was made that some of us in the early 1990s questioned the war in the Persian Gulf. I was one of those. This spokesperson said: They questioned the war because they said a lot of body bags would be returning, and just a few returned. But we should recall that the war ended at the border of Iraq. If we had gone into Baghdad, we would have had many body bags, unless the United States had decided to do the most inhuman thing and wipe out Baghdad—men, women, and children.

Some have now suggested: The war in Afghanistan has resulted in 100 casualties. That is not a war.

There is another footnote in history that we should recall. In that ancient war we engaged in 60 years ago, World War II, in the U.S. Army, 95 percent of the men in uniform had no spouses; there were no children. Five percent had spouses and children. In my regiment, 4 percent had spouses and children; 96 percent were young men, 18, 19, 20. We were ready. We had no strings attached.

Today, in the U.S. Army, over 77 percent of our men and women have spouses; they have children. We should be concerned about their sensitivities.

It is not easy going into combat. No one enters battle planning to become a hero. You just happen to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. If you stepped one foot to the right, the bullet would have missed you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 5 minutes.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator may have 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, there are those who plan war, and there are those who engage in war. As we have always said in the subcommittee and in the Appropriations Committee, in order to avoid war, we should be prepared for war. We voted for a bill to spend over $356 billion. Does that suggest we are not concerned about the security of our people? And when we passed it unanimously—bipartisan, united—does that suggest we are not concerned about the security of this country?

I am concerned about the security of this country. I am concerned about what history will say about this Nation 50 years from now. Did we brutalize people or did we carry on ourselves as a civilized people? As my leader from West Virginia stated, to attack a nation that has not attacked us will go down in history as something of which we should not be proud.

Mr. President, I can assure you that this Democratically controlled Senate, and especially the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, will support the President of the United States because that man is my President also. Certainly, I did not vote for him, but he is my President, and it grieves me when my President makes statements that divide this Nation.

I can assure you this is not a time for Democrats and Republicans to say I have more medals than you, and I have lost more limbs than you, and we have shed more blood than you. This is not the time for that. This is a time in which we should be working together, debating this issue. As the Senator from West Virginia said, it is American to question the President. It is American to debate the issues. I stand before you as a proud member of the Democratically controlled Senate.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. KERRY. Will the Senator from Texas yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. STABENOW). The Senator from Texas has been recognized. The Senator controls 1 hour.

Mr. KERRY. Madam President, I ask if the Senator from Texas will allow me to speak about 5 minutes before he begins.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, the pending business is homeland security. I came over to offer an amendment with the Senator from Georgia. The majority leader has made a statement. The distinguished President pro tempore of the Senate has made a statement.

Our distinguished and beloved colleague from Hawaii has made a statement, and we are here to debate a war which we have an opportunity to do something about now. We are here to debate an issue where we have an opportunity to prevent anybody's blood from being spilled by having an effective homeland security program, and I want to exercise my right to speak on that issue.

I want to be brief on the subject, but accusing a President of starting a war for political reasons is a pretty serious accusation. This Senate, on several occasions, has passed resolutions that in the strongest terms called on the President, if he so decided, to use force against Iraq.

The United Nations has passed resolution after resolution that Saddam Hussein has rejected. So the idea that somehow this is a new problem and has suddenly been created out of whole cloth as we face the election simply will not bear up to scrutiny.

Secondly, there has been a confusion between two wars, and I think this is a very important issue. In listening to all of those quotes, most of what has been said has had to do with a force resolution which we are not debating today, which we will be debating next week or the week after.

As Jefferson said so long ago, good men with the same facts are prone to disagree. Based on our history in dealing with Saddam Hussein, based on the threat he poses, based on the new information on that threat which was made available by the British Intelligence Service and by the Prime Minister in today's paper, I reach a totally different conclusion than many of my Democrat colleagues in that I believe the President should be supported, and I believe a resolution of that support should pass in the Senate.

As clearly as I can say, I think internationalism is important, I think the United Nations has a role, but when we are talking about the lives and safety of Americans, I am not going to turn those lives and that safety over to the U.N.

As much as I love our allies, especially the British, I am not going to turn those lives and that safety over to our allies either. When we are talking about American lives, the buck stops with us. No matter what the United Nations decides, we are never, ever, under any circumstances, going to delegate to the United Nations the protection of American lives.

Hopefully, the United Nations is going to come to their senses and support the President, but the idea that we ought to change this resolution, when we do debate it, to say we should work within the U.N. I am not willing to put American lives at risk based on what the U.N. may or may not do.

A final point, in response to the debate we just had, we have a commingling of two different wars. The first war is with Iraq, and we are going to debate that in 2 weeks. Everybody will have a chance to state their position. I wanted to make mine clear today. The second war, however, is the war on terrorism. That is the war we are fighting today. That is the debate we are having today.

When we started this debate as to giving the President the power to protect America from the horror we saw on September 11, it never crossed my mind we would end up with a Senate that was almost perfectly divided, where Republicans were on one side and Democrats, in the preponderance, were on the other.

There is one exception, apparently, on each side at the moment. I have not looked into people's hearts. We have not had a vote. I do not know where people are down to the individual Senator, but it certainly appears at the moment that we find ourselves in the extraordinary circumstance that we are almost perfectly divided along party lines over the issue of giving the President the power he has asked for to defend the American homeland and to defend our people.

Maybe this should not be a partisan issue, but if one defines a partisan issue as an issue that ends up being split along party lines then by that definition the debate we are engaged in right now, has become divided along partisan lines. The point I want to be sure people understand is the last statement quoted by the President was not about Iraq. It was about defending the American homeland.

Why has this become a political issue? I do not believe Iraq is going to be a political issue, despite the fact some of our colleagues today have expressed reservations about Iraq. I believe in the end the President is going to get a much stronger vote on a force resolution on Iraq today than we got in 1991. In the end, I do not believe Iraq is going to be a partisan political issue.

Why has homeland security divided the Senate right down the middle along partisan lines? The reason is, it involves a very tough choice. Government is about making tough choices. When one gets outside the civics class, it is not about black and white, right and wrong. It is about tough choices. It is about give and take. It is about giving up some things to have others. In fact, this whole idea that everything can be broken down into all positive and all negative completely misrepresents the reality of the world.

There seems to be no objection to taking all of these Government agencies and putting them into one agency. So far as I know, 100 Senators are willing to do that. But remarkably, roughly half the Members of the Senate seem intent on taking away emergency powers the President had on September 11, but that would be taken away by the Lieberman bill that is before us.

I wonder how many Americans who are listening to this debate understand the proposal made by Senator LIEBERMAN, on behalf of the vast majority of Democrats, would actually weaken the President's ability to use national security powers to protect America. I do not think people understand that.

Our Nation has been attacked. Thousands of our citizens have been killed. The lives of countless thousands have been altered forever. We are debating homeland security. We have a proposal before the Senate that says we want to take powers away from President Bush, powers that President Clinton had, that Bush 41 had, that President Reagan had, that President Carter had, and powers they used.

Now, why are we debating such a proposal? How could it possibly make any sense that we were perfectly content to give every President since President Carter the ability to declare a national emergency and set aside business as usual in the Federal bureaucracy to respond to an emergency? But suddenly, as we are creating this Department, the majority proposes we take these powers away from President Bush.

In other words, we will put everybody in the Department, but the price the President would have to pay is less ability to use emergency powers than four of his predecessors have had. The President has rejected that. Does anyone blame him? Can anybody believe that any President, especially this President, would sit idly by while the Congress takes away powers that his four predecessors had?

I don't think anybody would think that is realistic. Why are we doing it? Why is the Senate almost evenly divided along partisan lines on this issue? The reason is, we are down to a tough choice. The tough choice is the following: To give the President the power to put the right person in the right place at the right time to do the right job in protecting lives, we have to change the way the Government operates. But there are powerful political interests that are opposed to making that change. And there are people who are committed to that system, the system we call the civil service system.

I remind my colleagues we have had study after study after study, studies headed by Paul Volcker, appointed by President Clinton to be head of the Federal Reserve bank. We have had studies by Lee Hamilton, a Democrat in the House, and Warren Rudman, our beloved colleague from the Senate. In study after study concerning national security, they have concluded the following, and this is the Volcker Commission: "The current system is slow. It is legally trammeled and intellectually confused. It is impossible to explain to potential candidates. It is almost certainly not fulfilling the spirit of our mandate to hire the most meritorious candidates."

That is not President Bush talking. That is not Senator GRAMM talking. That is Paul Volcker talking. The Rudman-Hamilton bipartisan commission on national security concluded that we needed an agile, flexible personnel system. And then they wrote: "Today's civil service has become a drag on our national security. The morass of rules, regulation, and bureaucracy prevent the Government from hiring and retaining the workforce that is required to combat the threats of the future."

What the President has proposed is that he have the ability to streamline the process, and when it comes to a choice between national security and the status quo in the Government system, the status quo must yield. When it comes down to union work rules, business as usual, or the life and safety of our citizens, the President says that the system has to yield. Civil service rights are important, but they are not as important as the right of Americans to life and freedom. When our people's lives are at stake, business as usual in Washington has to yield.

The substitute that Senator MILLER and I have offered prohibits the ability to discriminate on the basis of race, color, creed, national origin, and arbitrary and capricious factors, but allows the President the flexibility to hire without waiting 6 months, to fire without waiting 18 months, to eliminate a system where 99 percent of Government employees get pay raises whether they received good evaluations or not.

I am not saying one side is right and one side is wrong. Obviously, I believe the President is right, and I believe my Democrat colleagues, other than Senator MILLER—and maybe some I don't know about—are wrong. Obviously, I believe that or I would not be standing up here. My opinion does not make their position morally inferior to my position. The division is about what is more important.

That is what the division is about. You have powerful concerns on both sides. You have the concern of national security and you have the concern of Government employees, one of the most powerful political constituencies in America.

I am not saying they are wrong and we are right. I am saying we disagree and we disagree almost perfectly along party lines and we have to make a choice. You cannot be for the primacy of existing work rules of the Federal Government and be for the primacy of national security. You have to make a decision.

I have made my choice. My choice is, when Government work rules impede the protection of American lives, they have to yield. That is my choice. Many of my colleagues appear to have made a different choice.

What are we talking about when we are talking about changing union work rules? I have heard over and over and over again that we are eliminating merit and unions.

First, the substitute Senator MILLER and I have introduced is a substitute which strictly constrains the President to make decisions based on merit, and it limits it strictly to those areas where lives are at stake. I will give some concrete examples. In 1987, the Customs Service at Logan Airport in Boston tried to change the inspection facility to make it safer and more efficient. But there was a union work rule that said the inspection facility could not be changed in any significant way without a renegotiation of the union contract. So guess what. The Treasury employee labor union went to the FLRA and they overruled Customs. And Customs was not able to change the inspection facility.

Look, maybe when you are talking about trying to keep drugs out of the country or illegal aliens, those work rules are more important. But when you are talking about lives, are they more important? If we can increase the probability of keeping chemical or biological or nuclear weapons from coming in through an airport in America by changing the inspection facility, are we supposed to wait around 18 months to negotiate with the union about the ability to change the room in which the workers are working? Some of our colleagues think so, but I do not think so. I do not believe the American people think so.

Let me give another example. You all remember Barry McCaffrey, the general who was appointed by President Clinton to be drug czar. He made note in the San Francisco Examiner about the different work rules of the different Government agencies that were protecting America's borders:

> Officials at one agency were actually forbidden to open the trunks of cars, a policy well known to drug dealers.

Look, maybe it makes sense to some people that a union work rule says people working for this agency or in this classification can not open a trunk at a border inspection, and so dope gets into the country or an illegal alien gets into the country. But if it is a nuclear weapon, does it make sense? Do we really think preserving that work rule that General McCaffrey pointed out was being gamed by drug dealers—do we really believe that is more important than keeping a nuclear weapon from getting into the United States?

That is the issue we are debating. I could go down the list and go on and on. In terms of deployment of the Border Patrol special task forces, the union work rule says you cannot deploy somebody where there is not a barber shop, a place of worship, or a dry cleaners. If we are just trying to keep dope out of the country, or keep out illegal aliens, maybe that is not so unreasonable. I do not agree with that, but maybe I am wrong.

But when you are trying to keep weapons of mass destruction that can kill thousands of our people out of the country, do we really want to go to the FLRA and spend months and months and months trying to renegotiate this? Or do we want to give the President the power to say: Lives are at stake. As long as that is the case, under the emergency powers as President I am going to send the Border Patrol where there is no dry cleaner.

That is what we are talking about. That is what this issue is about—the ability to deploy on merit, when lives are at stake, instead of seniority. We are talking about the ability of agencies to set gun policies—something today they cannot do because of union work rules—and search policies. When we are worried about drugs getting into the country or contraband of various kinds, maybe we want to say the union work rules are more important than the search policy. So you have to go to FLRA to renegotiate with the union and spend 18 months doing it. But if lives are at stake, and we are talking about a nuclear weapon getting into New York Harbor, surely people see the difference. These are the kinds of things we are talking about.

Let me try to sum up where we are and what the issue is. We are divided almost perfectly along partisan lines with the exception of one Member on each side. Is preserving this old horse-and-buggy system from the 1950s—that was designed primarily to protect workers, not to get the job done—more important than enhancing the probability that we can protect lives? I say no. Some others say yes. That is the issue.

It ends up being contentious because we cannot have it both ways. You can't serve two masters. You have to make a choice, and the choice I choose is national security.

Madam President, how much time have I used?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 27 minutes.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, I ask for 10 minutes off the leader time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing no objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMM. This time would not count toward our hour.

Madam President, Senator MILLER and I have spent 4 weeks listening and participating in this debate. We have looked at the House bill, a bill that the President says he would sign. We have looked at the President's proposal, a bill the President would sign. And we have looked at the bill before us, a bill the President has said he would veto. I do not know how we promote homeland security by giving the President a bill he would veto.

We have made some 25 changes in the President's proposal. Quite frankly, the President has compromised more than I would have compromised had I been in his position. But the President wants to try to work on a bipartisan basis, and he wants this bill because lives are at stake.

We have limited, very narrowly limited, the President's power to use his emergency waiver in civil service. We have limited it by setting out parameters which he cannot violate in terms of his personnel flexibility. We have adopted some 95 percent of the Lieberman bill. We have adopted provisions of the House bill that represented bipartisan consensus. And we have talked to some 25 Members of the Senate and we have adopted some 18 measures that have been influenced by Members. The President has said this is as far as he can go.

What does that mean? Is it as far as he can go because he is mad about something? Is it as far as he can go because he is tired of the Democrats being successful, the Democrat leadership being successful in stopping him from doing what he wants? No. The President has said this is as far as he can go because he does not believe that he can effectively do the job if he gives up any more power. He doesn't believe if he gives up more power that he is getting the tools he needs to fight and win the war on terrorism. And I agree with him. I think he is right.

What are the issues we come to? The biggest issue we come down to is the issue I have already talked about at great lengths, and that is the issue of letting the President keep the powers that every President since Jimmy Carter has had. The Lieberman bill takes away power to declare a national emergency and to take extraordinary action that President Carter had, that President Reagan had, that President Bush had, and that President Clinton had. The President has said he is not going to let power that he had on September 11 be taken away in a bill that is supposed to be responding to September 11.

Interestingly enough, the President has offered a compromise where he will do things that President Clinton did not have to do when he used that power. He will have to notify Congress in advance, he will have to make public a declaration as to why he did what he did and his justification, something that President Clinton did not have to do. That is how much our President wants to get this job done. But has that been met by reasonable compromise on the other side? No.

We have a bill before us that takes that power away from the President. That is not going to happen. It is just not going to happen. We are not going to let it happen. The world may come to an end, but we are not going to take powers away from this President that four other Presidents have had when we are trying to fight and win a war on terrorism. It is just not going to happen.

The idea that it should be asked for is an idea that I would hate to have to defend. I would hate to have to go back to Mexia and stand up in front of the print shop of my dear friend Dicky Flatt and explain to people that we are going to take some of power the President has to protect us and we are going to do it in a bill that is supposed to be responding to the death of thousands of our citizens in Washington and New York.

Maybe you can make that sale in Mexia. But I cannot. I am not that good at it. I am talking about political ability. I could not make that sale, and I don't believe anybody else can make that sale in Mexia. Maybe they can make that somewhere else. I don't think they can make that sale in Young and Harris Counties, either.

But that is the first issue. What we have gotten from our colleagues on the other side of this issue is a series of proposals that all boil down to one thing: The power of the unions, and the power of doing it the same old way it has been done since the 1950s will be preserved, and the power of the President in the name of national security will be reduced.

That is the first major issue where we are at an impasse. We have language now that was written by the Public Employee Labor Union. It was offered in the House. It was rejected in the House. Yet that is being proposed once again. The answer is no. I don't know what part of that old country and western song they do not understand. What part of "no" don't you understand? But the answer is no.

The second issue is: When lives are on the line, should the President have the ability to hire people and have the flexibility to do it without waiting 6 months? Should he have the power if somebody comes to work drunk in a national security department to fire him without having to go through 18 months of rigmarole? I think the answer is yes. I think the answer is yes. But, obviously, the people on the other side of this issue think the answer is no.

Those are the two issues. You might say this is a great big, old, thick bill, and you sent a great big, old, thick amendment.

Let me make it clear. I sent that amendment for myself, for Senator MILLER, for Senator THOMPSON, for the President, and for some 40 Members of the Senate. That was our best effort at a real compromise where the President gave up powers he really, honestly to God, believes he needs. But he did it to try to solve this problem and to get this Department established and to get on with defending national security.

The terrorists are not waiting for this debate. I don't know what they are doing. But it scares me.

When you look at these great big, thick bills, we are really apart only on two issues. What should come first? Business as usual, or national security? And should the President have the power when lives are at stake to hire, to promote, and to operate in the most efficient manner possible this part of the Federal Government when the goal is to protect the lives and safety of our people? That, I think, is the choice.

Final point: Senator MILLER and I have worked hard with the White House for 4 weeks to provide what we believe is a compromise. It is the first real compromise that has been proposed, in my opinion. We want a vote on it. There is going to be an effort later by people on the other side of the issue to defy us that vote by amending our bill in these two critical areas so we never get an up-or-down vote on the President's program.

I am not crying foul by saying it is against the Senate rules to do that. I am not saying it is wrong to do it in terms of the way the Senate operates. I am saying I think the President deserves an up-or-down vote on his program. If you want to vote no, you have the right to vote no. But don't you think we ought to let the President have an opportunity to have his program voted on in the way he would like to see it voted on?

When that amendment is offered, we are going to use our rights under the Senate rules to hold out for a vote on our substitute. I believe in the end we will get it. I am sure some people on the other side of the aisle will stand up and say, you are delaying, you are delaying, you are doing this, you are doing that.

All we want is to vote. We have about 40 Members of the Senate who want to speak on it. They want to be heard. They will be heard. But, in the end, the President is going to be heard. In the end, the people are going to be heard. We want an up-or-down vote on the President's program.

I hope we are going to win. If we don't win, then we are going to be in a situation of trying to pass a bill the President will veto, and maybe we will have to wait until after the election and try again. That will mean that for 3 months we are not going to have the program in effect to protect national security. I think that is a risk. As a result, I want us to pass a bill.

I don't think any Member of the Senate can stand up and say they wanted to talk about this issue but Senator MILLER, Senator THOMPSON, or I have not been willing to try to work this thing out. But so far, we have seen no effort to work it out. So far it has been that we are going to take power away from the President, and if you don't like it, that is all right. Well, we don't like it, and it is not all right. It is not going to happen.

Ultimately, the debate ends here and the public has to make a decision. Is this a partisan issue? God knows that it should not be partisan. But, if you define partisan as being divided roughly along party lines, it is a partisan issue. It shouldn't be. I don't want it to be. There are many people on the other side of the aisle who don't want it to be, but it is.

In saying that, it is simply telling the truth. It is a terrible indictment of us, a terrible indictment of the Senate, but it is telling the truth.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I yield to the Senator from Illinois such time as he requires.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Thank you, Madam President. And I thank the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator LIEBERMAN.

Let me say for the record, this bill—the creation of a Department of Homeland Security—is a bill that has had two births.

It was first born in our committee under Senator LIEBERMAN's leadership before President Bush proposed its creation. We worked for the creation of this Department—believing the concept was sound—to bring together, in reorganization, agencies that are necessary to protect America.

When we had a vote in the Governmental Affairs Committee on Senator LIEBERMAN's proposal, I was happy to support it, but not a single Republican member of the committee supported it.

Not 2 weeks later, President Bush came forward and said: I now support a Department of Homeland Security. And Senator LIEBERMAN said: We will work with you. Let us put together a plan to bring it forward in a bipartisan fashion because, harkening back to an earlier statement on this floor: There is no partisanship when it comes to protecting America or its security or its freedom.

Senator LIEBERMAN, working with Senator THOMPSON, tried to bring out a bill, a bipartisan bill, to address the President's concern about a Department of Homeland Security. I think we have done a good job. I think we have brought this bill to the floor in good faith. We had a lengthy hearing, many witnesses. Amendments were considered; some adopted and some rejected. The orderly process of Congress was followed. My hat is off to Senator LIEBERMAN for his leadership.

But to think we have spent 4 straight weeks on the floor of this Senate unable to bring this bill to closure is clear evidence that there are people on this floor who do not want to see this bill passed in any form.

When the Senator from Texas comes up and says: Well, you have to understand, we are going to bring an amendment, and a few of our colleagues would like to speak on it on the floor, perhaps 40 Senators would like to speak on it on the floor—well, be prepared, that just means a filibuster by another name.

It means, frankly, there are forces at work on this floor that do not want to see this bill passed. They want to drag it out not 4 weeks or 6 weeks but 8 weeks and beyond. They have some other agenda other than giving the President a Department of Homeland Security. That is unfortunate.

I think Senator LIEBERMAN and the members of the committee have shown good faith from the start. We have come to the floor day after weary day, many times with absolutely nothing happening, except the threat of another filibuster. And here we stand. Here we stand this day without the Department of Homeland Security bill passing the Senate. I think it is unfortunate. I think it is sad.

Earlier, the Senator from Texas said: Now, some of those who spoke earlier, such as Senator DASCHLE, Senator BYRD, and Senator INOUYE, about their concern over the President's statements that raised a question as to whether the Democrat-controlled Senate was, in fact, committed to the security of America—the Senator from Texas said: Understand, he was not referring to the war on Iraq. He was only referring to this bill, the Department of Homeland Security.

Well, I am glad the Senator from Texas made the distinction. But it does not allay my fears that what we have emerging is partisanship when it comes to the security of America and the rhetoric that is coming out of the campaign forces, the campaign machine of the White House. It is no comfort to me to be told: Oh, they are just questioning your patriotism when it comes to the war on terrorism, not on the war on Iraq. I am sorry, that is unacceptable.

When September 11 occurred last year, President Bush did not even have to make the appeal to Congress. Within hours, Congress came together on a bipartisan basis. We came together and not only sang "God Bless America," we also came together, within a few days, to give this President the authority and resources he needed to wage the war on terrorism.

There was never any question that this Nation would stand together—Democrats, Republicans, and Independents—and we did, as did Capitol Hill. We have stood with this President.

For those who are trying to fire up the campaign rhetoric for this coming election, questioning the patriotism of anyone in the Senate who would even offer an amendment to the Department of Homeland Security bill goes too far. Whether this questioning of patriotism is over the war on terrorism or the war on Iraq, it is entirely inappropriate. It is an afront to the many veterans in this Senate on both sides. It is an afront to many of us who believe this country is something we hold dear, and who try, in every single vote we cast, to keep that in mind.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DURBIN. I am happy to yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. REID. Did the Senator hear the statement of Senator DASCHLE, the majority leader, today?

Mr. DURBIN. Yes, I did.

Mr. REID. Did the Senator hear the statement of the Presidential pollster, and also that of Karl Rove? And did the Senator hear, as I did, the direct quotes that they wanted a strategy for the campaigns that dealt with the war? Did the Senator hear that?

Mr. DURBIN. Yes, I did.

Mr. REID. That didn't seem to say anything about homeland security, did it?

Mr. DURBIN. Not a bit. It suggested to me, I say to the Senator from Nevada, coming back to this bill, when we go to the merits of this debate, let's be very honest about what this concerns.

This is a question about moving some 150,000 or 170,000 employees of the Federal Government under a new roof called the Department of Homeland Security. I support it. I supported it when Senator LIEBERMAN offered it. I supported it when the President suggested it. I still support it.

But the question before us today is, for 40,000 or 50,000 of these employees, when they come under that new roof, will they bring with them collective bargaining rights that they have had, have earned, have worked for, perhaps, all of their adult lives?

There are those who argue—and you have heard it from the Senator from Texas—once they come into this new Department, we can't afford to run the risk that someone who belongs to a labor union can really rise to the challenge of defending America.

Pardon me, Madam President. Do I recall correctly those profiles in courage of September 11, 2001, of which so many of us are so proud? Did you stop and think for a moment that those New York firefighters, going up those stairs in those burning buildings to rescue people did not know—complete strangers—doing their duty to their country, meeting the duty of their profession—did we stop and reflect, for a moment, that they were carrying, perhaps in their wallet, next to the picture of their family, a union card? Did anyone question their patriotism, their loyalty to our country, their devotion to so many people?

Oh, and yet today we hear speech after speech: We just can't run the risk of letting people who are members of labor unions in this situation, public employees——

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield? If the Senator is going to quote me, he ought to do it accurately.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask that order be restored in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DURBIN. I yield to the Senator from Nevada for a question.

Mr. REID. The Senator would agree, would he not, that the debate over this labor issue is one that we should have, and it has nothing to do with patriotism? I see on the floor one of the sponsors of the amendment, the Senator from Georgia, who is a distinguished American. He has written a book about the Marine Corps. No one can question his patriotism, his qualifications.

Wouldn't you agree a debate on labor-management relations is something we should have, and it has nothing to do with patriotism?

I have listened to the Senator from Georgia and how strongly he feels about Federal employees, and how we have to change, in his opinion, the way employees are treated. But that is an issue, would the Senator agree, that has nothing to do with patriotism?

Mr. DURBIN. I agree completely with the Senator from Nevada. For the Vice President, the President, or their campaign advisers to suggest that if we disagree on a labor-management issue in this new Department, we really are not committed to the freedom and security of America goes way too far. And I am afraid that is the point that was raised on the floor today and needs to be revisited.

I will yield to the Senator from Texas, if he has a question.

Mr. GRAMM. Yes. The only point I was going to make is, never in my remarks did I say anything about people being a member of a union. And if I am going to be quoted—and I like to be quoted; and I think it improves the Senator's speech to quote me—I would like him to do it accurately.

I never said anything about a member of a union. I simply said that when you have work rules that prevent you from deploying more patrol agents where there is no laundry, or where you are not able to change an inspection room without renegotiating a union contract, and lives are at stake, there needs to be some give. That is all I said. I did not say anything about joining a union or never mentioned a union in terms of the right of people to belong to it or their union membership or lack thereof having any relevance to do with this whatsoever.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from Texas, but that is a distinction without a difference. To say, on one hand, I am not against labor unions, I am just against collective bargaining rights, is to get to the heart of the issue.

Let me give you an illustration that makes my point.

After September 11, 2001, we discovered that most of the terrorists responsible for the World Trade Center were coming over the northern border of the United States from Canada. We said that we were going to beef up efforts at the border to check people coming in so that others did not come in to threaten the United States. This administration said it. The Border Patrol said it. And do you know what. We did not do it. Two Border Patrol agents came forward and testified before a committee of Congress that it was all talk, we weren't putting the resources and the manpower in the right place to protect America after September 11, 2001.

These were Federal employees, members of labor unions with collective bargaining rights. Do you know what happened to them, I ask the Senator from Texas? Do you have any idea? They were fired from their jobs for testifying before Congress, terminated from their employment. Of course, there was a hearing because they had collective bargaining rights, and these whistleblowers were restored to their positions.

If we are going to talk about what is at stake, let me tell you this.

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield on that?

Mr. DURBIN. I will after I have made my point. The point I am making at this juncture is that collective bargaining rights make a difference. It is not a question about how bright the light is over the coffee pot for the employees taking their break and what color uniforms they are wearing. That is, I am afraid, a ridiculous extreme when we look at collective bargaining rights. It is the right of an individual employee at our Border Patrol to be able to stand before a committee of Congress and say: I don't care what my boss is telling you; I don't care what they are saying in their press release; they are not doing the job to protect America.

For these Border Patrol agents to stand up and tell us the truth under oath before a committee of Congress should not be grounds for termination. But they were. Thank goodness they had collective bargaining rights and their jobs were restored. I don't believe being a member of a labor union automatically qualifies you to be ready to fight for our Nation's security and be involved in intelligence gathering, but it certainly does not disqualify you. There are good, loyal, patriotic Americans who have collective bargaining rights.

Make no mistake, the bill reported to the Senate gives this President the authority, which he needs; if any individual employee, because of their new job assignments or because of the sensitivity of their assignments, needs to be removed from a bargaining unit, there is a way to do it, a legitimate, honest way. That is the point we are debating. To suggest that that has something to do with love of America and patriotism—I don't see it.

What we have, before us and what concerns the Senator from Texas is, we have a bipartisan group that has come together and said: We have come up with a compromise. Let's deal with it.

As Senator Bumpers of Arkansas used to say: The Senator from Texas hates this bipartisan compromise like the devil hates holy water. He is afraid if we bring this to the floor and get a vote supporting the bipartisan position, all of his arguments and the President's arguments are weakened and disappear. That is what concerns him about this process and why he is promising 40 Senators who will speak interminably and drag this bill on for another 4 weeks.

If the President needs a Department of Homeland Security—and I believe he does—let's have this up-or-down vote.

Let's decide where the will of the Senate is going. Don't be afraid of the will of Senate. Don't be afraid of the will of the people. Don't be afraid to say that collective bargaining does not disqualify people from defending America and from serving their Nation proudly.

Many of the people in these agencies are veterans who have served this Nation with pride and have risked their lives for the flag. To say as they come to a new Department that they somehow have to give up their rights to collective bargaining is unfair.

It has been said that it takes up to a year to fire an employee under civil service. That is a total myth. During their first year, employees can be terminated without notice, and 36 percent of new employees were removed during their probationary period in the year 2001. Any employee can be terminated with 30 days' notice.

Incidentally, in fiscal year 2000, it was said that out of 1.8 million Federal employees, only 6 were fired because they were found incapable of doing their job; and in 2001, only 3 out of 1.8 million were fired. These statistics grossly underestimate the number of Federal employees fired each year. The Republican claim that only three people were fired in 2001 refers to the three employees who were immediately removed for national security reasons only. In fiscal year 2001, 8,920 Federal employees were terminated and removed for disciplinary reasons.

The fact is, under civil service, employees can be removed. The fact is, under the bill that came out of the Governmental Affairs Committee, there is a procedure in national security for the President to make that determination. That is an issue.

I respect the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Georgia for what they are bringing as a substitute measure. Let me tell you this: They are leaving out some very critical elements of the bill brought out of the Governmental Affairs Committee.

After September 11 of last year, I focused on one particular issue that troubled me. I learned in the months leading up to it of the gross inadequacy of the information technology of the agencies of our Government relating to law enforcement and intelligence, the FBI being the classic example of an agency dealing with the most primitive technology.

I have worked for over a year to try to bring modernization of computers and information technology into intelligence gathering and law enforcement. I have spoken to everyone—Attorney General Ashcroft, FBI Director Mueller, the Vice President, as well as the President of the United States—about what I consider to be one of the glaring examples of our inability to deal with terrorism.

As a result, I prepared and offered an amendment which was on the Governmental Affairs bill that came to the floor and is still pending today. This amendment establishes that at the Federal Government level, we will start blending together the computer architecture of different agencies of the Federal Government so that they are not only modern but they are interoperable, so they can communicate with one another, pass information along. If the FBI has a most wanted list or danger list, they can pass that along to the Federal Aviation Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

I am sorry to report that does not exist today. I worked long and hard on this amendment. It had the support of all of my colleagues on the Governmental Affairs Committee. They believe, as I do, that this is a critical element in the defense of America.

But the substitute amendment being offered by the Senator from Texas doesn't include this provision. They have decided it is unnecessary, or at least they have not addressed it. I sincerely hope they will at least reconsider that if we do bring this forward and this substitute becomes the bill we are going to amend, they could introduce a motion of cloture, for example, raise germaneness questions.

If we don't include it, some element of information technology in a Department of Homeland Security, we are fooling ourselves. We are saying we are creating a new Department that has a brandnew nameplate on the door with 170,000 employees but with computers that are inadequate to the job.

When I spoke to Gov. Tom Ridge about this amendment, he said: I support this. It is a force multiplier. That means it takes the existing resources of our Government and makes them that much more effective in fighting terrorism.

The substitute offered by the Senator from Texas does not include that. That is sad.

Frankly, it may be a political victory for his substitute to prevail, but it will not be a victory in the war against terrorism. We should put the weapons in place, the arsenal we need to protect America on a bipartisan basis, looking not only to employees of the Department but also the resources and technology available in the Department.

It has been made clear on this floor that when it comes to the security of the Nation, there should not be any partisanship whatsoever. We can stand here as Americans and Members of the Senate and debate the provisions of this bill and others, and no one should call into question our patriotism.

There is no reason we should take the roles and lives of 40,000 or 50,000 new employees of this Department and say it is basically going to be impossible for them to serve their Nation and to have their rights as employees respected. We can do both. They have already proven we can do both. To try to eliminate their rights to collective bargaining or to reduce them dramatically to a point where they are meaningless is unfair to the men and women who have served us so well in so many different ways, who are proud to have these collective bargaining rights and be members of labor unions.

Before we adopt this substitute, consider the elements it does not include. One of the elements is the fact that it does not deal with the information technology that is essential to fighting a war on terrorism in the 21st century. Their bill is silent on what I consider to be one of the most important elements of this war and one of the most important weapons we can use to bring it to a successful conclusion.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I yield myself a moment or two or as much time as I require. I will yield in a moment so Senator MILLER may speak.

While he was on the floor, I wanted to thank Senator DURBIN for the substantial contribution he made to the committee's proposal for a Department of Homeland Security overall and the specific, unique, very valuable proposal he made regarding information technology.

This is really a key to all sorts of activities in our world today, including homeland security; the ability to interconnect levels of our government, different agencies that will be part of the new Department and Federal, State, county, and local governments. I appreciate it.

Senator GRAMM and I have had discussions, and at some point, as the most controversial parts of this discussion work their way to either an agreement or the Senate works its will, I hope we can sit and talk about sections of our committee bill, such as Senator DURBIN's, which are not partisan; they are good Government, with a capital G, good. We ought to be able to reach a bipartisan agreement to include that in whatever Department of Homeland Security we create.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, will the Senator yield for 2 minutes? I do not want the Senator to lose the floor.

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, I would like to make a couple responses. First, let me give you the actual figures of people being fired from the Federal Government. There are 1.8 million people on the Federal payroll. In the year 2001, three of them were fired outright. The previous administration, the Clinton administration, found that 64,340 Federal workers were poor performers.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GRAMM. Let me finish my point. Only 434 of them went through the removal process, and that process takes as long as 18 months, and many of them remained on the payroll. That is the first point.

The second point, the Senator talks about INS. In 1990, at the Honolulu Airport, the Immigration and Naturalization Service was worried about a surge in flights and the long lines, and they wanted to hire more INS agents to enforce the law.

The American Federation of Government Employees filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board saying, under their contract, INS could not hire more agents without renegotiating its union contract. Guess what. The National Labor Relations Board ruled in favor of the union, prohibiting the people from being hired.

The Senator talks about a vote. I ask unanimous consent that on Friday morning at 10 o'clock, we have an up-or-down vote on the substitute I have offered with Senator MILLER. That way, there will be no doubt about the fact we are ready to bring it to a vote at that point. We would like an up-or-down vote on our amendment at 10 o'clock.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, the point I want to make—and I am sorry I had to put our colleague in a position like that to object.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I will yield, but the point I want to make is we want an up-or-down vote on our amendment. This is the President's substitute, and the President's supporters should have a chance to speak on it. We have gone on for 4 weeks on this bill, not because of what supporters of the President have done, but because we have had amendments offered, probably 90 percent of that time taken up by people who do not support the President's position. That is where we are.

I will be happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GRAMM. Yes.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, of course, we want to have a vote on the substitute amendment. What is the basis for denying Senators the normal privilege, which the Senator from Texas has exercised and utilized on so many occasions, to offer a second-degree amendment to his substitute so the Senate can work its will, dispose of it, and then go to an up-or-down vote?

Mr. GRAMM. The question is a totally fair question. As I said earlier, people have a right to offer amendments, but the point is, this is the President's best effort to reach a compromise with the Senator and with those who oppose his proposal, and he would like to have an up-or-down vote on his compromise as we have written it, not as it would be rewritten by others. The Senator has every right to offer an amendment. We have every right to resist it and not let the Senator have a vote on it. But we would like at some point to have people vote yes or no on the President's proposal. That is all.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, in responding, I want the record to show—and I yield myself a moment more—we are fully prepared to have an up-or-down vote on Senator GRAMM's substitute, but after we have the right to offer an amendment. That is the way the Senate works. That is why I objected.

Mr. GRAMM. There is the rub. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Texas. Is the Senator from Texas aware of the fact he is mistaken again in saying only 3 Federal employees out of 1.8 million were terminated, when the official figures show in fiscal year 2001, 8,920 Federal employees were terminated, and in fiscal year 2000, 8,400 Federal employees were fired for reasons related to poor performance? Is the Senator aware of those numbers?

Mr. GRAMM. Let me respond—

Mr. DURBIN. Let me complete my question and then I will sit down. Is he aware, as he continues to use the INS example at the Honolulu Airport, that after the ruling he referred to, they did work out differences with the workers and established the 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. graveyard shift once they worked out negotiations?

Mr. GRAMM. Does the Senator know how long it took to work it out?

Mr. DURBIN. I am sure the time it took for the lawsuit. It took a long time.

Mr. GRAMM. While they were working it out, what if somebody brought a chemical weapon in to Hawaii where my kinfolk live. What if they had been killed?

I am constantly capable of misstating facts and figures. I always tell my children: Do not get into a debate about facts, look them up. All I am saying is, the facts I have—and I do have as much faith in mine as anybody else's—say the Clinton administration found 64,340 Federal workers to be poor performers; 434 went through the process to be terminated, and that can take as long as 18 months.

Maybe it does not matter unless somebody's life is at stake. That is all I am saying. If somebody's life is at stake, you do not do business as usual. You can defend business as usual, but when it puts somebody's life at stake, when a man, woman, or child has their life at stake, business as usual is not usual. I think there is some urgency here. That is all I am saying. I am not trying to indict any of these work rules or say they are crazy. I would hate to have to run my business under these work rules. I would go broke. All I am saying is, when people's lives are at stake, there is some urgency. I yield back to the Senator from Georgia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. CARNAHAN). The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. MILLER. Madam President, how much time is remaining for our side of the argument?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 23½ minutes.

Mr. MILLER. I thank the Chair.

Madam President, I rise to speak not on the subject of the war against Iraq—that is for another day—but I rise to speak on the homeland security substitute that Senators GRAMM, THOMPSON, and I, and about 40 other Senators, have sponsored that the President says he supports and will sign.

We do not teach our children the lessons of Aesop's Fables as much anymore. The wisdom of Sesame Street and the Cat in the Hat have taken their place. There is one fable I learned at my mother's knee, sitting around an open fireplace, that I believe is pertinent to this debate on homeland security that has so divided this Senate along party lines.

It goes like this: A certain man had several sons who were always quarreling with one another, and try as he might, he could not get them to live together in harmony. So he was determined to convince them of their folly. Bidding them fetch a bundle of sticks, he invited each in turn to break it across his knee. All tried and all failed. Then he undid the bundle and handed them the sticks one at a time, which they had no difficulty at all in breaking.

There, my boys, said he. United you will be more than a match for your enemies, but if you quarrel and separate, your weakness will put you at the mercy of all those who attack you.

That is a lesson for today. That is a lesson for the ages. That is a lesson for this Senate and the House, for Democrats and Republicans, for the executive and legislative branches of Government. I am one of the most junior Members of this body. I do not have the experience and I have not seen the number of bills most other Members have, so my historical perspective, admittedly, is limited. But in the short time I have been here, I have never seen such a clear choice as there is on this issue.

For me, there are no shades of gray. It is clear cut. Why, in the name of homeland security, do we want to take the power away from the President that he possessed on 9/11? It is power Jimmy Carter had, power Ronald Reagan had, power the first President Bush had, and power Bill Clinton had. Do we really want to face the voters with that position, that vote written large on our foreheads like a scarlet letter, and even larger on a 36-inch television ad two weeks before the election?

We must give the President the flexibility to respond to terrorism on a moment's notice. He has to be able to shift resources, including personnel, at the blink of an eye. When the Civil Service was created well over a century ago, it had a worthy goal, to create a professional workforce free of cronyism. Back then, it was valid. But all too often in Government, we pass laws to fix the problems of the moment and then we keep those laws on the books for years without ever following up to see if they are still needed.

The truth of the matter is a solution for the 19th century is posing a problem for the 21st century, especially when this country is threatened in such a different and sinister way.

I do not want to belabor the point about how long it takes to hire a person or how long it takes to fire a person. I just know it is too long. I also know that a Federal worker can be caught knee-walking drunk and he cannot be fired for 30 days, and then he has endless appeals. Productivity should be the name of the game, and we lose productivity when we have such a law. That is no way to wage a war.

Do we not realize there is another disaster looming just around the corner, where American lives are going to be lost? And another one after that? And that those attacks against Americans and against our country will occur for the rest of our lives? Would anyone dare suggest that is not going to happen? Would anyone suggest 9/11 was some kind of isolated phenomenon never to happen on American soil again? Surely no one, even the most naive optimist, believes that. Surely no one in this body believes that.

Over 60,000 terrorists worldwide have already been identified. Terrorist cells in some unlikely places, such as Lackawanna, NY, have been discovered. They are all around us, they are everywhere, and when these other attacks come, as certainly they will, do you not think Americans throughout this great land are going to look back at what went on at this time in the Senate? And when they do, do you not think some hard questions and some terrible second-guessing will take place?

I can hear them now. The talk show lines will be clogged, and the blame will be heaped on this body. Why was the Senate so fixated on protecting jobs instead of protecting lives?

The Senate's refusal to grant this President and future Presidents the same power four previous Presidents have had will haunt those who do so, like Marley's ghost haunted Ebenezer Scrooge. They will ask: Why did they put workers' rights above Americans' lives? Why did that 2002 Senate, on the 1-year anniversary of 9/11, with malice and forethought, deliberately weaken the powers of the President in time of war? And then, why did this Senate, in all its vainglory, rear back and deliver the ultimate slap in the face of the President by not even giving him the decency to have an up-or-down vote on his own proposal? This is unworthy of this great body. It is demeaning, ugly, and over the top.

What were they thinking of, they will ask? What could have possessed them? Do not ask then for whom the bell tolls. It will toll for us.

Few leaders have understood the lessons of history as well as Winston Churchill because he was not only a soldier and a politician, but he was also a Nobel Prize-winning historian. Perhaps then at this time we should remember the question Churchill framed to the world when he made that famous Iron Curtain speech at Fulton, MO, at Westminster College in 1946. He first reminded the audience:

> War and tyranny remain the great enemies of mankind.

Then he asked this question:

> Do we not understand what war means to the ordinary person? Can you not grasp its horror?

Some of the remarks earlier this morning on this floor reminded me of something else about that speech and its aftermath. Churchill, being so blunt, did not go over very well. The American media and others did not want to hear that kind of talk. They called Winston Churchill a warmonger, and even the usually gutsy Harry Truman denied knowing in advance what was in the speech and even suggested that Churchill should not give it.

The old soldier went on and said some other very sensible and thought-provoking things in that speech, like war used to be squalid and glorious, but now war is only squalid.

I want to repeat that line that is at the heart of what I want to say today: Do we not understand what war means to the ordinary person? Can we not grasp its horror? Has scoring points with some labor boss become more important than the safety of our citizens? Can you not grasp its horror?

I wonder if you would feel the same way if the Golden Gate Bridge was brought down and 95 cars plunged into the San Francisco Bay. Could we then not grasp its horror? Would we then in the name of homeland security still want to take powers away from the President?

Or would you feel the same way if that beautiful little city of New Roads, LA, on the False River, with the Spanish moss dangling on those live oaks, were to go up in a mushroom cloud? Could you then not grasp its horror?

We rev up our emotions so easily to fight superhighways from leveling ethnic neighborhoods. So it would seem to me we should be able to get up the same kind of rage when terrorists want to level entire cities such as Baltimore or Atlanta or the manicured mansions of Newport, RI. If those beautiful cities were the target of a terrorist attack, could you then not grasp its horror? Or the Space Needle in Seattle, filled with tourists, crashing to the ground. Or a smallpox epidemic, in days, wiping out completely the Twin Cities of Minnesota or spreading across the forest plains of South Dakota. From the great Atlantic Ocean to the wide Pacific shore, from the Blue Ridge of Tennessee to Beacon Hill in Massachusetts, I guarantee then the country would grasp that war is horror. And as sure as night follows the day, when catastrophes occur, the Senate, us, we will be held accountable if we fail to give the President the tools to do his job.

Why are people back home always ahead of the politicians? Because most politicians, most at our level, do not get out among them anymore. We think we do. And some of us do. A town hall meeting here, a senior center there, a focus group or two, but we don't really. We do not talk to real people anymore. We are too busy in that room dialing up dollars. The only horror we can grasp from that experience is some fat cat telling us that he is already maxed out.

Why are we even in this debate? How will it be recorded in years to come when the historians write their accounts of the days of a Senate in September of 2002? How will our actions be judged by the people who go to the polls this year on November 5? Frankly, I think it will be one of our sorriest chapters, certainly the worst time in my short time here, a chapter where special interests so brazenly triumphed national interests.

Herodotus, who lived in Athens in the 4th century B.C., is usually called the father of history. He wrote about the Persian wars, and about the Battle of Marathon, which later historians called the seminal event in the history of freedom. Herodotus wrote that the Persians lost that battle, even though their army was bigger and better equipped, because the Persians committed the sin of hubris; hubris, best defined as outrageous arrogance. If you study the lessons of history, especially the lessons of the history of freedom, you will find that hubris would time and time again bring down many other powerful civilizations.

Hubris, outrageous arrogance, is so prevalent in this debate. The hubris of some labor bosses and their purchased partridges in a pear tree. Outrageous arrogance. What else can you call it when the interests of the few are put above the welfare of the whole country?

For the rest of our lives, we will have to live with what we do on this issue.

Will we choose to protect the special interests or will we choose to protect the lives of Americans? Will we hog-tie the hands of our President or give him the same unfettered flexibility other Presidents have had before him? Do not let this be one of those votes you will look back on and ask yourselves for the rest of your lives, what was I thinking? For as we are reminded in the "Rubaiyat" of Omar Khayyam: The moving finger writes, and having writ, moves on. All your piety nor wit shall lure it back to cancel half a line, nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

I ask one last time, do we not understand what war means to the ordinary person? Can we not grasp its horror?

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I yield myself up to 5 minutes from my time.

I will answer the question the Senator from Georgia has raised. Of course we understand what war means to our country and average citizens. That is why our committee has labored so long and so hard to bring forth this bill creating a Department of Homeland Security, consulting with Members on both sides, working with the White House, to have what is, for the most part, a bipartisan piece of legislation.

Senators have spoken this morning about the Senate being divided on this bill. The fact is, the Senate is not divided on this bill. The Gramm-Miller substitute, by Senator GRAMM's own reckoning, is 95 percent the same as our Senate Governmental Affairs Committee bill. And it ought to be. We have a common ground desire to go ahead and create a Department of Homeland Security.

We have a few areas we disagree on, the most significant of which, the most controversial of which, is the one that the Senator from Georgia has focused on. But I cannot let stand the question that somehow the committee bill, supported by nine Democrats and three Republicans—Senator STEVENS, Senator VOINOVICH, Senator COLLINS—somehow puts the protection of Federal workers ahead of national security. We have a different way we have tried to achieve fairness for Federal workers. We can debate that. There is a compromise achieved by Senator BEN NELSON, Senator CHAFEE, Senator BREAUX, that we will have a chance to vote on, the amendment we want to put on this bill. However, there has been so much misstatement and mythology that has no relationship to reality.

Let me state it clearly, national security always must trump and prevail over any other aspect of law in the cases that are described. Let me be very specific why I say that. I will quote the law, United States Code, Title 5, collective bargaining law, section 7106(a)(2)(A) which says, first:

> Nothing in a collective-bargaining law shall effect the authority of any management official of any agency in accordance with applicable laws to assign and direct employees in the agency.

Second, section 7106(a)(2)(B) says:

> Collective bargaining shall not effect managers' authority to assign work and determine the personnel by which agency operations shall be conducted.

This is the directly relevant statute section of law which will continue to prevail and expresses the clear desire—I presume the desire of every Member of the Senate—to give maximum authority, latitude, to managers at a time of national emergency; section 7106(a)(2)(D) of the United States Code, Title 5, provides that collective bargaining shall not affect the authority of managers "to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the agency mission during emergencies."

In an emergency situation, the agency has statutory authority to act immediately. It does not have to take any time to collectively bargain. The agency actually has authority to act, even if a collective bargaining agreement would ordinarily require some other course of action. All the agency head has to do is to invoke a national emergency.

Therefore, the claims we have heard in the Senate today about how union contracts tie the hands of managers with "silly union work rules" and about how managers cannot order employees to do what is necessary to protect the security of the American people in an emergency are simply not true.

In a Federal agency, there is no such thing as a union work rule that impairs a managers' authority to assign work, to direct employees, or to take whatever action that manager deems necessary in an emergency. That is the law. That is not my opinion; that is United States Code Title 5. When lives are at stake in the kinds of circumstances the Senator from Georgia has described, a Federal manager can impose any changes in assignments immediately, without dealing with unions at all. And the unions get to bargain over ways, if they choose to, to affect the impact of those decisions long after the fact.

So we have some disagreements about the specific wording of civil service protections, management flexibility, collective bargaining rights. But, please, make no mistake about it, in a case of national emergency, the law of the United States, unchanged by the committee's proposal, makes clear that national security prevails over any other section of the law and over any provision of a collective bargaining agreement.

I yield up to 10 minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, are we going back and forth? We do not have to, but we normally have.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. In this case, because I have used very little time, I want to hold it to allow the Senators from Maryland both to have the chance to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Parliamentary inquiry: How much time remains on either side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has 32 minutes. The Senator from Texas has 7 minutes.

Mr. SARBANES. So there are 7 minutes on the other side and 32 minutes left with the Senator from Connecticut?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. So I yield up to 10 minutes—let's say I yield up to 20 minutes for both Senators from Maryland as they wish to use that time.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Senator from Connecticut. I know others are anxious to speak.

Madam President, I rise in opposition to the Gramm-Miller amendment. I rise to support the efforts of Senator JOE LIEBERMAN to create a framework for homeland security. I had hoped, when we were working on this legislation, we were not going to be Democrats or Republicans, we were going to be the red, white, and blue party. And I really deeply regret that this argument has been so deeply politicized.

I am here to stand up to protect America and vote for a Department of Homeland Security. But I also have to stand up for those who are protecting the United States of America, our brave, our gallant Federal employees who are out there every day on the front line wanting to do their job, whether they are Customs workers, in the Coast Guard, the FBI, or the G men at the Department of Treasury, trying to do their job. I resent that my standing up for them, to have their constitutional right to organize, have freedom of assembly, would be called arrogant and hubris.

I listened to an argument that said: Battle? You don't know about it.

You are exactly right. I have never gone into battle. I do not bear the permanent wounds of war like some of our dear colleagues, names such as Dole and INOUYE. But I do know this. When we are going to send people into battle, I know we are going to think long and hard about it, because I know what it means. When I stand up for America, I also want to stand up, not for a Department, but for what America believes in.

Why was it OK to have a union in Poland that brought down the whole Communist empire and not to have a union here?

When our firefighters ran up into that burning building at the World Trade Center nobody asked if they were in the union. They didn't look at their clock and wonder if they were working to the rule.

When our emergency workers from Maryland dashed over to be part of the mutual aid at the Pentagon, they were mission driven. They weren't there because they were union members—Oops. I am wrong. They were there because they were union members. They belonged to a union. They belonged to a union called the United States of America. That is the union that they belong to, and that is the union they put first.

Why are we abusing them as if they are the enemy? I hope we will start to be as hard on terrorists as we are on these union members. It has been over 1 year—where is Bin Laden? We haven't found Bin Laden, but we are going to nitpick over whether or not you have a union.

We had an anthrax killer who attacked the Senate and used the post office as a weapon. I have Marylanders dead and I have Marylanders permanently ill because of the anthrax killer. Let's make sure that our workers can go out and do the manhunt they need to do, or to do the money hunt for those who fund them. Let's not worry about whether they belong to a union or they don't. They don't hide behind the union not to do their job. But I tell you, there are those hiding behind a right-wing agenda to get rid of unions in this country or to make unions the problem.

The words "labor boss," what do they mean? It is OK to be a CEO and have more perks than a potentate—that is OK, we can have the imperial CEO. But when people organize, they are called labor bosses, as though somehow or another it is the goon squad? I really resent that. I resent that for my customs workers. I resent it for the postal workers after what happened at Brentwood. The postal workers didn't sit down and go on strike because we failed to protect them. They showed up every day, and because they showed up every day and did their job, as I say, two are dead and many are sick. And we are sick at heart because it happened to them.

So I am kind of tired of this. I am tired of the politicization of the process. I am tired of the cynical manipulation of this process. I feel as though I am being set up. If we stand up for the workers, we are somehow or another slowing down the debate on homeland security.

This national leader, JOE LIEBERMAN, the Senator from Connecticut, has been working on homeland security and an agency to do it long before the White House has. Just like he was calling for a national commission to look at what went wrong on September 11 long before the White House. We have been ahead of the White House, but now we are going to work with the White House.

I think we have to defeat the Gramm-Miller amendment—put that aside and no hard feelings. I think we have to then move on to the Lieberman bill, pass it expeditiously to show the world we can organize and mobilize to protect America, and then let's get on to the other debate related to Iraq. And then let's also get back on another debate, such as what is happened to the economy.

The stock market has plummeted. It is about as bad as it was when Gerald Ford was President, in 1974. We do not want to go there again and then need a Democrat to bail us out—or maybe we will need a Democrat to bail us out, but I don't want to go there. I want to stand up for this country, but I want to stand up for the people who built this country, and it is the trade union movement. If we don't start protecting the protectors, to make sure they have the right equipment, the right training, and also have the right legislative framework where they can have their constitutional rights, then we have other issues.

I want to go back to the bill JOE LIEBERMAN is presenting. I think it is an excellent framework. I will go back to being part of the red, white, and blue party. Let's put the politics of hard feelings behind us, let's get Iraq together, and let's show America we can govern, and let's show the bullies of the world we are going to take them on.

God bless the Federal employees who stand sentry every day to protect America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, I rise, first of all, to commend the very able chairman of the committee, the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, for the very fine work he has done on this legislation, particularly on this issue of Federal employees, and the care and sensitivity with which he has struck the balance.

Obviously, on the one hand we have national security concerns. But as the Senator indicated in the quotes he took right from the legislation, the actual words of the legislation, the flexibility that is necessary to deal with national security questions or emergency situations is contained in this legislation. Those would be stripped out by the amendment. The Gramm-Miller proposal would then move the balance. Really, it would eliminate the balance. It would provide no significant or meaningful protections for the Federal employees.

In one sense it raises the question: What is the nature of the society we are trying to protect? What is the nature of the society we are trying to protect? How far are we prepared to go in denying the essential freedoms and essential protections in the name of national security? Not in the reality of national security because the Senator from Connecticut has protected that reality.

Their proposal would give unfettered authority to the Executive in dealing with their employees—the very employees we have to draw upon to protect the Nation and to respond to the challenges we face.

I want to assert in unequivocal terms that, in my judgment, our Federal employees are loyal and committed workers who are dedicated to providing a high level of service. Legislation creating the new Department of Homeland Security should protect the rights of those workers to engage in collective bargaining and to protect their rights under the current civil service system unless critical questions of national security or emergency are presented. And those questions have been dealt with carefully, skillfully, and thoughtfully by the able Senator from Connecticut. I commend him for those efforts.

I don't understand why some are engaged in beating up on the Federal employees. Why is this happening? Have the terrorist strikes driven some to this point? Do they not recall the Federal office building in Oklahoma that was blown up by a terrorist, albeit a domestic terrorist? Do they not recall that, and those dedicated lives that were lost? People all across the country who were working in similar office buildings went back in the next morning to do their job on behalf of the country to serve the public interest—all across America—despite the fact that some of their colleagues had just suffered this grievous blow.

Why do we have this assault taking place? The Federal managers have much of this flexibility. The legislation has the emergency flexibility in it. The civil service law was originally put in place to protect against politicizing the public service. It has been adjusted and amended over the years.

These arguments that it impedes productivity have been addressed again and again by the chairman's committee. Adjustments have been made in the light of changing circumstances. But no one has ever come before the committee and said we ought to take away all of those protections which have given us a public service with some integrity to it, and which is not subject to political whim.

How are you going to call upon people to serve above and beyond the basic requirements of their job description if you do not treat them with some dignity and respect?

I don't know. Some around here may find that they draw the best out of those who work for them by sort of beating up on them; that if you are sort of whipping them all the time and driving them without any protections, completely at your whim, that enables you to bring out of them the best response. That has never been my experience. I don't know of any labor-management text or treatises by noted experts in the field who say that is the best way to get a stellar performance out of your workers. I haven't seen that treatise yet. In fact, the ones I have looked at say that is exactly the wrong thing to do if you want to draw out a quality and stellar performance from your workers.

There are a lot of very dedicated employees across the country. I think employee rights and the civil service protections which we have are essential to the effective workings of our Government.

Some come and try to portray this as some special interest. The public interest is served by having these arrangements because those arrangements enable us to get better people into the public service, and to draw on them and their full capabilities.

I rise in very strong opposition to the provisions in this amendment that have been offered by Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER which would strip away from our Federal employees these important collective bargaining rights and these important civil service protections. In my judgment, given the balance which the chairman has already struck on important national security questions, to do what this amendment does—taking away those bargaining rights and those civil service protections—will harm our national security, not help our national security. It will harm our national security.

For that reason, I very strongly oppose the provisions that are contained in this amendment that deal with our committed and dedicated Federal employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I thank my colleagues from Maryland, Senators MIKULSKI and SARBANES, for their very eloquent and passionate and compassionate statements. I appreciate the way Senator SARBANES and Senator MIKULSKI talked about the impulse of the people who are working for the Federal Government.

I cited the law before which talked about the primary status of national security. But the people, the loyal patriotic Americans, does anybody really think in a case of national emergency they are going to be citing subsections of the collective bargaining agreement? They are going to do what any American did. In fact, that is what they did on September 11.

I was in a meeting of a group of Federal employees who happened to be from FEMA. They rushed from where they were to the Pentagon. A whole group of them were flown up to New York. They worked long hours. They got very little sleep for days and days. Obviously, the firefighters in New York are unionized. It is a remarkable story. I don't remember the exact number. I talked to a battalion commander of a unit of New York firefighters a couple of weeks ago. He said on September 11, when they heard about the planes hitting the World Trade Center, several hundred firefighters who were off duty just rushed to the scene to help. They weren't thinking about a collective bargaining agreement. They were thinking about America and their duty. These are public servants in the best meaning of the term.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. Given this display of dedication on the part of these public employees, why now all of a sudden are we seeking to take away from them these basic rights and protections?

If someone came in and said what a dismal performance we have, and, therefore, we ought to give the management more leeway to sort of beat on these people or something of that sort, I don't know that I would buy that argument. But at least it would be something of an argument.

Instead, you have this exemplary performance, this manifestation of real dedication. And despite that, some now are coming along and, in effect, wanting to beat on people who have behaved in the most extraordinary, dedicated, and selfless fashion.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. The Senator from Maryland is absolutely right. There is no justification for it. At some level, it is not only wrong, it is offensive. And I thank the Senator for his substantial contribution to this debate.

May I ask the Chair how much time is remaining on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 12½ minutes.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I am very pleased to see in the Chamber my friend from Hawaii, Senator AKAKA, a very significant member of our committee, who has contributed substantially, in so many ways, to our legislation that came out of committee. I yield the Senator up to 10 minutes for his statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. AKAKA. I thank the Senator from Connecticut.

Madam President. I rise to address the amendment offered by Senators GRAMM and MILLER as it relates to whistleblower protections. Contrary to press accounts, the Gramm-Miller amendment, as well as the House-passed bill and the President's initial bill, do nothing—do nothing—to protect whistleblowers. As Congress debates the creation of the new Department of Homeland Security, we must remember the role that whistleblowers play in protecting this great Nation. We commend the courage of FBI Special Agent Coleen Rowley, who blew the whistle on the serious institutional problems at the FBI which impacted the agency's ability to effectively investigate and prevent terrorism. We commend Federal Border Patrol Agents Mark Hall and Bob Lindemann, who risked their careers by alerting Congress to Border Patrol and INS policies that compromised the security of our borders.

Their actions alerted us to flaws in the current system and allow us to fix such problems in order to have a more secure Nation. Because whistleblowers play such an important role in protecting our country, we must do our part to protect them from retaliation for disclosing Government waste, fraud, and abuse. The Lieberman substitute is the only amendment before us that provides real whistleblower protection.

During the Committee on Governmental Affairs hearings on the creation of the proposed Homeland Security Department, I asked Governor Tom Ridge about whistleblower protections for Federal employees in the Department of Homeland Security. He said that all employees in the new Department would have whistleblower protections because the bill would require the new personnel system to be grounded in the public employment principles of merit and fitness.

However, requiring that a human resources system be grounded in the public employment principles does not equate to whistleblower protection. Congress has worked hard, and continues to work, to provide real whistleblower protection to Federal employees. Claiming that whistleblower protection will be provided based on such principles does nothing to assure Federal employees of their rights and protections or assure Congress that their bipartisan efforts on behalf of whistleblowers would not be frustrated.

Adding to my concern over the lack of protections afforded to employees in the new Department, H.R. 5005 and the amendment offered by Senators GRAMM and MILLER fail to provide the same level of whistleblower protection that Federal employees have in most Federal agencies. Although the House bill and the Gramm-Miller amendment allegedly maintain whistleblower protections and other merit system principles for employees of the new Department, both allow the Secretary to waive due process procedures and the remedies an employee needs to assert those rights.

The Gramm-Miller amendment bars the Secretary from waiving the applicability of several chapters of title 5 covering a variety of civil service issues. The list of nonwaivable chapters conspicuously fails to include protections against unwarranted disciplinary actions and performance appraisals, access to third party investigations by the Office of Special Counsel, or independent hearings at the Merit Systems Protection Board. Those agencies provide vital third party review and transparent enforcement for whistleblower and other merit system rights.

When Federal employees allege that they have been subject to a prohibited personnel practice, including violations of the Whistleblower Protection Act, OSC has authority to receive and investigate such allegations. If the special counsel finds reasonable grounds to believe that a violation has occurred and corrective action is required, she must report the determination to the MSPB, the affected agency, and the Office of Personnel Management, OPM. If the agency fails to act to correct the prohibited personnel practice, the special counsel may petition the MSPB for corrective action.

Since these procedures are not specifically included in H.R. 5005, it is doubtful that the protections afforded to other employees are available to Homeland Security employees.

In 1995, Congress gave wide latitude to the Federal Aviation Administration to create its own personnel system. Although this system was to afford whistleblower protections, the Justice Department found that Congress incorporated only selected provisions of title 5 into the FAA personnel management system, thus leaving OSC without authority to investigate or otherwise pursue cases of whistleblower retaliation alleged by FAA employees.

The reasoning of the Justice Department is supported by Supreme Court precedent, which states that:

> [w]here Congress explicitly enumerates certain exceptions to a general prohibition, additional exceptions are not to be implied.

Moreover, Congress has repeatedly demonstrated that if its intention is to exempt certain entities generally from title 5, but to apply the substantive whistleblower protections and all the ancillary enforcement procedures, it knows how to do so unambiguously. For example, when Congress applied only selected provisions of title 5 to the Panama Canal Commission, it provided for application of the whistleblower protection provisions as follows:

> Section 2302(b)(8) (relating to whistleblower protection) and all provisions of Title 5 relating to the administration or enforcement or any other aspect thereof, as identified in regulations prescribed by the Commission in consultation with the Office of Personnel Management.

It is fair to conclude that whistleblowers in the new Department do not have the same protections as other employees in the Federal Government due to the absence of any similar reference to the whistleblower protection enforcement provisions of title 5 in the House bill or in the Gramm-Miller amendment.

The Lieberman substitute, however, maintains all of the title 5 protections for whistleblowers to ensure that they have the needed protection to come forward and alert us to serious problems in the Federal Government that can hamper our efforts to secure our homeland. It also ensures the continuation of union representation which allows third party arbitration for whistleblowers. The Lieberman substitute also contains two provisions, sponsored by myself and Senator LEVIN, which enhance the protections afforded to Federal employees.

The Akaka-Levin provisions grandfather the whistleblower rights of employees transferred into the new Department and provide full whistleblower protections for TSA baggage screeners. Whistleblower protections for TSA employees had unanimous bipartisan support from the Governmental Affairs Committee and the provision mirrors the language of S. 2686 which was introduced by Senator GRASSLEY. Despite such widespread support, the Gramm-Miller "compromise" amendment does not include this bipartisan protection for whistleblowers.

Under the terms of the Aviation and Transportation Security Act that we passed last year, the Under Secretary of Transportation for Security has the authority to employ, terminate, and fix the conditions of employment for the Federal screening workforce while the rest of the employees of the Transportation Security Agency are governed by the personnel system established by the Federal Aviation Administration.

While the FAA personnel system now provides full whistleblower protection to employees, TSA security screeners are denied such protection. In May, TSA and OSC reached an agreement to provide limited whistleblower protection to TSA baggage screeners. Under this nonstatutory agreement, security screeners were not afforded appeal rights. However, the right to appeal to an independent third party is a necessary part of providing real whistleblower protection. Such protection is necessary to ensure that screeners feel secure in coming forward with information of government waste, fraud, and actions that are dangerous to public health and safety.

Recognizing the need for full whistleblower rights, Congress resolved to provide OSC enforcement authority and full whistleblower rights to FAA employees in 2000.

I urge my colleagues to once again protect our Federal whisleblowers by providing full and explicit whistleblower protection to employees in the Department of Homeland Security. I urge my colleagues to oppose the Gramm-Miller amendment and support the Lieberman substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, could the Chair indicate how much time is remaining on each side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute to the Senator from Connecticut, and 7 minutes to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Madam President, let me conclude in the moment I have remaining. I have the feeling this will not be the last moment I or other Members will have to discuss the Graham-Miller substitute or the question of protections for Federal workers.

There is a significant disagreement about the protections for homeland security workers. I do think, as we talk about the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux compromise, which I support, that it will be seen that it not only gives some protection to Federal workers, particularly those who are currently unionized and will be transferred to the new building, but it leaves the President with the last word on matters of national security. Let not the debate on that matter obscure the fact that, as Senator GRAMM himself has said, 95 percent of his substitute is the same as our committee bill. So let's settle the small point of disagreement and get the rest that we agree on done.

I believe my time has expired.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. CLINTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I have a unanimous consent request which I have informed the minority I am going to propound at this time. Senator NELSON has been designated as Senator DASCHLE's designee. I ask unanimous consent that following my unanimous consent request—and I understand there will be an objection—Senator NELSON be recognized to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 1140

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent, on behalf of Senator DASCHLE, that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 210, S. 1140, the motor vehicle franchise contracts bill; that the bill be read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, I have no objection to this request, but I understand there is a Senator on this side who wants to review it further, and on his behalf I object at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002—Continued

AMENDMENT NO. 4740 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4738

(Purpose: To modify certain personnel provisions, and for other purposes)

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I call up my amendment at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

> The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NELSON], for himself, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. BREAUX, proposes an amendment numbered 4740 to amendment No. 4738.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I am pleased to join with my friends, Senator JOHN BREAUX of Louisiana and Senator LINCOLN CHAFEE of Rhode Island, in helping break the stalemate on the labor-management issues that have held up the homeland security legislation. We need to move forward and pass a bill that provides real security for all Americans without the distractions of labor-management issues.

This legislation is a huge undertaking, and the reorganization will certainly not be accomplished overnight.

That being said, we need to get to it right now because the later we come back to try to do this, the more difficult it will be. We need to do it right because unscrambling the eggs is impossible.

The new Department will not begin well if it begins with a staff who feels their concerns have been ignored. We now have the opportunity to break that logjam. This compromise addresses the concerns of both sides. The agreement preserves the Presidential authority to exempt union employees from collective bargaining as employees of the Department of Homeland Security. It also grants the President historic personnel flexibility, giving him the authority to hire, fire, promote, demote, and to rewrite civil service laws in the area of performance appraisals, classifications, pay rates and systems, and adverse action.

The agreement provides binding arbitration on personnel flexibility. All sides will have a seat at the table during the development of the new personnel rules and any disagreements over the rules will be referred to the Federal Service Impasse Panel, which will have the authority to set the rules and resolve disputes. This is modeled after the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, which is current law.

The Federal Service Impasse Panel has discretion to impose new rules to break this agreement. This is existing law. It is the way in which we ought to proceed.

I know this amendment will receive broad bipartisan support, and I hope those of us who seek to complete action on this important legislation will support this effort to clear one of the major hurdles that has been currently blocking our progress so we can move forward on this important and vital security matter currently before us.

I ask for the support of my colleagues, and I hope we will move forward on this as soon as we possibly can. There is no reason to delay this legislation any longer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BREAUX. Madam President, I support the amendment to the Gramm-Miller amendment which has been offered by our good friend and colleague Senator NELSON; and by my colleague Senator LINCOLN CHAFEE. It is very clear the Senate, as we debate homeland security, has reached a point where we are at a logjam. I, for one, and I think the vast majority of our colleagues, strongly support the creation of a Homeland Security Department, and why is very simple.

In light of today's terrorist threat to this country, we can no longer continue to operate and protect our Nation's security in the way we always have. In the past, too often the right hand did not know what the left hand was doing, and vice versa. It is clear, from the evidence that has now been presented, we have agencies within our own Government that had certain amounts of information that was important information, but information they did not adequately share with other Departments and agencies within our Government.

It is nice to have individual agencies know a little bit about the intelligence of an international threat, but if they do not share that information with other Departments within our Government, and they do not put all of the information gathered into one single place where people can look at it and analyze it, it is really not very effective information. It is certainly not as effective as if we have the collective wisdom of all of the various intelligence-gathering agencies within our Government.

The point has very accurately been made if the CIA has information the FBI does not have, if the Immigration Service has some information neither one of the other agencies has, that is not a very effective situation. If you throw in information that agencies such as the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and local police and State police have, if each one of them keeps that information to themselves, we are not providing the service we should to the American people. For the first time, the creation of a Homeland Security Agency is going to say to all of these collecting agencies that gather the information that is so important, we should absolutely share it and involve each other in what that information is all about, and that is what the Homeland Security Agency does very effectively.

All of those, Republicans and Democrats together, who have worked very hard to bring this legislation to the floor have done a good job. This is good legislation. It is important legislation. What this legislation does is simply say to the American people after 9/11, we are going to create a new agency in our Federal Government to ensure our ability to better protect the rights and freedoms of all American citizens than we have in the past.

There are actions that have to be taken in times of national emergencies that are not normal, such as during this period of special concern. One of the powers that is necessary for a President to have is the ability to move agencies, departments, and individuals as quickly as possible, to the best position to serve the American public.

The President currently has the authority to say if it is important for national security that some of the collective bargaining rights of some of these employees of the Federal Government have to be temporarily set aside. He can exercise that authority now, and he has exercised it in the past. It has not been only this President but it has gone back, I think, all the way to President John Kennedy. We are in that type of a situation.

With the creation of a new Homeland Security Agency, however, we are talking for the first time about creating a new agency where thousands of employees may be taken out of one position and put into the Homeland Security Agency.

Somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 who have collective bargaining rights where they are currently working, if they are transferred to a new Homeland Security Agency, for the first time may have those collective bargaining rights taken away.

How ironic it would be if the agency we are creating to protect the rights and freedoms of Americans is the agency that is utilized to take away the rights of American citizens to collectively bargain without the appropriate justification for doing so. I do not think anyone would want to say that is their desire.

This Homeland Security Agency is designed to protect the rights and freedoms Americans have gained. Some may argue about the wisdom of having collective bargaining rights, but it is a right American citizens have. So the question before this body now is: How do we give the President the authority to do what is necessary in this new Homeland Security Agency, which I support very strongly, while at the same time ensuring while we take rights away from American citizens, it is only done under the most unusual circumstances, and if it is necessary it be done, it be done very carefully so everyone will understand how this transaction is taking place?

What brings us to the floor today is this suggestion my good friends, Senator NELSON and Senator CHAFEE, and myself, have worked on to try to say, yes, we support homeland security, but we also want to make sure we protect the rights and freedoms of our own American citizens.

It is interesting to note, if people would only take the time—and I have said this so many times. I have said this to my good friend, the chairman, Senator LIEBERMAN—if all of us had the time to read the legislation and see the actual differences between the two versions, they would find the differences are far less than the similarities, particularly when it comes to this very issue which is causing this problem right now.

If we look at the current authority of the President of the United States with respect to what he can do to remove collective bargaining rights of American workers when he transfers them, it is almost similar, if not identical, to what our suggestion is to break the logjam. For instance, under the current law of the United States, under 5 U.S.C. section 7103, this is what people are saying, do not take away the President's authority. The current law says the President may issue an order excluding any agency or subdivision thereof from coverage under this chapter—meaning take away their collective bargaining—if the President determines, first, that the agency or subdivision has as a primary function intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative or national security work; and, second, the provisions of this chapter cannot be applied to that agency or subdivision in a manner consistent with national security requirements and considerations. What that says is the President can take away their collective bargaining rights now only if he makes a determination that these two things are present.

How do we handle it in our amendment, which I think can generate more than a majority? Simple. Our legislation says no agency can have their collective bargaining rights taken away, unless it is shown that the mission and responsibilities of the agency or subdivision materially change, and, second, that a majority of the employees within the agency have as their primary duty intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

I will argue with anyone who wants to say that this somehow hampers the ability of the President to take away collective bargaining rights. Under our suggestion, the President, as under current law, has to make a determination that these people are important to intelligence gathering. That is easy for the President. And also that the mission and responsibilities of the agency from which he wants to take these rights away have materially changed. I think that is a very easy thing, under the circumstances that exist today for the President to be able to reach that standard.

It is interesting that under the current law there is no appeal from the workers to go to the NLRB or any kind of labor agency. But there is no appeal under our provision to go to any kind of NLRB or agency at all.

Some of my friends on the Republican side say, yes, but those workers could take the agency to court. That is true. But that is also true under current law. If someone under current law thinks the President has not made this determination correctly, they have the right to go to court. I don't know that it has ever been done. If so, I think maybe once it was not successful. But they have that right today. It is not appropriate to say we are going to create this new agency but we are going to give workers less rights than they have today.

Some have also suggested they show that mission and responsibilities of the agency have materially changed. That would never fit today's circumstances. The example they give is, we may have an immigration agency working in south Texas that is all of a sudden going to be transferred to the new agency to look after immigrants who are coming from suspected terrorist areas of the world and that their mission will not materially change. They will be doing the same work in a different agency and, therefore, not meet the test of having their work materially change because they will be doing the same type of work.

That does not create a problem. It is the intent of the authors of this to clearly say it is our intent when you are transferring people who are doing immigration work in border towns, protecting our States under normal circumstances, that they have to do that type of work to stop international terrorists at a time we have been attacked by terrorists from other countries is materially changing what they are doing. They are now looking out after foreign terrorists who are trying to attack the United States and do grave harm to this country. Their work has materially changed. The President makes this determination under our amendment, as he does under current circumstances. There is no appeal from the workers to be able to go to any NLRB-type of organization and plead their case.

I plead with folks at the White House who have looked at this, take another look at it. Read what the current law says. Read what our suggestion is on collective bargaining. You will find there is not any difference that is worth objecting to if we are able to get this through the Senate with a large majority. It is not a good idea, I suggest, to have a 50/50 vote on homeland security and have to ask the Vice President of the United States to come to this Chamber to break the tie, to barely get this through the Senate. What type of unanimity does that show the American people as we pass homeland security? This amendment should pass with 75, 80, or 90 votes at least. Our suggestion in the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment would allow us to have a huge vote in support of this proposition.

The second area we have addressed in our amendment is important. The question is, Do you give the President flexibility to move people around, to change, perhaps, how they get paid, or to change their functions because now there is a question of national security? We have done that in our amendment. We have clearly spelled out the fact that they have the authority to have management flexibility. We have taken the larger part of the so-called Portman-Quinn amendment offered in the House which gives management flexibility to the President.

I happen to think he should have management flexibility, but certainly not unlimited. He should have it in the areas he needs it. We have offered that. The Portman language in the Senate gave him management flexibility in six different categories. We have said that we will take four of those six categories and give him the flexibility he needs to make the decisions he would like to make in moving these people around.

The President should have that in terms of the national emergency. We give him the authority that he needs, like in Portman-Quinn. The only suggestion is, you should not be able to do it, like you cannot today, without some involvement of the workers. You ought to at least sit down with them and discuss with them as you do in other agencies—such as the IRS, the FAA. Under current law, you sit down and talk with the people you are going to be moving around to get their support, to get their ideas, to get their suggestions about how it can be made to work in a more efficient manner.

What type of managers want to dictate to the employees that he will do this, that, and the other, and oh, by the way, I want you to be a loyal worker after I do this? Our legislation requires that in making these management changes, they shall be worked out with the representatives of the workers and the Secretary, that they would enter into a written agreement to approve the management flexibility that the Secretary thinks he needs.

The point is, if they do not reach an agreement, do the workers have a veto? Absolutely not. As under current Federal law, as under the Internal Revenue Service when we gave them management flexibility, this body and the other body voted and approved when they cannot agree on management flexibility, you bring in the Federal Service Impasse Panel and they will have the authority under the Federal Service Impasse Panel—if the parties cannot arrive at an agreement, they have the authority under our amendment, as under current law, to take whatever action is necessary to resolve the impasse. That means if they want management flexibility, they sit down with both sides and discuss it. If the two sides cannot agree, they bring in the Federal Service Impasse Panel and they make the decision. It is a binding decision.

What is this Federal Service Impasse Panel? Is this an arm of the AFL-CIO? A new creation? No, it exists in Federal law today. There are seven people on it. Guess who appoints the seven. The President of the United States. He appoints every single member of the Federal Service Impasse Panel that will look at what the President is trying to do, and if the people cannot agree, his appointees, all seven of his appointees, unanimously appointed by the President of the United States, put into effect what they think is appropriate and improper. I don't think that is something that is bad at all. That is current law for the Federal service workers right now when they are being moved around.

I suggest if we could adopt the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment we could put this aside. This bill has to go to conference with the other body. There will be further negotiations on this issue. Hopefully, we can come back with something that leaves the Senate, first, with a very large vote, instead of 50/50, and then come back in a fashion that will also generate the type of support that I think is critically important.

I ask for a "yes" vote on my amendment, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. Madam President, creating the Department of Homeland Security is an enormous undertaking. In fact, it is the largest Federal undertaking since the creation of the Department of Defense. Senator BREAUX, Senator NELSON, and I offer this amendment to address the concerns, not only of the President, of course, but also concerns of the many thousands of Federal employees to whom we are entrusting our national security. As Senator BREAUX and Senator NELSON have pointed out aspects of this amendment, I think it is important to note that what we have done is taken Republican amendments, I say to my colleagues on this side of the aisle, we have taken Republican amendments from the House, the Republican amendment offered by Representative MORELLA from Maryland, Republican amendments offered by Representative PORTMAN and Representative QUINN, from Ohio and New York, and offered them into this amendment. This is an honest attempt at bipartisanship.

Most important, as Senator NELSON has said, this amendment will finally enable the Senate to move the process forward by getting this bill to conference with the House. Without this compromise, there will be no Senate bill. There will be no Department of Homeland Security. But with this compromise we can empower the conference committee to work with the administration to finalize a bill that will meet the President's legitimate concerns and protect employees' legitimate rights. I do urge passage of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, Madam President—I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The assistant legislative clerk continued with the call of the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Madam President, I renew my request the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Just to clarify my intent, Madam President, this is not to get recognition to try to offer an amendment or affect the procedure on the pending issue. Talking with Senator REID, he wanted to make sure that at the conclusion of my remarks there would be an opportunity for someone to seek recognition on the other side. I am sure that would be the case, although Senator BUNNING is here and wishes to speak on the amendment at hand.

I would like, rather than just to speak on the amendment, to use leader time, as was done by Senator DASCHLE this morning, to speak on this critical area.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. LOTT. Madam President, the Senate now has been on this important issue over 3 weeks. The creation of the Homeland Security Department, something that clearly is very important, needs to be done. Perhaps it needed to be done earlier—without being critical of anybody. There needs to be some way to bring these different groups together and get a focus, get some direction, to give them the directions they need and the funds and the people to deal here at home with the threat by terrorists and by others. We need this Homeland Security Department.

I had thought we could probably do a Homeland Security Department in a few days—probably less than a week. But here we are, now. Obviously, we are going to take a month on this issue.

What is at stake? What has delayed this issue is the President's authority to impose national security interests, the security of the American people in their homes and their streets and their businesses, innocent men, women, and children here at home—for the President to be able to act in the national security interest, to have some flexibility in management authority to make sure this Department runs efficiently. Yet we see we are still arguing over work rules in the workplace. We are still arguing over whether the President should have the authority to say, for national security reasons: I am going to be able to move people and money around, and we are going to be able to override work rules to look after the security of the American people.

I think it is ridiculous that we have come to this point. I oppose the pending amendment because, once again, this is an effort to try to find a way to make it difficult or even impossible for the President of the United States—and not just this President, Presidents—to be able to do the job on homeland security.

The President has said that the Senate needs to act on homeland security. There is beginning to be doubt about the Senate's commitment in this area because we are putting special interests of certain groups over homeland security. That is a legitimate debate. The debate has been gentlemanly. We have not had many amendments because we have had more talk than we have had amendments. But now we have the President's proposal that has been offered by Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER—a bipartisan bill with some changes that have been agreed to. And now we have an amendment that will be offered. That is all well and good. That is fine.

Then there is the separate issue of the Iraq resolution. What are we going to do about Saddam Hussein? Let me read to you what the President of the United States said on that issue.

> I want to thank Members of both parties of the U.S. Congress for working to develop a strong resolution and a strong signal to the world that this Nation is determined.

That is what the President actually said. Now, I am deeply saddened by the tenor and the tone of the remarks of my friend, the majority leader, this morning on the administration's conduct and Iraq. We live in grave times, when this body should be carefully and deliberately debating the threat that Iraq's weapons of mass destruction pose against the United States. Instead we heard accusations that a President of the United States is using the possibility of war for political purposes.

Who is the enemy here? The President of the United States or Saddam Hussein? That is who was attacked this morning here on the floor of the Senate. I think we would be better served debating Saddam Hussein and the threat he poses for the world. He is a brutal dictator. He has already used chemical and biological weapons against his own people.

We know he has the ability to deliver these weapons. We know he has invaded his neighbors.

We had better be asking ourselves what we are going to do about this tyrant. He has for 11 years ignored 16 U.N. resolutions and has been involved in the killing of thousands of innocent people.

For anyone who seems surprised that we are engaged in this debate, I ask a very simple question. Where were you, 9 months ago, when the President of the United States came before a Joint Session of Congress and said, "Iraq continues to flaunt its hostility toward America and to support terror. The Iraqi regime has plotted to develop anthrax and nerve gas, and nuclear weapons for over a decade. This is a regime that has already used poison gas to murder thousands of its own citizens—leaving the bodies of mothers huddled over their dead children. This is a regime that has something to hide from the civilized world?"

Where were you, 9 months ago, when the President continued, "States like these, and their terrorist allies, constitute an axis of evil, arming to threaten the peace of the world. By seeking weapons of mass destruction, these regimes pose a grave and growing danger. They could provide these arms to terrorists, giving them the means to match their hatred. They could attack our allies or attempt to blackmail the United States. In any of these cases, the price of indifference would be catastrophic"?

Where were you 6 months ago, on the half year anniversary of September 11, when the President said, "Here is what we already know: some states that sponsor terror are seeking or already possess weapons of mass destruction; terrorist groups are hungry for these weapons, and would use them without a hint of conscience. And we know that these weapons, in the hands of terrorists, would unleash blackmail and genocide and chaos"?

The President continued, "These facts cannot be denied, and must be confronted. In preventing the spread of weapons of mass destruction, there is no margin of error, and no chance to learn from mistakes. Our coalition must act deliberately, but inaction is not an option."

Again in May, the President said:

> The evil that has formed against us has been termed the "new totalitarian threat." The authors of terror are seeking nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. Regimes that sponsor terror are developing these weapons and the missiles to deliver them. If these regimes and their terrorist allies were to perfect these capabilities, no inner voice of reason, no hint of conscience would prevent them.

The President of the United States has been actively laying out the case against Iraq in a deliberate and focused way for nearly 1 year.

Just a month ago, Democrats in the Senate and Republicans in Congress were saying to the President: Mr. President, make your case to the American people. Come to the Congress. Make your case to us. Let us be engaged in the dialog and the debate, have some resolution prepared, and vote. Go to the United Nations. Make your case to the world community. Reach out to our allies around the world, and those not necessarily our allies, and show them the danger. Talk to them. Have a dialog.

The President did that. He has been going to the American people. So has his administration. He came to the Congress and said: You are right. I am going to consult with you and communicate with you.

Let us have a dialog. Let us have a debate. Let us have a vote.

A number of Democrats have stood up and said: Yes, this problem is serious, and we must address it. We must address it now.

The President went to the United Nations. He showed commitment and leadership. He turned the whole debate there around and put pressure on the United Nations to decide if they were just going to be a League of Nations or if they were going to really enforce their resolutions that had passed several times.

The President gave a bill of particulars about why we must act, and we must act now, because with ever passing day, week, month, and year, the threat grows, it doesn't diminish.

This is about the people in Iraq who are being oppressed and who have been killed. This is about security in the region. This is about security here at home.

Some people have said: He can't deliver nuclear weapons yet. He may not have them.

He has the delivery systems. He is working to make them longer range. We know that. He is trying to get materials he needs to have these nuclear weapons. But put aside the nuclear weapons. We know he has biological and chemical weapons right now. We know that. Some of these weapons can be delivered with an aerosol can—right here; not somewhere else; right here.

Have we forgotten the events of 9/11 so soon, which was so catastrophic and so big? Are we ignoring what we are learning from the hearings that are underway and from the realities of the threats from terrorists all over the world, and particularly from Saddam Hussein?

Once the President came to the Congress, some people said: Wait. We didn't mean now. Some people said: Let us do it instantly. Now some people say it is being politicized; we shouldn't do that. We should reduce the shrill of rhetoric. We should try to find a way to do this in the right way and in a broad bipartisan way.

But let us go beyond the situation right here at home. Is somebody going to accuse Prime Minister Tony Blair of politicizing the issue? He is not up for reelection. In fact, he is going against a lot of the people in his own party. I think the British people support what he is doing. But he has shown real courage. He went before the House of Commons this week and laid out the information he had. He deliberately pointed out the danger and why we need to act now. Nobody can accuse him of politicizing the issue.

This is what he said.

> [The British Joint Intelligence Committee] concludes that Iraq has chemical and biological weapons, that Saddam has continued to produce them, that he has existing and active military plans for the use of chemical and biological weapons, which could be activated within 45 minutes, including against his own Shia population; and that he is actively trying to acquire nuclear weapons capability.

The Prime Minister continues:

> Since the departure of the inspectors in 1998, Saddam has bought or attempted to buy: specialized vacuum pumps of the design needed for the gas centerfuge cascade to enrich uranium . . . an entire magnet production line . . . and has attempted, covertly to acquire 60,000 or more specialized aluminum tubes which are subject to strict controls due to their potential use in the construction of gas centerfuges.

All this, and Iraq has no civil nuclear powerplants. So they are not doing it for that purpose.

The Prime Minister concluded:

> Two things about Saddam stand out. He has used these weapons, thousands dying in chemical weapons attacks in Iraq itself. He used them in the Iran-Iraq war, started by him, in which one million people died. And his is a regime with no moderate elements to appeal to. Read the chapter on Saddam and human rights. Read not just about the one million dead in the war with Iran, not just about the 100,000 Kurds brutally murdered in northern Iraq, not just the 200,000 Shia Muslims driven from the marshlands in southern Iraq; not just the attempt to subjugate and brutalize the Kuwaitis in 1990 which led to the Gulf War. Read about the routine butchering of political opponents; the prison "cleansing" regimes in which thousands die; the torture chambers and hideous penalties supervised by him and his family and detailed by Amnesty International. Read it all again and I defy anyone to say that this cruel and sadistic dictator should be allowed any possibility of getting his hands on more chemical, biological or even nuclear weapons.

That was the British Prime Minister.

This is not about politicizing the issue. We shouldn't do that. But it is a very important issue. The American people's security is at stake.

I think what maybe has happened here is a desire to try to find some way to put this issue off or to in fact make it political.

But let me correct the Record just in case some of the comments here were inspired by misinformation.

Today's Washington Post story on President Bush and Vice President CHENEY has remarks in it that are flat wrong. The partial quote cited in the Post was specifically referencing the current debate over management flexibility of the Department of Homeland Security—not the war on terror in Iraq. I think that is a very important and critical difference.

I took the time to look at the Vice President's remarks. I know DICK CHENEY. I have the utmost respect for him. I have heard him speak to several different groups—political meetings and nonpolitical. He is always low key, very studied in what he says, very careful, and it is never inflammatory. He does talk about the need for the right actions in the economy, national and homeland security, and trade promotion authority. He has talked about the things we have done.

Then he said:

> President Bush and I are very grateful for the opportunity to serve our country. We thank you for your support, not just for our efforts, but for good candidates like Adam Taff, who will make a fine partner for us in the important work ahead.

What is the problem with that?

When I looked at what was said today, I must confess, I was shocked and even horrified. I have taken a moment here to talk to some of the colleagues on the floor about the important work ahead of us.

At a press conference this very morning, I was saying: We are going to work this language out. We are going to find language that will give the President the authority he needs but language that will have broad bipartisan support in both bodies. We can find a way to do that.

But the accusations leveled against the President of the United States today cannot stand. This is not about unity. That is the worst kind of division. I am going to try to remain calm and attribute the reaction I heard today to perhaps misunderstanding. We are not going to question anybody's patriotism here, but we are going to question the commitment and what we need to do to protect the American people.

It is not about questioning it; it is about doing it. We are not going to pass a homeland security bill that ties the President's hands. It is not going to happen. And he will not sign it.

We are going to take action against Iraq to make sure their weapons of mass destruction are located and destroyed. If it takes regime change, this Congress, this Senate is already on record saying we support that.

I think it is time we get a grip on things. We have a lot of work to do. Here in the Senate, we are not moving anything. We are becoming totally dysfunctional. And now we are going to add to that the type of accusations we had here this morning?

We have 2 weeks and 2 days or so to do a lot of important work: the defense of our country, homeland security, economic security issues that we need to address—terrorism insurance. There is so much we need to do. I hope we will find a way to do those issues and get this discussion back on the right track.

I yield the floor, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARPER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, we have been hoping to move this process along. And I would hope that we would continue to have debate throughout the day on the Gramm and the Nelson amendments.

The Senator from Texas had noted earlier that he was desirous of an up-or-down vote. I would be prepared to provide that up-or-down vote. I am going to propound a unanimous consent request to accommodate that, so I will do so at this time.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on Senator NELSON's amendment at 10 o'clock in the morning, tomorrow, and that immediately after it has been disposed of, Senator GRAMM be recognized to offer a further second-degree amendment that is the text of amendment No. 4738, and that the Senate then vote immediately in relation to Senator GRAMM's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, all we have asked for, from the very beginning, is to have an opportunity to have an up-or-down vote on the President's proposal, not having an up-or-down vote on it as amended by somebody else.

The Senator has every right to amend it. It just seems to me, in a wartime situation, when the President has proposed a compromise and has asked that we vote on it, that we ought to do that. And on that basis, I will object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have a hard time understanding the basis for the Senator's objection. We have offered him an up-or-down vote on his amendment, just as he has suggested.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the majority leader yield?

I am going to help the majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. I will yield in just a moment.

MOTION TO COMMIT

Mr. President, I do not see that we have any other option, then.

To ensure that we keep in place the current parliamentary circumstances that we have legislatively, I move to commit the bill to the Governmental Affairs Committee and that it be reported back forthwith with the Lieberman amendment No. 4471, as amended, pending. And I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is before the Senate.

Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4742 TO THE INSTRUCTIONS OF THE MOTION TO COMMIT H.R. 5005 TO THE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] proposes an amendment numbered 4742 to the instructions of the motion to commit H.R. 5005 to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

At the moment there is not a sufficient second.

Mr. DASCHLE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4743 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4742

(Purpose: To modify certain personnel provisions, and for other purposes.)

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. DASCHLE] proposes an amendment numbered 4743.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. DASCHLE. I yield the floor,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be listed as a cosponsor of the bipartisan Gramm-Miller substitute and rise to speak in favor of that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4738

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I believe the proposal of Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER represents our best hope of passing legislation this year to put a new Homeland Security Department in place.

The Gramm-Miller substitute addresses the legitimate policy concerns of many Senators on both sides of the aisle while also giving the President the flexibility and the authority he needs to put together and run a Homeland Security Department that fulfills its primary mission—defending our people and our Nation.

This amendment is a good, bipartisan compromise. It contains a number of provisions from the original bill reported out of the Governmental Affairs Committee. It also contains the bulk of what the President has asked.

As a member of the Governmental Affairs Committee, I would like to take a few minutes to talk about what I see as the strengths of this proposal as well as the weaknesses of the Democratic proposal and why it is imperative that we pass Gramm-Miller now.

One of the most important things this bipartisan amendment does not do is, it does not take away important Presidential national security authority when this country is in the middle of a war. Going back to the markup of the homeland security bill in committee, many of us argued that the President needs to have the maximum flexibility to effectively administer a Homeland Security Department. We are fighting a new type of war. The Department is going to have to be nimble. Officials there are going to have to be able to react to events at home and abroad on a moment's notice. The President must have the ability to make decisions and move resources around to fight an enemy that has spread throughout the world and could attack us from any point.

Every President since Jimmy Carter has had more discretion in running agencies that were involved in national security. For instance, over the past 30 years, every single President, Republican or Democrat, has been able to declare, and actually has declared, that some civil servants are exempt from collective bargaining rules that apply to other agencies. The Democratic bill would change that when it comes to homeland security.

Let me be clear: The employees at the new Department are going to have a very important job to do. They deserve our respect and our support. But to go as far as to give the President less authority over them and to put more bureaucratic rules into place is to distract from the reason we are debating this legislation in the first place.

We need to make sure these employees have the resources to do the job. We need to make sure the President has the same ability. To give him less authority is the exact opposite of what we need to do.

In short, that means the Democratic proposal would actually give the President less flexibility than he already has under current law. That is crazy. There is no reason to have this debate if we are only going to talk about making it harder, not easier, for the President to lead us in the war on terrorism.

This debate is supposed to be about crafting rules and building a new Department to help fight the war on terrorism. It is not supposed to be a debate about rolling back the clock to an outdated way of thinking about labor and management relationships.

I have said throughout this debate that if the choice comes down to national security versus more redtape and rules, national security must win every time.

Instead, what the Gramm-Miller proposal would do is give the President necessary management and personnel flexibility to allow him to integrate the pieces of many standing agencies into a new Homeland Security Department. This is going to be an awesome task we are undertaking. We are talking about taking bits and pieces from literally dozens of current agencies and quickly fitting them together into an effective unit called the Department of Homeland Security.

That job is going to be an even harder one if we continue to focus on old rules and redtape instead of how to fashion a new and flexible agency to fight a war in the 21st century.

Another reason to support Gramm-Miller and to oppose the Democratic bill or any substitute for it is the forward-thinking parts of the bipartisan bill when it comes to civil service and personnel issues. For instance, Gramm-Miller gives the President flexibility when it comes to management decisions relating to hiring, evaluating, and compensating. Democratic opponents look at this and see the glass is half empty. They claim it is a pretext for cracking down on workers. I see the glass as half full and view these reforms as a way for the President and the others to reward those employees who do a good job and provide the flexibility to hire the best and brightest for this new Department. After all, we are talking about defending our Nation and our people. Employees who do a good job as part of that should be rewarded. Those who do not should either be disciplined or fired.

At the same time, Gramm-Miller also retains whistleblower protection and a full range of employee benefits and protections. I understand it might not be everything the Government unions want, but it is still a very good deal.

Gramm-Miller is also on the right track when it gives the President extra authority to transfer funding and responsibilities to the Homeland Security Department. Right now his hands are often tied by redtape, but if we were to have another 9/11 disaster, if we were to see another attack, the President would need more authority to act quickly when it comes to moving around funds and responsibilities to make sure we respond as rapidly as possible.

I know some of my colleagues worry about this new authority. They think we are going too fast and that Congress would be giving away some of its constitutional authority. I totally disagree. Gramm-Miller specifically says that as to the biggest changes, the President would ask Congress for permission by submitting a resolution to the House and to the Senate and that we would have 90 days to act. That is the type of consultation with which I am comfortable.

Obviously, we have to respect the separation of powers as well as Congress's power of the purse and our powers to declare what role they are going to play. We can do this while at the same time giving the President more tools to effectively administer the Federal bureaucracy.

My friends on the other side of the aisle who oppose Gramm-Miller have also thrown out a couple of other red herrings when it comes to labor and personnel issues. They have tried to fall back on the notion that the proposal would undercut the Davis-Bacon rules covering prevailing wage on Government construction projects. But the fact is that Gramm-Miller is neutral on this issue and explicitly does not address it.

They also try to make the claim that supporters of Gramm-Miller are using it as some devious way to undercut, in a broad manner, rights under the Federal Labor Relations Act. Again, this just is not true.

The President does have the right under Gramm-Miller to exempt applications of the rules on a limited basis but only—but only—if national security is involved. That sounds reasonable, and I believe most of the American people, if given a choice between tying the President's hands with labor negotiations or giving him the ability to act for national security, would give him the benefit of the doubt.

When you get beyond the debate about broad policies and personnel issues, Gramm-Miller also makes sense when it comes to the nuts and bolts of making changes to specific departments and agencies.

For example, when reorganizing the Customs Service under the new Homeland Security Department, the Democratic bill would provide for the transfer of Customs to the Homeland Security Department but at the same time also requires it to be maintained as a distinct entity within the Border and Transportation Security Directorate.

That also makes no sense. Customs cannot be in two places at one time. It is either a part of homeland security or it is not. There is no other way I can see how it can function effectively by splitting its resources and focusing among two agencies.

The only reason I can see that the Democratic bill does it this way is to protect turf, but all this would do is to protect the same old stovepipe system and personnel we have now, but under different names. If anything, moving Customs into two different agencies might make things worse.

Instead, Gramm-Miller would transfer Customs to homeland security and reserve at Treasury the limited right to issue regulations covering some of the Customs' revenue functions. That seems like a much more sensible and workable solution to me.

I know it might not be popular in the bureaucracy, and there might be some at Treasury and Customs who are resisting this change, but if it is a choice between keeping the status quo or some sort of warped version of it to save the bureaucratic face to protect turf, then I have no problem in upsetting the applecart and supporting a new streamlined approach to Government.

Another example of what I am talking about is how the competing proposal deals with FEMA. The Democratic bill moves FEMA to a new Department as a "distinct entity" that cannot be reorganized or merged.

The Gramm-Miller bill simply moves FEMA to the Homeland Security Department.

I do not even understand what the Democrat bill is trying to do here. It claims to move FEMA to Homeland and to give the Secretary some authority over it. But at the same time it says that FEMA cannot be reorganized or improved.

This is a distinction without a difference. Either FEMA is part of Homeland or it isn't.

Either the new Secretary has the authority over FEMA and the ability to put its resources to work or he doesn't.

The Democrat bill tries to tiptoe around the issue so that it does not step on toes. But when it comes to war and fighting terrorists, it is time to step boldly.

Instead of talking about shades of gray and playing word games, we need to start looking at the world in black and white and acting boldly.

In other areas, Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER have gone out of their way to adopt workable sections of the Democrat bill and to compromise.

For instance, Gramm-Miller adopts the Democrat bill's language when it comes to Freedom of Information Act issues and the law enforcement powers of inspector agents.

These might seem small, but especially with FOIA I know that many of my colleagues were worried about accountability of the new Department, and I appreciate the bipartisan efforts to reach across the aisle from Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER.

Gramm-Miller also borrows from the Democrat bill when it comes to provisions covering Federal workforce improvement and adopting reforms worked out in the Governmental Affairs Committees by Senator VOINOVICH and Senator AKAKA.

It accepts all of the Democrat proposal when it comes to emergency procurement authority.

On the subject of Administration of the Centers for Disease Control, it also accepts all of the Democrat proposal.

Gramm-Miller proposes effective immigration reforms by adopting the Democrat bill's proposal to create an Immigration Affairs directorate within the new Department and to transfer the Immigration and Naturalization Service to it.

Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER also accept, with only minor changes, the Democrat's proposal to modify the Coast Guard's mission and reforms the rules that cover how we issue visas.

In short, Gramm-Miller has tried to take the best and most acceptable parts of the Democrat bill while also maintaining the flexibility and some of management proposals that the President says he needs.

For instance, the President's plan provides for unified intelligence analysis and infrastructure protection in one organization.

This would have a single agency responsible for providing both threat assessments and vulnerability analysis. Nowhere in the Government does this currently take place. This plan would fill that gap.

As the current Joint Intelligence Committee hearings have shown the last several days, our intelligence community needs some work.

Most importantly, information about what is going on in this country needs the most work, and information about what our own weaknesses are is largely nonexistent. This amendment would allow these two types of analysis to come together and provide the most accurate information about what we need to do as a Nation to protect ourselves domestically.

We have been at loggerheads on this legislation for almost 4 weeks now.

I think we know it is getting down to crunch time and it is time to compromise. That is what Gramm-Miller does.

No one is going to get everything of what they want and the time before adjournment is shrinking rapidly.

I think it is time to move beyond confrontation and toward a workable compromise that will allow us to put an effective Homeland Security Department into place now.

I know that some Members think we are moving too fast and they want to spend more time debating the bill.

I think that is the wrong way to look at this situation.

Obviously, we have to get things right in building the new Department. But at the same time, we all know that if we can come up short we come back and fix things down the road. I do not think anyone seriously doubts that if we pass a bill that needs to be tweaked down the road that the Congress is going to drag its feet on such an important national security issue.

We owe it to ourselves and the American people to finish work on this bill. We have been debating it for close to a month. Before that, it was subject to some public debate during the August recess and during the Government Affairs Committee markup in July. We have had over 15 hearings on this bill.

We are not reinventing the wheel. We have had a good debate. I think we have a good handle on this bill and now it is time to vote.

If we are worried about making mistakes or not passing a perfect bill we will be here until doomsday—literally.

This is a complicated issue. There are bound to be mistakes. But I think we are on the verge of getting much of it right, and on many levels we will not know for sure how to make the Department work until we get it up and running and see where the shortcomings are.

So let's get started. The people who will staff this new Department are already out there, trying their best to protect America.

They are dedicated public servants who make many sacrifices to serve this Nation and their fellow citizens, but right now they are spread throughout the Government.

It is time to bring them together and to harness their collective talents for the national good.

There is an old phrase that says one should either leads, follow, or get out of the way. Right now we are doing none of those things. We in Congress need to start leading

The President has been pretty clear about what he needs to administer the new Department.

He has told us what he can accept and what he has to veto.

The House has acted, and now I think a bipartisan majority in the Senate ought to be ready to act.

We can continue talking or try to pass a political bill that the President will send right back to us.

Instead, we should adopt Gramm-Miller. It is a good starting point—a solid, consensus bill.

It borrows the ideas from competing bills, and as the only bipartisan bill it offers common sense solutions when it comes to building the Department of Homeland Security.

I urge my colleagues to support it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, before the Senator from Kentucky leaves the floor, I, as all Senators, I am sure, feel very fortunate to be able to serve in the Senate. One reason is the associations we develop with our fellow Senators. One of the things I haven't had a chance to say publicly, or even privately, to the Senator from Kentucky is how much I enjoy serving with him.

As a boy, I used to listen to baseball games—no television; we used to listen to the games. Of course, JIM BUNNING was one of the people who pitched those great ball games. Then, of course, I watched him do all the great things he did later on. And now, to serve in the Senate with a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame, for somebody who wanted to be a baseball player—that was what I wanted to be until I found out I wasn't good enough—is really one of the pleasures of my life—to say I served with somebody who is in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Mr. President, I will send a cloture motion to the desk.

Mr. BUNNING. Will the Senator yield?

Now you have switched your allegiance to a fellow who lives in your home State?

Mr. REID. I have to admit I did give a statement on the floor the day before yesterday about another great pitcher who certainly will be a member of the Hall of Fame, Greg Maddux. In my statement, I said Greg Maddux is less than 6 feet tall, weighs maybe 10 pounds more than I do—not very big, clearly not as big as the Senator from Kentucky. The Senator from Kentucky hasn't gained much weight, if any, from the time he pitched. Greg Maddux is one of the great ones. On Sunday he won his 272nd game. He has an ERA lifetime of about 2.5. He tied Cy Young's record of winning 15 games 15 years in a row.

One of the interesting things I learned was that, as a 20-year-old, when he came up to the majors, the second game he won, he pitched against his brother Mike, and beat him. Mike played for the Cincinnati Reds at the time when he beat him.

I haven't switched my allegiance. I can have allegiance for more than one great baseball player.

Mr. BUNNING. I thank the Senator.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under Rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

> CLOTURE MOTION
>
> We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close the debate on the Gramm-Miller amendment No. 4738 to H.R. 5005, the Homeland Security legislation.
>

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Because of the parliamentary matters we have been going through this afternoon, a number of Senators have come to the floor and have wanted to speak and have been prevented from doing that. Therefore, I hope things will run a little more smoothly this afternoon.

I ask unanimous consent the Senator from Utah, Mr. HATCH, be recognized for up to 15 minutes, Senator NELSON be then recognized for up to 10 minutes, and Senator NICKLES for 10 minutes. He told me that is what he wanted. Then, Senator VOINOVICH waited here all morning and part of the afternoon. I ask that he then be recognized for up to 35 minutes to speak and that then Senator LIEBERMAN, the manager of this bill, be recognized after that for up to 30 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. In that order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I personally want to express my regard for the distinguished Senator from Kentucky and his excellent remarks today. I think he covered the problems quite well. I personally appreciate the friendship we have together and the great leadership he provides in the Senate. I think he did a very good job. I agree with him.

Mr. President, every Member of this body, and every citizen in this country, knows that the most critical issue facing our Nation today is the task of securing our homeland and protecting our country from further terrorist attacks. The enormousness of this task cannot be overstated; and its implementation is equal measures vexing and daunting. But we must rise to the challenge. And we must do so together. No less than the lives of our citizens and the security of our nation hangs in the balance.

With regard to this, I pay my compliments to the distinguished Senator from Georgia who gave a speech this morning that was really very good. Senator MILLER, it seems to me, has made a real effort to bridge the gap between Democrats and Republicans on the floor and otherwise. His remarks were just absolutely right on the money. I personally express my regards for his remarks and express my love and affection for him as a Senator. He is a good man, and we ought to listen to him.

I speak today out of a spirit of bipartisanship. I am proud of the way that Congress has come together on issues of national security since the horrific attacks of September 11. In the wake of these tragic events, members of the Judiciary Committee and Congress worked tirelessly to provide the Attorney General with the tools necessary to fight terrorism worldwide and protect our country. Specifically, we passed the PATRIOT Act, a critical set of reforms needed to unleash our government's ability to detect and prevent terrorist attacks, by an near-unanimous vote of 99–1. It is my hope that enough of that robust bipartisan spirit remains today as we consider the landmark legislation to create the Department of Homeland Security. As we have just passed the anniversary of the terrorist attacks that killed thousands of innocent Americans, such a sentiment is not just sorely welcome; it is also fundamental and necessary and appropriate.

Today, we face a significant new type of military threat, one far different than post-World War II communism. We face today the danger of numerous, well-financed, well-trained and completely ruthless terrorist groups who will stop at nothing to cross our borders and attack our institutions, infrastructures, people and freedoms with all types of weapons. They engage in unconventional warfare and are bound by no rules. I speak not of just al-Qaida but many other terrorist groups. The creation of the new Homeland Security Department is a massive task precisely because the terrorist threat is so pressing and pernicious.

The proposal to create a new Homeland Security Department is the next logical and necessary step in our country's war against terrorism. In my view, there are several components that are critical to ensuring its success.

One of these involves our intelligence practices. In the aftermath of September 11, it is abundantly clear that we must improve the gathering, sharing, and analyzing of information within and among our Federal, State and local agencies. Our nation clearly needs to have a centralized office that is responsible for reviewing all of the terrorism-related information that collected by any agency, be it the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, or one of the others. The Homeland Security Department is a critical step to ensuring that intelligence information is comprehensively collected, analyzed and disseminated. We must be sure not to handcuff the new Department's ability to do its job in this area. In particular, we must take pains to ensure that we do not unnecessarily limit the use of this intelligence within the new Department. The stakes are simply too high to place artificial constraints on this important function.

Another critical area involves managerial flexibility. The new Department of Homeland Security must be given the ability to hire and retain the very best people to do the work of keeping our country safe. We need to give the Secretary of Homeland Security such fundamental management powers as the ability to remove poor performers and reward exemplary employees with merit-based pay raises. Believe it or not, under our antiquated system of Federal employment rules, it can take five months to hire a new employee and 18 months to fire a terrible worker. Most Federal employees also get annual pay raises based on how long they have worked for the government, not how well they do their jobs. The vast majority of ordinary Americans don't have such outdated rules in their workplaces. There is absolutely no sound reason to move such inefficiencies to the new Department of Homeland Security. That is the current law. The bill before us even expands that.

Let me be clear: I am convinced that the vast majority of Federal workers do an outstanding job for our country. That is why I am not concerned with giving the Department of Homeland Security more managerial flexibility. Indeed, because most Federal workers do great work, they have nothing to fear and everything to gain from an improved system that allows their work to be rewarded through merit-based bonuses and raises. Only poor workers need be concerned, and they should be. Frankly, there is no place for underperforming or incompetent workers in the agency charged with protecting our safety. The new Department has the Herculean task of preventing terrorist attacks and keeping our country safe. I cannot imagine any reason why we would handicap it by imposing a system of rules that protect bad Federal workers at the expense of good ones and, more importantly, at the expense of our nation's safety. That is what the amendment to the bill by Senator GRAMM and Senator MILLER changes.

The need for flexibility, in my view, must run through every corner of the Department of Homeland Security. The very nature of our enemy is quick and deliberate action; terrorists are quick to change their members, associations, plans, training bases, and destructive methods. Terrorists, moreover, come in many different shapes, colors and ideological bents. We must equip our security forces with the ability to be similarly adaptable. The Department simply must have the ability to adapt itself to a constantly changing enemy threat. We will fail our task miserably if all we end up doing is reorganizing dozens of inflexible agencies into a new titular Department of Homeland Security. If the Secretary of Homeland Security is required to keep intact within the Department each of the individual agency's personnel, components, budgets and rules, then we don't have a new department—just a hodgepodge of independent agencies. We will have created just another layer of bureaucracy. That cannot be our goal. That cannot constitute effective governance. For this reason, I think it is absolutely essential that we give the Secretary of Homeland Security the ability to move personnel, assets and money to best meet the rapidly shifting terrain of terrorist threats.

We all recognize that the war against terrorism cannot be won simply by reorganizing existing government agencies into a Department of Homeland Security. That Department must be equipped with the tools to complete its task. Moreover, it is essential that we tap into the resources and expertise of America's private sector. The new Department must enlist the aid and expertise of America's businesses to enhance our nation's security, and I am committed to making sure that the new Department is able to receive the uninhibited advice and counsel of our business leaders. It is private businesses which own and operate most of our infrastructure—our telecommunications, energy and financial systems. Our government cannot effectively fight this war against terrorism without their support. We must arm our agencies with the best technologies available, and our private sector is a critical player in this process, as it has been in our national defense and military. Our war against terrorism would be hopeless without the active innovation and support of private industries. We must also recognize that the private sector cannot realistically step up to help wage our fight against terrorism without some reasonable protection from frivolous tort litigation.

Congress must act and must do so quickly and carefully without political gamesmanship. Our task is too important; we cannot afford to sacrifice our country's safety in the process. The threat of terrorist attacks on our homeland, as well as abroad, is here to stay. Our response to this threat requires a singleness of focus. All of us in Government have a duty to do all we can to protect the American people from future terrorist attacks.

I have spent considerable time considering the tools that the new Department of Homeland Security simply must have to create an effective system of protecting our borders from terrorism. Having done so, I have reluctantly concluded that I cannot support Senator LIEBERMAN's proposal, which simply cobbles together dozens of disparate agencies without any mechanism for adapting their personnel and missions to meet the challenge of the new Department. On the other hand, I find myself in great agreement with the central proposals of the Gramm-Miller bill. It is a bipartisan measure. And, as all bipartisan bills, it represents a series of compromises. But, I am convinced. the compromises will not, in my view, detract from the core ability of the Department to do its job and protect American lives. Critically, the Gramm-Miller bill provides enough flexibility for the President and the Secretary of Homeland Security to respond to an ever-changing, multi-headed threat.

The task of guarding against terrorism is immense; the risk of failure is enormous. We simply cannot be bound by partisan interest groups in this time of war and crisis. Let us join together to pass the bipartisan Gramm-Miller bill so that we can feel certain that we have done all we possibly could to protect the mothers, fathers and children for whom each of us work.

The same considerations that compel me to support the Gramm-Miller bill cause me to oppose the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment. While this amendment is a slight improvement from the Lieberman substitute, it still ties the President's hands much too much. Like the Lieberman substitute, the proposal cuts back on the President's existing authority to decertify the union affiliation for workers in the new Department in the interests of national security. This would be a step back under any circumstances; it certainly is not a forward-thinking way of creating a successful new Department of Homeland Security. Moreover, the amendment allows the unions to arbitrate any attempt by the President to loosen the civil service rules governing promotions and dismissals. I think I need to be entirely candid on this issue: how many members of this body would feel good about these rules if it took us 5 months to hire a staffer and 18 months to fire an incompetent one? How many of us would stand up and support such a system if it affected the way we do business?

There is not one of us who would do that. And that is what we will get if we have the underlying bill.

In all honesty, I think it is time to bring this matter to a close.

I personally have seen how the majority has loaded up the tree with a bunch of Democrat amendments in an attempt to prevent a vote on the Gramm-Miller amendment. We intend to have a vote on the Gramm-Miller amendment, and the sooner the better. It may be that the majority will win on that amendment; it may be that they won't. But that is the nature of the process around here. We can't keep playing parliamentary games with homeland security. That is what is going on around here. That is the reason I have come to the floor. I don't come to the floor that often to raise Cain. And I am not raising Cain here, I am just speaking frankly.

I think it is time for us to get about voting on these two different aspects of the bill. We ought to vote on the Gramm-Miller bill. There will have to be a vote on it. We ought to vote on the underlying bill, if that is the case—the Lieberman bill. I am not objecting to that. I don't think our side is objecting, nor is our side filibustering. We just want to be treated in a decent, honorable fashion; that is, give us a vote on the Gramm-Miller amendment, or the Gramm-Miller substitute, to put it in better terms.

I get a little tired of politics around here, especially now that we are dealing with homeland security. That is what the President was criticizing. I hate to say this, but I saw the remarks of the distinguished majority leader earlier. It was on all three cable networks, as far as I could tell. Those remarks implied that the President was politicizing Democrats. That is not the case. The President did say we are muddling around here. He didn't say it in those terms. I will put it in these terms—muddling around with this homeland security bill instead of voting up or down and getting the job done.

That is what we need to do. We don't need to have any distortions of what the President said or what Vice President CHENEY said.

That is what I think, unfortunately—I am sure it was sincere and well intentioned—was a distortion, but it is still a distortion.

I think it is time we get rid of those types of attempts to have political games at the expense of a bill of this importance. That is what the President is driven by.

After seeing all the weeks that we have been on this bill, I think the President is justified in his criticism.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I appreciate the opportunity to rise in support of the Nelson-Breaux-Chafee amendment which is a bipartisan compromise on homeland security.

I believe perhaps some clarification is in order because there seems to be some misinformation or misunderstanding about what this bill does.

My good friend from Utah said the amendment ties the President's hands. We have looked very carefully at existing authority that the President has in similar circumstances at this very moment. And it doesn't tie the President's hands.

I must say Nebraska is going to be playing Texas at Texas A&M. My good friend from Texas is my hunting partner. Senator GRAMM is not going to move the goalposts down in Texas when we play A&M. We are not going to move the goalposts on Texas when Texas plays in Lincoln. I don't think it is about moving goalposts in athletic events. But I believe on this amendment we have had the goalposts moved on us.

Just recently, while I was presiding, Senator GRAMM, in talking about the Lieberman bill, referred to the fact that it was too restrictive on the President's authority in the area of collective rights and bargaining rights, or in terms of civil service protection. At that point, he believed it tied the President's hands in dealing with these very important issues when it comes to national security.

It was partly as a result of his comments at that time that I thought we would try to find a compromise that could deal with the situation.

Let me read from some of Senator GRAMM's comments that he made on the floor, I believe, just last week.

He was talking about the fact that when we decided to federalize inspectors at airports, in that bill we gave the President power in terms of personnel flexibility to hire and fire, and we gave him the ability to get around the normal procedures that require up to 6 months to hire somebody. Then he goes on to say we have done that same sort of thing in the Federal Aviation Administration.

Then he goes on and references the Internal Revenue Service. I quote:

> I ask my colleagues: If we believed that the current system was failing us in the Internal Revenue Service and that we had a problem which required a different approach and more flexibility with regard to our sensitivity at the Internal Revenue Service with people who know our intimate financial information and who look at our tax returns. If we believed that flexibility to administer that Department was necessary—and we did, and we adopted it and it is the law of the land today—I wonder what people back home would think when we said we thought flexibility was required at the Internal Revenue Service. . . .

In other words, he says what we did in the Internal Revenue Service reorganization was OK.

That is what he said last week.

Well, lo and behold, because of his commitment to that particular flexibility, that is exactly the kind of language and that is the reference we have in this amendment.

If it was good enough for last week, it seems to me it ought to still be good enough for this week and next week and the week thereafter.

So if this isn't moving the goalposts, it is at least shifting around on the answers. And I believe that what was good enough last week, and what is good enough for the Internal Revenue Service to deal with flexibility, is good enough for homeland security.

Then the White House, through various spokespersons, has raised a question about whether the President's hands would be tied with what we are proposing.

But lo and behold, Governor Ridge—who took advantage of me with a bet on the Penn State-Nebraska game, which I shall pay him very vividly for—went ahead and said something in his letter to Senator LIEBERMAN that I thought was important.

This is in his letter dated September 5, 2002:

> Senator, the President seeks for this new Department the same management prerogatives that Congress has provided other departments and agencies throughout the Executive Branch. For example:
>
> . . . personnel flexibility is currently enjoyed by the Federal Aviation Administration—

And guess what—> the Internal Revenue Service, and the Transportation Security Administration.

I do not know what has changed since September 3 or last week, because we thought this would be acceptable, given the fact that the President needs the kind of historic personnel flexibility he is seeking.

So for those who said we are changing the laws, or we are somehow restricting the Presidential authority, or tying the President's hands by changing the law, apparently they have not focused on what the current status of the law is because they are asking for what we are trying to provide them at the present time.

Now, I don't know whether someone hasn't read the amendment, but some of the criticisms I have heard of the amendment would indicate they saw a previous iteration. It seems to me the current state of affairs with our amendment would be directly on point or on all fours with what has been asked.

So I am very anxious to see if we can get a clarification because I think it has to be some sort of a simple mistake. I cannot believe that we have been asked to do something, or it has been suggested that this would be OK, and then, when we offer it, that somebody cannot take yes for an answer. I hope this will be clarified.

It is also important to say that binding arbitration and personnel flexibility is part of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, which both Governor Ridge and Senator GRAMM have suggested was OK. So it seems to me that whether it was binding arbitration, personnel flexibility, or, in the case of Presidential authority, in terms of exempting union membership, union employees, from collective bargaining membership, we have done exactly what others have been asking us to do.

So it seems to me that if the people are as anxious as they seem to be, both in the administration and on the other side of the aisle, to get the Gramm-Miller amendment considered, the first step is to pass or at least have a vote on Nelson-Breaux-Chafee because it will, in fact, give us an opportunity to have that vote, and I think another vote shortly thereafter, if necessary, on Gramm-Miller.

I do not know what more a person can do today than give the other side the kind of answers they are seeking and the kind of solution for which they have been asking. I hope this will be clarified. If there are some misunderstandings—as I think it may be a simple misunderstanding—I hope some other people will show up and respond to what we have put out there at this point in time.

Very often, misinformation, a lack of information, mischaracterizations, and things such as that can drive the day. I hope they do not drive this day. National security is too important, and passing this homeland security legislation is of the utmost importance.

So for those who are suggesting there is any effort to delay it or in some way tie the President's hands, this simply does not do it. It is consistent with existing law, and it gives the President ample authority to do what the President needs to do for personnel, for collective bargaining, and for breaking the logjam in the homeland security debate, which is so important to the future of our country.

Passion runs deep: passion about Iraq, passion about homeland security, passion about getting something done as quickly as possible. I hope we can use that passion as a basis to accomplish something.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise to speak for a little bit of time until Senator NICKLES from Oklahoma arrives, and ask unanimous consent that he then be permitted to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I simply want to respond, very briefly, to what I saw this morning on the television when I was observing the activity on the floor.

I saw the majority leader come to the floor and give what I thought were very intemperate remarks suggesting that—not suggesting—demanding that the President of the United States apologize, allegedly for politicizing the war effort.

My belief, after looking at all of the transcripts of the comments that were attributed to the President and the Vice President—and I have them all right here, as well as the newspaper accounts of the same—it suggests to me that it is not the President but the distinguished majority leader who needs to apologize.

I say that because it is very clear the President has not politicized anything with respect to this war. The comments in which he criticized the Senate—and I believe rightly so—have to do with our failure to adopt a homeland security bill. And he referred to the special interests that have been involved in impeding action on the bill, and complained about the fact that the Senate has not followed the leadership of the House and passed a bill.

As a matter of fact, earlier today the Senate precluded a vote on the President's plan. When Senator GRAMM sought to have an opportunity to vote on the President's plan, that was turned down.

So we have a situation in which the Senate, for the fourth week now, is debating the homeland security bill—has not passed it, will not even let the President have a vote on his proposal—and the majority leader suggests the President is politicizing national security.

The President is right to complain about that. But what the President did not do was to connect any activity of the Senate, or Democrats in the Senate—or anybody else, for that matter—to the war effort, as was inferred by the majority leader.

The majority leader attempted to take quotations that dealt with homeland security and transform them somehow or other into criticism of Democrats in the policy with respect to Iraq. And that simply is not true. It did not happen. For that reason, as I say, it seems to me the majority leader ought to be the one offering the apology, not the President.

I had been talking, just before watching this, about the damage that was being done to the attempts by the President to reach an international consensus in developing a plan for dealing with Iraq by the comments of German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder during his election. And both Dr. Rice and Secretary Rumsfeld have noted the fact that those comments were not helpful and poisoned the atmosphere.

They poisoned the atmosphere internationally by, in effect, confirming what Saddam Hussein is saying, that the President is acting out of political motives rather than out of a desire to achieve peace in the world. When the distinguished majority leader comes to the Senate floor and seemingly validates those same criticisms of the President, he is further poisoning the atmosphere.

That is another reason why he owes the President an apology. He is literally politicizing the issue in a way that is destructive to the President's attempt to achieve an international consensus.

I find it ironic because it is the other party that has sought to assure the President would gain that consensus internationally, many of them suggesting that is necessary before we act, and then that very attempt is being undermined as a result of the comments made here.

Mr. ROBERTS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. KYL. I am happy to yield.

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask the Senator from Arizona if he is aware, along the same vein of comments that were made by the distinguished majority leader in reference to the Vice President—I share the same concern he has mentioned—is the Senator aware when the Vice President was in Kansas, basically they are accusing the Vice President of politics in regard to the Iraq debate in urging an audience in Kansas to vote for a GOP congressional candidate?

Mr. KYL. I am aware of the fact the majority leader alluded to that. But he was only looking at a headline in a newspaper. I know the Senator from Kansas was actually at the event.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would respond to the Senator by simply indicating, there is nothing that hurts the truth more than stretching it.

I understand if somebody reads a headline and gets upset about it. I would, too. But the headlines I have from the Kansas press—and the Senator is correct; I was at the meeting and introduced the candidate. The candidate introduced Lynne Cheney, the wife of the Vice President. The Vice President gave a very standard speech. Here is the headline, "Cheney Talks About Iraq at Congressional Fundraiser." He said that our candidate would be "an effective voice for Kansas, a fine addition to your State delegation, which is already one of the best in the country," which I appreciated. But I find nothing here that has anything to do with politics.

And then here is another one, "Fundraiser for Taff Draws 500." From the Kansas City Star, "Cheney Talks Tough at Taff Fundraiser." But the two things were separated. It was a very sobering discussion on the policy of preemption and what we face in Iraq.

As a matter of fact, the Vice President, in a private session, said the Congress ought to be asking tough questions, which we are, and urged bipartisan support. I heard every word. For the life of me, I just did not hear that kind of inference at all. I wanted to come to the floor—I thank the Senator for yielding to me—to indicate that simply was not the case. If we are into a situation where we are inferring we are trying to politicize this effort, that is not the case with the Vice President. We can't be in the business of the security of the American people and sending wrong messages to Saddam Hussein unless we get the facts straight.

In doing that, I am not trying to perjure the intent or the concern of the distinguished majority leader. It just did not happen. I wanted to set the record straight.

Mr. KYL. I appreciate that from the Senator from Kansas. I know the majority leader this morning a little bit later, in talking to reporters in response to a question, said he was relying upon the newspaper accounts of what had been said. But I suggest that while that might ordinarily be all right, the press can make mistakes, and when you are accusing the President of politicizing a war effort, you better be correct. We have gone back and actually looked at the stories, and the Senator from Kansas makes a point, too. The Vice President is a very careful person. He is not prone to politicizing things.

I will conclude by saying it is very important for us to keep our eye on who the enemy is. The enemy is the terrorists. The enemy is Saddam Hussein. The enemy for none of this is President Bush. I don't think we should be raising questions or throwing around allegations that undercut what ought to be a common effort from everybody in this country as well as this body to ensure we have the kind of consensus that will enable us to prosecute whatever war we prosecute in a way that enjoys both support in the United States and abroad. The kind of tirade entered into here this morning undercuts that effort. It does not assist.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to add 10 minutes to the time allocated to me under the order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about the Lieberman homeland security bill, the Gramm-Miller amendment, and the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment to that amendment.

Before I do that, I will comment on the fact I am really disturbed at what I see going on here in the Senate in terms of the President of the United States. Our President has more on his plate than perhaps any President in my memory. He has the Middle East situation. I have been studying that for 20 years. That is more fragile than I have ever seen it during my lifetime.

We are in Afghanistan. We have forgotten we are there. That is a major undertaking. We are trying to work diplomatically to make sure Pakistan does not go after India and India after Pakistan, which could embroil us in a nuclear situation.

We have a problem with Saddam Hussein in Iraq. We have a domestic economy in bad shape today. People in this country are losing faith in our financial markets. We are in a very fragile, shaky period.

What we should be doing in the Senate is rallying to the cause to try and be as supportive as we can of the President, who is trying to rally the world and the United Nations and our allies in dealing in a responsible way with Saddam Hussein, who has thumbed his nose at us for so many years and has set up a new paradigm in terms of the United Nations where they will work together to make it very clear they will not tolerate people such as Saddam Hussein.

I was going to say it is business as usual in the Senate; I just wish it were business as usual. I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will start to understand the American people are watching what we are doing here, and it is important that we behave in a way that gives them confidence that we are more interested in moving our country ahead than we are in partisan politics.

HUMAN CAPITAL AND THE FEDERAL WORKFORCE

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, since my election to the Senate in 1998, I have given top priority to a public policy issue that seldom gets the attention it deserves: The challenges of our Federal Government's civil service system.

For nearly 4 years, I have used my position as a member of the Governmental Affairs Committee and chairman and ranking member of the Oversight of Government Management Subcommittee, to focus the spotlight on this critically important issue. As I learned more about the condition of our Federal Government's personnel system, it became crystal clear we are in the midst of a human capital crisis in the United States Government, one which will only get worse unless this Congress acts decisively to address it.

What is it? Is it real? Why do we have it? The human capital crisis is, simply stated, the inability of the Federal Government to properly manage its workforce. Robust personnel management includes the ability to recruit the best candidates, hire people in a timely manner, award performance bonuses and other motivational tools to encourage retention, provide training and professional development opportunities, and the flexibility to shape a balanced workforce.

Good management includes the flexibility to act quickly and to compete as an employer of choice in the fast-paced 21st century knowledge economy.

Unfortunately, at present, the Federal Government's ability to use such tools is not what it could be. By now, we have all heard the statistics, and maybe some of my colleagues have not heard them. The average Federal employee is 47 years old. By 2005, more than 50 percent of the 1.8 million person Federal workforce will be eligible for early or regular retirement.

Even more incredible is the fact that by 2005, 67 percent of the Senior Executive Service will be eligible for regular retirement, and an additional 21 percent will be able to retire early. This is an astounding 88 percent of our top-level workers, managers, department heads, and division chiefs.

I was talking to businesspeople this morning, and they said: "Explain to us what this is about."

I said: "Consider your own businesses. Say during the last 10 years you were eliminating employees without any regard for how that would affect your mission, or how high-tech manufacturing and information technology has changed your business. Then imagine half the remaining people working in your plant are going to retire soon. Then imagine that about 88 percent of your top managers are going to retire also. Where would you be today?" They got it.

I remind my colleagues, this dire predicament refers to what could happen in the next 2 to 3 years, but it is virtually impossible to predict accurately the amount of experience and institutional knowledge that is literally going to walk out the door at the end of this decade.

Some may ask: Is the human capital situation really that important? Is it really a crisis in the Federal Government?

Consider some additional evidence we have learned from officials in some of the agencies that handle national security and finances, such as the CIA, FBI, FEMA, Social Security Administration, and Department of Commerce.

CIA Director George Tenet, in recent congressional testimony, said within 3 years, between 30 and 40 percent of his workforce will have been there for less than 5 years.

According to a recent GAO report, more than 70 agencies have foreign language needs, and staff shortages at those agencies, such as the FBI, "have adversely affected agency operations and hindered U.S. military, law enforcement, intelligence, counterterrorism, and diplomatic efforts."

Mr. President, do you remember after 9/11? The call went out: We need people who can speak Arabic and Farsi. Incredible. Ten years after the Persian Gulf war, we remain actively involved in the Middle East, yet we do not have enough people who speak Farsi and Arabic in the FBI, the State Department, or the CIA.

At FEMA, retirements have accelerated since 9–11–2001 as employees have reevaluated priorities, and nearly 50 percent of the remaining workforce will be eligible for retirement in the next 18 months.

According to a recent Federal Times survey of more than 2,200 managers at our Social Security Administration, dramatic downsizing in the ranks of managers and front-line employees has hurt training, caused burnout, strained resources, reduced managers' effectiveness, and created disconnects between headquarters and field offices, all at a time when the agency's workload is skyrocketing.

According to GAO, the Department of Commerce is unable to effectively monitor U.S. trade laws with foreign countries due to a shortage of staff with the right expertise.

Mr. President, the evidence is clear. The Federal Government has a serious human capital crisis. That is why I have sought information from some of the best minds in the country over the past few years in public policy and management, and why I have spent so much time listening to the people closest to the problem.

Furthermore, Mr. President, I believe that if a Federal agency or department is important enough to receive the hard-earned tax dollars of my constituents and yours, we have a moral responsibility to see to it that the people's money is spent wisely. Outdated personnel practices and lack of training not only put agencies at risk of not being able to fulfill their mission and provide needed services to the American people, this also represents wasteful Federal spending. We simply must provide the flexibility agencies need and give them the right tools to do their work.

I have sought to attract attention to this issue at every opportunity. My subcommittee held 10 hearings from July 1999 to March of 2002. Two of those hearings were held by Chairman DURBIN, and I thank him for his willingness to work with me on this issue.

Earlier this year, Senator AKAKA held 2 days of legislative hearings on civil service reform. I also recognize his leadership and partnership on this issue. I sincerely appreciate their assistance in raising the profile of our pressing human capital challenges.

Also, in December of 2000, just before our new President took office, I released a comprehensive report on this subject "The Report to the President: The Crisis in Human Capital" which summarized our subcommittee's activities during the 106th Congress and made recommendations to the incoming administration on how to address the Government's human capital challenges.

Mr. President, I want you to know I have not been alone in my assessment of the situation. In 2001, Comptroller General of the United States David Walker designated human capital on the General Accounting Office's "High-Risk List." In the past, other areas that were on the list, such as the Y2K problem, the 2000 census, the Superfund Program, and the Department of Agriculture's farm loan programs, received attention and priority, and they no longer threaten the operations of the Federal Government. As Congress did with these issues, we must prioritize human capital; otherwise, this crisis will persist.

Dr. Joseph Nye, Dean of Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government, one of the top public policy schools in the Nation, also identified the Federal Government's human capital crisis as a critical issue. The problem truly hit home for his academic institution. During the nineties, increasing numbers of Kennedy School graduates, despite their top-notch graduate level training in public policy, chose employment in the private and nonprofit sectors rather than work for the Federal Government.

Dr. Nye noted he did not want the Kennedy School to be known as the second best business school in Cambridge! As a result, he organized a series of executive sessions during the 2001–2002 academic year, bringing together approximately 30 leaders on human capital management from the public, private, and nonprofit sectors: For example, professors from Harvard, Stanford, Wharton, CEOs, and former senior officials at the Departments of Treasury, Labor, Office of Federal Procurement Policy, and Office of Management and Budget. I attended three of the four sessions and found them productive and insightful.

In addition, the U.S. Commission on National Security in the 21st Century, a bipartisan group chaired by former Senators Gary Hart and Warren Rudman, released a series of reports providing a comprehensive evaluation of our national security posture.

We have been talking a lot about national security, haven't we? Their reports included many recommendations on homeland security which we are considering in this bill that is before the Senate. The Commission's final report concluded as follows:

> As it enters the 21st century, the United States finds itself on the brink of an unprecedented crisis of competence in Government.

Unprecedented crisis.

> The maintenance of American power in the world depends on the quality of the U.S. Government's personnel, civil and military, at all levels. We must take immediate action in the personnel area to ensure the United States can meet future challenges.

Furthermore, in his testimony before our committee, former Defense Secretary and member of the Commission James Schlesinger added:

> It is the Commission's view that fixing the personnel problem is a precondition for fixing virtually everything else that needs repair in the institutional edifice of U.S. national security policy.

Mr. President, yet another poignant illustration was offered by FEMA Director Joe Allbaugh when he testified before a Senate committee earlier this year. I note FEMA is one of the key agencies in the proposed Homeland Security Department. In describing his workforce needs, Director Allbaugh said:

We have not been spending enough time internally on our employees. Before 9/11, retention was a problem and there was essentially no recruitment. Over the next 18 months, nearly 50 percent of our agency is eligible for retirement, and since 9/11, retirements have accelerated. The people who worked at Ground Zero came to my office with a different perspective on life. They want to spend more time with their kids, grandkids, and spouses.

I think these comments represent the feelings of many Federal employees, and Director Allbaugh's testimony calls attention not only to the urgent need for reform of our civil service laws, but also for a completely new mindset for considering the Federal Government's personnel requirements and workforce culture.

Mr. President, if that is not a compelling call to address this issue, I do not know what is. Despite all the evidence that significant human capital challenges exist in the Federal Government, this issue has not received the attention it deserves. To its credit, the Bush administration has taken steps to raise the profile of this issue. In fact, strategic human capital management is one of the five governmentwide issues targeted for reform in the President's management agenda, which was released in August of 2001.

Having recently marked the 1-year anniversary of the horrendous and unprecedented terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, the Senate is considering legislation designed to reorganize our Federal Government in a way that will help our Nation prevent future such attacks.

Suddenly, in the context of this debate, civil service reform is the issue du jour. It is an issue which for years has not been substantively addressed except when agencies become dysfunctional. It is now front and center in the consideration of the most important Government reorganization to take place in our Nation in half a century. It is about time.

In the debate over homeland security, we have backed into this personnel issue that has demanded attention for so many years. At least we are finally taking the first step to address the problem by having a debate on the subject. We are talking about personnel practices and the people who make a difference for the Government and deliver the services.

Unfortunately, however, this debate is limited to the proposed Department and not to the needs of the entire Federal Government. The entire Federal Government needs new flexibilities. Congress last enacted major civil service legislation for the entire Federal Government 24 years ago in 1978. In today's fast-paced, high-tech world, the 1970s represent almost prehistoric times when people were still using typewriters and the only computers were mainframes. To operate effectively, the Federal Government cannot afford to revise its personnel laws only every quarter or half century. The basic classification and compensation system for the Federal Government dates back to World War II, when the professionals in the civil service had jobs as clerks and typists and were at GS levels 2 and 3. Today's civil service professionals are typically GS-12s and GS-13s. So much has changed over the years, and changing times require new thinking and new laws—policies that allow flexibility in our Federal Government civil service system.

The intellectual basis for one of the areas I have sought to reform, competitive hiring, dates back to the Grant administration! Back then, our soldiers were using single-shot, repeating rifles, the telegraph was cutting-edge communications technology, and the primary mode of transportation was the horse! That was when we started the "rule of three."

I know of no successful business anywhere in the world that is using a personnel system based on management theory that is more than 50 years old, or which dates from the Industrial Age.

During the 107th Congress, I have worked with some of the Nation's premier experts on public management to determine what new flexibilities are necessary to create a world-class 21st century workforce, and to draft legislation based on their insights. These individuals include some of our colleagues in Congress, including Senator AKAKA; officials of the Bush administration such as OPM Director Kay Coles James; former OMB Director Sean O'Keefe, who now heads up NASA; Clinton administration appointees who spent a lot of time on this, including Steve Kelman, the former Administrator of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy; and Elaine Kamarck, a domestic policy adviser to then-Vice President Gore—this is a bipartisan effort; Federal employee unions such as the American Federation of Government Employees, with their president, Bobby Harnage, and the National Treasury Employees Union, NTEU, and their president, Colleen Kelley; representatives of public policy organizations such as the Council for Excellence in Government, Partnership for Public Service, Private Sector Council, Brookings Institution, National Academy of Public Administration, and the Volcker Commission; and subject experts in some of our country's top educational institutions, including Dr. Jack Donahue of Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

I was especially attentive to the concerns of unions, making several significant changes to my draft legislation since last summer to allay their uneasiness with some of its flexibilities. I felt it was important. As someone who dealt with 25 unions when I was mayor, and with 5 unions when I was governor, I know it is important that unions be at the table and that their input be taken into consideration.

We made changes that include new language to clarify that the intent of my proposed early retirement and buyout authority is workforce reshaping, not the downsizing of the 90s; as well as the revision of removal of provisions that enjoyed strong support from other stakeholders, including the establishment of a public/private exchange program to cross-pollinate good management ideas between sectors of the economy.

In other words, we tried to accommodate the concerns of our union representatives.

Finally, Mr. President, I note that my bill was the subject of a letter to Chairman LIEBERMAN and other members of the Governmental Affairs Committee, a letter of support for the legislation was signed by 29 Kennedy School executive session participants. By combining my reform proposals with those of the administration, both of which I introduced last fall, I was able to develop a package of consensus human capital reforms that I believe will have a positive impact on the Federal Government's personnel management.

On June 20, along with Senators THOMPSON and COCHRAN, I introduced that consolidated bill, S. 2651, the Federal Workforce Improvement Act, a measure that is designed to get the right people with the right skills in the right jobs at the right time.

In July, during its consideration by the Governmental Affairs Committee, working with Senator AKAKA, I successfully amended key provisions of this bill to the homeland security legislation, and I really appreciate the bipartisan support we received for those changes. I am grateful to Senator AKAKA for that. I only wish we had put more of S. 2651 into the homeland security bill.

I hope as we wrap up homeland security—at least I hope we wrap it up, my colleagues will conclude we should adopt the rest of the provisions of S. 2651 in this important legislation.

Let us get it done all at once. The provisions we have already included will have an impact not only on the new Department but on all Federal agencies. The Voinovich-Akaka language will help the Federal Government begin to address its human capital challenges, challenges that extend far beyond the corridors of the proposed Department of Homeland Security. These flexibilities are not as comprehensive as what we were proposing for the new Department, but they represent a good start on the path of reform in this critical area that has not received adequate attention by past administrations or Congress.

It does the following: Creates Chief Human Capital Officers at the Federal Government's 24 largest departments and agencies, officials who have responsibility for selecting, developing, training and managing a high-quality workforce; establishes an Interagency Chief Human Capital Officers Council chaired by the OPM Director, to advise and coordinate the personnel functions of each agency and meet with union representatives at least annually; requires OPM to design a set of systems, including metrics, for assessing agencies' human capital management, something that has been largely ignored; reforms the competitive service hiring process, allowing agencies, consistent with merit principles, to use an alternative category ranking method for selecting new employees instead of the "Rule of 3," making the process more efficient and fair, a practice that has been very successful at the Department of Agriculture for the past decade; provides governmentwide authority for offering voluntary separation incentive payments and voluntary early retirement, buyouts and early-outs, for the purposes of workforce reshaping, not downsizing. This authority, which I was able to secure with legislation 3 years ago, is currently being used effectively on a limited basis for civilian employees at the Department of Defense.

It also lifts the total annual compensation cap for senior executives, allowing performance bonuses to be paid in full in a single year; and it reduces restrictions on providing academic degree training to federal employees, thereby emphasizing the importance of individual professional development.

In light of the fact that there has not been government-wide civil service reform in a quarter century and, as the Hart-Rudman Commission noted, personnel is the basis for maintaining national security, it is absolutely appropriate that this legislation be included in the bill to create the Department of Homeland Security.

I thank Senators GRAMM and MILLER of their willingness to consider my proposals which represent extensive efforts to address the Federal Government's personnel challenges during my 4 years in the Senate, and for including the Voinovich-Akaka language in their substitute amendment. I believe it is a strong addition that also has the administration's support.

As I said, I hope we'll be able to add the balance of S. 2651 to the homeland security bill before we conclude this debate, because these reforms are badly needed.

The Homeland Security Department is not the first, and not the last, agency that needs to have greater flexibility. Even more comprehensive flexibilities and reforms, similar to those proposed in the Gramm-Miller substitute for the Department of Homeland Security, which I will describe in a moment, are needed at other agencies as well, including the Department of Defense and NASA. These agencies may provide the impetus for Congress to return to this issue next year.

In fact I asked Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN, when they were considering the Defense Authorization bill, to give consideration to accepting some personnel flexibilities that the Department of Defense wanted. I know from Secretary Rumsfeld that they will be coming back asking for those flexibilities.

It is my hope that the incremental provisions I have developed with my colleagues and a diverse group of stakeholders over the course of the last year will assist the rest of the federal government while we consider next steps.

I would like to take a few moments now to discuss the personnel provisions in the Gramm-Miller substitute that apply specifically to the new department. I have worked with Senators GRAMM and MILLER on these provisions and believe this language will provide the Department with the tools it needs to get the job done, and at the same time respects the rights of those union workers being transferred into the new department.

I say this because I am close to the leadership in both of our major unions. They have some concerns. I tried to get the administration to sign an Executive order continuing partnerships between unions and the Federal Government. Unfortunately, this did not happen. The administration also included competitive sourcing on the President's Management Agenda, setting targets that each department had to meet in order to receive a green light on the Management Scorecard. I said, if you tell an agency head that he must outsource 10 percent, 15 percent, 20 percent—instead of trying to shape his department with the people he has and give them training, he will spend all his time figuring out how he is going to outsource those jobs.

The proposed Department of Homeland Security will merge nearly 170,000 employees from more than 20 Federal agencies. This is a momentous undertaking. Although the creation of the Department of Defense in 1947 combined a larger number of civilian and military employees, the consolidation we are now contemplating would require more than a score of different workplace cultures and personnel systems to be effectively harmonized, all while the Nation entrusts this new department with the one of Federal Government's most urgent and important missions: to preserve the homeland and protect American citizens from harm. In order to accomplish this very tall order, the President and the new Secretary of Homeland Security will need new flexibility, and I believe Congress should authorize it.

In recent years, however, Congress has engaged in management by scandal, only granting more flexibilities when agencies under-perform! For example, the FAA, IRS and SEC each received special personnel authorities over the last decade, but only after each of these agencies was singled out for its failure to achieve its mission.

The Bush Administration has correctly pointed out that we cannot wait for a similar occurrence at the Department of Homeland Security, and it has justifiably sought broad flexibility for the new department before any mission failures occur.

On a related matter, Mr. President, it is interesting to note that the recommendations of the Hart-Rudman Commission form the intellectual basis for large portions of the underlying legislation we are debating today. Yet, while we are paying close attention to the Commission's recommendation to establish a new Department of Homeland Security, we are not seriously considering its recommendations to modernize the civil service system. We simply must take these necessary steps now.

The personnel provisions in the Gramm-Miller substitute represent a good-faith effort to modernize the personnel system for the new department.

The Quinn-Portman amendment would preserve employee rights, including hiring and promotion based on merit and equal pay for equal work, and would protect employees from improper political influence and reprisal for whistle-blowing. Employees would still be protected from prohibited personnel practices, such as illegal discrimination, politicization of the hiring or promotion processes, and violation of veterans' preference requirements. I notice my friend, Senator AKAKA was talking about the fact that whistle blowing is not involved in the amendment. We specifically talk about protection of employees against reprisal for whistle blowing.

Furthermore, employees would still have the right to organize, bargain collectively, and participate through labor organizations of their own choosing in decisions that affect them.

First, the substitute features House-passed language proposed by Representatives JACK QUINN and ROB PORTMAN. In June, the President sent to Congress a blueprint for the personnel system he envisioned at the new department. The President realized that Congress would flesh out many of the issues in his proposal, and that is just what happened. The House-passed version is less flexible than what the Administration originally requested—it is really important to understand that—but it is designed to deal with the personnel flexibility sought by the President, and to address the collective bargaining rights that many of our colleagues seek to protect.

The Quinn-Portman amendment retains most of title V's provisions. This is not as broad as Transportation Security Administration to which Congress gave blanket exemptions from title V last November.

The language also requires that the new department collaborate with unions and other employee organizations in creating its personnel system. In addition, it includes procedures to ensure that exclusive bargaining units are represented by individuals designated by the union itself. It also provides certain safeguards for employees as the proposed department develops a new system for employee appeals.

In order to ensure that the new human resources management system is developed in collaboration with the unions, the Quinn-Portman amendment provides for direct involvement by employee representatives in three stages of the development process.

In the first stage, as the human resources management system is being designed, the Secretary and OPM Director must provide a written description of the proposed system or adjustment to the system; allow each employee representative at least 60 days to review and make recommendations on the proposal; and give any such recommendations full and fair consideration in deciding whether or how to proceed with the proposal.

At the second stage, when the Secretary and OPM Director decide to implement a human resources management proposal, they must, prior to implementation: give each employee representative details of the decision along with information upon which the decision was based; give each employee representative an opportunity to make recommendations; and give such recommendations full and fair consideration. If any employee representatives' recommendations are not proposed to be implemented, the Secretary and Director must explain why.

During the third stage, once a human resource management system proposal is implemented, the Secretary and OPM Director must develop a method for each employee representative to participate in any further planning or development.

The Quinn-Portman amendment also fleshes out the Administration's original proposal by providing necessary flexibilities in six key areas: performance appraisals, classification, pay rates and systems, labor-management relations, adverse actions, and appeals. Each of these areas would be open to modernization, subject to the explicit limitations included in the language to protect employees, which, as I have just delineated, are comprehensive, and rooted in current civil service law.

We currently have pending a second-degree amendment to the Gramm-Miller amendment from Senators BEN NELSON, CHAFEE and BREAUX.

They would like to reduce the six areas of flexibility to four. I happen to believe that the administration, in order to create this new Department, is going to need those six areas of flexibility to get the job done.

Based on my experience as mayor and Governor, I thought it also would be a good idea to have the Secretary negotiate as opposed to consult with union representatives in the six areas in which the administration is seeking flexibility. My belief in that regard comes about as a result of my experience over the years. In other words, after the consultation and the negotiation occurred, there would be an impasse panel that could be appealed to for a final decision.

I thought that would be helpful because it would make the negotiation more robust and there would be fewer areas of disagreement. Once it was over, the parties could say the matter was taken to a third party and decided. That is the way it should be decided.

In other words, and I want to point out to my colleagues, the success or failure of the administration to get the job done is going to depend on the relationship they develop with our labor unions and other Federal employee organizations. If there is consensus, if there is openness and a sense of fairness, this will be a great success. On the contrary, if it is an adversarial relationship, one that is not open, one where we don't have the discourse that we need, it will be a failure.

I have reorganized as Governor. I have combined departments as Governor. And I have found that the only way you can be successful is to work with organized labor on a consensus basis and work things out. Without working things out, it will not be a success. I have brought this to the attention of the administration several times. I am confident that with the process that is in the Gramm-Miller amendment, the process will be open and fair.

I have talked to Kay Coles James, Director of the Office of Personnel Management; I have talked to Mark Everson, Deputy Director for Management at OMB, and many other people. They understand that they have to build trust with the unions if they expect to have a successful Department. If they don't work together and achieve a consensus, we are in big trouble.

Finally, the Gramm-Miller substitute includes the House-passed language proposed by Representatives CONNIE MORELLA and CHRIS SHAYS—with an additional provision that I have recommended. This language would, for the first time, limit the current authority of the President to exclude an agency or agency subdivision from participation in a collective bargaining unit.

Under current law, the President may exclude participation in a collective bargaining unit upon determining that the entity has a primary function of intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative or national security work, and that permitting the entity to have union organization would be inconsistent with national security requirements and considerations.

I want to make this clear to my colleagues.

The Morella-Shays language would limit the President's current authority only with regard to the new department. It would prohibit the President from using the exclusionary authority unless the mission and responsibilities of a transferred agency materially change and a majority of the employees within such an agency have as their primary duty intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism.

The language does provide, however, that the President could waive the above limitations on his authority if he determines in writing that their use would have a substantial adverse impact on the department's ability to protect homeland security.

Senators GRAMM and MILLER have agreed to add language that I proposed requiring that, when the President executes his authority under the Morella-Shays language, he must notify Congress of the reasons for his determination at least 10 days prior to the issuance of his written order.

What our unions are worried about is arbitrary and capricious action on the part of the President exempting members from membership in their unions.

This language basically says that we, for the first time, in the Homeland Security Department, will limit that power of the President, and if he exercises it under Morella-Shays, it means his decisionmaking will be subject to a filing in Federal court as to whether he has abused his discretion in exercising that power.

This is very important. If he decides to waive it and says, no, I don't want to do it by Morella-Shays, I want to go ahead and exercise my power, that basically says the President has to put it in writing, and send it to Congress. The unions will see it, the majority will see it, the minority will see it, the media will see it, and public personnel experts will see it. I have tried to convince some of my colleagues that this process is open to public scrutiny.

I have to say to my colleagues, how can you ask this President of the United States—at a time when we have a national security crisis—to give up the same authority held by all other Presidents since 1962—when we create this new Department of Homeland Security?

The fact that this administration has agreed to set up criteria and limit the President's authority to certain specific reasons for exercising it—to then say to the President, by the way, you can't do that now. To say, 'you have to send it to Congress 10 days in advance' is more than enough limitation on this historic executive authority. I say to my friends on the other side of the aisle, I say to my friends in the unions, that, first of all, I don't believe this President is anti-labor or trying to short-change or treat our employees improperly.

Second of all, even if he thought of doing something like that, or somebody recommended it, he would have to explain the rationale in writing, and allow it to be held up to public scrutiny 10 days prior to his order taking effect.

Mr. President, I have been one of the leaders on civil service reform during the last two sessions of Congress. I believe I have probably dedicated more time than any Senator to addressing the Federal Government's personnel interests. I have tried to raise the profile of this issue and then work in good faith with all interested parties to develop solutions. Based on my work, I want my colleagues to know I believe the personnel provisions in the Gramm-Miller substitute can go a long way towards putting personnel management in the executive branch back on track.

I just hope that somehow in the next couple of days we can work something out on both sides of the aisle so that people feel comfortable that we can protect the rights of organized labor and at the same time give the President of the United States the authority and the flexibilities he needs to get the job done.

I hope that after this debate is over, the well is not so poisoned that when the administration and the unions begin to sit down and talk with each other, they can work together to arrive at a consensus so that this reorganization can be successful and fruitful, and we can achieve what we all want to achieve to secure our homeland.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Ohio, who I think is such a good legislator——

Mr. VOINOVICH. Could the Senator speak a little louder? I am wearing a hearing aid.

Mr. REID. I was saying nice things about the Senator. I will be happy to speak louder.

I was telling my friend from Ohio, who is such a good legislator, I would like to at a subsequent time today make a unanimous consent request that we vote on cloture on Gramm-Miller tomorrow. It is now set for Friday. We want to move this legislation along. I think that is what we need to do.

The Senator doesn't need to respond to that at all. I just wanted to let him know that we hope to work something out in the next couple of days. I hope we can work something out tomorrow. We want to move this legislation along.

I have to say this: Having been on this bill for the fourth week, I am concerned that maybe people down on Pennsylvania Avenue don't want this bill. We have done everything we can to move this legislation. It doesn't appear that people on the other side of the aisle want it moved.

For example, Senator BYRD's amendment was pending for several days. At any time, Senator BYRD's amendment was subject to a motion to table. Everyone knew there were enough votes to table that amendment. But for days, the minority chose not to do that.

So I hope that I am wrong. I hope that I am wrong. I hope that there are as many on your side of the aisle as on our side of aisle who want this legislation to pass. But I have the feeling now, I say to my friend from Ohio, is that the minority does not want to move the homeland security bill.

We will see in the next——

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I say to the Senator, I beg to differ with the Senator from Nevada. We do want to move forward with this homeland security bill. We do want it to pass. We know how necessary it is for the President to have this new Department, with the flexibility he needs to merge more than 20 agencies.

From my perspective, I cannot figure out why the Majority has been filing cloture motions on some of these amendments, when I think they could make a motion to table instead. I am still trying to figure that out. I may need to get the Parliamentarian to explain what this is all about.

But I can assure you, that after the time I have spent on this issue with many of my colleagues, including many on the other side of the aisle, we want this to move forward.

We would like to have a vote up or down on the President's amended proposal, which is contained in the Gramm-Miller amendment. We would like to have a vote on the recommendations from Senators NELSON, BREAUX, and CHAFEE, and see where the Senate stands on that amendment.

We have to move this along. We cannot go home, I think, without getting this done. I know this has gotten to be pretty partisan. But I honestly believe that if we can sit down and start talking about some of this a little bit more, we could work something out and move ahead.

I assure the distinguished Senator from Nevada that we are not delaying this. We want to move forward. And I will certainly do anything I can to help cooperate in this regard.

But we want a vote on the Gramm-Miller amendment. We also want a vote on the amendment of Senators NELSON and CHAFEE and BREAUX.

Mr. REID. I would simply say—the majority leader is here, and I don't want to take a lot of time—the majority of the Senators over here want a bill. I am confident a majority of the Senators want a bill. This is the fourth week we have tried to do it.

We are trying very hard. We should be able to do it. It appears to me that some people cannot take yes for an answer. We are willing to give a vote on the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas, but he says he does not want a vote unless he can have the first vote. It is just a lot of what appears to me, and I am sure to the people in Nevada and the public, to be a lot of silliness.

We want to move forward with this legislation. As the Senator from Ohio has said, you want it passed. We want it passed. Hopefully, we can do something. But it appears we are not getting impetus from the leadership on your side of the aisle and the White House to get this done.

I am sorry to have taken the leader's time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MILLER). The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. Who controls the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nobody controls the floor at this time.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt the statement of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I don't see anybody else seeking recognition on my side of the aisle. I yield the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I came to the floor for a couple of reasons. One was to reiterate what I think I heard the assistant Democratic leader say with regard to our desire to have a vote. As we have indicated publicly and privately, we are prepared for an up-or-down vote. We want a vote on the Nelson-Breaux amendment. And once that vote is taken, we are more than willing to vote on the Gramm amendment. So there should be no question about that.

I think I heard the Senator from Nevada say that there are some who cannot take yes for an answer. We are prepared to offer that vote any time. I would hope that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle would take our offer in the manner in which it was intended. We hope to have a vote up or down on that particular amendment.

NO "CONTEXT" JUSTIFIES QUESTIONING THE PATRIOTISM OF OTHERS

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, the other matter I wanted to come to the floor to discuss is the reaction to some of the comments that I made this morning.

A number of our colleagues have come to the floor and, as I understand it, the administration has stated that if I had understood the context in which the President made those remarks—the remarks that Senate Democrats are not concerned about national security—that I probably would not have been so critical. In fact, they criticized me for having criticized the President.

Mr. President, what context is there that legitimizes an accusation of that kind? I don't care whether you are talking about homeland security, I don't think you can talk about Iraq, you can't talk about war, you can't talk about any context that justifies a political comment like that.

This is politicization, pure and simple. I meant it this morning and I mean it now. I don't know what may have motivated those in the White House to make the decision to politicize this debate, but it has to stop. There is no context within which anybody can make that accusation about people on this side of the aisle on an issue relating to homeland security, or Iraq, or defense, or anything else.

So let's get that straight. I would hope that we can finally bring this debate to a level that it deserves.

I can recall in 1991 and 1992—especially in 1992—when President Bush made the decision he did. I can recall several of my staff coming to me, suggesting that we say this or that. But never once did I have someone on my staff, someone here in the Senate, refer to the politics of the war with Iraq.

I remember sitting at my desk, handwriting my speech, explaining to my people in South Dakota, and to whomever else might be listening, why I made the decision I did. I did not make that decision for political reasons. And I don't think there is a person in this Chamber who did.

We need that same level of debate this time if we are going to have a debate, if we are going to do it this close to an election.

So I want all the apologies at the other side of Pennsylvania Avenue, all of these explanations about "context" to be taken for what they are worth. They are not worth the paper they are printed on.

The time has come for us to quit the explanations, to quit the rationalizations, to quit the politicization, and do what we should do as Americans: Make our statement, make our judgment, have a debate, and send as clear a message to Saddam Hussein as we can. We are not going to tolerate his actions. And we, as a country, will build on a coalition to do the right thing.

I hope this will be the last word. I look forward to talking directly with those in the White House, those on this side of the aisle, as we fashion our response, as we take this matter as seriously as we should, as we do it in a way that lives up to the expectations of the American people.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, in many ways, this has been a very hard day. I thank the majority leader of the Senate, TOM DASCHLE, for the remarks he just made and for the remarks he made earlier today. He actually spoke in defense of the Senate.

Anyone who knows TOM DASCHLE—and I think most people around here do—knows that TOM DASCHLE is a very soft spoken man. They know that TOM DASCHLE does not rise to anger or fights, if ever, very often. Therefore, one has to really look at why this occurred.

In my mind, this is not an isolated example of what has been happening. It is a continuum of what has been happening, starting with Andrew Card, the President's chief of staff, who, when asked, why didn't you start discussing this this summer, if you were ready to move such a resolution in October or September, answered, in essence: You don't roll out a new product in the summer.

This kind of thing just seems to continue. We have the Vice President campaigning and essentially saying to the campaigns of the Republican candidates: Gee, we really need you because the Democrats won't help our war effort.

I don't know where this President has been, but I have heard many Democrats, including, for example, the individual presiding in the chair, indicating their support. We are an umbrella party. We do represent different views. Frankly, it makes our party stronger. Everyone wants to go after Saddam Hussein. Everyone wants to get rid of those weapons of mass destruction. We may have a different path to get there. Some of us may want to go it alone and give the President the authority he asks for. Some may want to go with our allies. Some may want to see more U.N. resolutions, as the British have said they want.

The bottom line is, this makes us a strong party. Frankly, it makes us a strong Nation. I have heard members of the President's party express some concerns.

What TOM DASCHLE did was essentially come to the floor and defend the honor of the Senate and this democracy. Why did he have to do it? In today's paper, and also on television, we have seen this quote reiterated over and over. We have the President of the United States saying that the Senate is "not interested in the security of the American people."

I know of no one in the Senate, Republican or Democrat, who has slept well after 9/11. I know of no colleague on either side who doesn't think about it every day: How do we protect our people; how do we make the airlines safer; how do we protect this country from chemical warfare; how do we protect ourselves from a possible smallpox epidemic; how do we protect our nuclear powerplants; how do we protect our people night, day, in the air, on the ground? I don't know many Members in this Chamber on either side who have ever slept as well as they did before 9/11, who don't wake up in the middle of the night thinking about it or turn on the radio at 6 or 7 a.m. and pray that there isn't something there.

This kind of statement, that the Senate "is not interested in the security of the American people," is very hurtful. It is hurtful to this institution. It is hurtful to our democracy. It is, in particular, very hurtful because I have talked to my colleagues who served in Vietnam or who served in World War II or even some in Korea. Nobody asks in the military, Are you registered Democrat or Republican?

This is a horrible turn of events. If we don't express ourselves, it is dangerous for our country to put partisanship ahead of being unified as a nation, standing for the rule of law, for free debate, for discussion, for tough debate. That is good for this country. We have a lot of points of view out there. Everyone in this country needs to know that somehow, some way, somewhere their voice is being heard, not being stifled. Because if you dare to say something that questions anything, whether it is this homeland bill, which is a major reshuffling, the biggest reshuffling of the Federal Government in many years, since the creation of the Department of Defense, if you dare say, are we doing the right thing, are we taking our time, if you dare say that, you will find yourself being criticized in the middle of a campaign.

That isn't right. Of course, we will disagree on certain issues. That is the strength of this Nation. People died for that right. When Senator DASCHLE came down here and said he thought it was important to get an apology, I believed that apology should have been given. Not saying, well, we didn't mean this had to do with Iraq. It had to do with something else.

The statement stands on its own—it could be applied to anything—"the Senate is not interested in the security of the American people." That is why Senator DASCHLE came to the floor. That is why Senator DASCHLE for a moment even lost his voice, because he was so filled with emotion.

He looked behind him at Senator INOUYE who lost a limb in World War II. He thought of other colleagues who lost their limbs fighting for this country, who faced the posttraumatic stress of Vietnam, who came home and had to deal with that. Are the Vietnam vets Democrats? Are they Republicans? Are they Independents? I can't tell you that. But some of them are homeless. We need to stand united because they faced a war at a time that our country was divided. We need to make sure we give full debate, not some open-ended resolution.

I sat through a hearing today at the Foreign Relations Committee. It was a very important hearing. We had Ambassador Holbrooke there and Robert McFarlane. We had a Democrat and a Republican. We had a very important debate.

Many different viewpoints were reflected on both sides of the aisle. Some were saying: We are ready. They were ready to give the President whatever he needed, whatever he wanted, now, ready, today, go. Others on both sides of the aisle said, as I said: Where are our allies? Would we be in better shape to go in after another U.N. resolution? I asked: Is there a path to peace? Is there some way we can avoid the bloody war that may ensue? Is there a path to that peace? Let's talk about it. If we must have a war, what is this President's intention following that war? These are important questions.

One question that never was raised by anyone in that committee was: Is anyone on this committee motivated by anything other than patriotism and wanting to do what is right for this country, whether they support the resolution or they do not; whether they support the resolution of the White House or a resolution that may be written by some other Republican or Democrat? No one ever suggested that anyone of either party sitting in that hearing did not have the best motivation at heart for our country.

It is extremely disheartening when we hear the statement of Andrew Card that basically says: We did not want to roll out our new product—meaning resolution—in the summer, talking about it as if it was toothpaste or a new car. It is about life and death.

If anyone says: Excuse me, what is it going to cost us in lives, in blood, in treasure, that person ought to be respected, not told they do not believe in the security of the people, whether it is questioning the homeland security bill or maybe a better way to do that or questioning an open-ended, blank-check resolution which I think has come over and I personally cannot support. The people in my State are telling me they do not want me to support it. They do not want me or Senator DASCHLE to come here and not speak what is in our hearts, in our souls, in our minds.

Senator DASCHLE did a very brave thing today. He did something I believe we do not see often enough in politics today. He spoke from his heart. He spoke the truth, unvarnished. He did not go through a committee. He did not bring it to a political adviser.

Mr. SCHUMER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the junior Senator from California for her remarks which I think are right on point.

Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator a couple questions. First, she was there, as I recall, as I was, when Senator DASCHLE came into our meeting this morning—there were maybe seven or eight Senators—and read the remarks. All of us were stunned and furious. We were just so upset that not a policy debate but, rather, a sort of below-the-belt hit was being made not only by political operatives but by the President himself when he said people are not for national security.

I have been asked by reporters: Was this a calculated move?

I said: No; you should have been there and just seen the reaction.

I remember the junior Senator from California, the senior Senator from New York, and some others of us urged him to go to the floor and to just speak his mind. He was saying to others: Maybe I ought to reflect on it. No, you should speak what you think.

I think it is clear, and I have been talking with people in my State, that the President has stepped over the line with these remarks. This weekend, I was asked by many people way to the left of me: Isn't the President, when he wants to go into Iraq, using politics?

I said: No, I don't think so. I think he has been wanting to go into Iraq from the very beginning.

Then for him to accuse Democrats of using politics, in my judgment—and I wonder what the Senator from California thinks because she has spoken in a heartfelt, compassionate way—I think the American people are fundamentally fair, and ugly tactics like that will backfire on their own, but I also believe it has to be pointed out because war is serious stuff and we need unity. We do not need political games.

Senator INOUYE said it best. I just ask the Senator if she is finding the same thing in her State as mine; that people are not sure, they want some questions asked before we go into war, and people do not like one party accusing the other of not being patriotic or being less concerned about national security simply because they ask questions. I wonder what the Senator's opinion is.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator from California yield for a parliamentary request?

Mrs. BOXER. I certainly will.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are on H.R. 5005; is that right?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate go off the homeland security bill and proceed to a period for morning business, with Senators allowed to speak for a period not to exceed 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. My understanding is the Senator from California wishes to speak for how long?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Twenty minutes.

Mr. REID. The Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, for 20 minutes following the statement of the Senator from California, Mrs. BOXER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HOMELAND SECURITY

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, let me respond to my friend from New York. The phone calls, letters, and e-mails we have been getting have been one-sided against an open, blank-check resolution, as they are phrasing it, as was sent over. They are very much against what the President sent over.

More importantly are my conversations with my constituents. They clearly are very pleased that Senator FEINSTEIN has made remarks regarding Iraq, and I have spoken out. I have received calls now because I raised a number of questions in the Foreign Relations Committee regarding working with our allies, working through the U.N., asking: Is there a path to peace here?

What I pointed out is in recent years, I have voted for two resolutions to go to war: One was to stop the genocide by Milosevic, that was with a Democratic President, and one with current President Bush to respond to the brutal, inhumane terrorist attack on 9/11 for which every single Democrat in this particular body voted.

To me, it is not a question of will I ever vote for such action. It is a question of what is the best way to proceed. My constituents want to hear what I am thinking. I have been in Congress for 20 years. They do not want to see debates where one party is saying to another: You do not care about the American people. My friend is so correct. They look to us to engage in a rational debate, not to have one-line zingers as the President put out. This is not what they want.

Then Ari Fleischer, who is the press secretary for the President, said this today:

> It's time for everyone to work well together to protect our national security.

That was his remark after he was questioned about the President's statement.

That is the point that Senator DASCHLE was making, but not as rhetoric, as fact. There is an expression, I believe it was John Adams said: Facts are stubborn things. The facts are this President said very clearly: The Democrat-controlled Senate "is not interested in the security of the American people." My people at home are appalled at that.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes, I will continue to yield to both my colleagues.

Mr. CORZINE. I want to reinforce what the Senator from New York said. By the way, this statement about not being interested in the security of the American people was made in Trenton, NJ, on Monday at a political rally. It is hard for me to understand what special interests are being reflected in the President's comments and its repeated nature.

I wonder if the junior Senator from California actually knew this was made in Trenton, NJ, at a political rally for the competitor to our side of the aisle? Is that not political in and of itself?

Mrs. BOXER. I say to my friend, I learned of this quote reading the front page today of the Washington Post, and I am going to read what it says. It says four times in the past 2 days Bush has suggested that Democrats do not care about national security, saying on Monday that the Democratic-controlled Senate is "not interested in the security of the American people."

His remarks, intensifying the theme he introduced last month, were quickly seconded and disseminated by Republican House majority whip TOM DELAY of Texas.

I was unaware of this, although it is interesting to me, because that particular race, of course, in New Jersey, which is pivotal to the future of this Senate, and adds to the political nature of this comment.

Mr. SCHUMER. Will the junior Senator from California continue to yield?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. SCHUMER. I believe my friend was here when I was back in 1991. There was a long debate. I think it was a debate on the merits.

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Both sides debated strongly in a heartfelt way. The Nation voted to go to war. Whatever side you were on, it seemed to me by having the debate, by keeping the invective aside—I do not remember the previous President George Bush ever using lines like that. After the debate, the vote was close, I believe, in both bodies. It certainly was in the House. The American people were more unified. There was a feeling that everyone had their point of view, that everything was explored.

I would say to my friend from California, at every townhall meeting about Iraq, and I have had a bunch of them around the State, they say you must know something we do not know. There must be some secret.

I have attended a few of the classified briefings and obviously would not want to disclose what is in there, but I say to them, no, as to the basic broad facts, not any kind of detail that would involve security, but the basic broad facts are known to every American because they are in the newspapers. There are no hidden, deep, dark secrets, at least that I am aware of. Maybe there are that we do not know about. But in a democracy, you cannot go to war this way. You cannot say if you are a leader of the country, I know something you do not know, when you are sending the sons and daughters of America to be put in harm's way.

I do not know how I would come out if we had to vote today, but whether I would end up voting yes or no—and I do not know what the resolution would look like—I sure would feel bad if we did not have a debate, if we did not have a discussion, if a whole variety of questions were not asked.

I would like to hear my friend's opinions on this. This is the most awesome, humbling decision that a Member of the Senate or the other body can make, because you are putting the beautiful young people of America in harm's way. You have to be careful.

I am not a pacifist. I can think of a whole number of wars in our country's history where I would have enlisted. I would have been lined up the next day.

I would not say that first strikes should always be ruled out, but I sure want to ask some questions and I sure want to know some answers. This idea of trying to impugn the patriotism, in the interest of helping the American people, of anyone who wants to ask questions, I find, well, too low for words.

I ask the junior Senator from California if she has the same feeling. I come from New York. I know what terrorism does. I knew people who were lost. I put this flag on September 12, and I have worn it every day since then in memory of those who were lost. God willing, I am going to wear it every day for the rest of my life.

I know what terrorism is all about. Nobody wants to beat back terrorism more than I do, but I want to make sure we do it and we do it right. I want to make sure if we go to war in Iraq we are not going to ignore or take resources away from, for example, fighting al-Qaida or other terrorist groups. Perhaps we can do both, but I have not had a chance yet to get all the answers about that. I wonder what the Senator thinks.

I want to say for the benefit of my senior Senator for California, I will be talking another 5 minutes and then I will yield.

I want to underscore that what the Senator says is so right. After that debate that took place on the first gulf war, about 80 percent of the American people said they were so proud. Clearly, they may not have agreed with my position, your position, or any other Senator on the other side of the debate, but they saw debate free and open, respectful debate, among colleagues, asking questions, posing ideas, other solutions, other paths to resolve the issue.

In some cases, there was strong support for the President. They realized then that we are a representative democracy. They were calm.

When I went home this past weekend, I found out the people in my State are not calm. They are very agitated, and it is because they are worried that debate is being stifled. They are worried that a resolution is——

Mr. MILLER. The Senator has used her 10 minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. When Senator REID made the request, he did not apply the 10 minutes to this speaker, but I ask unanimous consent to continue for 5 additional minutes before Senator FEINSTEIN proceeds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. The people at home are agitated, I say to my friend, because they expect to see this respect go both ways between the parties and even, frankly, within the parties. We have Republicans who are asking questions and others who are not. We have Democrats who are ready to vote today for the Bush resolution and others, such as myself, who frankly could not because I believe it is a blank check.

I thank my friend for his engagement in this colloquy. Let me conclude in this way: I have thought to myself, why is this happening? I believe there is a political decision that has been made to keep this country focused on the foreign policy questions and not focused on the everyday kitchen table issues, the domestic issues that need to be addressed. I am going to go to some charts very quickly.

We have seen long-term unemployment more than doubling since this administration came in. We have seen the worst performance of the stock market since Hoover. That means pensions are going down the tubes, as well as 401(k)s, and people's hopes and dreams for their retirement. We have seen an average rate change in the real gross domestic product, which is the worst in generations. It is the worst of all Presidents from Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, the first George Bush, and President Clinton. It is the worst growth rate. That is what we have seen.

In summing up the economic record, we have seen record job losses, weak economic growth, declining business investment, falling stock market, shrinking retirement accounts, eroding consumer confidence, rising health care costs, escalating foreclosures, vanishing surpluses, higher interest rates on the horizon, raiding Social Security, record executive pay and a stagnating minimum wage.

So I believe that a decision was made to deal with a foreign policy issue at the exclusion of what is happening on the ground with our families. Mr. President, that is distressing. We need to do both.

We need to rise to the foreign policy challenges we face. On the war against terrorism, we have a long way to go. In Afghanistan, in Pakistan, right here, with the cells that exist in our country, we have a long way to go. We need to step to the plate on that fight. We need to step to the plate on the Iraq challenge and handle it correctly with our allies, with a plan that will lead us perhaps to a peaceful end without having to shed blood. Maybe there is a chance. We should at least explore it. We have to step to the plate on the economic issues and we need to do that across party lines. We have to do it with the Republicans, with the Independents, with the Democrats—together.

One course we do not want is for one party to say about the other: They don't care about the security of the American people. If one party does that, as the Republicans did today, as the President did, as reported today, we will lose all these other battles. We will have a divided country. We will not be able to work together in good will.

My leader, TOM DASCHLE, the leader of the Senate, was right to say what he said, was right to express himself in the way he did. I hope the answer will be that in the future we will join hands as Americans and, even where we might disagree on a strategy, on an amendment, on a bill, work together as Americans. That is when the people are most proud of us.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized for 20 minutes.

IRAQ

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I thank my friend and colleague, Senator BOXER, for her excellent remarks, and those Senators from New Jersey and New York who joined her. She has made a very impassioned message. It is a correct message. I hope people listen.

I also am deeply saddened by recent comments made by the President and Vice President which imply that Democrats are not protective of our Nation's security. Nothing is further from the truth.

There is no shortage of courage and bravery and patriotism on this side of the aisle. We, too, have our heroes who prove that: Senator MAX CLELAND, Senator DANIEL INOUYE, former Senator Bob Kerrey, and Senator JOHN KERRY, people who fought with bravery and distinction in major conflicts this Nation has had.

Even to imply the Democrats are not interested in the security of the American people is not only wrong, but in the present pre-election period I believe it is also base.

Last night, it was reported the Vice President went so far as to state that American security would be enhanced if a certain GOP candidate was elected to the House of Representatives. This very statement, carried by major newspapers, jaundiced any fair discussion in this pre-election period.

One might ask why? The reason is both the President and the Vice President have an extraordinary bully pulpit with a very long reach. It makes up about 95 percent of everything that reaches the American public; the remaining 5 percent is scattered among whoever is able to receive it.

If this debate is politicized in the heat of an election and the decision is made for the wrong reasons—out of fear; if we do not carry out the public trust that is invested in us and make the decision for the right reasons, then we betray our trust. And no election is worth doing that.

I share the concern of the majority leader, and I hope it is not too late to end this politicization. But there is only one way. Shortly, we in Congress will begin debate on whether to authorize the President the authority to use force against Iraq. It is, in effect, a declaration of war. The President has sent a draft resolution. He made his case before the United Nations. Today he seeks the support of the international community. Now it is our job, our constitutional duty, to debate this resolution. But we must do so in an atmosphere that is true. The decision to go to war is perhaps the most grave and significant decision any nation makes. It is a decision that must be made on its own merits, with a timetable determined by the cause and the case and not based on political considerations and upcoming elections. I believe that deeply.

A declaration of war against Iraq is the most serious decision many Members will ever make as Senators. It is a life or death decision for the American men and women we put into harm's way, for the innocent Iraqi people who will be killed, for the repercussions it will have throughout the Persian Gulf, the Middle East and the Arab world, and throughout our own country and the rest of the world.

Congress must not rush to judgment before it has had ample opportunity to answer the many questions that still remain regarding why a war, a preemptive war, should be fought at this time against Iraq. For example, what is the immediate threat to American security to justify an attack on another sovereign nation? How would such a war be conducted? How would we respond to Iraq's use of chemical or biological weapons, to an attack on Israel, or to a ricochet of terrorist incidents in our country and around the world? And what are our responsibilities for postwar stability once Saddam Hussein is ousted? How do we prevent civil war between the Sunnis and the Shias?

No one questions that Saddam Hussein is an evil man, or the potential of Iraq acquiring the nuclear capability within the next 5 to 7 years is a possibility. We believe it is. There is reason to believe that Saddam Hussein has squirreled away biological and chemical weapons. But they are most likely close to civilians: in tunnels, under mosques, around schools and hospitals, and inside palaces or in mobile vehicles.

This is not sufficient reason to preemptively attack another sovereign nation—for the first time in this Nation's history—without first being provoked by an attack against our homeland, our people, or our interests. It is not sufficient reason to put our service men and women in harm's way when there are real, viable options short of war left on the table. There is no question this country should take steps to disarm Iraq. Saddam Hussein, with chemical and biological weapons, represents a real threat to his own people, to the Middle East region, and to the international security. The question is, Is use of force the first option or the last option? In my view, it should be the last. In my view, working with the international community, doing all we can to disarm Iraq before jumping to military force, remains an option.

If Saddam Hussein balks at inspectors, if he starts playing games, if he continues to thwart the will of the international community, then the use of force by the United States has a moral imprimatur and is the only remaining viable answer.

There is no question that Iraq is in direct violation of international law, numerous U.N. Security Council resolutions, and that he poses a threat in the region. Nobody debates that. But there is no persuasive evidence that Iraq is prepared to unleash its biological or chemical weapons today. Although he used them against the Kurds in 1987 and 1988, and against Iran in their decade-long war, he has not used them in over 10 years, and he knows what will happen to him if he does. He may be homicidal but he is not suicidal.

Likewise, there is no persuasive evidence that he possesses nuclear weapons today. He may be trying to gain these weapons, but he remains years away. So instead of rushing to war, I believe we should proceed in a calm, methodical, and nonpolitical manner. The United States should work through the United Nations Security Council—as the President himself suggested in a September 12 speech to the United Nations and as Secretary of State Colin Powell is now trying to do to obtain full and unconditional access for arms inspectors, and hopefully accompanied by a United Nations military force.

We should seek the complete destruction of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction and the means to deliver them. This approach should be our first option, not window dressing or an option to be dismissed out-of-hand. And we should do this not for idealistic reasons but because it is in our national security interests to do so.

Indeed, the benefit of pursuing a multilateral approach was seen clearly when Saudi Arabia suggested that, if the United States were working through the United Nations, it would grant U.S. forces access to its bases. Action against Iraq becomes much more complicated, from a military perspective, if there are no landing or flyover rights in other Arab countries; and managing the aftermath becomes much more difficult if we find the entire Arab world against us.

So I believe that if the United States fails in its efforts to compel Iraqi compliance with a United Nations inspection, verification, and destruction regime—either because other countries threaten a veto in the Security Council or the United Nations is unable to muster the muscle and will to enforce its own resolutions—then the United States, with or without willing partners in the international community, must be prepared to go it alone.

But we must be clear. If we go to war, it should be to force Iraq to disarm.

This time, too, it is critical that the United States stays the course on the war on terror.

In every book you read on Osama bin Laden, you see that he believed that we would never stay the course in a war against him. We would hit a camp once and then disappear. As happened before, we would go to Somalia, get into trouble in Mogadishu, and we would turn tail and run. Bin Laden bet on that. He cannot be right about that. We have much to do to win this war.

Many of those who perpetrated the September 11 terrorist attacks remain at large, including two-thirds of the al-Qaida leadership; the Taliban and its leader, Mullah Omar; not to mention thousands of terrorists sympathetic to al-Qaida worldwide, including in our own country.

Afghanistan remains a fragile and unstable country. The United States must continue our efforts to rebuild this country. We cannot repeat what was done to it since 1979. We must continue our efforts to rebuild Afghanistan, the Afghan economy, to assure that the Taliban and al-Qaida do not return to power there—because they will if they can. We must protect and stabilize the Government of Hamid Karzai. And any effort in Iraq must not detract from our war on terror.

The President has rightly pointed out that the war on terror will be a long and hard-fought battle, and it is not just against al-Qaida. It is Hezbollah, which equals al-Qaida in its reach, in its viciousness, in its malevolence, and its evil. We must not take our eye off this ball. The President must come forward to explain not only how we fight this two-front war without allowing one front to jeopardize our interests in the other, but also what we would do in the event of a major strike against Israel.

I have come to this floor before and indicated that there is ample evidence that rockets are being shipped out of Iran, through Syria and into southern Lebanon—Katyusha rockets with extended range anywhere from 8,000 to 10,000, to hit Israel's industrial zone north of Haifa, should we attack Iraq.

What do we do then? What is our commitment, and what will the other Arab States do? I think we ought to know this. I think as prudent leaders, as part of a debate in the greatest deliberative body in the world, we ought to know these things before going into it, so there are no surprises.

Finally, it is critical that if and as we consider any use of force against Iraq that we have a clear understanding of the aftermath. Who would do the rebuilding? Who would pay for it? Who would run any new government? And could that government provide security? Could it prevent a bigger and more brutal battle between the Sunni and the Shia.

That is not a question to overlook. Read the history on Iraq. You will see the brutality and the viciousness, the attack of one tribe on the other that has characterized Iraqi history from the time of ancient Mesopotamia. There are a lot of grievances out there to be settled, big grievances between the Shia majority and the ruling Sunni Baath party minority.

As General Shalikashvili made clear in his recent testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, planning for a post-conflict situation, winning the peace, is every bit as important as planning for the conflict itself.

And until the planning for post-war Iraq is in place—and it is not now—we should not rush to initiate combat. In fact, every general with whom I have talked—and I have talked with several—has urged caution. Every general with whom I have talked, privately, believes this war could end up being much more difficult than some expect it to be.

So to simply rush ahead and authorize the President to use force now, before these questions are answered, and without an imminent threat—save what some hope to gain from this issue in the elections—would be a grave error.

Congress must debate these issues fully, thoroughly, on a schedule, and with a timetable driven only by the merits of the issues. We must then move forward to pass a resolution tailored to the specific circumstances and giving the President the proper authority he needs to safeguard U.S. national interests.

So much is at stake here. American lives are at stake. We do not know how many, but I know one thing: It is not going to be like the gulf war. This war will be in cities. This will be street to street and house to house. We might send in the B-2s, the B-52s and the 117s, and they might drop huge numbers of laser-guided missiles and precision bombs. We will kill a lot of people. And then do we risk what may happen with the chemical and biologicals squirreled away? Do they go up in those attacks? Or are they released over innocent people? I have never heard one person discuss this, and it is time that we do so.

We are not a mercenary nation. This is not our heart. It is not our soul. And we have never engaged in a preemptive attack on another sovereign nation.

It may well be that untold numbers of lives are at stake elsewhere in the Persian Gulf, in the Middle East, and yes, right here in the USA.

Matters of war and peace, of life and death, must not be held in the grip of shortsighted, partisan rancor. I for one refuse to make them so. I respectfully suggest the Administration do the same. The stakes are simply too high.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as if in morning business for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Thank you, Mr. President.

THE VICE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH IN KANSAS

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise to discuss an issue that has been in the press much today, and I think there is a great deal of misinterpretation taking place about the President's and the Vice President's comments regarding homeland security and the war on terrorism.

I make specific reference to a speech that Vice President CHENEY gave in Kansas on Monday. I was at that event. I heard the speech. I was there supporting the candidate for whom the speech was given. Adam Taff, a fine candidate, is running for Congress in the Third Congressional District in Kansas. I want to make it very clear—and I want to enter into the RECORD a copy of the Vice President's words verbatim.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the Vice President's speech which he gave on Monday in Kansas be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY THE VICE PRESIDENT AT LUNCH FOR CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE ADAM TAFF, SEPTEMBER 23, 2002, KANSAS CITY, KANSAS

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Well, thank you very much, Adam. And thanks for the kind words, and for the opportunity to be here with all of you today. It's good to be back in Kansas, and standing next to the next Congressman from the Third District. (Applause.)

I'm also delighted today to get the opportunity to spend a little bit of time with Sam Brownback and Pat Roberts, two great United States senators. (Applause.) I know—of course; Pat was up here talking before we came on, and somebody came in and said, you know, you've got to get right down there, Senator Roberts is running out of things to say. (Laughter.) I knew better. (Laughter.)

It's always fun to get a chance to travel with my bride, and spend a little bit of time out on the campaign trail, doing important work. I often explain to people that we have a Republican marriage, that if it hadn't been for that great Republican victory in 1952, when Dwight Eisenhower was elected President, that our lives would have come out very differently. In 1952, when Eisenhower got elected, I was living in Lincoln, Nebraska, with my parents, just a youngster of some, I guess 11 years old at the time. But he came in and reorganized the Agriculture Department—my dad worked for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. Dad got transferred to Casper, Wyoming. We moved to Wyoming. I met Lynn—we went to high school together, grew up together, got married, celebrated our 38th wedding anniversary last August. (Applause.)

But I explained to a group of people the other night that if it hadn't been for that Republican election victory, that Lynne would have married somebody else. She said, right, and now he'd be Vice President of the United States. (Laughter.) There's no doubt in my mind that what that's true. (Laughter.)

Of course, my job now as Vice President—my only job, actually, as Vice President—is to preside over the Senate. And when they wrote the Constitution they decided they needed a Vice President, somebody to backup the President in case something happened to him. But at the end of the constitutional convention they realized they hadn't really given the Vice President anything to do. So, finally, they settled on making him the President of the Senate, so that he could preside over the Senate and gave him floor privileges, as well.

And John Adams, of course, was our first Vice President, the first President of the Senate. And he presided and he also used those floor privileges—got up and could actually participate in the debate and speak to the issues of the moment and argue for and against the majors on the floor. And then he did that a couple of times and they withdrew his floor privileges. (Laughter.) And they've never been restored. (Laughter.)

But one of the things I do get to do is to swear in the new Senate every January. And I'm enthusiastically looking forward to next January, when I can swear-in Pat Roberts and the new members of a Republican-led Senate in January.) (Applause.)

We've got a lot of races here in Kansas this year. Of course, a new Secretary of State, Ron Thornburgh, I think will do very well. Congressman Jerry Moran, who has proved to be a great member of the House of Representatives. And, of course, the next Governor of Kansas, Tim Shallenburger. (Applause.)

And I bring greetings to the people of Kansas from President George W. Bush.

We're all here today because there's an important race for Congress in the third district—and we've got a tremendous candidate. This seat belonged for many years to a great lady and a close friend of Lynne's and mine. We all admire Jan Meyers for her integrity and devotion to duty. (Applause.)

I served for ten years in the House, most of that time with Jan and explained to people, of course—it was a special kind of arrangement to be the congressman from Wyoming, since there was only one congressman from Wyoming. It was a small delegation. (Laughter.) But it was quality. (Laughter.)

But our nominee that we have for the third district today follows very much in the tradition that January established for this district. Adam is a first-class candidate; a distinguished Naval aviator who has carried out missions in many parts of the globe; a citizen actively involved in the life of his community; and a person who understands the need for limited and effective government.

He'll be an effective voice for Kansas, and a fine addition to your Republican delegation—already one of the most talented we have in Washington. The election is just six weeks away, and there's a lot of work ahead. And I am here today to make absolutely certain that Adam Taff is the next congressman from the third district in Kansas. (Applause.)

The President and I look forward to welcoming Adam to the nation's capital come January. He'll be vital in helping us meet the key priorities for the nation—in terms of winning the war on terror, strengthening the economy, and defending our homeland.

For the economy, this administration's goal is for faster growth and for more jobs for American workers. Even in the face of the major challenges—from the terrorist attacks to recession—the economic picture is nonetheless promising. Worker productivity has grown. Interest rates remain low. Inflation is under control. Personal income has continued to rise. And the economy continues to expand.

All of these factors set us on a path for long-term growth and prosperity. And if we continue the positive direction President Bush has set for the nation—with solid, pro-growth, pro-job reforms—Americans will enjoy even greater prosperity in the years ahead. But we will not be satisfied until every sector of the economy—from agriculture to high-tech—is vigorous and growing. And we will not rest until every person in America who wants to work can find a job.

We'll see more growth and new jobs when Congress passes the President's energy policy—a policy that encourages efficient technology and conservation, and increases production here at home. Especially in times like these, we must pass a comprehensive energy bill, and reduce America's dependence on foreign oil.

We'll see more growth and new jobs when people around the world have more opportunities to buy things that are made and grown here in America. Under President Bush's leadership, Congress has passed trade promotion authority, signed into law just recently. The President will use that tool to open up new markets to our country's farmers, ranchers, and manufacturers.

Congress has also followed the President's lead in passing a new law to protect investors, to bring more accountability to corporations, and to ensure tougher oversight in the accounting profession. Our country has the most productive, creative, and promising economic system the world has ever known. The President's reforms will bring out the best in that system, and make it even stronger and better than ever before.

Americans can also count on President George W. Bush to continue working to reduce the federal tax burden. Last year we passed the biggest taxpayer relief package in a generation. As enacted, however, those reductions stay in place only for a time, and then expire in the year 2011. Even the death tax is scheduled to rise from the dead that year. For the health of the economy—and for the well-being of every taxpayer—we need to make the Bush tax cut permanent, and enforce spending discipline in Washington, D.C. (Applause.)

Some in that city need reminding that every dime the government spends was earned and sent in by someone else. And we have a responsibility to help keep spending under control. In a time of war and recession-induced deficits, we need to show extra care in our spending priorities, and the discipline that fits the times. The President's budget commits most new spending to national security and to homeland defense, and seeks to hold the rest of government to an increase of two percent. Were spending to grow without restraint, billions more would be diverted from families and entrepreneurs, limiting the economy's ability to expand in the future. President Bush is going to insist on spending discipline in Washington—and, if necessary, he'll use the veto power to protect the American taxpayer.

Another responsibility the President takes very seriously is the job of placing qualified, common-sense judges on the federal bench. (Applause.) The Senator has a responsibility of its own—to give every nominee a prompt hearing and a vote. The Democratic leadership has refused to do so. Dozens of judgeships sit empty, while many of the President's judicial nominees have waited for more than a year for the Senate Judiciary Committee to even give them the courtesy of a hearing.

In nominating judges President Bush chooses men and women of experience, judicial temperament, and good judgment—people who respect the Constitution, and understand the limits of judicial power. The Senate should move to confirm the President's nominees for the federal courts, and they should do so without wasting another day. (Applause.)

As we look to the agenda for the fall, we are keeping first things first. The most important responsibility we have, as Adam mentioned, is to protect the American people against future attack and to win the war that started on September 11, 2001.

This has been a period of testing for the United States. The American people have met that test. We are united. We understand the threats that have formed against us. We are determined to protect our country. And we will prevail.

In the past year, we have captured many terrorists, and frozen the assets of many terror groups and front organizations. Our people in law enforcement and intelligence, working under the most urgent and sometimes dangerous circumstances, have disrupted terrorist plots here and abroad. At home, we are reorganizing the federal government to strengthen our ability to guard against further attacks. And of course in Afghanistan—where so many terrorists were housed, armed, and trained—we have shut down the camps, and liberated an entire nation from the Taliban regime. In the case of Osama bin Laden—as the President said recently—"If he's alive, we'll get him. If he's not alive—we already got him." (Laughter.) That's a Texas phrase, I guess. (Laughter.)

Every bit or progress we've achieved, all of us appreciate that we are still closer to the beginning of this conflict than to its end. The President and I begin each day with a briefing on the threats facing the country. There is little doubt that our enemies are determined to do further significant harm to the American people. Nine-eleven and its aftermath have given us a clear picture of the true ambitions of the global terror network, as well as the growing danger of weapons of mass destruction.

In that changing environment, as always, we must take the facts as they are, not as we wish they were, and we must think anew about the requirements of national security. In the days of the Cold War, we were able to manage the threat with strategies of deterrence and containment. But it is a lot tougher to deter enemies who have no country to defend. And containment is not possible when dictators obtain weapons of mass destruction and are prepared to share them with terrorists.

We have already found confirmation that the al Qaeda terrorists are seriously interested in nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. At the same time, there is a danger of terror groups joining together with regimes that have or are seeking to building weapons of mass destruction. In the case of Saddam Hussein, we have a dictator who is clearly pursuing these capabilities—and has used them previously, both in his own against Iran and against his own people.

The government of the United States must not look the other way as threats gather against the American people. We are consulting with Congress and with our friends and allies around the world about the course of action. In his speech to the United Nations General Assembly, President Bush made clear to the international community the kind of challenges we must face together.

The President reminded the U.N. that Saddam Hussein made a series of commitments after his defeat in Desert Storm—and that he has broken every one of them. Saddam agreed to cease at once his repression of his people—yet the systematic violation of human rights continues in Iraq to this day. He agreed to return all prisoners from Kuwait and other lands—yet more than 600 are still unaccounted for, and one American pilot—a Kansan named Scott Speicher—is among them.

Saddam Hussein agreed to renounce all involvement with terrorism, and to permit no terrorist organizations to operate in Iraq. Yet Iraq continues to shelter and support terrorist organizations. Dissidents abroad are targeted for murder. The Iraqi regime has attempted to assassinate the Emir of Kuwait and a former President of the United States.

Saddam Hussein promised the United Nations that he would destroy and cease further development of weapons of mass destruction and long-range missiles—and that he would submit to unrestricted inspections. He has flatly broken these pledges, producing chemical and biological weapons—aggressively pursuing a nuclear weapons program—and working to develop long-range missiles. And for four years now, he has refused to admit U.N. inspectors—four years during which he has been able to plan, to build and to test in secrecy.

Last week's letter from the Iraqi government to the United Nations, now pledging to allow inspectors back into the country, is another attempt to avoid strong action by the Security Council. We have seen this kind of tactic before. In the letter, the regime says it has no weapons of mass destruction. We know this is a lie. The entire world knows, beyond dispute, that Saddam Hussein holds weapons of mass destruction in large quantities, and is seeking to acquire more. This is not a matter of inspections. The only issue is the disarmament of Iraq, the elimination of the weapons of mass destruction, as required by Security Council resolutions.

False statements from the Iraqi regime will not cause us to ignore history or reality. Saddam Hussein has spent more than a decade in complete defiance of all the demands of the United Nations.

The question for the international community is whether the Security Council resolutions will be enforced, or disregarded without consequence—whether the United Nations will be effective, or irrelevant. As for the United States, the President has made our position abundantly clear: we want to work with the United Nations to meet the common challenge. The Security Council resolutions are to be enforced, or action will be unavoidable. We must, and we will, take whatever steps are necessary to defend our freedom and our security. (Applause.)

In the challenges to America we will be expecting a lot from our military—and those who serve have a right to expect a lot from us. If we're going to ask young men and women to defend our country, our allies, and our freedom, if we're going to send them into harm's way, on dangerous missions to fight determined enemies—they deserve the best tools, the best training, and the best support we can possibly give them.

We are investing in our military so that we can deploy swift and agile forces—any place, any time they're needed. We are building precision weapons that can spare the lives of American soldiers, and innocent civilians in foreign lands. We will multiply every advantage in order to prevail over any enemy. And to have this capability, President Bush has asked for the most significant increase in defense spending since Ronald Reagan lived in the White House.

The conduct of our military does more than bring credit to the country; it reflects the basic character of the American people. This is a good, and decent, and generous land. We fight not for revenge against our enemies, but for the freedom and security of our own people—and for the peace of the world. At times in our history the price of freedom has been very high, but Americans have always been willing to pay that price—even when the odds weighed heavily against us.

I was reminded of this the other day as I read David McCullough's biography of our first Vice President, John Adams. When Adams and his fellow delegates voted to approve the Declaration of Independence, they knew precisely what kind of trouble they were bringing on themselves. To sign the Declaration, one of the founders said, was like signing your own death warrant. As of July 4, 1776, they would be considered traitors to the king, at war with the army of an empire.

Large numbers of enemy soldiers were already positioned on American soil, intent on crushing the rebellion in short order. In mid-August, 32,000 British troops landed at Staten Island—an army greater in size than the entire population of our then-largest city, Philadelphia. The American force was far smaller, had very little in the way of equipment and supplies, and was comprised almost entirely of poorly-trained volunteers. All they had was the courage of human beings determined to live in freedom.

Before they prevailed the Americans endured not weeks, not months, but years of hardship and struggle. The American victory at Yorktown didn't come until the fall of 1781. The Treaty of Paris, which John Adams helped negotiate and which ended the Revolution, was finally concluded in September of 1783—more than seven long, difficult years after the Declaration was signed.

From that day to this, the people of the United States have understood that the freedom that we enjoy did not come easily—and we have no intention of letting it slip away. History has called generations of Americans to defend our country and to defeat some of the gravest threats known to mankind. We have accepted that duty once again, because we know the cause is just—we understand that the hopes of the civilized world depend on us—and we are certain of the victory to come.

In this critical time I have the honor to stand beside a President who has united our nation behind great goals. For all the challenges we face, the United States of America has never been stronger than we are today—and even better days are ahead of us. President Bush and I are very grateful for the opportunity to serve our country. We thank you for your support—not just for our efforts, but for good candidates like Adam Taff, who will make a fine partner for us in the important work ahead.

Thank you very much. (Applause.)

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I think it is important that we work off actual words and not headlines, off actual words and not interpretations, and off actual words and not feelings towards words.

That is the reason I wanted to enter into the RECORD the specific wording the Vice President used in the speech that is being commented upon a great deal by a number of Members. The headline that was out was not something that was said by the Vice President. I think it is important we get the actual words he used on Monday.

I want to also make something very clear. The Vice President did not at all challenge the patriotism of any Member of Congress—House or Senate, Republican, Democrat, or Independent. He did not challenge any of that. He didn't mention any member by name other than the one he is supporting, and who is running for the House of Representatives.

He spoke at length about Saddam Hussein, about the need for homeland security, and about the need to move these bills forward.

There was no accusation whatsoever about any lack of patriotism on anybody's part. He is supporting, in this case in Kansas, the Third District candidate, Adam Taff, a man who is a former military man, an F–18 pilot, who fought in the gulf war the first time around, and who is running for Congress. This particular individual actually served as an F–18 pilot in the military when Vice President CHENEY was then Secretary of Defense.

Here is a person, a candidate, Adam Taff, who actually worked for the Vice President when he was Secretary of Defense, in a military capacity, and he does push forward his military credentials, as any candidate for office would push forward his credentials for office. And Adam Taff claims his military credentials. I think that is fully laudable and appropriate.

I think it is important to make clear that the Vice President didn't challenge any patriotism whatsoever and did not reference the Senate in any of his comments. Again, as I stated, I have here his actual comments that have been submitted for the RECORD.

I think there has been far too much protesting about this when what we really need to do is get homeland security passed and get an Iraqi resolution dealt with and I hope passed. I hope we can get a resolution, work together in a bipartisan fashion, and get an overwhelming majority for the Iraqi resolution. If we need to adjust words on it, I think that is fully appropriate because we need to show to the world a united front and that this distraction today is just that—a distraction.

Homeland security we should have passed some time ago. We have been on it now for 3 weeks. We have been on it primarily because of special interest issues and not because of interests for the country. I think we need to get that bill posted and cleared in this Congress. It would be an important thing for us to do. It is the time for us to get that done. We have dawdled too long on it.

But these allegations coming forward today that somehow there has been a challenge to the patriotism of other Members of this body are simply not supported by the facts. They are not supported by the facts anywhere. They are not supported by what the Vice President said in Kansas.

We clearly need to deal with the facts instead of trying to divert attention by saying there is an accusation going on which is not built upon the facts—allegations that are coming forward challenging the patriotism of people who have served in the military and in this body. Nobody is challenging that.

There is a clear challenge that we are not getting homeland security passed. We have been 3 weeks at it. There is a clear challenge that we have to get an Iraqi resolution passed before this body goes out for the election period—possibly an extended recess, or coming back in a lame duck session, whichever actually takes place.

We really should get this bill moved forward. I think if people want to do away with these accusations, the best thing we can do is pass the homeland security bill and pass an Iraqi resolution that we work and mold together here as a body, and get that passed by an overwhelming majority in this body.

I urge my colleagues; I think it would be wise for us to lower our decibel level on this, look at the factual material, and not go after misleading headlines but actually examine the record and move forward with these two very serious pieces of business. It is important that we do that.

The Vice President has not—and I don't think in the future will—challenged anyone's patriotism. People disagree on political issues. They disagree on issues of policy. That is clear. That is why we have a body that debates these issues.

Some people view homeland security one way, and some people think we ought to support giving the President the authority to take whatever means necessary to remove Saddam Hussein. The former Vice President articulated a couple of days ago, saying no, that this is something we don't need to do and shouldn't do at this time. That is the former Vice President's opinion. Others have a different opinion on that.

But we would be wise to debate what those issues are, and the specifics, and not allege issues of character which are not being challenged by the President or by the Vice President.

I yield the floor.

COMMERCIAL OPERATIONS OF THE CUSTOMS SERVICE

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am very pleased that the Senate agreed last night, by unanimous consent, to adopt an amendment that Senator GRASSLEY and I offered to the homeland security bill. Our amendment will reinforce the commercial operations of the Customs Service within the new Department of Homeland Security.

A key objective of the homeland security bill is to create coherence in law enforcement at our nation's borders. The Customs Service is vital to that endeavor. For the vast majority of people entering the United States, their first encounter with the U.S. Government is when they are cleared by a Customs officer.

The Customs Service is the principal U.S. Government agency at most ports of entry. It enforces a multitude of commercial and other laws on behalf of itself and some 40 other Federal agencies. In addition to collecting duties, fees, and taxes on imports, Customs assists the Census Bureau in collecting trade data; enforces our environmental laws by ensuring that products of endangered species are not brought into this country; protects U.S. intellectual property owners and consumers by barring entry to counterfeit and "gray market" goods; prohibits illegal drugs and other contraband from coming into the United States; and enforces numerous other laws.

It was a Customs inspector who apprehended the so-called millennium bomber in Port Angeles, WA in December 1999. Customs also has played a major role in putting an end to the scourge of child pornography on the Internet and to fighting the war on drugs. Unquestionably, Customs is an essential player in law enforcement at our borders and, for this reason, ought to be integrated into a new Department of Homeland Security. At the same time, we must not forget that the core mission of the Customs Service is a commercial mission. Customs is first and foremost responsible for the collection of duties, taxes and fees on imports. This is one of the oldest functions of the Federal Government. It was authorized by the second act of Congress, in July 1789.

Today, duties collected by Customs constitute the second most important source of federal revenues, after the income tax. In fiscal year 2001, Customs processed over 25 million formal entries of cargo, worth over $1 trillion. Duties, fees, and taxes on that cargo amounted to about $20 billion. Thus, Customs' performance of its core commercial function is critical as a source of revenue to the U.S. Government. Customs' performance of its core commercial functions also is extremely important to the U.S. businesses that rely on imports and exports. The approximately 25 million formal entries that Customs processed in fiscal 2001 represented a 60 percent increase from only 5 years earlier. The volume of international trade is increasing significantly. To keep that trade flowing, Customs must perform its job with ever greater efficiency.

For these reasons, we must ensure that in moving from the Department of Treasury to a new Department of Homeland Security, Customs is able to do its commercial job as capably as it does today. I commend Chairman LIEBERMAN for recognizing this imperative and for working with the Finance Committee to secure the Commercial side of Customs within the new Department. I would like to point out that in mid-July, the Finance Committee held a very enlightening hearing on the issue of Customs' integration into a Department of Homeland Security. Following the hearing, Senator GRASSLEY and I transmitted a set of recommendations to Chairman LIEBERMAN and Ranking Member THOMPSON. I am very pleased that a number of the key recommendations are part of the pending bill. In particular: The bill preserves the Customs Service as a "distinct entity" in the new Department. The bill provides that appointments required to be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall continue to be subject to that requirement. I understand that this will include the Commissioner of Customs. The bill preserves for the Secretary of the Treasury certain legal authorities regarding "customs revenue functions." Thus, even though Customs will move to the Department of Homeland Security, the Secretary of the Treasury will remain the ultimate decision maker in issuing most commercial regulations administered by Customs. this is important, because it ensures that the national economic interest will guide the issuance of regulations affecting Customs' commercial operations.

We must bear in mind that this bill will move a commercial agency—Customs—from a Department whose primary focus is on the national economic interest, to a Department whose primary focus is on national security. The provisions I cited will help ensure that Customs' commercial mission does not get diluted in that process. The amendment accepted yesterday bolsters that objective.

The amendment contains three provisions.

First, it makes clear that certain user fees that Customs collects from passengers and conveyances entering the United States will be available for use by the Customs Service exclusively.

Second, it sets up a special account at the Treasury to support development and implementation of Customs' Automated Commercial Environment, known as "ACE." ACE is a modern computer system that will replace Customs' antiquated system for the processing of imports. Of the fees collected by Customs for processing merchandise, $350 million per year will be deposited into the ACE account.

Third, the amendment makes clear that the Advisory Committee on Commercial Operations of the United States Customs Service—known as the "COAC"—will remain in existence following Customs' move to the new Department. The COAC was created by statute in 1987. It is a bipartisan group of 20 representatives of individuals and firms affected by commercial operations of Customs. Over the years, it has provided valuable advice to the Secretary of the Treasury. Under this amendment, ti will continue to do so, and will advise the Secretary of Homeland Security as well.

I firmly believe that these provisions, along with the customs-related provisions in the underlying bill will ensure that Customs remains a strong and effective trade agency, as well as a strong and effective law enforcement agency, in the new Department.

Finally, I would like to say a word about another aspect of the Lieberman bill for which the Chairman should be commended. I am referring to the provisions protecting the rights of employees in the new Department. The most valuable resource of our government is the people who work for it. We must give every incentive for the best and the brightest to serve and to continue serving.

I understand that the President has asked for enhancement "flexibility" in dealing with employees of the new Department. However, it is not at all clear to me that depriving federal workers of collective bargaining rights, merit systems protections, and whistle-blower protections, among other protections, is necessary to achieve improved homeland security. In fact, I believe that just the opposite is true. To improve homeland security, we need a top-notch workforce. Getting and keeping that top-notch workforce means assuring employees that they will be treated fairly and enjoy the same protections that other federal employees enjoy. I applaud Chairman Lieberman for recognizing this and embedding it in the bill.

I thank the Chair.

EXPLANATION OF VOTES

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss my intent on four rollcall votes where I was necessarily absent due to my required presence in my home State of Montana. These votes are directly important to Montana and the Nation. I would like the opportunity to further the debate on these timely issues.

The cloture vote on Senator BYRD's amendment to the fiscal year 2003 Interior Appropriations legislation has a direct and fundamental impact on Montana for three reasons. First, the amendment reimburses the United States Forest Service for funding expended fighting fires this year. This funding is essential because of the high fire danger that still exists in the West due to the prolonged drought and funding already spent on fires cannot be used for existing USFS obligations and duties on our national forests.

Second, my good friend from West Virginia's amendment has already been modified to include the most important funding that could be dispersed this year for Montana's economy. I'm speaking, of course, about natural disaster funding for our farmers and ranchers. Montana is suffering through its fourth year of drought and conditions could not be worse. If we do not move forward with a disaster package, there will simply be fewer family farms and ranches around next year. Period. This is a debate that has gone on far too long and the House and President Bush need to come to the table and accept the work of the Senate. A natural disaster proposal has now passed the Senate twice by a large bipartisan margin. Now is the time to get this funding out to the people who need it, who need certainty about their future.

Finally, the reason that a cloture vote is required stems from the controversial nature of the pending amendment of Senator CRAIG regarding forest health. The issue of forest health is a huge problem in the West and has the most direct of conditions with not only the increased fire risk, but the drought that this legislation addresses. While the proposals vary, forest health is an issue that needs to be dealt with immediately. Further delay in the Senate does not serve Montanans or anyone in the West that is trying to make a living and a life under these conditions.

Because we need to deal with all three of these issues as soon as possible, I fully support cloture on Senator BYRD's amendment. I am disappointed that it did not pass.

With regards to the amendment proposed by my colleagues from Connecticut, Senators DODD and LIEBERMAN, I am forced to disagree with the basis of their amendment. My colleagues from Connecticut have represented their amendment as only codifying existing procedures. But, from what I understand based on the hearing held in the Indian Affairs Committee on September 18, this amendment in fact requires the implementation of new procedures, including adversarial hearings at the request of any interested party, raises the burden of proof that a petitioning group must satisfy in meeting the seven mandatory criteria, and requires the Department to provide notice to officials of every State and local government and municipality where a tribal group may have ever been historically located or any geographic area a tribal group may have ever occupied.

In my home State of Montana, the Little Shell Band of the Chippewa Indians have been battling for over a decade for their Federal recognition. They have had to jump through many hoops as it is and they have yet to receive their official recognition. My Colleague's amendment would not only prolong the Little Shell's recognition, but would only add to the burden they have already carried for over a decade. Based on the outcome of the Indian Affairs hearing and the impact on my tribe at home, I respectfully disagree with my colleagues on this matter and believe it is in the best interest of the recognition process that their amendment was rejected.

Moving on to the Homeland Security votes, I would like to address the amendment introduced by my esteemed colleague from West Virginia once again. Senator BYRD has urged that the Senate take its time to thoroughly debate and analyze the proposed legislation to create the Department of Homeland Security. He has introduced an amendment to ensure that the Congress continues to play a role in the creation of a new Federal Department of Homeland Security. I agree with the good Senator that Congress should debate and analyze this proposal, but I disagree with his proposal on how that debate should proceed.

The Byrd amendment would require that the department be established in three phases. Each phase would be initiated by a proposal sent to the Congress by the President. Each proposal sent to Congress would be referred to the appropriate congressional committees. The appropriate Congressional Committees should be involved in this process. But there are no deadlines or fast track procedures for legislative consideration and no guarantee the proposals would ever emerge from Congress and be signed into law.

This amendment would force Congress to reopen every battle over which agencies should be transferred into the new Department and on what terms they would be transferred. Moreover, by dividing the development into five separate legislative proposals, this amendment makes it impossible for legislators to consider the Department as a whole.

I regret to say that I cannot support my colleague's amendment and believe it was in the Nation's best interest that the amendment was not agreed to.

Finally, ever since the devastating attacks of September 11, Americans have been asking how the attacks happened, why they weren't prevented, and what corrective measures could be taken to prevent similar tragedies from ever occurring again. The American people deserve answers to these very legitimate questions. It's important that we find out just what happened through a non-partisan commission.

The amendment introduced by Senator LIEBERMAN represents a bipartisan initiative to help answer the many remaining questions in a constructive, methodical, and nonpartisan way. I support the amendment and am pleased that it passed.

SALUTE TO TAIWAN'S FIRST LADY

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I take great pleasure in welcoming Taiwan's First Lady, Wu Shu-chen, to Capitol Hill. Madam Wu Shu-chen is a unique and remarkable woman. She is the Republic of China's youngest first lady, yet she has the poise and charm equal to those much older than she is. Men and women of all political parties admire her as a genuine person, totally unaffected in manners. When she addresses an audience, she speaks from her heart and writes her own speeches in a simple and direct style. She is what you see, a natural gem, without artificial polish.

Like her husband, Chen Shui-bian, Madame Wu, has overcome a great deal of adversity. And like her husband, they have both been strengthened by their struggles. In 1985, Madame Wu was struck by a hit and run driver. Her injuries left her permanently paralyzed from the waste down and confined to a wheel-chair. Soon after Madame Wu was tragically wounded, her husband was imprisoned for political reasons. Madame Wu did not shrink from her duties to her family or her country. While her husband was in jail, she not only served as a pillar for her family, but she ran for a seat in the national legislature and won. No obstacle affecting her body or her heart could deter her.

Such a woman deserves our praise. Madame Wu is a natural leader; a matriarch in her family; and a matriarch to her country. I salute her for her selfless devotion to the people of Taiwan. We can all take strength from Madame Wu, and she is a role model for young women everywhere.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I extend my warmest welcome to the First Lady of Taiwan, Chen Wu Sue-jen, wife of President Chen Shui-bian, who is in Washington this week to visit with some of her and her husband's many friends here.

I am among the many admirers of President Chen. He is a courageous leader of his country at a very difficult time. The courage of his wife has earned for her great respect. In 1985, while supporting one of her husband's campaigns, Mrs. Chen Wu was hit by a vehicle that left her paralyzed from the waist down. That regrettable episode, believed by many to have been politically motivated, left this dear lady permanently confined to a wheelchair.

The following year when her husband was imprisoned by his political foes, Mrs. Chen Wu sought election on his behalf for a seat in the national legislature. She won and served in the legislature in spite of her serious injury. This courageous lady thereby kept Chen Shui-bian's political cause in the public eye.

Both before and after these events in their lives, Mrs. Chen Wu provided indispensable encouragement and support as Chen Shui-bian progressed from legislator to Taipei Mayor to President. He has called his wife his "most important source of strength."

First Lady Chen Wu Sue-jen was instrumental in building Taiwan's early, unequivocal and generous support for the United States and American people following the attacks on September 11, 2001. She comes to the United States this week with a message of Taiwan's continuing strong support in the war against terrorism.

I know that Senators will share my appreciation for her country's friendship and solidarity. I also hope they will join in welcoming Taiwan's First Lady on the occasion of her historic visit to the United States.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, today I would like to recognize Madame Chen We Sue-jen, the first lady of Taiwan, and welcome her to Washington, DC.

Madame Chen We Sue-jen has displayed exemplary character and strength in her endeavors to promote justice, human rights, and democracy in Taiwan. Overcoming both personal and professional hardships with grace, she has remained steadfast in her support of these principles.

Although Madame Chen We Sue-jen has overcome obstacles throughout her public career, never has she let it overcome her. She is described as optimistic, cheerful and friendly-noted for her sense of human and laughter. She continues to act as a strong and effective advocate for Taiwan's physically challenged citizens. Throughout all her trials, she has remained solid in her support for her family and the people of Taiwan. This strength of character has contributed much to the First Lady's greatness.

First Lady Chen Wu is here today to bring a message from her husband and the people of Taiwan. Her message is one of cooperation and support from the Taiwanese in our joint antiterrorism campaign. Already, with support of Madame Chen We Sue-jen, Taiwan has demonstrated charity and humanitarian assistance to the victims of the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001. As mentioned in the House Resolution, the Government and people of Taiwan have consistently provided tremendous support and generous contributions to the United States after those attacks.

Madame Chen We Sue-jen is a woman of great character and strength. I wish to offer my warmest welcome to her as she visits the Capitol. I extend my gratitude to her for all the important work she has done and I wish her well in her pursuits of justice and democracy.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred January 17, 2001 in Helena, MT. A gay college student was beaten unconscious in his dorm room. The attacker struck the student in the head with a bottle, beat him while he was unconscious, and wrote "Die Fag" on his body with an ink marker. The victim withdrew from school two weeks after the attack.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

CRANE CONSERVATION ACT OF 2002

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for S. 2847, which I recently joined as a cosponsor.

Cranes, the tallest flying birds on Earth and among the most graceful, inhabit wide expanses of wetlands and grasslands and exert a charismatic appeal reflected in many cultures.

Our Whooping Crane, the rarest of the world's cranes, is shared with Canada and has survived only because of close cooperation between the United States and Canada. If the species is to survive, however, those magnificent birds need more intensive conservation efforts. This bill would provide such help, all up and down the Mississippi River Flyway, while also applying our conservation techniques on behalf of nine more endangered species of cranes in Africa and Asia.

This bill would support organizations with expertise in crane conservation by funding projects in areas such as habitat protection and restoration, research and monitoring of crane populations, community participation and outreach, and reintroduction of cranes to the wild. The projects will be asked to promote long-term conservation by eliciting matching funds from government agencies, local communities, NGOs or others in the private sector.

Whether in Louisiana, elsewhere in the United States, or overseas, protecting cranes' ecosystems benefits thousands of other animal and plant species at the interface between aquatic and terrestrial habitats.

Louisiana is important to cranes because of the spectacular wetlands along our southwest coast. Sandhill cranes, which had disappeared from the state, already have returned as a wintering species. In a natural area near New Orleans, the Audubon Nature Institute has established a Species Survival Center which is rearing the endangered Mississippi subspecies of the sandhill crane, for release in the Mississippi Sandhill Crane National Wildlife Refuge near Biloxi. That Center also recently received eight Whooping Cranes and plans to expand to ten breeding pairs as the core of a plan to restore Whooping Cranes to Louisiana's coast.

Funding would flow through a new "Crane Conservation Fund" in Interior's Multinational Species Conservation Fund. In covering cranes, this bill would for the first time provide such protection for a species of bird.

I ask other Senators to join me in supporting the Crane Conservation Act of 2002.

FALUN GONG

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, today I would like to recognize the determination and perseverance of the Falun Gong, a peaceful movement seeking the basic freedoms to think as they wish and believe as they choose that we as Americans hold so dear.

Three principles of Truth, Compassion, and Tolerance lie at the core of Falun Gong. Those who practice Falun Gong do so to become better, healthier people through living by these principles.

Despite Falun Gong's peaceful principles and teachings, violations of human rights have occurred in China against Falun Gong practitioners. Human rights is an important goal as recognized by the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights which sets forth certain basic rights such as the right to life, to liberty, and to the freedom of expression. The Senate has ratified a series of international treaties such as International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights, 1976, and the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, 1987. The Senate's approval of these and other treaties highlights the progress made towards human rights.

In direct response to the recent human rights violations against Falun Gong practitioners, the Senate, on November 19, 1999, unanimously approved Senate Resolution 217. This resolution, "recognizing the plight of many Chinese citizens," calls on the Government of the People's Republic of China to: 1. release all prisoners of conscience and put an immediate end to the harassment, detention, physical abuse, and imprisonment of Chinese citizens exercising their legitimate rights to free belief, expression, and association; and 2. demonstrate its willingness to abide by internationally accepted norms of freedom of belief, expression, and association by repealing or amending laws and decrees that restrict those freedoms and proceeding promptly to ratify and implement the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

We must embrace the opportunity to continue to support the principles of Falun Gong to realize freedom and I wish them well in their quest for freedom and justice.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

NEW JERSEY TASK FORCE ONE

• Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today to bring to the attention of the Senate the outstanding efforts and contributions of the New Jersey Task Force One Urban Search and Rescue Team.

On September 11, 2001 at approximately 9:00 a.m. New Jersey Task Force One was activated and deployed to the World Trade Center Attack. Requested by New York City's Office of Emergency Management, New Jersey Task Force One had an advance team in New York City by 11:15 a.m. The team's entire equipment cache, along with 140 members was set up at the Jacob Javits Center by 2:00 p.m. that same day. They deployed search assets to search for survivors during the afternoon and evening of the 11th and for the next 10 days, they worked continuously as part of the urban search and rescue effort.

In a short period of time, New Jersey Task Force One became an integral part of the rescue efforts. The team was integrated into the FEMA Urban Search and Rescue System and was included in the FEMA Urban Search and Rescue Action Planning. The well-equipped New Jersey Task Force One had the ability to lend critical equipment to some of the responding FEMA teams and developed an excellent working relationship with many of these teams. Structural engineers and planners from New Jersey Task Force One were used by the FEMA Incident Support Team to brief the incoming FEMA teams as they rotated into New York City.

FEMA gave an operational performance evaluation to New Jersey Task Force One for their participation related to the World Trade Center Operations. New Jersey Task Force One was rated as superior in six out of nine categories. Those categories included attitude, initiative, consideration for personnel welfare, obtain necessary equipment and supplies, physical ability for the job, and safety.

With valor and honor, the members of New Jersey Task Force One have proven themselves as one of the finest Urban Search and Rescue teams in the country. It is for these reasons that my colleague, Senator CORZINE and I introduced S. 2618 to designate New Jersey Task Force One as the 29th National Urban and Search Rescue Team.

New Jersey Task Force One was formed in 1997 and they have used the FEMA Urban Search and Rescue guidelines in its development. The team is organized under the New Jersey State Police Office of Emergency Management Domestic Preparedness and Hazardous Material Planning and Emergency Response Unit. The State provides an annual budget of $1.5 million to support New Jersey Task Force One.

The team consists of 180 members from over one hundred different fire, police and EMS agencies throughout the State. Over the past few years, New Jersey Task Force One has purchased the necessary cache of equipment, based on the FEMA equipment list, and has trained its members to FEMA Urban Search and Rescue Standards. New Jersey Task Force One is in the process of purchasing weapons of mass destruction response equipment.

The 180 courageous men and women of New Jersey Task Force One have dedicated their lives to saving others. They have proven themselves to be highly qualified to join FEMA's Urban Search and Rescue System. I strongly believe that New Jersey Task Force One would enhance FEMA's Urban Search and Rescue program. I urge the FEMA Director to include New Jersey Task Force One as the 29th FEMA Urban Search and Rescue team. •

TRIBUTE TO MR. BOB HAYES

• Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I rise today to mark the passing of a truly exceptional friend and athlete, Mr. Bob Hayes. On September 18, 2002, the State of Florida and the world lost a trailblazing athlete who broke records on the track field and set the standard for speed and agility in the National Football League.

Bob was a native of Jacksonville, where he attended Gilbert High School. While at Gilbert High, Bob displayed his athletic talents on the football and baseball fields, and on the basketball court. The honors he won in these athletic pursuits afforded him the opportunity to attend Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University on scholarship, where he played half-back and returned kicks for legendary coach Jake Gaither. In his illustrious career as a FAMU Rattler, he led the team in kick-off returns, held the team's touchdown record in 1963, and averaged over 26 yards per punt return in 1962 and 1963. In his senior season, Bob became the first African-American to play in the Senior, North-South, Bowl, a game in which he caught a touchdown pass from former NFL-great Joe Namath and was also named the South's Most Valuable Player.

Bob was also a premier track star. In his junior year at Florida A&M, Bob competed in the Tokyo Olympic Games. He earned the title "World's Fastest Human" for record-breaking performances in which he won the 100 meters in a world-record time of 10.5 seconds and anchored the 400-meter relay, finishing in 39.0 seconds. Both performances earned him Olympic Gold medals. His performance in the 400-meter is widely regarded as the greatest relay leg in track history.

In 1963, the Dallas Cowboys drafted Bob in the seventh round as a receiver. As a rookie, Bob had 46 catches for 1,003 yards and 12 touchdowns. Several past NFL players, including Roger Staubach and Calvin Hill, have commented on how Bob's speed and agility forced the NFL to begin to design defenses to counter his phenomenal plays. Indeed, Bob established the standard, in terms of speed and quickness, which present players now emulate. Bob spent 10 years in Dallas, where he was part of two Super Bowl teams. At the end of his career, Bob had 371 catches for 7,414 yards and 71 touchdowns, still a Cowboys receiving record.

At his death, Bob remains the only athlete to have won a Super Bowl ring and Olympic Gold Medals. His amazing achievements on both the football and track field truly give meaning to his nickname—"The Bullet". He is enshrined in the USA Track and Field Hall of Fame and similar Halls of Fame in Florida, Texas and at Florida A&M. In September 2001, Bob was inducted as the 11th member of the Cowboys' Ring of Honor at Texas Stadium.

Bob's achievements stand as a testament to hard work, dedication and perseverance. In his later years, he sought to pass these ideals on to aspiring high school track stars through the Bob Hayes Invitational Track and Field Meet. Truly, it can be said that he touched many lives and inspired future generations of athletes. While it is with great sadness that I mark his passing, I am happy to recognize Bob's legacy for the great State of Florida and the entire world.•

TRIBUTE TO DR. BERNARD S. ARONS

• Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleagues Senator EDWARD KENNEDY, Congressman PATRICK KENNEDY, and many others to recognize the extraordinary achievements of Dr. Bernard S. Arons as Director of the Center for Mental Health Services at the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, and to acknowledge his departure as he moves forward to become Senior Science Advisor to the new Director of the National Institute of Mental Health. As we strive to pass critically important mental health legislation in this Congress, we know how fortunate we have been to have Bernie's extraordinary leadership at CMHS during these past nine years. His expertise and remarkable ability to integrate mental health services with evidence-based practices and scientific research made him an outstanding national leader who directed our country's mental health agenda through many years of challenge and crisis.

When Bernie first came to CMHS in 1993, he faced an enormous challenge: heading a new Federal Center whose mission was to lead our country in the delivery of mental health services. To do this, he faced the reality of inadequate resources at the federal, state, and local level for those with mental illness. The lack of mental health parity in private and public health care systems leaves many states struggling with how to help. Yet he was undaunted. He and his extraordinary staff at CMHS led the way on making mental health a major priority for this country. For these last 9 years, he has clearly taken our country forward and helped to restore hope to the millions of Americans with mental illness. Bernie's extraordinary talents as an administrator, scientist, and communicator, have made him a major force in advancing the public's awareness of the ways in which mental illness affects the lives of so many. Although stigma still exists, there are very few who dare to challenge the fact that mental disorders are real, that they are treatable, that there are effective national and community programs that can help, and that we must do more to ensure that all get the treatment they need.

During his tenure at CMHS, Bernie worked closely with former Surgeon General David Satcher to publish the first-ever Surgeon General's Report on Mental Health, which continues to enhance national awareness of mental health issues. He led CMHS in addressing many critical mental health issues that traditionally impede access to quality services, such as stigma and lack of community services. His commitment to making a difference fueled the work on a National Strategy for Suicide Prevention, which continues to bring together researchers, providers, advocates and consumers in developing a prevention plan to reduce suicide in the United States. Bernie also guided CMHS in providing a national response to recent terrorist threats, based in science and best practices. From studies on parity in mental health coverage to initiatives on school violence, CMHS has become a leading national voice on mental health issues under his leadership.

We are particularly pleased that Bernie was at the forefront of the efforts to shape the future of mental health services as our country faced the crisis of terrorism. More than ever, his efforts to include the voices of patients and families in the overall planning process at CMHS was needed. We too rely on those whose lives are touched by mental disorders to be the true experts in our work to shape public policy.

With his thoughtful, wise, and gentle manner, Bernie is truly a man who has the ability to bring together people with diverse responsibilities and missions to address the serious mental health crisis. Through his efforts, and with minimal resources, he shaped CMHS into an institution that has brought us so much further in the struggle to provide decent mental health services, reduce stigma, and to recognize as a society that mental disorders are real and treatable.

As he departs from the Center for Mental Health Services, we wish him well and thank him for all he has done to improve mental health care in our country. We are confident that Bernie has placed CMHS on a course that promises to build on these remarkable achievements, one that will meet the extraordinarily challenging mental health needs ahead. Dr. Bernie Arons will be sorely missed, but we know he will continue to be a major force for the improvement of mental health care in our country.•

MESSSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 3:41 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill with an amendment:

S. 941. An act to revise the boundaries of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area in the State of California, to extend the term of the advisory commission for the recreation area, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bill, with an amendment:

S. 1105. An act to provide for the expeditious completion of the acquisition of State of Wyoming lands within the boundaries of Grand Teton National Park, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House has passed the following bill, with an amendment:

S. 1240. An act to provide for the acquisition of land and construction of an interagency administrative and visitor facility at the entrance to American Fork Canyon, Utah, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bill, with an amendment:

S. 1894. STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. GREGG, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. DODD, Mr. FRIST, Mr. JEFFORDS, Ms. COLLINS, and Mr. TORRICELLI):

S. 3001. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to establish labeling requirements regarding allergenic substances in food, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am pleased today to join my colleagues Senator GREGG, Senator CLINTON, Senator ROBERTS, Senator DODD, Senator FRIST and others in introducing legislation to improve the labeling of allergens in food.

American families deserve to feel confident that the food they eat is safe. The Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act will allow the seven million Americans with food allergies to identify more easily a product's ingredients, avoid foods that may harm them, and stay healthy. One hundred fifty Americans die each year from ingesting allergenic foods, and this legislation will greatly reduce that number.

The Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act will require that food ingredient statements on food packages identify in common language when an ingredient, including a flavoring, coloring, or other additive, is itself, or is derived from, one of the eight main food allergens.

The Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act will require the Food and Drug Administration to provide for “gluten-free” labeling on foods, to help people with celiac disease avoid the glutens that cause their disease. It will require FDA to report to Congress about how manufacturers can minimize cross-contact with food allergens between foods produced in the same facility or on the same production line, and about when manufacturers should use “may contain” or other advisory language in food labeling.

The Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act will also require the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to track deaths related to food allergies, and it will direct the National Institutes of Health to develop a plan for research activities concerning food allergies.

I urge my colleagues in the Senate to support this legislation that will do so much to improve the lives of those with food allergies and celiac disease. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3001

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Food Allergen Labeling and Consumer Protection Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) it is estimated that—

(A) approximately 2 percent of adults and about 5 percent of infants and young children in the United States suffer from food allergies; and

(B) each year, roughly 30,000 individuals require emergency room treatment and 150 individuals die because of allergic reactions to food;

(2)(A) Eight major foods or food groups—milk, eggs, fish, Crustacean shellfish, tree nuts, peanuts, wheat, and soybeans—account for 90 percent of food allergies;

(B) at present, there is no cure for food allergies; and

(C) a food allergic consumer must avoid the food to which the consumer is allergic;

(3)(A) in a review of randomly selected manufacturers of baked goods, ice cream, and candy in Minnesota and Wisconsin in 1999, the Food and Drug Administration found that 25 percent of sampled foods failed to list peanuts or eggs as ingredients on the food labels; and

(B) nationally, the number of recalls because of unlabeled allergens rose to 121 in 2000 from about 35 a decade earlier;

(4) a recent study shows that many parents of children with a food allergy were unable correctly to identify in each of several food labels the ingredients derived from major food allergens;

(5)(A) current regulations of the Food and Drug Administration require that ingredients in foods be listed by their “common or usual name”;

(B) in some cases, the common or usual name of an ingredient may be unfamiliar to consumers, and many consumers may not realize the ingredient is derived from, or contains, a major food allergen; and

(C) current regulations of the Food and Drug Administration exempt spices, flavorings, and certain colorings and additives from ingredient labeling requirements that would allow consumers to avoid those to which they are allergic; and

(6)(A) celiac disease is an immune-mediated disease that causes damage to the gastrointestinal tract, central nervous system, and other organs;

(B) the current recommended treatment is avoidance of glutens in foods that are associated with celiac disease; and

(C) a multicenter, multiyear study estimated that the prevalence of celiac disease in the United States is 0.5 to 1 percent of the general population.

SEC. 3. FOOD LABELING; REQUIREMENT OF INFORMATION REGARDING ALLERGENIC SUBSTANCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 403 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 343) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(t)(1) If it is not a raw agricultural commodity and it is, or it intentionally bears or contains, a major food allergen, unless either—

“(A) ‘Contains’, which statement is followed by the name of the food source as described in section 201(ll)(1) from which the major food allergen is derived, follows immediately after or is adjacent to (in a type size no smaller than the type size used in the list of ingredients) the list of ingredients required under subsections (g) and (i); or

“(B) the common or usual name of the major food allergen in the list of ingredients required under sections (g) and (i) is followed in parentheses by the name of the food source as described in section 201(ll)(1) from which the major food allergen is derived, except that the name of the food source is not required when—

“(i) the common or usual name of the ingredient is the term used to describe a major food allergen in section 201(ll)(1), or

“(ii) the name of the food source as described in section 201(ll)(1) has appeared previously in the ingredient list; and “Provided all major food allergens are labeled in a consistent manner either as specified in clause (A) or as specified in clause (B).

“(2) The information required under this subsection may appear in labeling other than the label only if the Secretary finds that such other labeling is sufficient to protect the public health. A finding by the Secretary under this subparagraph is effective upon publication in the Federal Register as a notice (including any change in an earlier finding under this subparagraph).

“(3) Notwithstanding subsection (g), (i), or (k), or any other law, a spice, flavoring, coloring, or incidental additive that is, or that intentionally bears or contains, a major food allergen shall be subject to the labeling requirements of this subsection.

“(4) The Secretary may by regulation modify the requirements of subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1), or eliminate either the requirement of subparagraph (A) or the requirement of subparagraph (B), if the Secretary determines that the modification or elimination of the requirement is necessary to protect the public health.

“(u) Notwithstanding subsection (g), (i), or (k), or any other law, a spice, flavoring, coloring, or incidental additive that is, or that intentionally bears or contains, a food allergen (other than a major food allergen), as determined by the Secretary by regulation, shall be disclosed in a manner specified by the Secretary by regulation.”.

(b) EFFECT ON OTHER AUTHORITY.—This section does not alter the authority of the Secretary of Health and Human Services under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) to require the labeling of other food allergens.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 201 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 321) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(ll) The term ‘major food allergen’ means any of the following:

“(1) Milk, egg, fish, Crustacean shellfish, tree nuts, wheat, peanuts, and soybeans.

“(2) A proteinaceous substance derived from a food specified in paragraph (1) (unless the Secretary determines that the substance does not cause an allergic response that poses a risk to human health).”.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—A food that is labeled on or after January 1, 2006, and that is, or that intentionally bears or contains, a major food allergen (as defined in the amendment made by subsection (c)) shall be labeled in compliance with the requirements of the amendment made by subsection (a).

SEC. 4. REPORT ON FOOD ALLERGENS.

Not later than June 30, 2004, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report that—

(1)(A) analyzes—

(i) the ways in which foods, during manufacturing and processing, can be unintentionally contaminated with major food allergens, including contamination caused by the use by manufacturers of the same production line to produce both products for which major food allergens are intentional ingredients and products for which major food allergens are not intentional ingredients; and

(ii) the ways in which foods produced on dedicated production lines might nonetheless become unintentionally contaminated with major food allergens; and

(B) estimates how common those practices are in the food industry, with breakdowns by food type as appropriate;

(2) recommends methods that can be used to reduce or eliminate cross-contact of foods with the major food allergens;

(3) describes—

(A) the various types of advisory labeling (such as use of the words "may contain") used by food producers;

(B) the conditions of manufacture of food that are associated with the various types of advisory labeling; and

(C) the extent to which advisory labels are being used on food products;

(4) determines how consumers with food allergies or the caretakers of consumers would prefer information about the risk of cross-contact be communicated on food labels by using appropriate survey mechanisms; and

(5) identifies the circumstances, if any, under which advisory labeling could appropriately be used.

SEC. 5. INSPECTIONS RELATING TO FOOD ALLERGENS.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall give priority to increasing the number of inspections under section 704 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 374) of facilities in which foods are manufactured, processed, packed, or held—

(1) to ensure that the foods comply with practices to reduce or eliminate cross-contact of a food with major food allergen residues that are not intentional ingredients of the food; and

(2) to ensure that major food allergens are properly labeled on foods.

(b) Report.—On October 1, 2003, and biennially thereafter, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report that—

(1) states the number of inspections conducted in the previous year and the numbers of facilities and food labels that were found to be in compliance or out of compliance;

(2) describes the nature of the violations found;

(3) includes the number of voluntary recalls, and their classifications, requested by the Secretary of foods with undeclared major food allergens;

(4) assesses the extent of use of advisory language found and the appropriateness of that use; and

(5) assesses the extent to which the Secretary and the food industry have effectively addressed cross-contact issues.

SEC. 6. LABELING OF GLUTENS AND CELIAC DISEASE.

(a) Contract With Institute of Medicine.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (in this section, the "Secretary") shall enter into a contract with the Institute of Medicine for—

(1) the conduct of a review of the science relating to—

(A) the glutens in food that are associated with celiac disease;

(B) the means of preventing and treating celiac disease; and

(C) the methodologies for detecting such glutens in foods; and

(2) the submission to the Secretary, the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, of a report concerning the review conducted under paragraph (1).

(b) Requirements of Expertise.—The Institute of Medicine shall conduct the review under subsection (a)(1) and make the report under subsection (a)(2) in conjunction with experts in celiac disease, including experts in the pathogenesis, epidemiology, and biochemistry of celiac disease, the sensitivity to, and tolerance of, the glutens in food that are associated with celiac disease, and the clinical aspects of celiac disease, including prevention and treatment.

(c) Gluten Labeling.—Considering the review conducted under paragraph (a)(1), the Secretary shall, not later than 4 years after the date of enactment of this Act, issue a proposed rule to define, and permit use of, the term "gluten-free" on the labeling of foods. Not later than 6 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall issue a final rule to define, and permit use of, the term "gluten-free" on the labeling of foods.

(d) Report.—Not later than 2 years after submission to the Secretary of the report under subsection (a)(2), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives a report that assesses whether additional requirements for the labeling of gluten are warranted and necessary to better inform individuals with celiac disease, and if other labeling is warranted and necessary, identifies the types of such labeling.

SEC. 7. DATA ON FOOD-RELATED ALLERGIC RESPONSES.

(a) Study.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (in this section referred to as the "Secretary"), in consultation with consumers, providers, State governments, and other relevant parties, shall complete a study for the purposes of—

(1) determining whether existing systems for the reporting, collection and analysis of national data accurately capture information on—

(A) the prevalence of food allergies;

(B) the incidence of clinically significant or serious adverse events related to food allergies; and

(C) the use of different modes of treatment for and prevention of allergic responses to foods; and

(2) identifying new or alternative systems or enhancements to existing systems (including by educating physicians and other health care providers), for the reporting collection and analysis of national data on—

(A) the prevalence of food allergies;

(B) the incidence of clinically significant or serious adverse events related to food allergies; and

(C) the use of different modes of treatment for and prevention of allergic responses to foods.

(b) Improvement and Publication of Data.—On completion of, and consistent with the findings of, the study conducted under subsection (a), the Secretary, acting through the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and in consultation with the Commissioner of Foods and Drugs, shall improve the collection of, and publish as it becomes available, national data on—

(1) the prevalence of food allergies;

(2) the incidence of clinically significant or serious adverse events related to food allergies; and

(3) the use of different modes of treatment for and prevention of allergic responses to foods.

(c) Report to Congress.—Not later than 30 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report on the progress made with respect to subsections (a) and (b).

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary.

SEC. 8. FOOD ALLERGIES RESEARCH.

(a) In General.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, through the National Institutes of Health, shall convene a panel of nationally recognized experts to review current basic and clinical research efforts related to food allergies. The panel shall develop a plan for expanding, intensifying, and coordinating research activities concerning food allergies.

(b) Report to Congress.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit a plan under subsection (a) to the Committee on Energy and Commerce in the House of Representatives and the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions in the Senate.

SEC. 9. FOOD ALLERGENS IN THE FOOD CODE.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, in the Conference for Food Protection, as part of its cooperative activities between the States under section 311 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 243), pursue revision of the Food Code to provide guidelines for preparing allergen-free foods in food establishments, including in restaurants, grocery store delicatessens and bakeries, and elementary and secondary school cafeterias. The Secretary shall consider public and private guidelines and recommendations for preparing allergen-free foods in pursuing this revision.

SEC. 10. RECOMMENDATIONS REGARDING RESPONDING TO FOOD-RELATED ALLERGIC RESPONSES.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, in providing technical assistance relating to trauma care and emergency medical services to State and local agencies under section 1202(b)(3) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300d-2(b)(3)), include technical assistance relating to the use of different modes of treatment for and prevention of allergic responses to foods.

By Ms. LANDRIEU:

S. 3002. A bill to provide for the preservation and restoration of historic buildings an structures at historically black colleges and universities; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the "Historically Black Colleges and Universities Historic Preservation Act of 2002," legislation to revise and extend certain provisions of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996.

I want to begin by acknowledging the important role played by the Nation's Historically Black Colleges and Universities, HBCUs, in educating young people of all races and nationalities in America. HBCUs are in the vanguard of providing access and some measure of choice in higher education, and of opening the doors to educational opportunity for all students, regardless of family income and traditional measures of academic readiness for college study. In Louisiana, we have a strong family of HBCUs: Grambling State University in Grambling, Southern University's three campuses in Baton Rouge, Shreveport and New Orleans, as well as Dillard and Xavier universities in New Orleans.

While similar bills have been introduced this Congress, my bill takes a different and, I believe, a necessarily strategic approach in identifying, prioritizing and providing the funds necessary to restore all of the historic buildings and sites on black colleges and campuses. This historic preservation bill provides an orderly process for identifying and assessing the degree of deterioration of all properties; for determining the capacity of the HBCU to provide "matching" funds to assist in the cost of restoration; and for prioritizing Congressional funding and the Interior Department's determination of properties eligible for restoration funding.

This legislation is not only needed, it is also timely. In 1998, the National Trust for Historic Preservation placed the historic buildings of the nation's HBCUs on its list of "11 Most Endangered Historic Places". The Trust cited a General Accounting Office study that found that the estimated cost of restoring and preserving the 712 historic properties, including dormitories, chapels, gymnasiums and classroom buildings, owned by the schools is $755 million, of which a mere $60 million, or 8 percent, has been set aside in school budgets. If we in Congress fail to help, the cost of restoration will only continue to rise while these historic buildings continue to deteriorate.

I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor this important legislation. Without it, we may not be able to ensure that these buildings will survive into the new millennium and beyond to welcome future generations of scholars.

By Mr. MURKOWSKI (for himself and Mr. STEVENS):

S. 3003. A bill to authorize a land conveyance between the United States and the City of Craig, Alaska; and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce an important bill that will facilitate Forest Service land management on Prince of Wales Island and help community expansion and development. The City of Craig is one of the fastest growing cities in the State of Alaska. It is the economic center of Prince of Wales Island, the third largest island in the United States and home to a vibrant population of rural Alaskans. The only clinic or hospital on the island is located in Craig. The town contains the major retail shopping and service outlets on the island and Prince of Wales residents drive up to a hundred miles round trip to come to town for medical services and shopping.

One of the Forest Service's main administrative facilities, the Craig Ranger District Office is located in Craig and the Craig District Ranger has management authority over much of the island. It is critical that the Forest Service has the tools it needs to provide good management for that part of the island. One of these tools is the presence of some Federal land near the Craig Ranger Station. Right now, there is no Forest Service land near the Ranger Station. In an unusual situation for Alaska, the Ranger Station is an inholding in private, State, and City owned land. This legislation would provide for a three-way conveyance process which would result in a parcel of land now owned by the City being conveyed into the National Forest and a private inholding now owned by a private owner being acquired by the City.

This is one of those situations people like to describe as "win-win." Providing a new recreational opportunity in the Tongass National Forest at Craig benefits the public, and the residents of Craig would obtain land vital to future community development.

What this legislation does, is authorize the Federal Government to accept conveyance of land from the City of Craig which will enable the City to acquire a private inholding near the City. The City would convey to the Federal Government up to 348.68 acres of land it now owns to the National Forest. This land is highly prized for local recreation and would provide the Craig Ranger District with a missing piece of its management scheme by providing a recreation site within short walking distance of the Ranger Station.

Right now, visitors to the Forest come to the Craig Ranger Office to orient themselves to the Forest. One of the things they look for is onsite recreation in the Forest from the Ranger Station. But presently there is no such opportunity. Because of the land conveyance status directly around Craig, there is no Forest land in that area. Visitors are disappointed that they must arrange transportation for at least a 20 mile trip before they can take even a short walk on the Forest.

However, the City of Craig owns almost 350 acres of prime recreational land including a dedicated trail from the Ranger Station. The object of this legislation would be for that land to be conveyed by the City to the Forest and for the City to obtain a much smaller 10 acres site in the town now owned by a private party. That property is a cannery site dating from the early 1900's which has not been used since the early 1980's. It is prime land for the city to develop to improve its community management plan and to provide economic development in Craig. The parcel include both uplands and tidelands and could be used by Craig to develop a good port and harbor and to provide first class locations for retail merchants and other community services.

I strongly support meeting the needs of Craig in developing its local economy. The entire island is in transition. When I was first elected to the Senate in 1980, Craig and Prince of Wales Island were the center of a vibrant timber based economy that provided thousands of direct and indirect jobs to the Island. Much of that is now gone as a result of unfortunate Federal policies which have devastated the timber economy on Prince of Wales Island and much of Southeastern Alaska.

The Congress must help Craig in its transition to another economy. The City leaders are dynamic and visionary people who have provided real leadership on the island. They have worked hard to help maintain the remaining timber plant at Klawock which provides year round employment to city and island residents. They have organized, along with their neighbors, the Prince of Wales Community Council, an association of municipalities and Native and non Native communities to work as a team on islandwide projects.

The most recent product of this effort is the InterIsland Ferry Authority composed of members from Wrangell, Petersburg, Ketchikan, Craig, Throne Bay, and Coffman Cove. The Authority has built and put into service a day ferry from Hollis, a neighboring community to Craig, and my home town of Ketchikan. This ferry replaces the State ferry, which has been forced to cut back its service. The InterIsland Ferry service will increase to twice a day during the summer and will provide a terrific boost to the local economy of Craig and the island.

Passage of this legislation is critical to the future of the City of Craig. It will increase recreational opportunities for the local and visiting public. I urge my colleagues to join me in moving forward on this legislation. All the conveyances will be subject to appraisals as required by this Act. The Federal Government will receive equal value in land from the City for any funding which it provides under this Act. The passage of this Act is good for the public and for the residents of Craig. I yield the floor.

By Mr. AKAKA:

S. 3005. A bill to revise the boundary of the Kaloko-Honokōhau National Historical Park in the State of Hawaii, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Kaloko-Honokohau National Historical Park Addition Act of 2002. This bill provides for the adjustment of Park boundaries to permit the development of permanent Park operational facilities for administrative purposes and to provide the public with a visitor's center and interpretative facilities.

Kaloko-Honokōhau National Historical Park is located along the Kona coast on the island of Hawaii. It was designated as a National Historic Landmark in 1962 and was established as a National Historical Park in 1978. The Park was created to preserve, interpret, and perpetuate traditional Native Hawaiian culture. The ocean makes up over half of this 1160-acre Park, and the boundaries include the culturally significant Kaloko and ʻAimakapa fishponds and ʻAiʻopio fish trap. There are also several heiau, or Hawaiian religious sites, found in the Park.

The Kaloko-Honokōhau National Historical Park is currently leasing office space outside the Park to carry out its necessary administrative, interpretive, resource management and maintenance functions. This office space is woefully inadequate. The amount of visitor parking available is limited to four spaces, and its location presents a challenge for visitor access.

The National Park Service has considered the possibility of constructing new operational facilities within the Park boundaries. However, such action would be inconsistent with current National Park Service management policies because of its adverse impacts on Park resources and values. Building within the boundary of Kaloko-Honokōhau Park would intrude on the Park's historic setting and has the potential to harm the fishponds, which are considered to be some of the Park's most valuable resources.

Acquiring an additional two parcels of land adjacent to the Park makes sense. An existing two-story building will provide an easy and inexpensive retrofit for use as Park headquarters. The building has never been occupied, and contains offices, lab and storage areas, as well as a reception lobby that would be ideal to host visitor orientation and interpretive programs. The building has the capacity for artifact storage that meets curatorial standards for historical and archaeological items. More than 90 percent of the two acres remains undeveloped, thereby providing enough space for visitor parking and future Park operations. It is important to note that no additional staffing would be required to support the proposed expansion.

Last year, 54,000 people visited Kaloko-Honokōhau National Historical Park. We need a facility there that offers administrative personnel the resources they need to carry out their management functions, and visitors the opportunity to learn about this important part of Hawaiian history. I look forward to working with my colleagues and the Park Service to make this possible.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3005

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Kaloko-Honokōhau National Historical Park Addition Act of 2002."

SEC. 2. ADDITIONS TO KALOKO-HONOKŌHAU NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARK.

Section 505(a) of P.L. 95-625 (16 U.S.C. 396D(a)) is amended—

"(C) undercover operations;

"(D) the identity of confidential sources, including protected witnesses;

"(E) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to the protection of any person or property authorized protection by—

"(i) section 3056 of title 18, United States Code;

"(ii) section 202 of title 3, United States Code; or

"(iii) any provision of the Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976 (18 U.S.C. 3056 note); or

"(F) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to national security.

"(2) With respect to the information described under paragraph (1), the Secretary may prohibit the Inspector General from carrying out or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpoena, after such Inspector General has decided to initiate, carry out, or complete such audit or investigation or to issue such subpoena, if the Secretary determines that such prohibition is necessary to—

"(A) prevent the disclosure of any information described under paragraph (1);

"(B) preserve vital national security interests; or

"(C) prevent significant impairment to the national interests of the United States.

"(3)(A) If the Secretary exercises any power under paragraph (1) or (2), the Secretary shall notify the Inspector General or, with respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Assistant Inspector General for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties (in this section referred to as the 'Assistant Inspector General'), in writing (appropriately classified, if necessary) within 7 calendar days stating the reasons for such exercise.

"(B) Within 30 days after receipt of any notice under subparagraph (A), the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, shall prepare a copy of such notice and a written response that states whether the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, agrees or disagrees with the Secretary's exercise of a power under paragraph (1) and describes the reasons for any disagreement, to—

"(i) the President of the Senate;

"(ii) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(iii) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate;

"(iv) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

"(v) other appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress.

"(b)(1) In carrying out the duties and responsibilities under this Act, the Inspector General shall have oversight responsibility for the internal investigations and audits performed by any other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in any subdivision of the Department of Homeland Security. With respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Inspector General's responsibilities under this section shall be exercised by the Assistant Inspector General.

"(2) The head of each other office described under paragraph (1) shall promptly report to the Inspector General the significant activities being carried out by such office.

"(3)(A) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), the Inspector General may initiate, conduct, and supervise such audits and investigations in the Department (including in any subdivision referred to in paragraph (1)) as the Inspector General considers appropriate.

"(B) If the Inspector General initiates an audit or investigation under subparagraph (A) concerning a subdivision referred to in paragraph (1), the Inspector General may provide the head of the other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in the subdivision with written notice that the Inspector General has initiated such an audit or investigation.

"(C) If the Inspector General issues a notice under subparagraph (B), no other audit or investigation shall be initiated into the matter under audit or investigation by the Inspector General, and any other audit or investigation of such matter shall cease.

"(c) Any report required to be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress under section 5(d) shall also be transmitted, within the 7-day period specified under that subsection, to—

"(1) the President of the Senate;

"(2) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(3) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

"(4) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

"(d)(1) The Assistant Inspector General shall inform the complainant regarding what actions were taken in response to a complaint.

"(2) With respect to any complaints received or investigations undertaken by the Assistant Inspector General, any person employed by an independent contractor, or grantee, of the Department shall be entitled to the same protections as are provided to employees of the Department under section 7.".

(ii) instructions on how to contact the Assistant Inspector General; and

(G) on a semi-annual basis, submit to Congress, for referral to the appropriate committee or committees, a report—

(i) describing the implementation of this subsection, including the number of complaints received and a general description of any complaints received and investigations undertaken either in response to a complaint or on the initiative of the Assistant Inspector General;

(ii) detailing any civil rights abuses under subparagraph (A); and

(iii) accounting for the expenditure of funds to carry out this subsection.

(d) ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE INSPECTOR GENERAL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY.—The Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 8I as section 8J; and

(2) by inserting after section 8H the following:

SPECIAL PROVISIONS CONCERNING THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

"SEC. 8I. (a)(1) Notwithstanding the last 2 sentences of section 3(a), the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security (in this section referred to as the "Inspector General") shall be under the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Homeland Security (in this section referred to as the "Secretary") with respect to audits or investigations, or the issuance of subpoenas, which require access to sensitive information concerning—

"(A) intelligence or counterintelligence matters;

"(B) ongoing criminal investigations or proceedings;

"(C) undercover operations;

"(D) the identity of confidential sources, including protected witnesses;

"(E) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to the protection of any person or property authorized protection by—

"(i) section 3056 of title 18, United States Code;

"(ii) section 202 of title 3, United States Code; or

"(iii) any provision of the Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976 (18 U.S.C. 3056 note); or

"(F) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to national security.

"(2) With respect to the information described under paragraph (1), the Secretary may prohibit the Inspector General from carrying out or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpoena, after such Inspector General has decided to initiate, carry out, or complete such audit or investigation or to issue such subpoena, if the Secretary determines that such prohibition is necessary to—

"(A) prevent the disclosure of any information described under paragraph (1);

"(B) preserve vital national security interests; or

"(C) prevent significant impairment to the national interests of the United States.

"(3)(A) If the Secretary exercises any power under paragraph (1) or (2), the Secretary shall notify the Inspector General or, with respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Assistant Inspector General for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties (in this section referred to as the 'Assistant Inspector General'), in writing (appropriately classified, if necessary) within 7 calendar days stating the reasons for such exercise.

"(B) Within 30 days after receipt of any notice under subparagraph (A), the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, shall prepare a copy of such notice and a written response that states whether the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, agrees or disagrees with the Secretary's exercise of a power under paragraph (1) and describes the reasons for any disagreement, to—

"(i) the President of the Senate;

"(ii) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(iii) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate;

"(iv) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

"(v) other appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress.

"(b)(1) In carrying out the duties and responsibilities under this Act, the Inspector General shall have oversight responsibility for the internal investigations and audits performed by any other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in any subdivision of the Department of Homeland Security. With respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Inspector General's responsibilities under this section shall be exercised by the Assistant Inspector General.

"(2) The head of each other office described under paragraph (1) shall promptly report to the Inspector General the significant activities being carried out by such office.

"(3)(A) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), the Inspector General may initiate, conduct, and supervise such audits and investigations in the Department (including in any subdivision referred to in paragraph (1)) as the Inspector General considers appropriate.

"(B) If the Inspector General initiates an audit or investigation under subparagraph (A) concerning a subdivision referred to in paragraph (1), the Inspector General may provide the head of the other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in the subdivision with written notice that the Inspector General has initiated such an audit or investigation.

"(C) If the Inspector General issues a notice under subparagraph (B), no other audit or investigation shall be initiated into the matter under audit or investigation by the Inspector General, and any other audit or investigation of such matter shall cease.

"(c) Any report required to be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress under section 5(d) shall also be transmitted, within the 7-day period specified under that subsection, to—

"(1) the President of the Senate;

"(2) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(3) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

"(4) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

"(d)(1) The Assistant Inspector General shall inform the complainant regarding what actions were taken in response to a complaint.

"(2) With respect to any complaints received or investigations undertaken by the Assistant Inspector General, any person employed by an independent contractor, or grantee, of the Department shall be entitled to the same protections as are provided to employees of the Department under section 7.".

"(i) section 3056 of title 18, United States Code;

"(ii) section 202 of title 3, United States Code; or

"(iii) any provision of the Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976 (18 U.S.C. 3056 note); or

"(F) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to national security.

"(2) With respect to the information described under paragraph (1), the Secretary may prohibit the Inspector General from carrying out or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpoena, after such Inspector General has decided to initiate, carry out, or complete such audit or investigation or to issue such subpoena, if the Secretary determines that such prohibition is necessary to—

"(A) prevent the disclosure of any information described under paragraph (1);

"(B) preserve the national security; or

"(C) prevent significant impairment to the national interests of the United States.

"(3) If the Secretary exercises any power under paragraph (1) or (2), the Secretary shall notify the Inspector General in writing (appropriately classified, if necessary) within 7 calendar days stating the reasons for such exercise. Within 30 days after receipt of any such notice, the Inspector General shall transmit a copy of such notice, together with such comments concerning the exercise of such power as the Inspector General considers appropriate, to—

"(A) the President of the Senate;

"(B) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(C) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate;

"(D) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

"(E) other appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress.

"(b)(1) In carrying out the duties and responsibilities under this Act, the Inspector General shall have oversight responsibility for the internal investigations and audits performed by any other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in any subdivision of the Department of Homeland Security.

"(2) The head of each other office described under paragraph (1) shall promptly report to the Inspector General the significant activities being carried out by such office.

"(3) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), the Inspector General may initiate, conduct, and supervise such audits and investigations in the Department (including in any subdivision referred to in paragraph (1)) as the Inspector General considers appropriate.

"(4) If the Inspector General initiates an audit or investigation under paragraph (3) concerning a subdivision referred to in paragraph (1), the Inspector General may provide the head of the other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in the subdivision with written notice that the Inspector General has initiated such an audit or investigation. If the Inspector General issues such a notice, no other audit or investigation shall be initiated into the matter under audit or investigation by the Inspector General, and any other audit or investigation of such matter shall cease.

"(c) Any report required to be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress under section 5(d) shall also be transmitted, within the 7-day period specified under that subsection, to—

"(1) the President of the Senate;

"(2) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(3) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

"(4) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.".

(e) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. appendix) is amended—

(d) Additional Provisions With Respect to the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security.—The Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 8I as section 8J; and

(2) by inserting after section 8H the following:

SPECIAL PROVISIONS CONCERNING THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

"Sec. 8I. (a)(1) Notwithstanding the last 2 sentences of section 3(a), the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security (in this section referred to as the "Inspector General") shall be under the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Homeland Security (in this section referred to as the "Secretary") with respect to audits or investigations, or the issuance of subpoenas, which require access to sensitive information concerning—

"(A) intelligence or counterintelligence matters;

"(B) ongoing criminal investigations or proceedings;

"(C) undercover operations;

"(D) the identity of confidential sources, including protected witnesses;

"(E) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to the protection of any person or property authorized protection by—

"(i) section 3056 of title 18, United States Code;

"(ii) section 202 of title 3, United States Code; or

"(iii) any provision of the Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976 (18 U.S.C. 3056 note); or

"(F) other matters the disclosure of which would constitute a serious threat to national security.

"(2) With respect to the information described under paragraph (1), the Secretary may prohibit the Inspector General from carrying out or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpoena, after such Inspector General has decided to initiate, carry out, or complete such audit or investigation or to issue such subpoena, if the Secretary determines that such prohibition is necessary to—

"(A) prevent the disclosure of any information described under paragraph (1);

"(B) preserve vital national security interests; or

"(C) prevent significant impairment to the national interests of the United States.

"(3)(A) If the Secretary exercises any power under paragraph (1) or (2), the Secretary shall notify the Inspector General or, with respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Assistant Inspector General for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties (in this section referred to as the 'Assistant Inspector General'), in writing (appropriately classified, if necessary) within 7 calendar days stating the reasons for such exercise.

"(B) Within 30 days after receipt of any notice under subparagraph (A), the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, shall prepare a copy of such notice and a written response that states whether the Inspector General or Assistant Inspector General, as appropriate, agrees or disagrees with the Secretary's exercise of a power under paragraph (1) and describes the reasons for any disagreement, to—

"(i) the President of the Senate;

"(ii) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(iii) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate;

"(iv) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives; and

"(v) other appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress.

"(b)(1) In carrying out the duties and responsibilities under this Act, the Inspector General shall have oversight responsibility for the internal investigations and audits performed by any other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in any subdivision of the Department of Homeland Security. With respect to investigations relating to civil rights or civil liberties, the Inspector General's responsibilities under this section shall be exercised by the Assistant Inspector General.

"(2) The head of each other office described under paragraph (1) shall promptly report to the Inspector General the significant activities being carried out by such office.

"(3)(A) Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2), the Inspector General may initiate, conduct, and supervise such audits and investigations in the Department (including in any subdivision referred to in paragraph (1)) as the Inspector General considers appropriate.

"(B) If the Inspector General initiates an audit or investigation under subparagraph (A) concerning a subdivision referred to in paragraph (1), the Inspector General may provide the head of the other office performing internal investigatory or audit functions in the subdivision with written notice that the Inspector General has initiated such an audit or investigation.

"(C) If the Inspector General issues a notice under subparagraph (B), no other audit or investigation shall be initiated into the matter under audit or investigation by the Inspector General, and any other audit or investigation of such matter shall cease.

"(c) Any report required to be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate committees or subcommittees of Congress under section 5(d) shall also be transmitted, within the 7-day period specified under that subsection, to—

"(1) the President of the Senate;

"(2) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

"(3) the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

"(4) the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

"(d)(1) The Assistant Inspector General shall inform the complainant regarding what actions were taken in response to a complaint.

"(2) With respect to any complaints received or investigations undertaken by the Assistant Inspector General, any person employed by an independent contractor, or grantee, of the Department shall be entitled to the same protections as are provided to employees of the Department under section 7.".

(e) Technical and Conforming Amendments.—The Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. appendix) is amended—

(1) in section 4(b), by striking "8F" each place it appears and inserting "8G"; and

(2) in section 8J (as redesignated by subsection (d)(1)), by striking "or 8H" and inserting ", 8H, or 8I".

(f) Definition.—In this Act, the term "civil rights and civil liberties" means rights and liberties, which—

(1) are or may be protected by the Constitution or implementing legislation; or

(2) are analogous to the rights and liberties under paragraph (1), whether or not secured by treaty, statute, regulation or executive order.

SEC. . STANDARDS FOR CLOSING REMOVAL HEARINGS.

Section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1229a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

"(e) Standards for Closing Removal Hearings.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), a removal proceeding under this section shall be open to the public.

"(2) Exceptions.—Portions of a removal proceeding under this section may be closed to the public, on a case by case basis, when necessary—

"(A) and with the consent of the alien, to preserve the confidentiality of applications for—

"(i) asylum;

"(ii) withholding of removal;

"(iii) relief under the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, done at New York December 10, 1984;

"(iv) relief under the Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-322; 108 Stat. 1902); or

"(v) other applications for relief involving confidential personal information or where portions of the removal hearing involve minors or issues relating to domestic violence; or

"(B) to protect the national security by preventing the disclosure of—

"(i) classified information; or

"(ii) the identity of a confidential informant.".

DIVISION D—NATIONAL COMMISSION

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

Unless the context clearly indicates otherwise, the following shall apply for purposes of this Act:

(1) AMERICAN HOMELAND OR HOMELAND.—Each of the terms "American homeland" or "homeland" mean the United States, in a geographic sense.

(2) CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE.—The term "critical infrastructure" means systems and assets, whether physical or virtual, so vital to the United States that the incapacitation or destruction of such systems or assets would have a debilitating impact on security, national economic security, national public health or safety, or any combination of those matters.

(3) ASSETS.—The term "assets" includes contracts, facilities, property, records, unobligated or unexpended balances of appropriations, and other funds or resources (other than personnel).

(4) DEPARTMENT.—The term "Department" means the Department of Homeland Security.

(5) EMERGENCY RESPONSE PROVIDERS.—The term "emergency response providers" includes Federal, State, and local government emergency public safety, law enforcement, emergency response, emergency medical, and related personnel, agencies, and authorities.

(6) EXECUTIVE AGENCY.—The term "Executive agency" means an executive agency and a military department, as defined, respectively, in sections 105 and 102 of title 5, United States Code.

(7) FUNCTIONS.—The term "functions" includes authorities, powers, rights, privileges, immunities, programs, projects, activities, duties, responsibilities, and obligations.

(8) KEY RESOURCES.—The term "key resources" means structures, monuments or items of exceptional historical, social, cultural, or symbolic significance to the United States.

(9) LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The term "local government" has the meaning given in section 102(6) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (Public Law 93-288).

(10) MAJOR DISASTER.—The term "major disaster" has the meaning given in section 102(2) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (Public Law 93-288).

(11) PERSONNEL.—The term "personnel" means officers and employees.

(12) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Homeland Security.

(13) UNITED STATES.—The term "United States", when used in a geographic sense, means any State (within the meaning of section 102(4) of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (Public Law 93-288)), any possession of the United States, and any waters within the jurisdiction of the United States.

SEC. 3. CONSTRUCTION; SEVERABILITY.

Any provision of this Act held to be invalid or unenforceable by its terms, or as applied to any person or circumstance, shall be construed so as to give it the maximum effect permitted by law, unless such holding shall be one of utter invalidity or unenforceability, in which event such provision shall be deemed severable from this Act and shall not affect the remainder thereof, or the application of such provision to other persons not similarly situated or to other, dissimilar circumstances.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect thirty days after the date of enactment or, if enacted within thirty days before January 1, 2003, on January 1, 2003.

DIVISION A—HOMELAND SECURITY

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

SEC. 101. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT; MISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a Department of Homeland Security, as an executive department of the United States within the meaning of title 5, United States Code.

(b) PRIMARY MISSION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The primary mission of the Department is to—

(A) prevent terrorist attacks within the United States;

(B) reduce the vulnerability of the United States to terrorism; and

(C) minimize the damage, and assist in the recovery, from terrorist attacks that do occur within the United States.

(2) RESPONSIBILITIES.—In carrying out the mission described in paragraph (1), and as further described in this Act, the Department's primary responsibilities shall include—

(A) information analysis and infrastructure protection;

(B) research and development, including efforts to counter chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and other emerging threats;

(C) border and transportation security;

(D) emergency preparedness and response; and

(E) coordination (including the provision of training and equipment) with other executive agencies, with State and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities, with the private sector, and with other entities.

(3) OTHER RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Department shall also be responsible for carrying out other functions of entities transferred to the Department as provided by law, and the enumeration of the primary homeland security missions and responsibilities in this section does not impair or diminish the Department's non-homeland security missions and responsibilities.

SEC. 102. SECRETARY; FUNCTIONS.

(a) SECRETARY.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—There is a Secretary of Homeland Security, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) HEAD OF DEPARTMENT.—The Secretary is the head of the Department and shall have direction, authority, and control over it.

(3) VESTED FUNCTIONS.—All functions of all officers, employees, and organizational units of the Department are vested in the Secretary.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Secretary—

(1) may, except as otherwise provided in this Act, delegate any of his functions to any officer, employee, or organizational unit of the Department;

(2) shall have such functions, including the authority to make contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements, and to enter into agreements with other executive agencies, as may be necessary and proper to carry out his responsibilities under this Act or otherwise provided by law; and

(3) may, subject to the direction of the President, attend and participate in meetings of the National Security Council.

SEC. 103. OTHER OFFICERS.

(a) DEPUTY SECRETARY; UNDER SECRETARIES.—To assist the Secretary in the performance of his functions, there are the following officers, appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate:

(1) A Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security, who shall be the Secretary's first assistant for purposes of chapter 33, subchapter 3, of title 5, United States Code.

(2) An Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection.

(3) An Under Secretary for Science and Technology.

(4) An Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security.

(5) An Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response.

(6) An Under Secretary for Management.

(7) An Under Secretary for Immigration Affairs.

(8) Not more than 16 Assistant Secretaries.

(9) A General Counsel, who shall be the chief legal officer of the Department.

(b) CHIEF OF IMMIGRATION POLICY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be within the office of the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security a Chief of Immigration Policy, who, under the authority of the Secretary, shall be responsible for—

(A) establishing national immigration policy and priorities; and

(B) coordinating immigration policy between the Directorate of Immigration Affairs and the Directorate of Border and Transportation Security.

(2) WITHIN THE SENIOR EXECUTIVE SERVICE.—The position of Chief of Immigration Policy shall be a Senior Executive Service position under section 5382 of title 5, United States Code.

(c) INSPECTOR GENERAL.—To assist the Secretary in the performance of his functions, there is an Inspector General, who shall be appointed as provided in section 3(a) of the Inspector General Act of 1978.

(d) COMMANDANT OF THE COAST GUARD.—To assist the Secretary in the performance of his functions, there is a Commandant of the Coast Guard, who shall be appointed as provided in section 44 of title 14, United States Code.

(e) OTHER OFFICERS.—To assist the Secretary in the performance of his functions, there are the following officers, appointed by the President:

(1) A Director of the Secret Service.

(2) A Chief Financial Officer.

(3) A Chief Information Officer.

(4) A Chief Human Capital Officer.

(f) PERFORMANCE OF SPECIFIC FUNCTIONS.—Subject to the provisions of this Act, every officer of the Department shall perform the functions specified by law for his office or prescribed by the Secretary.

SEC. 104. OFFICE OF INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Office of the Secretary, an Office of International Affairs. The Office shall be headed by a Director who shall be appointed by the Secretary.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE DIRECTOR.—The Director shall have the following responsibilities:

(1) To promote information and education exchange with foreign nations in order to promote sharing of best practices and technologies relating to homeland security. Such information exchange shall include—

(A) joint research and development on countermeasures;

(B) joint training exercises of first responders; and

(C) exchange of expertise on terrorism prevention, response, and crisis management.

(2) To identify areas for homeland security information and training exchange.

(3) To plan and undertake international conferences, exchange programs, and training activities.

(4) To manage activities under this section and other international activities within the Department in consultation with the Department of State and other relevant Federal officials.

(5) To initially concentrate on fostering cooperation with countries that are already highly focused on homeland security issues and that have demonstrated the capability for fruitful cooperation with the United States in the area of counterterrorism.

TITLE II—INFORMATION ANALYSIS AND INFRASTRUCTURE PROTECTION

SEC. 201. DIRECTORATE FOR INFORMATION ANALYSIS AND INFRASTRUCTURE PROTECTION.

(a) Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection.—

(1) In general.—There shall be in the Department a Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection headed by an Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) Responsibilities.—The Under Secretary shall assist the Secretary in discharging the responsibilities under section 101 (b)(2)(A) and (d).

(b) Assistant Secretary for Information Analysis; Assistant Secretary for Infrastructure Protection.—

(1) Assistant secretary for information analysis.—There shall be in the Department an Assistant Secretary for Information Analysis, who shall be appointed by the President.

(2) Assistant secretary for infrastructure protection.—There shall be in the Department an Assistant Secretary for Infrastructure Protection, who shall be appointed by the President.

(3) Responsibilities.—The Assistant Secretary for Information Analysis and the Assistant Secretary for Infrastructure Protection shall assist the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection in discharging the responsibilities of the Under Secretary under this section.

(c) Discharge of Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection.—The Secretary shall ensure that the responsibilities of the Department regarding information analysis and infrastructure protection are carried out through the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection.

(d) Responsibilities of Under Secretary.—Subject to the direction and control of the Secretary, the responsibilities of the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection shall be as follows:

(1) To access, receive, and analyze law enforcement information, intelligence information, intelligence-related information, and other information from agencies of the Federal Government, State and local government agencies (including law enforcement agencies), and private sector entities, and to integrate such information in order to—

(A) identify and assess the nature and scope of threats to the homeland;

(B) detect and identify threats of terrorism against the United States and other threats to homeland security; and

(C) understand such threats in light of actual and potential vulnerabilities of the homeland.

(2) To carry out comprehensive assessments of the vulnerabilities of the key resources and critical infrastructure of the United States, including the performance of risk assessments to determine the risks posed by particular types of terrorist attacks within the United States (including an assessment of the probability of success of such attacks and the feasibility and potential efficacy of various countermeasures to such attacks).

(3) To integrate relevant information, analyses, and vulnerability assessments (whether such information, analyses, or assessments are provided or produced by the Department or others) in order to identify priorities for protective measures and to support protective measures by the Department, other agencies of the Federal Government, State and local government agencies and authorities, the private sector, and other entities.

(4) To ensure, pursuant to section 202, the timely and efficient access by the Department to all information necessary to discharge the responsibilities under this section, including obtaining such information from other agencies of the Federal Government agencies, and from State and local governments and private sector entities (pursuant to memoranda of understanding or other agreements entered into for that purpose).

(5) To develop a comprehensive national plan for securing the key resources and critical infrastructure of the United States.

(6) To take or seek to effect measures necessary to protect the key resources and critical infrastructure of the United States in coordination with other agencies of the Federal Government and in cooperation with State and local government agencies and authorities, the private sector, and other entities.

(7) To administer the Homeland Security Advisory System, including—

(A) exercising primary responsibility for public threat advisories; and

(B) in coordination with other agencies of the Federal Government, providing specific warning information, and advice about appropriate protective measures and countermeasures, to State and local government agencies and authorities, the private sector, other entities, and the public.

(8) To review, analyze, and make recommendations for improvements in the policies and procedures governing the sharing of law enforcement information, intelligence information, intelligence-related information, and other information relating to homeland security within the Federal Government and between the Federal Government and State and local government agencies and authorities.

(9) To disseminate, as appropriate, information analyzed by the Department within the Department, to other agencies of the Federal Government with responsibilities relating to homeland security, and to agencies of State and local governments and private sector entities with such responsibilities in order to assist in the deterrence, prevention, preemption of, or response to, terrorist attacks against the United States.

(10) To consult with the Director of Central Intelligence and other appropriate intelligence, law enforcement, or other elements of the Federal Government to establish collection priorities and strategies for information, including law enforcement-related information, relating to threats of terrorism against the United States through such means as the representation of the Department in discussions regarding requirements and priorities in the collection of such information.

(11) To consult with State and local governments and private sector entities to ensure appropriate exchanges of information, including law enforcement-related information, relating to threats of terrorism against the United States.

(12) To ensure that—

(A) any material received pursuant to this section is protected from unauthorized disclosure and handled and used only for the performance of official duties; and

(B) any intelligence information shared under this section is transmitted, retained, and disseminated consistent with the authority of the Director of Central Intelligence to protect intelligence sources and methods under the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401 et seq.) and related procedures and, as appropriate, similar authorities of the Attorney General concerning sensitive law enforcement information.

(13) To request and obtain additional information from other agencies of the Federal Government, State and local government agencies, and the private sector relating to threats of terrorism in the United States, or relating to other areas of responsibility under section 101, including the entry into cooperative agreements through the Secretary to obtain such information.

(14) To establish and utilize, in conjunction with the chief information officer of the Department, a secure communications and information technology infrastructure, including data-mining and other advanced analytical tools, in order to access, receive, and analyze data and information in furtherance of the responsibilities under this section, and to disseminate information acquired and analyzed by the Department, as appropriate.

(15) To ensure, in conjunction with the chief information officer of the Department, that any information databases and analytical tools developed or utilized by the Department—

(A) are compatible with one another and with relevant information databases of other agencies of the Federal Government; and

(B) treat information in such databases in a manner that complies with applicable Federal law on privacy.

(16) To coordinate training and other support to the elements and personnel of the Department, other agencies of the Federal Government, and State and local governments that provide information to the Department, or are consumers of information provided by the Department, in order to facilitate the identification and sharing of information revealed in their ordinary duties and the optimal utilization of information received from the Department.

(17) To coordinate with elements of the intelligence community and with Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, and the private sector, as appropriate.

(18) To provide intelligence and information analysis and support to other elements of the Department.

(19) To perform such other duties relating to such responsibilities as the Secretary may provide.

(e) Staff.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary shall provide the Directorate with a staff of analysts having appropriate expertise and experience to assist the Directorate in discharging responsibilities under this section.

(2) Private sector analysts.—Analysts under this subsection may include analysts from the private sector.

(3) Security clearances.—Analysts under this subsection shall possess security clearances appropriate for their work under this section.

(f) Detail of Personnel.—

(1) In general.—In order to assist the Directorate in discharging responsibilities under this section, personnel of the agencies referred to in paragraph (2) may be detailed to the Department for the performance of analytic functions and related duties.

(2) Covered agencies.—The agencies referred to in this paragraph are as follows:

(A) The Department of State.

(B) The Central Intelligence Agency.

(C) The Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(D) The National Security Agency.

(E) The National Imagery and Mapping Agency.

(F) The Defense Intelligence Agency.

(G) Any other agency of the Federal Government that the President considers appropriate.

(3) Cooperative agreements.—The Secretary and the head of the agency concerned may enter into cooperative agreements for the purpose of detailing personnel under this subsection.

(4) Basis.—The detail of personnel under this subsection may be on a reimbursable or non-reimbursable basis.

(g) Functions Transferred.—In accordance with title VIII, there shall be transferred to the Secretary, for assignment to the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection under this section, the functions, personnel, assets, and liabilities of the following:

(1) The National Infrastructure Protection Center of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (other than the Computer Investigations and Operations Section), including the functions of the Attorney General relating thereto.

(2) The National Communications System of the Department of Defense, including the functions of the Secretary of Defense relating thereto.

(3) The Critical Infrastructure Assurance Office of the Department of Commerce, including the functions of the Secretary of Commerce relating thereto.

(4) The Computer Security Division of the National Institute of Standards and Technology, including the functions of the Secretary of Commerce relating thereto.

(5) The National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center of the Department of Energy and the energy security and assurance program and activities of the Department, including the functions of the Secretary of Energy relating thereto.

(6) The Federal Computer Incident Response Center of the General Services Administration, including the functions of the Administrator of General Services relating thereto.

(h) Study of Placement Within Intelligence Community.—Not later than 90 days after the effective date of this Act, the President shall submit to the Committee on Governmental Affairs and the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives a report assessing the advisability of the following:

(1) Placing the elements of the Department concerned with the analysis of foreign intelligence information within the intelligence community under section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a(4)).

(2) Placing such elements within the National Foreign Intelligence Program for budgetary purposes.

SEC. 202. ACCESS TO INFORMATION.

(a) In General.—

(1) Threat and vulnerability information.—Except as otherwise directed by the President, the Secretary shall have such access as the Secretary considers necessary to all information, including reports, assessments, analyses, and unevaluated intelligence and intelligence-related information, relating to threats of terrorism against the United States and to other areas of responsibility described in section 101 and to all information concerning infrastructure or other vulnerabilities of the United States to terrorism, whether or not such information has been analyzed, that may be collected, possessed, or prepared by any agency of the Federal Government.

(2) Other information.—The Secretary shall also have access to other information relating to matters under the responsibility of the Secretary that may be collected, possessed, or prepared by an agency of the Federal Government as the President may further provide.

(b) Manner of Access.—Except as otherwise directed by the President, with respect to information to which the Secretary has access pursuant to this section—

(1) the Secretary may obtain such material upon request, and may enter into cooperative arrangements with other executive agencies to provide such material or provide Department officials with access to it on a regular or routine basis, including requests or arrangements involving broad categories of material, access to electronic databases, or both; and

(2) regardless of whether the Secretary has made any request or entered into any cooperative arrangement pursuant to paragraph (1), all agencies of the Federal Government shall promptly provide to the Secretary—

(A) all reports (including information reports containing intelligence which has not been fully evaluated), assessments, and analytical information relating to threats of terrorism against the United States and to other areas of responsibility under section 101;

(B) all information concerning the vulnerability of the infrastructure of the United States, or other vulnerabilities of the United States, to terrorism, whether or not such information has been analyzed;

(C) all other information relating to significant and credible threats of terrorism against the United States, whether or not such information has been analyzed; and

(D) such other information or material as the President may direct.

(c) Treatment Under Certain Laws.—The Secretary shall be deemed to be a Federal law enforcement, intelligence, protective, national defense, immigration, or national security official, and shall be provided with all information from law enforcement agencies that is required to be given to the Director of Central Intelligence, under any provision of the following:

(1) The USA PATRIOT Act of 2001 (Public Law 107–56).

(2) Section 2517(6) of title 18, United States Code.

(3) Rule 6(e)(3)(C) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

(d) Access to Intelligence and Other Information.—

(1) Access by elements of federal government.—Nothing in this title shall preclude any element of the intelligence community (as that term is defined in section 3(4) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401a(4)), or other any element of the Federal Government with responsibility for analyzing terrorist threat information, from receiving any intelligence or other information relating to terrorism.

(2) Sharing of information.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Director of Central Intelligence, shall work to ensure that intelligence or other information relating to terrorism to which the Department has access is appropriately shared with the elements of the Federal Government referred to in paragraph (1), as well as with State and local governments, as appropriate.

SEC. 203. PROTECTION OF VOLUNTARILY FURNISHED CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION.

(a) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) Critical infrastructure.—The term "critical infrastructure" has the meaning given that term in section 1016(e) of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001 (42 U.S.C. 5195(e)).

(2) Furnished voluntarily.—

(A) Definition.—The term "furnished voluntarily" means a submission of a record that—

(i) is made to the Department in the absence of authority of the Department requiring that record to be submitted; and

(ii) is not submitted or used to satisfy any legal requirement or obligation or to obtain any grant, permit, benefit (such as agency forbearance, loans, or reduction or modifications of agency penalties or rulings), or other approval from the Government.

(B) Benefit.—In this paragraph, the term "benefit" does not include any warning, alert, or other risk analysis by the Department.

(b) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a record pertaining to the vulnerability of and threats to critical infrastructure (such as attacks, response, and recovery efforts) that is furnished voluntarily to the Department shall not be made available under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, if—

(1) the provider would not customarily make the record available to the public; and

(2) the record is designated and certified by the provider, in a manner specified by the Department, as confidential and not customarily made available to the public.

(c) Records Shared With Other Agencies.—

(1) In general.—

(A) Response to request.—An agency in receipt of a record that was furnished voluntarily to the Department and subsequently shared with the agency shall, upon receipt of a request under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, for the record—

(i) not make the record available; and

(ii) refer the request to the Department for processing and response in accordance with this section.

(B) Segregable portion of record.—Any reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to the person requesting the record after deletion of any portion which is exempt under this section.

(2) Disclosure of independently furnished records.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), nothing in this section shall prohibit an agency from making available under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, any record that the agency receives independently of the Department, regardless of whether or not the Department has a similar or identical record.

(d) WITHDRAWAL OF CONFIDENTIAL DESIGNATION.—The provider of a record that is furnished voluntarily to the Department under subsection (b) may at any time withdraw, in a manner specified by the Department, the confidential designation.

(e) PROCEDURES.—The Secretary shall prescribe procedures for—

(1) the acknowledgement of receipt of records furnished voluntarily;

(2) the designation, certification, and marking of records furnished voluntarily as confidential and not customarily made available to the public;

(3) the care and storage of records furnished voluntarily;

(4) the protection and maintenance of the confidentiality of records furnished voluntarily; and

(5) the withdrawal of the confidential designation of records under subsection (d).

(f) EFFECT ON STATE AND LOCAL LAW.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as preempting or otherwise modifying State or local law concerning the disclosure of any information that a State or local government receives independently of the Department.

(g) REPORT.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall submit to the committees of Congress specified in paragraph (2) a report on the implementation and use of this section, including—

(A) the number of persons in the private sector, and the number of State and local agencies, that furnished voluntarily records to the Department under this section;

(B) the number of requests for access to records granted or denied under this section; and

(C) such recommendations as the Comptroller General considers appropriate regarding improvements in the collection and analysis of sensitive information held by persons in the private sector, or by State and local agencies, relating to vulnerabilities of and threats to critical infrastructure, including the response to such vulnerabilities and threats.

(2) COMMITTEES OF CONGRESS.—The committees of Congress specified in this paragraph are—

(A) the Committees on the Judiciary and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and

(B) the Committees on the Judiciary and Government Reform and Oversight of the House of Representatives.

(3) FORM.—The report shall be submitted in unclassified form, but may include a classified annex.

TITLE III—SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY IN SUPPORT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

SEC. 301. UNDER SECRETARY FOR SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY.

There shall be in the Department a Directorate of Science and Technology headed by an Under Secretary for Science and Technology.

SEC. 302. RESPONSIBILITIES AND AUTHORITIES OF THE UNDER SECRETARY FOR SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY.

In assisting the Secretary with the responsibility specified in section 101(b)(2)(B), the primary responsibilities of the Under Secretary for Science and Technology shall include—

(1) advising the Secretary regarding research and development efforts and priorities in support of the Department's missions;

(2) supporting all elements of the Department in research, development, testing, evaluation and deployment of science and technology that is applicable in the detection of, prevention of, protection against, response to, attribution of, and recovery from homeland security threats, particularly acts of terrorism;

(3) to support the Under Secretary for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection, by assessing and testing homeland security vulnerabilities and possible threats;

(4) conducting a national scientific research and development program to support the mission of the Department, including developing national policy for and coordinating the Federal Government's civilian efforts to identify, devise, and implement scientific, technological, and other countermeasures to chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and other emerging terrorist threats, including directing, funding and conducting research and development relating to the same;

(5) establishing priorities for, directing, funding, and conducting national research, development, test and evaluation, and procurement of technology and systems—

(A) for preventing the importation of chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear, and related weapons and material; and

(B) for detecting, preventing, protecting against, and responding to terrorist attacks;

(6) establishing a system for transferring homeland security developments or technologies to federal, state, local government, and private sector entities;

(7) entering into joint sponsorship agreements with the Department of Energy regarding the use of the national laboratories or sites and support of the science and technology base at those facilities;

(8) collaborating with the Secretary of Agriculture in determining the biological agents and toxins that shall be included on the list of biological agents and toxins required under section 212(a) of the Agricultural Bioterrorism Protection Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8401);

(9) collaborating with the Secretary of Health and Human Services in determining the biological agents and toxins that shall be listed as "select agents" in Appendix A of part 72 of title 42, Code of Federal Regulations, pursuant to section 351A of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 262a); and

(10) supporting United States leadership in science and technology.

SEC. 303. FUNCTIONS TRANSFERRED.

In accordance with title VIII, there shall be transferred to the Secretary the functions, personnel, assets, and liabilities of the following entities:

(1) The following programs and activities of the Department of Energy, including the functions of the Secretary of Energy relating thereto (but not including programs and activities relating to the strategic nuclear defense posture of the United States):

(A) The chemical and biological national security and supporting programs and activities of the nonproliferation and verification research and development program.

(B) The nuclear smuggling programs and activities within the proliferation detection program of the nonproliferation and verification research and development program. The programs and activities described in this subparagraph may be designated by the President either for transfer to the Department or for joint operation by the Secretary and the Secretary of Energy.

(C) The nuclear assessment program and activities of the assessment, detection, and cooperation program of the international materials protection and cooperation program.

(D) Such life sciences activities of the biological and environmental research program related to microbial pathogens as may be designated by the President for transfer to the Department.

(E) The Environmental Measurements Laboratory.

(F) The advanced scientific computing research program and activities at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory.

(2) The National Bio-Weapons Defense Analysis Center of the Department of Defense, including the functions of the Secretary of Defense related thereto.

(3) The Plum Island Animal Disease Center of the Department of Agriculture, including the functions of the Secretary of Agriculture relating thereto, as provided in section 310.

(4)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B)—

(i) the functions of the Select Agent Registration Program of the Department of Health and Human Services, including all functions of the Secretary of Health and Human Services under title II of the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act of 2002 (Public Law 107-188); and

(ii) the functions of the Department of Agriculture under the Agricultural Bioterrorism Protection Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8401 et seq.).

(B)(i) The Secretary shall collaborate with the Secretary of Health and Human Services in determining the biological agents and toxins that shall be listed as "select agents" in Appendix A of part 72 of title 42, Code of Federal Regulations, pursuant to section 351A of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 262a).

(ii) The Secretary shall collaborate with the Secretary of Agriculture in determining the biological agents and toxins that shall be included on the list of biological agents and toxins required under section 212(a) of the Agricultural Bioterrorism Protection Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8401).

(C) In promulgating regulations pursuant to the functions described in subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall act in collaboration with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Agriculture.

SEC. 304. CONDUCT OF CERTAIN PUBLIC HEALTH-RELATED ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as the President may otherwise direct, the Secretary shall carry out his civilian human health-related biological, biomedical, and infectious disease defense research and development (including vaccine research and development) responsibilities through the Department of Health and Human Services (including the Public Health Service), under agreements with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and may transfer funds to him in connection with such agreements.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—With respect to any responsibilities carried out through the Department of Health and Human Services under this subsection, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall have the authority to establish the research and development program, including the setting of priorities.

SEC. 305. RESEARCH IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES AND OTHER DEPARTMENTS.

With respect to such other research and development responsibilities under this title, including health-related chemical, radiological, and nuclear defense research and development responsibilities, as the Secretary may elect to carry out through the Department of Health and Human Services (including the Public Health Service) (under agreements with the Secretary of Health and Human Services) or through other Federal agencies (under agreements with their respective heads), the Secretary may transfer funds to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, or to such heads, as the case may be.

SEC. 306. HOMELAND SECURITY ADVANCED RESEARCH PROJECTS AGENCY.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) FUND.—The term "Fund" means the Acceleration Fund for Research and Development of Homeland Security Technologies established under this section.

(2) HOMELAND SECURITY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT.—The term "homeland security research and development" means research and development of technologies that are applicable in the detection of, prevention of, protection against, response to, attribution of, and recovery from homeland security threats, particularly acts of terrorism.

(3) HSARPA.—The term "HSARPA" means the Homeland Security Advanced Research Projects Agency established under this section.

(4) UNDER SECRETARY.—The term "Under Secretary" means the Under Secretary for Science and Technology or the designee of that Under Secretary.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this section are to—

(1) establish the Homeland Security Advanced Research Projects Agency to prioritize and fund homeland security research and development using the acceleration fund; and

(2) establish a fund to leverage existing research and development and accelerate the deployment of technology that will serve to enhance homeland defense.

(c) FUND.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Acceleration Fund for Research and Development of Homeland Security Technologies.

(2) USE OF FUND.—The Fund may be used to—

(A) accelerate research, development, testing and evaluation, and deployment of critical homeland security technologies; and

(B) support homeland security research and development.

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $500,000,000 to the Fund for fiscal year 2003, and such sums as may be necessary in subsequent years.

(4) TRANSITION OF FUNDS.—With respect to such research, development, testing, and evaluation responsibilities under this section as the Secretary may elect to carry out through agencies other than the Department (under agreements with their respective heads), the Secretary may transfer funds to such heads. Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (3) for the Fund, not less than 10 percent of such funds for each fiscal year through fiscal year 2005 shall be authorized only for the Under Secretary, through joint agreement with the Commandant of the Coast Guard, to carry out research and development of improved ports, waterways, and coastal security surveillance and perimeter protection capabilities for the purpose of minimizing the possibility that Coast Guard cutters, aircraft, helicopters, and personnel will be diverted from non-homeland security missions to the ports, waterways, and coastal security mission.

(d) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE HOMELAND SECURITY ADVANCED RESEARCH PROJECTS AGENCY.—The Homeland Security Advance Research Project Agency shall have the following responsibilities:

(1) To facilitate effective communication among departments, agencies, and other entities of the Federal Government, with respect to the conduct of research and development related to homeland security.

(2) To identify, by consensus and on a yearly basis, specific technology areas for which the Fund shall be used to rapidly transition homeland security research and development into deployed technology and reduce identified homeland security vulnerabilities. The identified technology areas shall, as determined by the Homeland Security Advanced Research Projects Agency, be areas in which there exist research and development projects that address identified homeland security vulnerabilities and can be accelerated to the stage of prototyping, evaluating, transitioning, or deploying.

(3) To administer the Fund, including—

(A) issuing an annual multiagency program announcement soliciting proposals from government entities, federally funded research and development centers, industry, and academia;

(B) competitively selecting, on the basis of a merit-based review, proposals that advance the state of deployed technologies in the areas identified for that year;

(C) at the discretion of the HSARPA, assigning 1 or more program managers to oversee, administer, and execute a Fund project as the agent of HSARPA; and

(D) providing methods of funding, including grants, cooperative agreements, joint sponsorship agreements, or any other transaction.

(4) With respect to expenditures from the Fund, exercise acquisition authority consistent with the authority described under section 2371 of title 10, United States Code, relating to authorizing cooperative agreements and other transactions.

(5) In hiring personnel to assist in the administration of the HSARPA, have the authority to exercise the personnel hiring and management authorities described in section 1101 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (5 U.S.C. 3104 note; Public Law 105-261) with the stipulation that the Secretary shall exercise such authority for a period of 7 years commencing on the date of enactment of this Act, that a maximum of 100 persons may be hired under such authority, and that the term of appointments for employees under subsection (c)(1) of that section may not exceed 5 years before the granting of any extension under subsection (c)(2) of that section.

(6) Develop and oversee the implementation of periodic homeland security technology demonstrations, held at least annually, for the purpose of improving contact between technology developers, vendors, and acquisition personnel associated with related industries.

SEC. 307. MISCELLANEOUS AUTHORITIES RELATING TO NATIONAL LABORATORIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The limitation of the number of employees of the Department of Energy national laboratories assigned to Washington, D.C. shall not apply to those employees who, at the request of the Secretary, are assigned, on a temporary basis, to assist in the establishment of the Department.

(b) DIRECT TASKING.—Notwithstanding any other law governing the administration, mission, use, or operations of any of the Department of Energy national laboratories and sites, such laboratories and sites are authorized to accept direct tasking from the Secretary or his designee, consistent with resources provided, and perform such tasking on an equal basis to other missions at the laboratory and not on a noninterference basis with other missions of such laboratory or site.

SEC. 308. HOMELAND SECURITY INSTITUTE.

Within the Directorate of Science and Technology there shall be established a Homeland Security Institute as a separate federally funded research and development center under the direction of the Under Secretary to perform policy and systems analysis, assist in the definition of standards and metrics, assist agencies with evaluating technologies for deployment, proposing risk management strategies based on technology developments, and performing other appropriate research and analysis to improve policy and decisionmaking as it relates to the mission of the Department. The Homeland Security Institute shall utilize the capabilities of the National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center.

SEC. 309. UTILIZATION OF DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY NATIONAL LABORATORIES AND SITES IN SUPPORT OF HOMELAND SECURITY ACTIVITIES.

(a) OFFICE FOR NATIONAL LABORATORIES.—There is established within the Directorate of Science and Technology an Office for National Laboratories, which shall be responsible for the coordination and utilization of the Department of Energy national laboratories and sites in a manner to create a networked laboratory system for the purpose of supporting the missions of the Department.

(b) JOINT SPONSORSHIP.—The Department may be a joint sponsor, under a multiple agency sponsorship arrangement with the Department of Energy, of 1 or more Department of Energy national laboratories in the performance of work.

(c) ARRANGEMENTS.—The Department may be a joint sponsor of a Department of Energy site in the performance of work as if such site were a federally funded research and development center and the work were performed under a multiple agency sponsorship arrangement with the Department.

(d) PRIMARY SPONSOR.—The Department of Energy shall be the primary sponsor under a multiple agency sponsorship arrangement entered into under subsection (a) or (b).

(e) LEAD AGENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Energy shall act as the lead agent in coordinating the formation and performance of a joint sponsorship agreement between the Department and a Department of Energy national laboratory or site for work on homeland security.

(2) FEDERAL ACQUISITION REGULATION.—Any work performed by a national laboratory or site under this section shall comply with the policy on the use of federally funded research and development centers under section 35.017(a) (4) of the Federal Acquisition Regulation.

(f) FUNDING.—The Department shall provide funds for work at the Department of Energy national laboratories or sites, as the case may be, under this section under the same terms and conditions as apply to the primary sponsor of such national laboratory under section 303(b)(1)(C) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253 (b)(1)(C)) or of such site to the extent such section applies to such site as a federally funded research and development center by reason of subsection (b).

(g) Authorities of Secretary and Under Secretary.—In connection with work involving the Department of Energy national laboratories or sites, the Secretary or Under Secretary for Science and Technology—

(1) may enter into joint sponsorship agreements with Department of Energy national laboratories or sites;

(2) may directly fund, task, and manage work at the Department of Energy national laboratories and sites; and

(3) may permit the director of any Department of Energy national laboratory or site to enter into cooperative research and development agreements or to negotiate licensing agreements with any person, any agency or instrumentality, of the United States, any unit of State or local government, and any other entity under the authority granted by section 12 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a). Technology may be transferred to a non-Federal party to such an agreement consistent with the provisions of sections 11 and 12 of such Act (15 U.S.C. 3710, 3710a).

SEC. 310. TRANSFER OF PLUM ISLAND ANIMAL DISEASE CENTER, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

(a) In General.—In accordance with title VIII, the Secretary of Agriculture shall transfer to the Secretary of Homeland Security the Plum Island Animal Disease Center of the Department of Agriculture, including the assets and liabilities of the Center.

(b) Continued Department of Agriculture Access.—On completion of the transfer of the Plum Island Animal Disease Center under subsection (a), the Secretary of Homeland Security and the Secretary of Agriculture shall enter into an agreement to ensure that the Department of Agriculture is able to carry out research, diagnostic, and other activities of the Department of Agriculture at the Center.

(c) Direction of Activities.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall continue to direct the research, diagnostic, and other activities of the Department of Agriculture at the Center described in subsection (b).

(d) Notification.—

(1) In general.—At least 180 days before any change in the biosafety level at the Plum Island Animal Disease Center, the President shall notify Congress of the change and describe the reasons for the change.

(2) Limitation.—No change described in paragraph (1) may be made earlier than 180 days after the completion of the transition period (as defined in section 801(2)).

SEC. 311. CLEARINGHOUSE.

(a) In General.—The Secretary, acting through the Under Secretary for Science and Technology, shall provide for a clearinghouse as a central, national point of entry for individuals or companies seeking guidance on how to pursue proposals to develop or deploy products that would contribute to homeland security. Such clearinghouse shall refer those seeking guidance on Federal funding, regulation, acquisition, or other matters to the appropriate unit of the Department or to other appropriate Federal agencies.

(b) Screenings and Assessments.—The Under Secretary for Science and Technology shall work in conjunction with the Technical Support Working Group (organized under the April 1982, National Security Decision Directive Numbered 30) to—

(1) screen proposals described in subsection (a), as appropriate;

(2) assess the feasibility, scientific and technical merits, and estimated cost of proposals screened under paragraph (1), as appropriate; and

(3) identify areas where existing technologies may be easily adapted and deployed to meet the homeland security agenda of the Federal Government.

TITLE IV—BORDER AND TRANSPORTATION SECURITY

SEC. 401. UNDER SECRETARY FOR BORDER AND TRANSPORTATION SECURITY.

There shall be in the Department a Directorate for Border and Transportation Security headed by an Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security.

SEC. 402. RESPONSIBILITIES.

In assisting the Secretary with the responsibilities specified in section 101(b)(2)(C), the primary responsibilities of the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security shall include—

(1) preventing the entry of terrorists and the instruments of terrorism into the United States;

(2) securing the borders, territorial waters, ports, terminals, waterways, and air, land, and sea transportation systems of the United States, including managing and coordinating governmental activities at ports of entry;

(3) administering the immigration and naturalization laws of the United States, including the establishment of rules, in accordance with section 406, governing the granting of visas or other forms of permission, including parole, to enter the United States to individuals who are not citizens or lawful permanent residents thereof;

(4) administering the customs laws of the United States;

(5) in carrying out the foregoing responsibilities, ensuring the speedy, orderly, and efficient flow of lawful traffic and commerce;

(6) carrying out the border patrol function; and

(7) administering and enforcing the functions of the Department under the immigration laws of the United States with respect to the inspection of aliens arriving at ports of entry of the United States.

SEC. 403. FUNCTIONS TRANSFERRED.

(a) In General.—In accordance with title VIII, there shall be transferred to the Secretary the functions, personnel, assets, and liabilities of—

(1) the United States Customs Service of the Department of the Treasury, including the functions of the Secretary of the Treasury relating thereto;

(2) the Transportation Security Administration of the Department of Transportation, including the functions of the Secretary of Transportation, and of the Under Secretary of Transportation for Security, relating thereto;

(3) the Federal Protective Service of the General Services Administration, including the functions of the Administrator of General Services relating thereto; and

(4) the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center of the Department of the Treasury.

(b) Exercise of Customs Revenue Authorities.—

(1) In general.—

(A) Authorities not transferred.—Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1), authority that was vested in the Secretary of the Treasury by law to issue regulations related to customs revenue functions before the effective date of this section under the provisions of law set forth under paragraph (2) shall not be transferred to the Secretary by reason of this Act. The Secretary of the Treasury, with the concurrence of the Secretary, shall exercise this authority. The Commissioner of Customs is authorized to engage in activities to develop and support the issuance of the regulations described in this paragraph. The Secretary shall be responsible for the implementation and enforcement of regulations issued under this section.

(B) Report.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit a report to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives of proposed conforming amendments to the statutes set forth under paragraph (2) in order to determine the appropriate allocation of legal authorities described under this subsection. The Secretary of the Treasury shall also identify those authorities vested in the Secretary of the Treasury that are exercised by the Commissioner of Customs on or before the effective date of this section.

(C) Liability.—Neither the Secretary of the Treasury nor the Department of the Treasury shall be liable for or named in any legal action concerning the implementation and enforcement of regulations issued under this paragraph after the effective date of this Act.

(2) Applicable laws.—The provisions of law referred to under paragraph (1) are those sections of the following statutes that relate to customs revenue functions:

(A) The Tariff Act of 1930.

(B) Section 249 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (19 U.S.C. 3).

(C) Section 2 of the Act of March 4, 1923 (19 U.S.C. 6).

(D) Section 13031 of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c).

(E) Section 251 of the Revised States of the United States (19 U.S.C. 66).

(F) Section 1 of the Act of June 26, 1930 (19 U.S.C. 68).

(G) The Foreign Trade Zones Act (19 U.S.C. 81a et seq.).

(H) Section 1 of the Act of March 2, 1911 (19 U.S.C. 198).

(I) The Trade Act of 1974.

(J) The Trade Agreement Act of 1979.

(K) The North American Free Trade Area Implementation Act.

(L) The Uruguay Round Agreements Act.

(M) The Caribbean Basin Economic Recovery Act.

(N) The Andean Growth and Opportunity Act.

(O) Any other provision of law vesting customs revenue functions in the Secretary of the Treasury.

(3) Definitions of customs revenue functions.—In this subsection, the term "customs revenue functions" means—

(A) assessing, collecting, and refunding duties (including any special duties), excise taxes, fees, and any liquidated damages or penalties due on imported merchandise, including classifying and valuing merchandise and the procedures for "entry" as that term is defined in the United States Customs laws;

(B) administering section 337 of the Tariff Act of 1930 and provisions relating to import quotas and the marking of imported merchandise, and providing Customs Recordation for copyrights, patents, and trademarks;

(C) collecting accurate import data for compilation of international trade statistics; and

(D) administering reciprocal trade agreements and trade preference legislation.

SEC. 404. TRANSFER OF CERTAIN AGRICULTURAL INSPECTION FUNCTIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

(a) Transfer of Agricultural Import and Entry Inspection Functions.—There shall be transferred to the Secretary the functions of the Secretary of Agriculture relating to agricultural import and entry inspection activities under the laws specified in subsection (b).

(b) Covered Animal and Plant Protection Laws.—The laws referred to in subsection (a) are the following:

(1) The Act commonly known as the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act (the eighth paragraph under the heading "Bureau of Animal Industry" in the Act of March 4, 1913; 21 U.S.C. 151 et seq.).

(2) The first section of the Act of August 31, 1922 (commonly known as the Honeybee Act; 7 U.S.C. 281).

(3) Title III of the Federal Seed Act (7 U.S.C. 1581 et seq.).

(4) The Plant Protection Act (7 U.S.C. 7701 et seq.).

(5) The Animal Health Protection Act (subtitle E of title X of Public Law 107-171; 7 U.S.C. 8301 et seq.).

(6) The Lacey Act Amendments of 1981 (16 U.S.C. 3371 et seq.).

(7) Section 11 of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1540).

(c) Exclusion of Quarantine Activities.—For purposes of this section, the term "functions" does not include any quarantine activities carried out under the laws specified in subsection (b).

(d) Effect of Transfer.—

(1) Compliance with department of agriculture regulations.—The authority transferred pursuant to subsection (a) shall be exercised by the Secretary in accordance with the regulations, policies, and procedures issued by the Secretary of Agriculture regarding the administration of the laws specified in subsection (b).

(2) Rulemaking coordination.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall coordinate with the Secretary whenever the Secretary of Agriculture prescribes regulations, policies, or procedures for administering the laws specified in subsection (b) at the locations referred to in subsection (a).

(3) Effective administration.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, may issue such directives and guidelines as are necessary to ensure the effective use of personnel of the Department to carry out the functions transferred pursuant to subsection (a).

(e) Transfer Agreement.—

(1) Agreement required; revision.—Before the end of the transition period, as defined in section 801(2), the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary shall enter into an agreement to effectuate the transfer of functions required by subsection (a). The Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary may jointly revise the agreement as necessary thereafter.

(2) Required terms.—The agreements required by this subsection shall provide for the following:

(A) The supervision by the Secretary of Agriculture of the training of employees of the Department to carry out the functions transferred pursuant to subsection (a).

(B) The transfer of funds to the Secretary under subsection (f).

(C) Authority under which the Secretary may perform functions that are delegated to the Animal and Plant Inspection Service of the Department of Agriculture regarding the protection of domestic livestock and plants, but not transferred to the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a).

(D) Authority under which the Secretary of Agriculture may use employees of the Department to carry out authorities delegated to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service regarding the protection of domestic livestock and plants.

(f) Periodic Transfer of Funds to Department of Homeland Security.—

(1) Transfer of funds.—Subject to paragraph (2), out of any funds collected as fees under sections 2508 and 2509 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (21 U.S.C. 136, 136a), the Secretary of Agriculture shall periodically transfer to the Secretary, in accordance with the agreement under subsection (e), funds for activities carried out by the Secretary for which the fees were collected.

(2) Limitation.—The proportion of fees collected under sections 2508 and 2509 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (21 U.S.C. 136, 136a) that are transferred to the Secretary under paragraph (1) may not exceed the proportion that—

(A) the costs incurred by the Secretary to carry out activities funded by those fees; bears to

(B) the costs incurred by the Federal Government to carry out activities funded by those fees.

(g) Transfer of Department of Agriculture Employees.—Not later than the completion of the transition period (as defined in section 801(2)), the Secretary of Agriculture shall transfer to the Department not more than 3,200 full-time equivalent positions of the Department of Agriculture.

(h) Protection of Inspection Animals.—Title V of the Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 2279e, 2279f) is amended—

(1) in section 501(a)—

(A) by inserting "or the Department of Homeland Security" after "Department of Agriculture"; and

(B) by inserting "or the Secretary of Homeland Security" after "Secretary of Agriculture";

(2) by striking "Secretary" each place it appears (other than in sections 501(a) and 501(e)) and inserting "Secretary concerned"; and

(3) by adding at the end of section 501 the following:

"(i) Secretary Concerned Defined.—In this title, the term 'Secretary concerned' means—

"(1) the Secretary of Agriculture, with respect to an animal used for purposes of official inspections by the Department of Agriculture; and

"(2) the Secretary of Homeland Security, with respect to an animal used for purposes of official inspections by the Department of Homeland Security.".

(j) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 501 of the Agricultural Risk Protection Act of 2000 (7 U.S.C. 2279e) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)—

(i) by inserting "or the Department of Homeland Security" after "Department of Agriculture"; and

(ii) by inserting "or the Secretary of Homeland Security" after "Secretary of Agriculture"; and

(B) by striking "Secretary" each place it appears (other than in subsections (a) and (e)) and inserting "Secretary concerned".

(2) Section 221 of the Public Health Security and Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Act of 2002 (7 U.S.C. 8411) is repealed.

SEC. 405. COORDINATION OF INFORMATION AND INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY.

(a) Definition of Affected Agency.—In this section, the term "affected agency" means—

(1) the Department;

(2) the Department of Agriculture;

(3) the Department of Health and Human Services; and

(4) any other department or agency determined to be appropriate by the Secretary.

(b) Coordination.—The Secretary, in coordination with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the head of each other department or agency determined to be appropriate by the Secretary, shall ensure that appropriate information (as determined by the Secretary) concerning inspections of articles that are imported or entered into the United States, and are inspected or regulated by 1 or more affected agencies, is timely and efficiently exchanged between the affected agencies.

(c) Report and Plan.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and the head of each other department or agency determined to be appropriate by the Secretary, shall submit to Congress—

(1) a report on the progress made in implementing this section; and

(2) a plan to complete implementation of this section.

SEC. 406. VISA ISSUANCE.

(a) Definition.—In this subsection, the term "consular office" has the meaning given that term under section 101(a)(9) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(9)).

(b) In General.—Notwithstanding section 104(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1104(a)) or any other provision of law, and except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary—

(1) shall be vested exclusively with all authorities to issue regulations with respect to, administer, and enforce the provisions of such Act, and of all other immigration and nationality laws, relating to the functions of consular officers of the United States in connection with the granting or refusal of visas which authorities shall be exercised through the Secretary of State, except that the Secretary shall not have authority to alter or reverse the decision of a consular officer to refuse a visa to an alien;

(2) may delegate in whole or part the authority under subparagraph (A) to the Secretary of State; and

(3) shall have authority to confer or impose upon any officer or employee of the United States, with the consent of the head of the executive agency under whose jurisdiction such officer or employee is serving, any of the functions specified in paragraph (1).

(c) Authority of the Secretary of State.—

(1) In general.—Notwithstanding subsection (b), the Secretary of State may direct a consular officer to refuse a visa to an alien if the Secretary of State deems such refusal necessary or advisable in the foreign policy or security interests of the United States.

(2) Construction regarding authority.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting the authorities of the Secretary of State under the following provisions of law:

(A) Section 101(a)(15)(A) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(15)(A)).

(B) Section 204(d)(2) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1154) (as it will take effect upon the entry into force of the Convention on Protection of Children and Cooperation in Respect to Inter-Country adoption).

(C) Section 212(a)(3)(B)(i)(IV)(bb) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(i)(IV)(bb)).

(D) Section 212(a)(3)(B)(i)(VI) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(i)(VI)).

(E) Section 212(a)(3)(B)(vi)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(vi)(II)).

(F) Section 212(a)(3(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(C)).

(G) Section 212(a)(10)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(10)(C)).

(H) Section 212(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(f)).

(I) Section 219(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1189(a)).

(J) Section 237(a)(4)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1227(a)(4)(C)).

(K) Section 401 of the Cuban Liberty and Democratic Solidarity (LIBERTAD) Act of 1996 (22 U.S.C. 6034; Public Law 104–114).

(L) Section 613 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999 (as contained in section 101(b) of division A of Public Law 105–277) (Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999); 112 Stat. 2681; H.R. 4328 (originally H.R. 4276) as amended by section 617 of Public Law 106–553.

(M) Section 103(f) of the Chemical Weapon Convention Implementation Act of 1998 (112 Stat. 2681–865).

(N) Section 801 of H.R. 3427, the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donovan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001, as enacted by reference in Public Law 106–113.

(O) Section 568 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 2002 (Public Law 107–115).

(P) Section 51 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 (22 U.S.C. 2723).

(d) CONSULAR OFFICERS AND CHIEFS OF MISSIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this subsection may be construed to alter or affect—

(A) the employment status of consular officers as employees of the Department of State; or

(B) the authority of a chief of mission under section 207 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 (22 U.S.C. 3927).

(2) CONSTRUCTION REGARDING DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any delegation of authority to the Secretary of State by the President pursuant to any proclamation issued under section 212(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(f)).

(e) ASSIGNMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY EMPLOYEES TO DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR POSTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to assign employees of the Department to each diplomatic and consular post at which visas are issued, unless the Secretary determines that such an assignment at a particular post would not promote homeland security.

(2) FUNCTIONS.—Employees assigned under paragraph (1) shall perform the following functions:

(i) Provide expert advice to consular officers regarding specific security threats relating to the adjudication of individual visa applications or classes of applications.

(ii) Review any such applications, either on the initiative of the employee of the Department or upon request by a consular officer or other person charged with adjudicating such applications.

(iii) Conduct investigations with respect to consular matters under the jurisdiction of the Secretary.

(3) EVALUATION OF CONSULAR OFFICERS.—The Secretary of State shall evaluate, in consultation with the Secretary, as deemed appropriate by the Secretary, the performance of consular officers with respect to the processing and adjudication of applications for visas in accordance with performance standards developed by the Secretary for these procedures.

(4) REPORT.—The Secretary shall, on an annual basis, submit a report to Congress that describes the basis for each determination under paragraph (1) that the assignment of an employee of the Department at a particular diplomatic post would not promote homeland security.

(5) PERMANENT ASSIGNMENT; PARTICIPATION IN TERRORIST LOOKOUT COMMITTEE.—When appropriate, employees of the Department assigned to perform functions described in paragraph (2) may be assigned permanently to overseas diplomatic or consular posts with country-specific or regional responsibility. If the Secretary so directs, any such employee, when present at an overseas post, shall participate in the terrorist lookout committee established under section 304 of the Enhanced Border Security and Visa Entry Reform Act of 2002 (8 U.S.C. 1733).

(6) TRAINING AND HIRING.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall ensure, to the extent possible, that any employees of the Department assigned to perform functions under paragraph (2) and, as appropriate, consular officers, shall be provided the necessary training to enable them to carry out such functions, including training in foreign languages, in conditions in the particular country where each employee is assigned, and in other appropriate areas of study.

(B) USE OF CENTER.—The Secretary is authorized to use the National Foreign Affairs Training Center, on a reimbursable basis, to obtain the training described in subparagraph (A).

(7) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary and the Secretary of State shall submit to Congress—

(A) a report on the implementation of this subsection; and

(B) any legislative proposals necessary to further the objectives of this subsection.

(8) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This subsection shall take effect on the earlier of—

(A) the date on which the President publishes notice in the Federal Register that the President has submitted a report to Congress setting forth a memorandum of understanding between the Secretary and the Secretary of State governing the implementation of this section; or

(B) the date occurring 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

(f) NO CREATION OF PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to create or authorize a private right of action to challenge a decision of a consular officer or other United States official or employee to grant or deny a visa.

SEC. 407. BORDER SECURITY AND IMMIGRATION WORKING GROUP.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a border security and immigration working group (in this section referred to as the "Working Group"), composed of the Secretary or the designee of the Secretary, the Under Secretary for Immigration Affairs, and the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation protection.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Working Group shall meet not less frequently than once every 3 months and shall—

(1) with respect to border security functions, develop coordinated budget requests, allocations of appropriations, staffing requirements, communication, use of equipment, transportation, facilities, and other infrastructure;

(2) coordinate joint and cross-training programs for personnel performing border security functions;

(3) monitor, evaluate and make improvements in the coverage and geographic distributions of border security programs and personnel;

(4) develop and implement policies and technologies to ensure the speedy, orderly, and efficient flow of lawful traffic, travel and commerce, and enhanced security for high-risk traffic, travel, and commerce;

(5) identify systemic problems in coordination encountered by border security agencies and programs and propose administrative, regulatory, or statutory changes to mitigate such problems; and

(6) coordinate the enforcement of all immigration laws.

(c) RELEVANT AGENCIES.—The Secretary shall consult with representatives of relevant agencies with respect to deliberations under subsection (b), and may include representative of such agencies in working group deliberations, as appropriate.

SEC. 408. INFORMATION ON VISA DENIALS REQUIRED TO BE ENTERED INTO ELECTRONIC DATA SYSTEM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Whenever a consular officer of the United States denies a visa to an applicant, the consular officer shall enter the fact and the basis of the denial and the name of the applicant into the interoperable electronic data system implemented under section 202(a) of the Enhanced Border Security and Visa Entry Reform Act of 2002 (8 U.S.C. 1722(a)).

(b) PROHIBITION.—In the case of any alien with respect to whom a visa has been denied under subsection (a)—

(1) no subsequent visa may be issued to the alien unless the consular officer considering the alien's visa application has reviewed the information concerning the alien placed in the interoperable electronic data system, has indicated on the alien's application that the information has been reviewed, and has stated for the record why the visa is being issued or a waiver of visa ineligibility recommended in spite of that information; and

(2) the alien may not be admitted to the United States without a visa issued in accordance with the procedures described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 409. STUDY ON USE OF FOREIGN NATIONAL PERSONNEL IN VISA PROCESSING.

The Secretary shall conduct a study on the use of foreign national personnel in visa processing to determine whether such uses are consistent with secure visa processing. The study shall review and make recommendations with respect to—

(1) the effects or possible effects on national security of the use of foreign national personnel in individual countries to perform data entry, process visas or visa applications, or in any way handle visas or visa application documents; and

(2) each United States mission abroad to determine whether United States consular services performed at the United States mission require different regulations on the use of foreign national personnel.

TITLE V—EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE

SEC. 501. UNDER SECRETARY FOR EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE.

There shall be in the Department a Directorate of Emergency Preparedness and Response headed by an Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response.

SEC. 502. RESPONSIBILITIES.

In assisting the Secretary with the responsibilities specified in section 101(b)(2)(D), the primary responsibilities of the Under Secretary for Emergency Preparedness and Response shall include—

(1) helping to ensure the preparedness of emergency response providers for terrorist attacks, major disasters, and other emergencies;

(2) with respect to the Nuclear Incident Response Team (regardless of whether it is operating as an organizational unit of the Department pursuant to this title)—

(A) establishing standards and certifying when those standards have been met;

(B) conducting joint and other exercises and training and evaluating performance; and

(C) providing funds to the Department of Energy and the Environmental Protection Agency, as appropriate, for homeland security planning, exercises and training, and equipment;

(3) providing the Federal Government's response to terrorist attacks and major disasters, including—

(A) managing such response;

(B) directing the Domestic Emergency Support Team, the Strategic National Stockpile, the National Disaster Medical System, and (when operating as an organizational unit of the Department pursuant to this title) the Nuclear Incident Response Team;

(C) overseeing the Metropolitan Medical Response System; and

(D) coordinating other Federal response resources in the event of a terrorist attack or major disaster;

(4) aiding the recovery from terrorist attacks and major disasters;

(5) building a comprehensive national incident management system with Federal, State, and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities, to respond to such attacks and disasters;

(6) consolidating existing Federal Government emergency response plans into a single, coordinated national response plan; and

(7) developing comprehensive programs for developing interoperative communications technology, and helping to ensure that emergency response providers acquire such technology.

SEC. 503. FUNCTIONS TRANSFERRED.

In accordance with title VIII, there shall be transferred to the Secretary the functions, personnel, assets, and liabilities of the following entities:

(1) The Federal Emergency Management Agency, including the functions of the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency relating thereto.

(2) The Office for Domestic Preparedness of the Office of Justice Programs, including the functions of the Attorney General relating thereto.

(3) The National Domestic Preparedness Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including the functions of the Attorney General relating thereto.

(4) The Domestic Emergency Support Teams of the Department of Justice, including the functions of the Attorney General relating thereto.

(5) The Office of the Assistant Secretary for Public Health Emergency Preparedness (including the Office of Emergency Preparedness, the National Disaster Medical System, and the Metropolitan Medical Response System) of the Department of Health and Human Services, including the functions of the Secretary of Health and Human Services relating thereto.

(6) The Strategic National Stockpile of the Department of Health and Human Services, including the functions of the Secretary of Health and Human Services relating thereto.

SEC. 504. NUCLEAR INCIDENT RESPONSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—At the direction of the Secretary (in connection with an actual or threatened terrorist attack, major disaster, or other emergency), the Nuclear Incident Response Team shall operate as an organizational unit of the Department. While so operating, the Nuclear Incident Response Team shall be subject to the direction, authority, and control of the Secretary.

(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to limit the ordinary responsibility of the Secretary of Energy and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency for organizing, training, equipping, and utilizing their respective entities in the Nuclear Incident Response Team, or (subject to the provisions of this title) from exercising direction, authority, and control over them when they are not operating as a unit of the Department.

SEC. 505. CONDUCT OF CERTAIN PUBLIC HEALTH-RELATED ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—With respect to all public health-related activities to improve State, local, and hospital preparedness and response to chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear and other emerging terrorist threats carried out by the Department of Health and Human Services (including the Public Health Service), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall set priorities and preparedness goals and further develop a coordinated strategy for such activities in collaboration with the Secretary.

(b) EVALUATION OF PROGRESS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall collaborate with the Secretary in developing specific benchmarks and outcome measurements for evaluating progress toward achieving the priorities and goals described in such subsection.

SEC. 506. DEFINITION.

In this title, the term "Nuclear Incident Response Team" means a resource that includes—

(1) those entities of the Department of Energy that perform nuclear or radiological emergency support functions (including accident response, search response, advisory, and technical operations functions), radiation exposure functions at the medical assistance facility known as the Radiation Emergency Assistance Center/Training Site (REAC/TS), radiological assistance functions, and related functions; and

(2) those entities of the Environmental Protection Agency that perform such support functions (including radiological emergency response functions) and related functions.

TITLE VI—MANAGEMENT

SEC. 603. CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER.

The Chief Financial Officer shall report to the Secretary, or to another official of the Department, as the Secretary may direct.

SEC. 604. CHIEF INFORMATION OFFICER.

The Chief Information Officer shall report to the Secretary, or to another official of the Department, as the Secretary may direct.

SEC. 605. CHIEF HUMAN CAPITAL OFFICER.

The Chief Human Capital Officer shall report to the Secretary, or to another official of the Department, as the Secretary may direct and shall ensure that all employees of the Department are informed of their rights and remedies under chapters 12 and 23 of title 5, United States Code, by—

(1) participating in the 2302(c) Certification Program of the Office of Special Counsel;

(2) achieving certification from the Office of Special Counsel of the Department's compliance with section 2302(c) of title 5, United States Code; and

(3) informing Congress of such certification not later than 24 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE VII—COORDINATION WITH NON-FEDERAL ENTITIES; INSPECTOR GENERAL; UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE; COAST GUARD; GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Coordination with Non-Federal Entities

SEC. 701. RESPONSIBILITIES.

In discharging his responsibilities relating to coordination (including the provision of training and equipment) with State and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities, with the private sector, and with other entities, the responsibilities of the Secretary shall include—

(1) coordinating with State and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities, and with the private sector, to ensure adequate planning, equipment, training, and exercise activities;

(2) coordinating and, as appropriate, consolidating the Federal Government's communications and systems of communications relating to homeland security with State and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities, the private sector, other entities, and the public;

(3) directing and supervising grant programs of the Federal Government for State and local government emergency response providers; and

(4) distributing or, as appropriate, coordinating the distribution of, warnings and information to State and local government personnel, agencies, and authorities and to the public.

Subtitle B—Inspector General

SEC. 710. AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the last two sentences of section 3(a) of the Inspector

General Act of 1978, the Inspector General shall be under the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary with respect to audits or investigations, or the issuance of subpoenas, that require access to information concerning—

(1) intelligence, counterintelligence, or counterterrorism matters;

(2) ongoing criminal investigations or proceedings;

(3) undercover operations;

(4) the identity of confidential sources, including protected witnesses;

(5) other matters the disclosure of which would, in the Secretary's judgment, constitute a serious threat to the protection of any person or property authorized protection by section 3056 of title 18, United States Code, section 202 of title 3 of such Code, or any provision of the Presidential Protection Assistance Act of 1976; or

(6) other matters the disclosure of which would, in the Secretary's judgment, constitute a serious threat to national security.

(b) Prohibition of Completion of Audit or Investigation.—With respect to the information described in subsection (a), the Secretary may prohibit the Inspector General from carrying out or completing any audit or investigation, or from issuing any subpoena, after such Inspector General has decided to initiate, carry out, or complete such audit or investigation or to issue such subpoena, if the Secretary determines that such prohibition is necessary to prevent the disclosure of any information described in subsection (a), to preserve the national security, or to prevent a significant impairment to the interests of the United States.

(c) Notification.—The Secretary shall notify in writing the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate, the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, and other appropriate committees of Congress within thirty days of any exercise of his authority under this section stating the reasons for such exercise.

SEC. 711. LAW ENFORCEMENT POWERS OF INSPECTOR GENERAL AGENTS.

(a) In General.—Section 6 of the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e)(1) In addition to the authority otherwise provided by this Act, each Inspector General appointed under section 3, any Assistant Inspector General for Investigations under such an Inspector General, and any special agent supervised by such an Assistant Inspector General may be authorized by the Attorney General to—

"(A) carry a firearm while engaged in official duties as authorized under this Act or other statute, or as expressly authorized by the Attorney General;

"(B) make an arrest without a warrant while engaged in official duties as authorized under this Act or other statute, or as expressly authorized by the Attorney General, for any offense against the United States committed in the presence of such Inspector General, Assistant Inspector General, or agent, or for any felony cognizable under the laws of the United States if such Inspector General, Assistant Inspector General, or agent has reasonable grounds to believe that the person to be arrested has committed or is committing such felony; and

"(C) seek and execute warrants for arrest, search of a premises, or seizures of evidence issued under the authority of the United States upon probable cause to believe that a violation has been committed.

"(2) The Attorney General may authorize exercise of the powers under this subsection only upon an initial determination that—

"(A) the affected Office of Inspector General is significantly hampered in the performance of responsibilities established by this Act as a result of the lack of such powers;

"(B) available assistance from other law enforcement agencies is insufficient to meet the need for such powers; and

"(C) adequate internal safeguards and management procedures exist to ensure proper exercise of such powers.

"(3) The Inspector General offices of the Department of Commerce, Department of Education, Department of Energy, Department of Health and Human Services, Department of Homeland Security, Department of Housing and Urban Development, Department of the Interior, Department of Justice, Department of Labor, Department of State, Department of Transportation, Department of the Treasury, Department of Veterans Affairs, Agency for International Development, Environmental Protection Agency, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Federal Emergency Management Agency, General Services Administration, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Office of Personnel Management, Railroad Retirement Board, Small Business Administration, Social Security Administration, and the Tennessee Valley Authority are exempt from the requirement of paragraph (2) of an initial determination of eligibility by the Attorney General.

"(4) The Attorney General shall promulgate, and revise as appropriate, guidelines which shall govern the exercise of the law enforcement powers established under paragraph (1).

"(5) Powers authorized for an Office of Inspector General under paragraph (1) shall be rescinded or suspended upon a determination by the Attorney General that any of the requirements under paragraph (2) is no longer satisfied or that the exercise of authorized powers by that Office of Inspector General has not complied with the guidelines promulgated by the Attorney General under paragraph (4).

"(6) A determination by the Attorney General under paragraph (2) or (5) shall not be reviewable in or by any court.

"(7) To ensure the proper exercise of the law enforcement powers authorized by this subsection, the Offices of Inspector General described under paragraph (3) shall, not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, collectively enter into a memorandum of understanding to establish an external review process for ensuring that adequate internal safeguards and management procedures continue to exist within each Office and within any Office that later receives an authorization under paragraph (2). The review process shall be established in consultation with the Attorney General, who shall be provided with a copy of the memorandum of understanding that establishes the review process. Under the review process, the exercise of the law enforcement powers by each Office of Inspector General shall be reviewed periodically by another Office of Inspector General or by a committee of Inspectors General. The results of each review shall be communicated in writing to the applicable Inspector General and to the Attorney General.

"(8) No provision of this subsection shall limit the exercise of law enforcement powers established under any other statutory authority, including United States Marshals Service special deputation.".

(b) Promulgation of Initial Guidelines.—

(1) Definition.—In this subsection, the term "memoranda of understanding" means the agreements between the Department of Justice and the Inspector General offices described under section 6(e)(3) of the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) (as added by subsection (a) of this section) that—

(A) are in effect on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) authorize such offices to exercise authority that is the same or similar to the authority under section 6(e)(1) of such Act.

(2) In general.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall promulgate guidelines under section 6(e)(4) of the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) (as added by subsection (a) of this section) applicable to the Inspector General offices described under section 6(e)(3) of that Act.

(3) Minimum requirements.—The guidelines promulgated under this subsection shall include, at a minimum, the operational and training requirements in the memoranda of understanding.

(4) No lapse of authority.—The memoranda of understanding in effect on the date of enactment of this Act shall remain in effect until the guidelines promulgated under this subsection take effect.

(c) Effective Dates.—

(1) In general.—Subsection (a) shall take effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) Initial guidelines.—Subsection (b) shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle C—United States Secret Service

SEC. 720. FUNCTIONS TRANSFERRED.

In accordance with title VIII, there shall be transferred to the Secretary the functions, personnel, assets, and liabilities of the United States Secret Service, which shall be maintained as a distinct entity within the Department, including the functions of the Secretary of the Treasury relating thereto.

Subtitle D—General Provisions

SEC. 730. ESTABLISHMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES MANAGEMENT SYSTEM.

(a) Authority.—

(1) Sense of congress.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(A) it is extremely important that employees of the Department be allowed to participate in a meaningful way in the creation of any human resources management system affecting them;

(B) such employees have the most direct knowledge of the demands of their jobs and have a direct interest in ensuring that their human resources management system is conducive to achieving optimal operational efficiencies;

(C) the 21st century human resources management system envisioned for the Department should be one that benefits from the input of its employees; and

(D) this collaborative effort will help secure our homeland.

(2) In general.—Subpart I of part III of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"CHAPTER 97—DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

"Sec.

"9701. Establishment of human resources management system.

"§9701. Establishment of human resources management system

"(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this part, the Secretary may, in regulations prescribed jointly with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, establish, and from time to time adjust, a human resources management system for some or all of the organizational units of the Department.

"(b) System Requirements.—Any system established under subsection (a) shall—

"(1) be flexible;

"(2) be contemporary;

"(3) not waive, modify, or otherwise affect—

"(A) the public employment principles of merit and fitness set forth in section 2301, including the principles of hiring based on merit, fair treatment without regard to political affiliation or other nonmerit considerations, equal pay for equal work, and protection of employees against reprisal for whistleblowing;

"(B) any provision of section 2302, relating to prohibited personnel practices;

"(C)(i) any provision of law referred to in section 2302(b)(1); or

"(ii) any provision of law implementing any provision of law referred to in section 2302(b)(1) by—

"(I) providing for equal employment opportunity through affirmative action; or

"(II) providing any right or remedy available to any employee or applicant for employment in the civil service;

"(D) any other provision of this part (as described in subsection (c)); or

"(E) any rule or regulation prescribed under any provision of law referred to in any of the preceding subparagraphs of this paragraph;

"(4) ensure that employees may organize, bargain collectively, and participate through labor organizations of their own choosing in decisions which affect them, subject to any exclusion from coverage or limitation on negotiability established by law; and

"(5) permit the use of a category rating system for evaluating applicants for positions in the competitive service.

"(c) Other Nonwaivable Provisions.—The other provisions of this part as referred to in subsection (b)(3)(D), are (to the extent not otherwise specified in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of subsection (b)(3))—

"(1) subparts A, B, E, G, and H of this part; and

"(2) chapters 41, 45, 47, 55, 57, 59, 72, 73, and 79, and this chapter.

"(d) Limitations Relating to Pay.—Nothing in this section shall constitute authority—

"(1) to modify the pay of any employee who serves in—

"(A) an Executive Schedule position under subchapter II of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code; or

"(B) a position for which the rate of basic pay is fixed in statute by reference to a section or level under subchapter II of chapter 53 of such title 5;

"(2) to fix pay for any employee or position at an annual rate greater than the maximum amount of cash compensation allowable under section 5307 of such title 5 in a year; or

"(3) to exempt any employee from the application of such section 5307.

"(e) Provisions To Ensure Collaboration With Employee Representatives.—

"(1) In general.—In order to ensure that the authority of this section is exercised in collaboration with, and in a manner that ensures the direct participation of employee representatives in the planning development, and implementation of any human resources management system or adjustments under this section, the Secretary and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall provide for the following:

"(A) Notice of proposal.— The Secretary and the Director shall, with respect to any proposed system or adjustment—

"(i) provide to each employee representative representing any employees who might be affected, a written description of the proposed system or adjustment (including the reasons why it is considered necessary);

"(ii) give each representative at least 60 days (unless extraordinary circumstances require earlier action) to review and make recommendations with respect to the proposal; and

"(iii) give any recommendations received from any such representatives under clause (ii) full and fair consideration in deciding whether or how to proceed with the proposal.

"(B) Preimplementation requirements.—If the Secretary and the Director decide to implement a proposal described in subparagraph (A), they shall before implementation—

"(i) give each representative details of the decision to implement the proposal, together with the information upon which the decision is based;

"(ii) give each representative an opportunity to make recommendations with respect to the proposal; and

"(iii) give such recommendation full and fair consideration, including the providing of reasons to an employee representative if any of its recommendations are rejected.

"(C) Continuing collaboration.—If a proposal described in subparagraph (A) is implemented, the Secretary and the Director shall—

"(i) develop a method for each employee representative to participate in any further planning or development which might become necessary; and

"(ii) give each employee representative adequate access to information to make that participation productive.

"(2) Procedures.—Any procedures necessary to carry out this subsection shall be established by the Secretary and the Director jointly. Such procedures shall include measures to ensure—

"(A) in the case of employees within a unit with respect to which a labor organization is accorded exclusive recognition, representation by individuals designated or from among individuals nominated by such organization;

"(B) in the case of any employees who are not within such a unit, representation by any appropriate organization which represents a substantial percentage of those employees or, if none, in such other manner as may be appropriate, consistent with the purposes of the subsection; and

"(C) the selection of representatives in a manner consistent with the relative number of employees represented by the organizations or other representatives involved.

"(f) Provisions Relating to Appellate Procedures.—

(1) Sense of congress.—It is the sense of Congress that—

"(A) employees of the Department are entitled to fair treatment in any appeals that they bring in decisions relating to their employment; and

"(B) in prescribing regulations for any such appeals procedures, the Secretary and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management—

"(i) should ensure that employees of the Department are afforded the protections of due process; and

"(ii) toward that end, should be required to consult with the Merit Systems Protection Board before issuing any such regulations.

"(2) Requirements.—Any regulations under this section which relate to any matters within the purview of chapter 77—

"(A) shall be issued only after consultation with the Merit Systems Protection Board;

"(B) shall ensure the availability of procedures which shall—

"(i) be consistent with requirements of due process; and

"(ii) provide, to the maximum extent practicable, for the expeditious handling of any matters involving the Department; and

"(C) shall modify procedures under chapter 77 only insofar as such modifications are designed to further the fair, efficient, and expeditious resolution of matters involving the employees of the Department.

"(g) Sunset Provision.—Effective 5 years after the conclusion of the transition period defined under section 801 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002, all authority to issue regulations under this section (including regulations which would modify, supersede, or terminate any regulations previously issued under this section) shall cease to be available.".

(3) Clerical amendment.—The table of chapters for part III of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end of the following:

"97. Department of Homeland Security .... 9701".

(b) Effect on Personnel.—

(1) Nonseparation or nonreduction in grade or compensation of full-time personnel and part-time personnel holding permanent positions.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the transfer pursuant to this act of full-time personnel (except special Government employees) and part-time personnel holding permanent positions shall not cause any such employee to be separated or reduced in grade or compensation for one year after the date of transfer to the Department.

(2) Positions compensated in accordance with executive schedule.—Any person who, on the day preceding such person's date of transfer pursuant to this Act, held a position compensated in accordance with the Executive Schedule prescribed in chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, and who, without a break in service, is appointed in the Department to a position having duties comparable to the duties performed immediately preceding such appointment shall continue to be compensated in such new position at not less than the rate provided for such position, for the duration of the service of such person in such new position.

(3) Coordination rule.—Any exercise of authority under chapter 97 of title 5, United States Code (as amended by subsection (a)), including under any system established under such chapter, shall be in conformance with the requirements of this subsection.

SEC. 731. LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS.

(a) Limitation on Exclusionary Authority.—

(1) In general.—No agency or subdivision of an agency which is transferred to the Department pursuant to this Act shall be excluded from the coverage of chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code, as a result of any order issued under section 7103(b)(1) of such title 5 after June 18, 2002, unless—

(A) the mission and responsibilities of the agency (or subdivision) materially change; and

(B) a majority of the employees within such agency (or subdivision) have as their primary duty intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

(2) Exclusions allowable.—Nothing in paragraph (1) shall affect the effectiveness of any order to the extent that such order excludes any portion of an agency or subdivision of an agency as to which—

(A) recognition as an appropriate unit has never been conferred for purposes of chapter 71 of such title 5; or

(B) any such recognition has been revoked or otherwise terminated as a result of a determination under subsection (b)(1).

(b) Provisions Relating to Bargaining Units.—

(1) Limitation relating to appropriate units.—Each unit which is recognized as an appropriate unit for purposes of chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code, as of the day before the effective date of this Act (and any subdivision of any such unit) shall, if such unit (or subdivision) is transferred to the Department pursuant to this Act, continue to be so recognized for such purposes, unless—

(A) the mission and responsibilities of such unit (or subdivision) materially change; and

(B) a majority of the employees within such unit (or subdivision) have as their primary duty intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

(2) Limitation relating to positions or employees.—No position or employee within a unit (or subdivision of a unit) as to which continued recognition is given in accordance with paragraph (1) shall be excluded from such unit (or subdivision), for purposes of chapter 71 of such title 5, unless the primary job duty of such position or employee—

(A) materially changes; and

(B) consists of intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

In the case of any positions within a unit (or subdivision) which are first established on or after the effective date of this Act and any employee first appointed on or after such date, the preceding sentence shall be applied disregarding subparagraph (A).

(c) Homeland Security.—Subsection (a), (b), and (d) of this section shall not apply in circumstances where the President determines in writing that such application would have a substantial adverse impact on the Department's ability to protect homeland security. Whenever the President makes a determination specified under this subsection, the President shall notify the Senate and the House of Representatives of the reasons for such determination not less than 10 days prior to its issuance.

(d) Coordination Rule.—No other provision of this Act or of any amendment made by this Act may be construed or applied in a manner so as to limit, supersede, or otherwise affect the provisions of this section, except to the extent that it does so by specific reference to this section.

SEC. 732. ADVISORY COMMITTEES.

The Secretary may establish, appoint members of, and use the services of, advisory committees, as the Secretary may deem necessary. An advisory committee established under this section may be exempted by the Secretary from Public Law 92-463, but the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register announcing the establishment of such a committee and identifying its purpose and membership. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, members of an advisory committee that is exempted by the Secretary under the preceding sentence who are special Government employees (as that term is defined in section 202 of title 18, United States Code) shall be eligible for certifications under subsection (b)(3) of section 208 of title 18, United States Code, for official actions taken as a member of such advisory committee.

SEC. 733. ACQUISITIONS.

(a) Research and Development Projects.—

(1) In general.—When the Secretary carries out basic, applied, and advanced research and development projects, he may exercise the same authority (subject to the same limitations and conditions) with respect to such research and projects as the Secretary of Defense may exercise under section 2371 of title 10, United States Code (except for subsections (b) and (f)), after making a determination that the use of a contract, grant, or cooperative agreement for such project is not feasible or appropriate. The annual report required under subsection (h) of such section, as applied to the Secretary by this paragraph, shall be submitted to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(2) Prototype projects.—The Secretary may, under the authority of paragraph (1), carry out prototype projects in accordance with the requirements and conditions provided for carrying out prototype projects under section 845 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103-160). In applying the authorities of that section 845, subsection (c) of that section shall apply with respect to prototype projects under this paragraph, and the Secretary shall perform the functions of the Secretary of Defense under subsection (d) thereof.

(b) Procurement of Temporary and Intermittent Services.—The Secretary may—

(1) procure the temporary or intermittent services of experts or consultants (or organizations thereof) in accordance with section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code; and

(2) whenever necessary due to an urgent homeland security need, procure temporary (not to exceed 1 year) or intermittent personal services, including the services of experts or consultants (or organizations thereof), without regard to the pay limitations of such section 3109.

SEC. 734. REORGANIZATION AUTHORITY.

(a) Reorganization Plan.—

(1) In general.—Whenever the President determines that changes in the organization of the Department are necessary to carry out any policy set forth in this Act, the President shall prepare a reorganization plan specifying the reorganizations that the President determines are necessary. Any such plan may provide for—

(A) the transfer of the whole or a part of an agency, or of the whole or a part of the functions thereof, to the jurisdiction and control of the Department;

(B) the transfer of the whole or a part of an agency, or of the whole or a part of the functions thereof, from the Department;

(C) the abolition of all or a part of an agency within the Department;

(D) the creation of a new agency or a new part of an agency within the Department; or

(E) the consolidation or coordination of the whole or a part of an agency within the Department, or of the whole or a part of the functions thereof, with the whole or a part of another agency within the Department.

(2) Transmittal.—

(A) In general.—The President shall transmit the reorganization plan to Congress together with the declaration that, with respect to each organization included in the plan, the President has found that the reorganization is necessary to carry out any policy set forth in this Act.

(B) Timing.—The reorganization plan shall be delivered to both Houses on the same day and to each House while it is in session, except that no more than 2 plans may be pending before Congress at 1 time.

(3) Content.—

(A) In general.—The transmittal message of the reorganization plan shall—

(i) specify with respect to each abolition of a function included in the plan the statutory authority for the exercise of the function;

(ii) include an estimate of any reduction or increase in expenditures (itemized so far as practicable);

(iii) include detailed information addressing the impacts of the reorganization on the employees of any agency affected by the plan, and what steps will be taken to mitigate any impacts of the plan on the employees of the agency;

(iv) describe any improvements in management, delivery of Federal services, execution of the laws, and increases in efficiency of Government operations, which it is expected will be realized as a result of the reorganizations included in the plan; and

(v) in the case of a transfer to or from the Department, address the impact of the proposed transfer on the ability of the affected agency to carry out its other functions and to accomplish its missions.

(B) Implementation.—In addition, the transmittal message shall include an implementation section which shall—

(i) describe in detail—

(I) the actions necessary or planned to complete the reorganization; and

(II) the anticipated nature and substance of any orders, directives, and other administrative and operations actions which are expected to be required for completing or implementing the reorganization; and

(ii) contain a projected timetable for completion of the implementation process.

(C) Background information.—The President shall also submit such further background or other information as Congress may require for its consideration of the plan.

(4) Amendments to plan.—Any time during the period of 60 calendar days of continuous session of Congress after the date on which the plan is transmitted to it, but before any resolution has been ordered reported in either House, the President, or the designee of the President, may make amendments or modifications to the plan, which modifications or revisions shall thereafter be treated as a part of the reorganization plan originally transmitted and shall not affect in any way the time limits otherwise provided for in this section. The President, or the designee of the President, may withdraw the plan any time prior to the conclusion of 90 calendar days of continuous session of Congress following the date on which the plan is submitted to Congress.

(b) Additional Contents of Reorganization Plan.—A reorganization plan—

(1) may change the name of an agency affected by a reorganization and the title of its head, and shall designate the name of an agency resulting from a reorganization and the title of its head;

(2) may provide for the appointment and pay of the head and 1 or more officers of any agency (including an agency resulting from a consolidation or other type of reorganization) if the message transmitting the plan declares, that by reason of a reorganization made by the plan the provisions are necessary;

(3) shall provide for the transfer or other disposition of the records, property, and personnel affected by a reorganization;

(4) shall provide for the transfer of such unexpended balances of appropriations, and of other funds, available for use in connection with a function or agency affected by a reorganization, as necessary by reason of the reorganization for use in connection with the functions affected by the reorganization, or for the use of the agency which shall have the functions after the reorganization plan is effective; and

(5) shall provide for terminating the affairs of an agency abolished.

A reorganization plan containing provisions authorized by paragraph (2) may provide that the head of an agency be an individual or a commission or board with more than 1 member. In the case of an appointment of the head of such an agency, the term of office may not be fixed at more than 4 years, the pay may not be at a rate in excess of that found to be applicable to comparable officers in the executive branch, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Any reorganization plan containing provisions required by paragraph (4) shall provide for the transfer of unexpended balances only if such balances are used for the purposes for which the appropriation was originally made.

(c) Effective Date and Publication of Reorganization Plans.—

(1) Effective date.—Except as provided under paragraph (3), a reorganization plan shall be effective upon approval by the President of a resolution (as defined in subsection (f)) with respect to such plan, only if such resolution is passed by the House of Representatives and the Senate, within the first period of 90 calendar days of continuous session of Congress after the date on which the plan is transmitted to Congress.

(2) Session of congress.—For the purpose of this chapter—

(A) continuity of session is broken only by an adjournment of Congress sine die; and

(B) the days on which either House is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain are excluded in the computation of any period of time in which Congress is in continuous session.

(3) Later effective date.—Under provisions contained in a reorganization plan, any provision thereof may be effective at a time later than the date on which the plan otherwise is effective.

(4) Publication of plan.—A reorganization plan which is effective shall be printed—

(A) in the Statutes at Large in the same volume as the public laws; and

(B) in the Federal Register.

(d) Effect On Other Laws; Pending Legal Proceedings.—

(1) Effect on laws.—

(A) Definition.—In this paragraph, the term "regulation or other action" means a regulation, rule, order, policy, determination, directive, authorization, permit, privilege, requirement, designation, or other action.

(B) Effect.—A statute enacted, and a regulation or other action made, prescribed, issued, granted, or performed in respect of or by an agency or function affected by a reorganization under this section, before the effective date of the reorganization, has, except to the extent rescinded, modified, superseded, or made inapplicable by or under authority of law or by the abolition of a function, the same effect as if the reorganization had not been made. However, if the statute, regulation, or other action has vested the functions in the agency from which it is removed under the reorganization plan, the function, insofar as it is to be exercised after the plan becomes effective, shall be deemed as vested in the agency under which the function is placed in the plan.

(2) Pending legal proceedings.—A suit, action, or other proceeding lawfully commenced by or against the head of an agency or other officer of the United States, in the officer's official capacity or in relation to the discharge of the officer's official duties, does not abate by reason of the taking effect of a reorganization plan under this section. On motion or supplemental petition filed at any time within 12 months after the reorganization plan takes effect, showing a necessity for a survival of the suit, action, or other proceeding to obtain a settlement of the questions involved, the court may allow the suit, action, or other proceeding to be maintained by or against the successor of the head or officer under the reorganization effected by the plan or, if there is no successor, against such agency or officer as the President designates.

(e) Rules of Senate and House of Representatives On Reorganization Plans.—Subsections (f) through (i) are enacted by Congress—

(1) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, and as such they are deemed a part of the rules of each House, respectively, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in that House in the case of resolutions with respect to any reorganization plans transmitted to Congress (in accordance with subsection (a)(3) of this section); and they supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

(2) with the full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of that House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

(f) Terms of Resolution.—For the purposes of subsections (e) through (i), "resolution" means only a joint resolution of Congress, the matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: "That Congress approves the reorganization plan transmitted to Congress by the President on , 20 .", and includes such modifications and revisions as are submitted by the President under subsection (a)(4). The blank spaces therein are to be filled appropriately. The term does not include a resolution which specifies more than 1 reorganization plan.

(g) Introduction and Reference of Resolution.—

(1) Introduction.—No later than the first day of session following the day on which a reorganization plan is transmitted to the House of Representatives and the Senate under subsection (a), a resolution, as defined in subsection (f), shall be—

(A) introduced (by request) in the House by the chairman of the Government Reform Committee of the House, or by a Member or Members of the House designated by such chairman; and

(B) introduced (by request) in the Senate by the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee of the Senate, or by a Member or Members of the Senate designated by such chairman.

(2) Referral.—A resolution with respect to a reorganization plan shall be referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House (and all resolutions with respect to the same plan shall be referred to the same committee) by the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House of Representatives, as the case may be. The committee shall make its recommendations to the House of Representatives or the Senate, respectively, within 75 calendar days of continuous session of Congress following the date of such resolution's introduction.

(h) Discharge of Committee Considering Resolution.—If the committee to which is referred a resolution introduced pursuant to subsection (g)(1) has not reported such a resolution or identical resolution at the end of 75 calendar days of continuous session of Congress after its introduction, such committee shall be deemed to be discharged from further consideration of such resolution and such resolution shall be placed on the appropriate calendar of the House involved.

(i) Procedure After Report or Discharge of Committees; Debate; Vote on Final Passage.—

(1) Procedure.—When the committee has reported, or has been deemed to be discharged (under subsection (h)) from further consideration of, a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan, it is at any time thereafter in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any Member of the respective House to move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution. The motion is highly privileged and is not debatable. The motion shall not be subject to amendment, or to any motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to shall not be in order. If a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution is agreed to, the resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the respective House until disposed of.

(2) Debate.—Debate on the resolution, and on all debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 10 hours, which shall be divided equally between individuals favoring and individuals opposing the resolution. A motion further to limit debate is in order and not debatable. An amendment to, or a motion to recommit the resolution is not in order. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is passed or rejected shall not be in order.

(3) Vote on final passage.—Immediately following the conclusion of the debate on the resolution with respect to a reorganization plan, and a single quorum call at the conclusion of the debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the appropriate House, the vote on final passage of the resolution shall occur.

(4) Appeals.—Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case may be, to the procedure relating to a resolution with respect to a reorganization plan shall be decided without debate.

(5) Prior passage.—If, prior to the passage by 1 House of a resolution of that House, that House receives a resolution with respect to the same reorganization plan from the other House, then—

(A) the procedure in that House shall be the same as if no resolution had been received from the other House; but

(B) the vote on final passage shall be on the resolution of the other House.

SEC. 735. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

(a) Seal.—The Department shall have a seal, whose design is subject to the approval of the President.

(b) Participation of Members of the Armed Forces.—With respect to the Department, the Secretary shall have the same authorities that the Secretary of Transportation has with respect to the Department of Transportation under section 324 of title 49, United States Code.

(c) Redelegation of Functions.—Unless otherwise provided in the delegation or by law, any function delegated under this Act may be redelegated to any subordinate.

SEC. 736. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 737. REGULATORY AUTHORITY.

Except as specifically provided in this Act, this Act vests in the Secretary or any other Federal official, and transfers to the Secretary or another Federal official only such regulatory authority as exists on the date of enactment of this Act within any agency, program, or function transferred to the Department pursuant to this Act, or that on such date of enactment is exercised by another official of the executive branch with respect to such agency, program, or function. Any such transferred authority may not be exercised by an official from whom it is transferred upon transfer of such agency, program, or function to the Secretary or another Federal official pursuant to this Act. This Act does not alter or diminish the regulatory authority of any other executive agency, except to the extent that this Act transfers such authority from the agency.

SEC. 738. USE OF APPROPRIATED FUNDS.

(a) Applicability of This Section.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act or any other law, this section shall apply to the use of any funds, disposal of property, and acceptance, use, and disposal of gifts, or donations of services or property, of, for, or by the Department, including any agencies, entities, or other organizations transferred to the Department under this Act.

(b) Authorization of Appropriations To Create Department.—There is authorized to be appropriated $160,000,000 for the Office of Homeland Security in the Executive Office of the President to be transferred without delay to the Department upon its creation by enactment of this Act, notwithstanding subsection (c)(1)(C) such funds shall be available only for the payment of necessary salaries and expenses associated with the initiation of operations of the Department.

(c) Use of Transferred Funds.—

(1) In general.—Except as may be provided in this subsection or in an appropriations Act in accordance with subsection (e), balances of appropriations and any other funds or assets transferred under this Act—

(A) shall be available only for the purposes for which they were originally available;

(B) shall remain subject to the same conditions and limitations provided by the law originally appropriating or otherwise making available the amount, including limitations and notification requirements related to the reprogramming of appropriated funds; and

(C) shall not be used to fund any new position established under this Act.

(2) Transfer of funds.—

(A) In general.—After the creation of the Department and the swearing in of its Secretary, and upon determination by the Secretary that such action is necessary in the national interest, the Secretary is authorized to transfer, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, not to exceed $140,000,000 of unobligated funds from organizations and entities transferred to the new Department by this Act.

(B) Limitation.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(C), funds authorized to be transferred by subparagraph 2(A) shall be available only for payment of necessary costs, including funding of new positions, for the initiation of operations of the Department and may not be transferred unless the Committees on Appropriations are notified at least 15 days in advance of any proposed transfer and have approved such transfer in advance.

(C) Notification.—The notification required in subparagraph 2(B) shall include a detailed justification of the purposes for which the funds are to be used and a detailed statement of the impact on the program or organization that is the source of the funds, and shall be submitted in accordance with reprogramming procedures to be established by the Committees on Appropriations.

(D) Use for other items.—The authority to transfer funds established in this section may not be used unless for higher priority items, based on demonstrated homeland security requirements, than those for which funds originally were appropriated and in no case where the item for which funds are requested has been denied by Congress.

(d) Notification Regarding Transfers.—The President shall notify Congress not less than 15 days before any transfer of appropriations balances, other funds, or assets under this Act.

(e) Additional Uses of Funds During Transition.—Subject to subsections (c) and (d), amounts transferred to, or otherwise made available to, the Department may be used during the transition period, as defined in section 801(2), for purposes in addition to those for which such amounts were originally available (including by transfer among accounts of the Department), but only to the extent such transfer or use is specifically permitted in advance in an appropriations Act and only under the conditions and for the purposes specified in such appropriations Act.

(f) Disposal of Property.—

(1) Strict compliance.—If specifically authorized to dispose of real property in this or any other Act, the Secretary shall exercise this authority in strict compliance with section 204 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 485).

(2) Deposit of proceeds.—The Secretary shall deposit the proceeds of any exercise of property disposal authority into the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in accordance with section 3302(b) of title 31, United States Code.

(g) Gifts.—Gifts or donations of services or property of or for the Department may not be accepted, used, or disposed of unless specifically permitted in advance in an appropriations Act and only under the conditions and for the purposes specified in such appropriations Act.

(h) Budget Request.—Under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, the President shall submit to Congress a detailed budget request for the Department for fiscal year 2004, and for each subsequent fiscal year.

SEC. 739. FUTURE YEARS HOMELAND SECURITY PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—Each budget request submitted to Congress for the Department under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, shall, at or about the same time, be accompanied by a Future Years Homeland Security Program.

(b) Contents.—The Future Years Homeland Security Program under subsection (a) shall be structured, and include the same type of information and level of detail, as the Future Years Defense Program submitted to Congress by the Department of Defense under section 221 of title 10, United States Code.

(c) Effective Date.—This section shall take effect with respect to the preparation and submission of the fiscal year 2005 budget request for the Department and for any subsequent fiscal year, except that the first Future Years Homeland Security Program shall be submitted not later than 90 days after the Department's fiscal year 2005 budget request is submitted to Congress.

SEC. 739A. BIOTERRORISM PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE DIVISION.

Section 319D of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 2472-4) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b), the following:

"(c) Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Division.—

"(1) Establishment.—There is established within the Office of the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention a Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Division (in this subsection referred to as the 'Division').

"(2) Mission.—The Division shall have the following primary missions:

"(A) To lead and coordinate the activities and responsibilities of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention with respect to countering bioterrorism.

"(B) To coordinate and facilitate the interaction of Centers for Disease Control and Prevention personnel with personnel from the Department of Homeland Security and, in so doing, serve as a major contact point for 2-way communications between the jurisdictions of homeland security and public health.

"(C) To train and employ a cadre of public health personnel who are dedicated full-time to the countering of bioterrorism.

"(3) Responsibilities.—In carrying out the mission under paragraph (2), the Division shall assume the responsibilities of and budget authority for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention with respect to the following programs:

"(A) The Bioterrorism Preparedness and Response Program.

"(B) The Strategic National Stockpile.

"(C) Such other programs and responsibilities as may be assigned to the Division by the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"(4) Director.—There shall be in the Division a Director, who shall be appointed by the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Homeland Security.

"(5) Staffing.—Under agreements reached between the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Secretary of Homeland Security—

"(A) the Division may be staffed, in part, by personnel assigned from the Department of Homeland Security by the Secretary of Homeland Security; and

"(B) the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention may assign some personnel from the Division to the Department of Homeland Security.".

SEC. 739B. COORDINATION WITH THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES UNDER THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT.

(a) In General.—The annual Federal response plan developed by the Secretary under sections 102(b)(14) and 134(b)(7) shall be consistent with section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d).

(b) DISCLOSURES AMONG RELEVANT AGENCIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Full disclosure among relevant agencies shall be made in accordance with this subsection.

(2) PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY.—During the period in which the Secretary of Health and Human Services has declared the existence of a public health emergency under section 319(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d(a)), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall keep relevant agencies, including the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Justice, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, fully and currently informed.

(3) POTENTIAL PUBLIC HEALTH EMERGENCY.—In cases involving, or potentially involving, a public health emergency, but in which no determination of an emergency by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d(a)), has been made, all relevant agencies, including the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Justice, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall keep the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention fully and currently informed.

Subtitle E—Risk Sharing and Indemnification for Contractors Supplying Anti-Terrorism Technology and Services

SEC. 741. APPLICATION OF INDEMNIFICATION AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President may exercise the discretionary authority to indemnify contractors and subcontractors under Public Law 85-804 (50 U.S.C. 1431 et seq.) for a procurement of an anti-terrorism technology or an anti-terrorism service for the purpose of preventing, detecting, identifying, otherwise deterring, or recovering from acts of terrorism.

(b) EXERCISE OF AUTHORITY.—In exercising the authority under subsection (a), the President may include, among other things—

(1) economic damages not fully covered by private liability insurance within the scope of the losses or damages of the indemnification coverage;

(2) a requirement that an indemnification provision included in a contract or subcontract be negotiated prior to the commencement of the performance of the contract;

(3) the coverage of information technology used to prevent, detect, identify, otherwise deter, or recover from acts of terrorism; and

(4) the coverage of the United States Postal Service.

SEC. 742. APPLICATION OF INDEMNIFICATION AUTHORITY TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the limitations of subsection (b), the President may exercise the discretionary authority to indemnify contractors and subcontractors under Public Law 85-804 (50 U.S.C. 1431 et seq.) for a procurement by a State or unit of local government of an anti-terrorism technology or an anti-terrorism service for the purpose of preventing, detecting, identifying, otherwise deterring, or recovering from acts of terrorism.

(b) EXERCISE OF AUTHORITY.—The authority of subsection (a) may be exercised only—

(1) for procurements of a State or unit of local government that are made by the Secretary under contracts awarded by the Secretary pursuant to the authorities of section 743;

(2) with written approval from the Secretary, or any other official designated by the President, for each procurement in which indemnification is to be provided; and

(3) with respect to—

(A) amounts of losses or damages not fully covered by private liability insurance and State or local government-provided indemnification; and

(B) liabilities arising out of other than the contractor's willful misconduct or lack of good faith.

SEC. 743. PROCUREMENTS OF ANTI-TERRORISM TECHNOLOGIES AND ANTI-TERRORISM SERVICES BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS THROUGH FEDERAL CONTRACTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish a program under which States and units of local government may procure through contracts entered into by the Secretary anti-terrorism technology or an anti-terrorism service for the purpose of preventing, detecting, identifying, otherwise deterring, or recovering from acts of terrorism.

(2) AUTHORITIES.—For the sole purposes of this program, the Secretary may, but shall not be required to, award contracts using the same authorities provided to the Administrator of General Services under section 309(b)(3) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act, 41 U.S.C. 259(b)(3).

(3) OFFERS NOT REQUIRED TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—A contractor that sells anti-terrorism technology or anti-terrorism services to the Federal Government shall not be required to offer such technology or services to a State or unit of local government.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE SECRETARY.—In carrying out the program established by this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) produce and maintain a catalog of anti-terrorism technologies and anti-terrorism services suitable for procurement by States and units of local government under this program; and

(2) establish procedures in accordance with subsection (c) to address the procurement of anti-terrorism technologies and anti-terrorism services by States and units of local government under contracts awarded by the Secretary.

(c) REQUIRED PROCEDURES.—The procedures required by subsection (b)(2) shall implement the following requirements and authorities:

(1) SUBMISSIONS BY STATES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), each State desiring to participate in a procurement of anti-terrorism technologies or anti-terrorism services through a contract entered into by the Secretary shall submit to the Secretary in such form and manner and at such times as the Secretary prescribes, the following:

(i) REQUEST.—A request consisting of an enumeration of the technologies or services, respectively, that are desired by the State and units of local government within the State.

(ii) PAYMENT.—Advance payment for each requested technology or service in an amount determined by the Secretary based on estimated or actual costs of the technology or service and administrative costs incurred by the Secretary.

(B) AWARD BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may award and designate contracts under which States and units of local government may procure anti-terrorism technologies and anti-terrorism services directly from the contract holders. No indemnification may be provided under the authorities set forth in section 742 for procurements that are made directly between contractors and States or units of local government.

(2) PERMITTED CATALOG TECHNOLOGIES AND SERVICES.—A State may include in a request submitted under paragraph (1) only a technology or service listed in the catalog produced under subsection (b)(1).

(3) COORDINATION OF LOCAL REQUESTS WITHIN STATE.—The Governor of a State (or the Mayor of the District of Columbia) may establish such procedures as the Governor (or the Mayor of the District of Columbia) considers appropriate for administering and coordinating requests for anti-terrorism technologies or anti-terrorism services from units of local government within the State.

(4) SHIPMENT AND TRANSPORTATION COSTS.—A State requesting anti-terrorism technologies or anti-terrorism services shall be responsible for arranging and paying for any shipment or transportation costs necessary to deliver the technologies or services, respectively, to the State and localities within the State.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT OF ACTUAL COSTS.—In the case of a procurement made by or for a State or unit of local government under the procedures established under this section, the Secretary shall require the State or unit of local government to reimburse the Department for the actual costs it has incurred for such procurement.

(e) TIME FOR IMPLEMENTATION.—The catalog and procedures required by subsection (b) of this section shall be completed as soon as practicable and no later than 210 days after the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 744. CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other law, a Federal agency shall, when exercising the discretionary authority of Public Law 85-804, as amended by section 742, to indemnify contractors and subcontractors, provide written notification to the Committees identified in subsection (b) within 30 days after a contract clause is executed to provide indemnification.

(b) SUBMISSION.—The notification required by subsection (a) shall be submitted to—

(1) the Appropriations Committees of the Senate and House;

(2) the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and House;

(3) the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee; and

(4) the House Government Reform Committee.

SEC. 745. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle:

(1) ANTI-TERRORISM TECHNOLOGY AND SERVICE.—The terms "anti-terrorism technology" and "anti-terrorism service" mean any product, equipment, or device, including information technology, and any service, system integration, or other kind of service (including a support service), respectively, that is related to technology and is designed, developed, modified, or procured for the purpose of preventing, detecting, identifying, otherwise deterring, or recovering from acts of terrorism.

(2) ACT OF TERRORISM.—The term "act of terrorism" means a calculated attack or threat of attack against any person, property, or infrastructure to inculcate fear, or to intimidate or coerce a government, the civilian population, or any segment thereof, in the pursuit of political, religious, or ideological objectives.

(3) INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY.—The term "information technology" has the meaning such term in section 11101(6) of title 40, United States Code.

(4) STATE.—The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and any territory or possession of the United States.

(5) UNIT OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The term "unit of local government" means any city, county, township, town, borough, parish, village, or other general purpose political subdivision of a State; an Indian tribe which performs law enforcement functions as determined by the Secretary of the Interior; or any agency of the District of Columbia Government or the United States Government performing law enforcement functions in and for the District of Columbia or the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Subtitle F—Federal Emergency Procurement Flexibility

SEC. 751. DEFINITION.

In this title, the term "executive agency" has the meaning given that term under section 4(1) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(1)).

SEC. 752. PROCUREMENTS FOR DEFENSE AGAINST OR RECOVERY FROM TERRORISM OR NUCLEAR, BIOLOGICAL, CHEMICAL, OR RADIOLOGICAL ATTACK.

The authorities provided in this subtitle apply to any procurement of property or services by or for an executive agency that, as determined by the head of the executive agency, are to be used to facilitate defense against or recovery from terrorism or nuclear, biological, chemical, or radiological attack, but only if a solicitation of offers for the procurement is issued during the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 753. INCREASED SIMPLIFIED ACQUISITION THRESHOLD FOR PROCUREMENTS IN SUPPORT OF HUMANITARIAN OR PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS OR CONTINGENCY OPERATIONS.

(a) TEMPORARY THRESHOLD AMOUNTS.—For a procurement referred to in section 752 that is carried out in support of a humanitarian or peacekeeping operation or a contingency operation, the simplified acquisition threshold definitions shall be applied as if the amount determined under the exception provided for such an operation in those definitions were—

(1) in the case of a contract to be awarded and performed, or purchase to be made, inside the United States, $250,000; or

(2) in the case of a contract to be awarded and performed, or purchase to be made, outside the United States, $500,000.

(b) SIMPLIFIED ACQUISITION THRESHOLD DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the term "simplified acquisition threshold definitions" means the following:

(1) Section 4(11) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(11)).

(2) Section 309(d) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 259(d)).

(3) Section 2302(7) of title 10, United States Code.

(c) SMALL BUSINESS RESERVE.—For a procurement carried out pursuant to subsection (a), section 15(j) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 644(j)) shall be applied as if the maximum anticipated value identified therein is equal to the amounts referred to in subsection (a).

SEC. 754. INCREASED MICRO-PURCHASE THRESHOLD FOR CERTAIN PROCUREMENTS.

In the administration of section 32 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 428) with respect to a procurement referred to in section 752, the amount specified in subsections (c), (d), and (f) of such section 32 shall be deemed to be $10,000.

SEC. 755. APPLICATION OF CERTAIN COMMERCIAL ITEMS AUTHORITIES TO CERTAIN PROCUREMENTS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The head of an executive agency may apply the provisions of law listed in paragraph (2) to a procurement referred to in section 752 without regard to whether the property or services are commercial items.

(2) COMMERCIAL ITEM LAWS.—The provisions of law referred to in paragraph (1) are as follows:

(A) Sections 31 and 34 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 427, 430).

(B) Section 2304(g) of title 10, United States Code.

(C) Section 303(g) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253(g)).

(b) INAPPLICABILITY OF LIMITATION ON USE OF SIMPLIFIED ACQUISITION PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The $5,000,000 limitation provided in section 31(a)(2) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 427(a)(2)), section 2304(g)(1)(B) of title 10, United States Code, and section 303(g)(1)(B) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253(g)(1)(B)) shall not apply to purchases of property or services to which any of the provisions of law referred to in subsection (a) are applied under the authority of this section.

(2) OMB GUIDANCE.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall issue guidance and procedures for the use of simplified acquisition procedures for a purchase of property or services in excess of $5,000,000 under the authority of this section.

(c) CONTINUATION OF AUTHORITY FOR SIMPLIFIED PURCHASE PROCEDURES.—Authority under a provision of law referred to in subsection (a)(2) that expires under section 4202(e) of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104-106; 10 U.S.C. 2304 note) shall, notwithstanding such section, continue to apply for use by the head of an executive agency as provided in subsections (a) and (b).

SEC. 756. USE OF STREAMLINED PROCEDURES.

(a) REQUIRED USE.—The head of an executive agency shall, when appropriate, use streamlined acquisition authorities and procedures authorized by law for a procurement referred to in section 752, including authorities and procedures that are provided under the following provisions of law:

(1) FEDERAL PROPERTY AND ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES ACT OF 1949.—In title III of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949:

(A) Paragraphs (1), (2), (6), and (7) of subsection (c) of section 303 (41 U.S.C. 253), relating to use of procedures other than competitive procedures under certain circumstances (subject to subsection (e) of such section).

(B) Section 303J (41 U.S.C. 253j), relating to orders under task and delivery order contracts.

(2) TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE.—In chapter 137 of title 10, United States Code:

(A) Paragraphs (1), (2), (6), and (7) of subsection (c) of section 2304, relating to use of procedures other than competitive procedures under certain circumstances (subject to subsection (e) of such section).

(B) Section 2304c, relating to orders under task and delivery order contracts.

(3) OFFICE OF FEDERAL PROCUREMENT POLICY ACT.—Paragraphs (1)(B), (1)(D), and (2) of section 18(c) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 416(c)), relating to inapplicability of a requirement for procurement notice.

(b) WAIVER OF CERTAIN SMALL BUSINESS THRESHOLD REQUIREMENTS.—Subclause (II) of section 8(a)(1)(D)(i) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)(1)(D)(i)) and clause (ii) of section 31(b)(2)(A) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 657a(b)(2)(A)) shall not apply in the use of streamlined acquisition authorities and procedures referred to in paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A) of subsection (a) for a procurement referred to in section 752.

SEC. 757. REVIEW AND REPORT BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.

(a) REQUIREMENTS.—Not later than March 31, 2004, the Comptroller General shall—

(1) complete a review of the extent to which procurements of property and services have been made in accordance with this subtitle; and

(2) submit a report on the results of the review to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

(b) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report under subsection (a)(2) shall include the following matters:

(1) ASSESSMENT.—The Comptroller General's assessment of—

(A) the extent to which property and services procured in accordance with this title have contributed to the capacity of the workforce of Federal Government employees within each executive agency to carry out the mission of the executive agency; and

(B) the extent to which Federal Government employees have been trained on the use of technology.

(2) RECOMMENDATIONS.—Any recommendations of the Comptroller General resulting from the assessment described in paragraph (1).

(c) CONSULTATION.—In preparing for the review under subsection (a)(1), the Comptroller shall consult with the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives on the specific issues and topics to be reviewed. The extent of coverage needed in areas such as technology integration, employee training, and human capital management, as well as the data requirements of the study, shall be included as part of the consultation.

SEC. 758. IDENTIFICATION OF NEW ENTRANTS INTO THE FEDERAL MARKETPLACE.

The head of each executive agency shall conduct market research on an ongoing basis to identify effectively the capabilities, including the capabilities of small businesses and new entrants into Federal contracting, that are available in the marketplace for meeting the requirements of the executive agency in furtherance of defense against or recovery from terrorism or nuclear, biological, chemical, or radiological attack. The head of the executive agency shall, to the maximum extent practicable, take advantage of commercially available market research methods, including use of commercial databases, to carry out the research.

Subtitle G—Coast Guard

SEC. 761. PRESERVING COAST GUARD MISSION PERFORMANCE.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) NON-HOMELAND SECURITY MISSIONS.—The term "non-homeland security missions" means the following missions of the Coast Guard:

(A) Marine safety.

(B) Search and rescue.

(C) Aids to navigation.

(D) Living marine resources (e.g., fisheries law enforcement).

(E) Marine environmental protection.

(F) Ice operations.

(2) Homeland security missions.—The term "homeland security missions" means the following missions of the Coast Guard:

(A) Ports, waterways and coastal security.

(B) Drug interdiction.

(C) Migrant interdiction.

(D) Defense readiness.

(E) Other law enforcement.

(b) Transfer.—There are transferred to the Department the authorities, functions, personnel, and assets of the Coast Guard, which shall be maintained as a distinct entity within the Department, including the authorities and functions of the Secretary of Transportation relating thereto.

(c) Maintenance of Status of Functions and Assets.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the authorities, functions, assets, organizational structure, units, personnel, and non-homeland security missions of the Coast Guard shall be maintained intact and without reduction after the transfer of the Coast Guard to the Department, except as specified in subsequent Acts. Nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the Coast Guard from replacing or upgrading any asset with an asset of equivalent or greater capabilities.

(d) Certain Transfers Prohibited.—

(1) In general.—None of the missions, functions, personnel, and assets (including ships, aircraft, helicopters, and vehicles) of the Coast Guard may be transferred to the operational control of, or diverted to the principal and continuing use of, any other organization, unit, or entity of the Department.

(2) Applicability.—The restrictions in paragraph (1) shall not apply—

(A) to any joint operation of less than 90 days between the Coast Guard and other entities and organizations of the Department; or

(B) to any detail or assignment of any individual member or civilian employee of the Coast Guard to any other entity or organization of the Department for the purposes of ensuring effective liaison, coordination, and operations of the Coast Guard and that entity or organization, except that the total number of individuals detailed or assigned in this capacity may not exceed 50 individuals during any fiscal year.

(e) Changes to Non-Homeland Security Missions.—

(1) Prohibition.—The Secretary may not make any substantial or significant change to any of the non-homeland security missions of the Coast Guard, or to the capabilities of the Coast Guard to carry out each of the non-homeland security missions, without the prior approval of Congress as expressed in a subsequent Act. With respect to a change to the capabilities of the Coast Guard to carry out each of the non-homeland security missions, the restrictions in this paragraph shall not apply when such change shall result in an increase in those capabilities.

(2) Waiver.—The President may waive the restrictions under paragraph (1) for a period of not to exceed 90 days upon a declaration and certification by the President to Congress that a clear, compelling, and immediate state of national emergency exists that justifies such a waiver. A certification under this paragraph shall include a detailed justification for the declaration and certification, including the reasons and specific information that demonstrate that the Nation and the Coast Guard cannot respond effectively to the national emergency if the restrictions under paragraph (1) are not waived.

(f) Annual Review.—

(1) In general.—The Inspector General of the Department shall conduct an annual review that shall assess thoroughly the performance by the Coast Guard of all missions of the Coast Guard (including non-homeland security missions and homeland security missions) with a particular emphasis on examining the non-homeland security missions.

TITLE VIII—TRANSITION

SEC. 801. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) Agency.—The term "agency" includes any entity, organizational unit, or function; and

(2) Transition period.—The term "transition period" means the 12-month period beginning on the effective date of this Act.

SEC. 802. TRANSFER OF AGENCIES.

The transfer of an agency to the Department shall occur when the President so directs, but in no event later than the end of the transition period. When an agency is transferred, the President may also transfer to the Department any agency established to carry out or support adjudicatory or review functions in relation to the agency.

SEC. 803. TRANSITIONAL AUTHORITIES.

(a) Provision of Assistance by Officials.—Until the transfer of an agency to the Department, any official having authority over, or functions relating to, the agency immediately before the effective date of this Act shall provide to the Secretary such assistance, including the use of personnel and assets, as the Secretary may request in preparing for the transfer and integration of the agency into the Department.

(b) Services and Personnel.—During the transition period, upon the request of the Secretary, the head of any executive agency may, on a reimbursable or nonreimbursable basis, provide services or detail personnel to assist with the transition.

(c) Acting Officials.—

(1) In general.—

(A) Designation.—During the transition period, pending the advice and consent of the Senate to the appointment of an officer required by this Act to be appointed by and with such advice and consent, the President may designate any officer whose appointment was required to be made by and with such advice and consent and who was such an officer immediately before the effective date of this Act (and who continues in office) or immediately before such designation, to act in such office until the same is filled as provided in this Act.

(B) Compensation.—While serving as an acting officer under subparagraph (A), that officer shall receive compensation at the higher of the rate provided—

(i) by this Act for the office in which that officer acts; or

(ii) for the office held at the time of designation.

(2) Rule of construction.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require the advice and consent of the Senate to the appointment by the President to a position in the Department of any officer whose—

(A) agency is transferred to the Department under this Act; and

(B) duties following such transfer are germane to those performed before such transfer.

(d) Transfer of Personnel, Assets, Liabilities, and Functions.—Upon the transfer of an agency to the Department—

(1) the personnel, assets, and liabilities held by or available in connection with the agency shall be transferred to the Secretary for appropriate allocation, subject to the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; and

(2) the Secretary shall have all functions—

(A) relating to the agency that any other official could by law exercise in relation to the agency immediately before such transfer; and

(B) vested in the Secretary by this Act or other law.

SEC. 804. SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

(a) Completed Administrative Actions.—

(1). In general.—Completed administrative actions of an agency shall not be affected by the enactment of this Act or the transfer of such agency to the Department, but shall continue in effect according to their terms until amended, modified, superseded, terminated, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by an officer of the United States or a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(2) Included actions.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term "completed administrative actions" includes orders, determinations, rules, regulations, personnel actions, permits, agreements, grants, contracts, certificates, licenses, registrations, and privileges.

(b) Pending Proceedings.—Subject to the authority of the Secretary under this Act—

(1) pending proceedings in an agency, including notices of proposed rulemaking, and applications for licenses, permits, certificates, grants, and financial assistance, shall continue notwithstanding the enactment of this Act or the transfer of the agency to the Department, unless discontinued or modified under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such discontinuance could have occurred if such enactment or transfer had not occurred; and

(2) orders issued in such proceedings, and appeals therefrom, and payments made pursuant to such orders, shall issue in the same manner and on the same terms as if this Act had not been enacted or the agency had not been transferred, and any such orders shall continue in effect until amended, modified, superseded, terminated, set aside, or revoked by an officer of the United States or a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(c) Pending Civil Actions.—Subject to the authority of the Secretary under this Act, pending civil actions shall continue notwithstanding the enactment of this Act or the transfer of an agency to the Department, and in such civil actions, proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered and enforced in the same manner and with the same effect as if such enactment or transfer had not occurred.

(d) References.—References relating to an agency that is transferred to the Department in statutes, Executive orders, rules, regulations, directives, or delegations of authority that precede such transfer or the effective date of this Act shall be deemed to refer, as appropriate, to the Department, to its officers, employees, or agents, or to its corresponding organizational units or functions.

(e) Statutory Reporting Requirements.—Any statutory reporting requirement that applied to an agency, transferred to the Department under this Act, immediately before the effective date of this Act shall continue to apply following that transfer if the statutory requirement refers to the agency by name.

(f) Employment Provisions.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, or under authority granted by this Act, the transfer under this Act of personnel shall not alter the terms and conditions of employment, including compensation, of any employee so transferred.

SEC. 805. TERMINATIONS.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act, whenever all the functions vested by law in any agency have been transferred under this Act, each position and office the incumbent of which was authorized to receive compensation at the rates prescribed for an office or position at level II, III, IV, or V, of the Executive Schedule, shall terminate.

SEC. 806. INCIDENTAL TRANSFERS.

The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in consultation with the Secretary, is authorized and directed to make such additional incidental dispositions of personnel, assets, and liabilities held,, used, arising from, available, or to be made available, in connection with the functions transferred by this Act, as the Director may determine necessary to accomplish the purposes of this Act.

"(c) Chief Budget Officer of the Enforcement Bureau.—There shall be within the Enforcement Bureau a Chief Budget Officer. Under the authority of the Chief Financial Officer of the Directorate, the Chief Budget Officer of the Enforcement Bureau shall be responsible for monitoring and supervising all financial activities of the Enforcement Bureau.

"(d) Office of Professional Responsibility.—There shall be within the Enforcement Bureau an Office of Professional Responsibility that shall have the responsibility for ensuring the professionalism of the Enforcement Bureau and receiving charges of misconduct or ill treatment made by the public and investigating the charges.

"(e) Office of Quality Assurance.—There shall be within the Enforcement Bureau an Office of Quality Assurance that shall develop procedures and conduct audits to—

"(1) ensure that the Directorate's policies with respect to immigration enforcement functions are properly implemented; and

"(2) ensure that Enforcement Bureau policies or practices result in sound record management and efficient and accurate recordkeeping.

"(f) Training of Personnel.—The Assistant Secretary for Immigration Enforcement, in consultation with the Under Secretary, shall have responsibility for determining the training for all personnel of the Enforcement Bureau.".

(b) Enforcement Bureau Offices.—

(1) In general.—Under the direction of the Secretary, the Under Secretary, acting through the Assistant Secretary for Immigration Enforcement, shall establish Enforcement Bureau offices, including suboffices and satellite offices, in appropriate municipalities and locations in the United States. In the selection of sites for the Enforcement Bureau offices, the Under Secretary shall make selections according to trends in unlawful entry and unlawful presence, alien smuggling, national security concerns, the number of Federal prosecutions of immigration-related offenses in a given geographic area, and other enforcement considerations. The Under Secretary shall conduct periodic reviews to assess whether the location and size of the respective Enforcement Bureau offices adequately serve enforcement needs.

(2) Transition provision.—In determining the location of Enforcement Bureau offices, including suboffices and satellite offices, the Under Secretary shall first consider maintaining and upgrading offices in existing geographic locations that satisfy the provisions of paragraph (1). The Under Secretary shall also explore the feasibility and desirability of establishing new Enforcement Bureau offices, including suboffices and satellite offices, in new geographic locations where there is a demonstrated need.

"(4) to identify potential changes in statutory law that may be required to mitigate such problems; and

"(5) to monitor the coverage and geographic distribution of local offices of the Directorate.

"(d) Personnel Actions.—The Ombudsman shall have the responsibility and authority to appoint local or regional representatives of the Ombudsman's Office as in the Ombudsman's judgment may be necessary to address and rectify problems.

"(e) Annual Report.—Not later than December 31 of each year, the Ombudsman shall submit a report to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate on the activities of the Ombudsman during the fiscal year ending in that calendar year. Each report shall contain a full and substantive analysis, in addition to statistical information, and shall contain—

"(1) a description of the initiatives that the Office of the Ombudsman has taken on improving the responsiveness of the Directorate;

"(2) a summary of serious or systemic problems encountered by the public, including a description of the nature of such problems;

"(3) an accounting of the items described in paragraphs (1) and (2) for which action has been taken, and the result of such action;

"(4) an accounting of the items described in paragraphs (1) and (2) for which action remains to be completed;

"(5) an accounting of the items described in paragraphs (1) and (2) for which no action has been taken, the reasons for the inaction, and identify any Agency official who is responsible for such inaction;

"(6) recommendations as may be appropriate to resolve problems encountered by the public;

"(7) recommendations as may be appropriate to resolve problems encountered by the public, including problems created by backlogs in the adjudication and processing of petitions and applications;

"(8) recommendations to resolve problems caused by inadequate funding or staffing; and

"(9) such other information as the Ombudsman may deem advisable.

"(f) Authorization of Appropriations.—

"(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Office of the Ombudsman such sums as may be necessary to carry out its functions.

"(2) Availability of funds.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) are authorized to remain available until expended.".

SEC. 1107. OFFICE OF IMMIGRATION STATISTICS WITHIN THE DIRECTORATE.

(a) In General.—Chapter 2 of title I of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by section 1102 and amended by sections 1103, 1104, and 1105, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 116. OFFICE OF IMMIGRATION STATISTICS.

"(a) Establishment.—There is established within the Directorate an Office of Immigration Statistics (in this section referred to as the 'Office'), which shall be headed by a Director who shall be appointed by the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Under Secretary. The Office shall collect, maintain, compile, analyze, publish, and disseminate information and statistics about immigration in the United States, including information and statistics involving the functions of the Directorate and the Executive Office for Immigration Review.

"(b) Responsibilities of Director.—The Director of the Office shall be responsible for the following:

"(1) Statistical information.—Maintenance of all immigration statistical information of the Directorate of Immigration Affairs.

"(2) Standards of reliability and validity.—Establishment of standards of reliability and validity for immigration statistics collected by the Bureau of Immigration Services, the Bureau of Enforcement, and the Executive Office for Immigration Review.

"(c) Relation to the Directorate of Immigration Affairs and the Executive Office for Immigration Review.—

"(1) Other authorities.—The Directorate and the Executive Office for Immigration Review shall provide statistical information to the Office from the operational data systems controlled by the Directorate and the Executive Office for Immigration Review, respectively, as requested by the Office, for the purpose of meeting the responsibilities of the Director of the Office.

"(2) Databases.—The Director of the Office, under the direction of the Secretary, shall ensure the interoperability of the databases of the Directorate, the Bureau of Immigration Services, the Bureau of Enforcement, and the Executive Office for Immigration Review to permit the Director of the Office to perform the duties of such office.".

(b) TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS.—There are transferred to the Directorate of Immigration Affairs for exercise by the Under Secretary through the Office of Immigration Statistics established by section 116 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by subsection (a), the functions performed by the Statistics Branch of the Office of Policy and Planning of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the statistical functions performed by the Executive Office for Immigration Review, on the day before the effective date of this title.

Subtitle B—Transition Provisions

SEC. 1111. TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) FUNCTIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c) and title XIII, all functions under the immigration laws of the United States vested by statute in, or exercised by, the Attorney General, immediately prior to the effective date of this title, are transferred to the Secretary on such effective date for exercise by the Secretary through the Under Secretary in accordance with section 112(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by section 1103 of this Act.

(2) FUNCTIONS OF THE COMMISSIONER OR THE INS.—Except as provided in subsection (c), all functions under the immigration laws of the United States vested by statute in, or exercised by, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization or the Immigration and Naturalization Service (or any officer, employee, or component thereof), immediately prior to the effective date of this title, are transferred to the Directorate of Immigration Affairs on such effective date for exercise by the Under Secretary in accordance with section 112(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by section 1103 of this Act.

(b) EXERCISE OF AUTHORITIES.—Except as otherwise provided by law, the Under Secretary may, for purposes of performing any function transferred to the Directorate of Immigration Affairs under subsection (a), exercise all authorities under any other provision of law that were available with respect to the performance of that function to the official responsible for the performance of the function immediately before the effective date of the transfer of the function under this title.

(c) SPECIAL RULE FOR BORDER PATROL AND INSPECTION FUNCTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), the border patrol function, and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions, vested by statute in, or exercised by, the Attorney General, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, or the Immigration and Naturalization Service (or any officer, employee, or component thereof), immediately prior to the effective date of this title, are transferred to the Secretary on such effective date for exercise by the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation in accordance with paragraphs (7) and (8) of section 131(b).

(2) REFERENCES.—With respect to the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions, references in this subtitle to—

(A) the Directorate shall be deemed to be references to the Directorate of Border and Transportation Security; and

(B) the Under Secretary shall be deemed to be references to the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security.

SEC. 1112. TRANSFER OF PERSONNEL AND OTHER RESOURCES.

Subject to section 1531 of title 31, United States Code, upon the effective date of this title, there are transferred to the appropriate Under Secretary for appropriate allocation in accordance with section 1115—

(1) the personnel of the Department of Justice employed in connection with the functions transferred under this title; and

(2) the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balance of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in connection with the functions transferred pursuant to this title.

SEC. 1113. DETERMINATIONS WITH RESPECT TO FUNCTIONS AND RESOURCES.

The Secretary shall determine, in accordance with the corresponding criteria set forth in sections 1112(b), 1113(b), and 1114(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (as added by this title)—

(1) which of the functions transferred under section 1111 are—

(A) immigration policy and administration functions;

(B) immigration service functions;

(C) immigration enforcement functions (excluding the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions); and

(D) the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions; and

(2) which of the personnel, assets, liabilities, grants, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds transferred under section 1112 were held or used, arose from, were available to, or were made available, in connection with the performance of the respective functions specified in paragraph (1) immediately prior to the effective date of this title.

SEC. 1114. DELEGATION AND RESERVATION OF FUNCTIONS.

(a) DELEGATION TO THE DIRECTORATES.—The Secretary shall delegate—

(1) through the Under Secretary and subject to section 112(b)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (as added by section 1103)—

(A) immigration service functions to the Assistant Secretary for Immigration Services; and

(B) immigration enforcement functions to the Assistant Secretary for Immigration Enforcement; and

(2) the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions to the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security.

(b) NONEXCLUSIVE DELEGATIONS AUTHORIZED.—Delegations made under subsection (a) may be made on a nonexclusive basis as the Secretary may determine may be necessary to ensure the faithful execution of the Secretary's responsibilities and duties under law.

(c) EFFECT OF DELEGATIONS.—Except as otherwise expressly prohibited by law or otherwise provided in this title, the Secretary may make delegations under this subsection to such officers and employees of the office of the Under Secretary for Immigration Affairs, and the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security, respectively, as the Secretary may designate, and may authorize successive redelegations of such functions as may be necessary or appropriate. No delegation of functions under this subsection or under any other provision of this title shall relieve the official to whom a function is transferred under this title of responsibility for the administration of the function.

(d) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this division may be construed to limit the authority of the Under Secretary, acting directly or by delegation under the Secretary, to establish such offices or positions within the Directorate of Immigration Affairs, in addition to those specified by this division, as the Under Secretary may determine to be necessary to carry out the functions of the Directorate.

SEC. 1115. ALLOCATION OF PERSONNEL AND OTHER RESOURCES.

(a) AUTHORITY OF THE UNDER SECRETARY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2) and section 1114(b), the Under Secretary shall make allocations of personnel, assets, liabilities, grants, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with the performance of the respective functions, as determined under section 1113, in accordance with the delegation of functions and the reservation of functions made under section 1114.

(2) LIMITATION.—Unexpended funds transferred pursuant to section 1112 shall be used only for the purposes for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

(b) AUTHORITY TO TERMINATE AFFAIRS OF INS.—The Attorney General in consultation with the Secretary, shall provide for the termination of the affairs of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and such further measures and dispositions as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this division.

(c) TREATMENT OF SHARED RESOURCES.—The Under Secretary is authorized to provide for an appropriate allocation, or coordination, or both, of resources involved in supporting shared support functions for the office of the Under Secretary, the Service Bureau, and the Enforcement Bureau. The Under Secretary shall maintain oversight and control over the shared computer databases and systems and records management.

SEC. 1116. SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

(a) LEGAL DOCUMENTS.—All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, grants, loans, contracts, recognition of labor organizations, agreements, including collective bargaining agreements, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) that have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective by the President, the Attorney General, the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, their delegates, or any other Government official, or by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the performance of any function that is transferred under this title; and

(2) that are in effect on the effective date of such transfer (or become effective after such date pursuant to their terms as in effect on such effective date); shall continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by the President, any other authorized official, a court of competent jurisdiction, or operation of law, except that any collective bargaining agreement shall remain in effect until the date of termination specified in the agreement.

(b) Proceedings.—

(1) Pending.—Sections 111 through 116 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by subtitle A of this title, shall not affect any proceeding or any application for any benefit, service, license, permit, certificate, or financial assistance pending on the effective date of this title before an office whose functions are transferred under this title, but such proceedings and applications shall be continued.

(2) Orders.—Orders shall be issued in such proceedings, appeals shall be taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, as if this Act had not been enacted, and orders issued in any such proceeding shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or revoked by a duly authorized official, by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(3) Discontinuance or modification.—Nothing in this section shall be considered to prohibit the discontinuance or modification of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceeding could have been discontinued or modified if this section had not been enacted.

(c) Suits.—This title, and the amendments made by this title, shall not affect suits commenced before the effective date of this title, and in all such suits, proceeding shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered in the same manner and with the same effect as if this title, and the amendments made by this title, had not been enacted.

(d) Nonabatement of Actions.—No suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against the Department of Justice or the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or by or against any individual in the official capacity of such individual as an officer or employee in connection with a function transferred pursuant to this section, shall abate by reason of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Continuance of Suit With Substitution of Parties.—If any Government officer in the official capacity of such officer is party to a suit with respect to a function of the officer, and such function is transferred under this title to any other officer or office, then such suit shall be continued with the other officer or the head of such other office, as applicable, substituted or added as a party.

(f) Administrative Procedure and Judicial Review.—Except as otherwise provided by this title, any statutory requirements relating to notice, hearings, action upon the record, or administrative or judicial review that apply to any function transferred under this title shall apply to the exercise of such function by the head of the office, and other officers of the office, to which such function is transferred.

SEC. 1117. INTERIM SERVICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION.

The individual serving as the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization on the day before the effective date of this title may serve as Under Secretary until the date on which an Under Secretary is appointed under section 112 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as added by section 1103.

SEC. 1118. OTHER AUTHORITIES NOT AFFECTED.

Nothing in this title, or any amendment made by this title, may be construed to authorize or require the transfer or delegation of any function vested in, or exercised by—

(1) the Secretary of State under the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956, or under the immigration laws of the United States, immediately prior to the effective date of this title, with respect to the issuance and use of passports and visas;

(2) the Secretary of Labor or any official of the Department of Labor immediately prior to the effective date of this title, with respect to labor certifications or any other authority under the immigration laws of the United States; or

(3) except as otherwise specifically provided in this division, any other official of the Federal Government under the immigration laws of the United States immediately prior to the effective date of this title.

SEC. 1119. TRANSITION FUNDING.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations for Transition.—

(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Homeland Security such sums as may be necessary—

(A) to effect—

(i) the abolition of the Immigration and Naturalization Service;

(ii) the establishment of the Directorate of Immigration Affairs and its components, the Bureau of Immigration Services, and the Bureau of Enforcement (except for the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions);

(iii) the transfer to the Directorate of Border and Transportation Protection of the border patrol function and primary and secondary immigration inspection functions; and

(iv) the transfer of such other functions as are required to be made under this division; and

(B) to carry out any other duty that is made necessary by this division, or any amendment made by this division.

(2) Activities supported.—Activities supported under paragraph (1) include—

(A) planning for the transfer of functions from the Immigration and Naturalization Service to the Directorate of Immigration Affairs and the Directorate of Border and Transportation Security, as appropriate, including the preparation of any reports and implementation plans necessary for such transfer;

(B) the division, acquisition, and disposition of—

(i) buildings and facilities;

(ii) support and infrastructure resources; and

(iii) computer hardware, software, and related documentation;

(C) other capital expenditures necessary to effect the transfer of functions described in this paragraph;

(D) revision of forms, stationery, logos, and signage;

(E) expenses incurred in connection with the transfer and training of existing personnel and hiring of new personnel; and

(F) such other expenses necessary to effect the transfers, as determined by the Secretary.

(b) Availability of Funds.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to subsection (a) are authorized to remain available until expended.

(c) Transition Account.—

(1) Establishment.—There is established in the general fund of the Treasury of the United States a separate account, which shall be known as the "Directorate of Immigration Affairs Transition Account" (in this section referred to as the "Account").

(2) Use of account.—There shall be deposited into the Account all amounts appropriated under subsection (a) and amounts reprogrammed for the purposes described in subsection (a).

(d) Report to Congress on Transition.—Beginning not later than 90 days after the effective date of division A of this Act, and at the end of each fiscal year in which appropriations are made pursuant to subsection (c), the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a report to Congress concerning the availability of funds to cover transition costs, including—

(1) any unobligated balances available for such purposes; and

(2) a calculation of the amount of appropriations that would be necessary to fully fund the activities described in subsection (a).

(e) Effective Date.—This section shall take effect 1 year after the effective date of division A of this Act.

Subtitle C—Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 1121. FUNDING ADJUDICATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICES.

(a) Level of Fees.—Section 286(m) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1356(m)) is amended by striking "services, including the costs of similar services provided without charge to asylum applicants or other immigrants" and inserting "services".

(b) Use of Fees.—

(1) In general.—Each fee collected for the provision of an adjudication or naturalization service shall be used only to fund adjudication or naturalization services or, subject to the availability of funds provided pursuant to subsection (c), costs of similar services provided without charge to asylum and refugee applicants.

(2) Prohibition.—No fee may be used to fund adjudication- or naturalization-related audits that are not regularly conducted in the normal course of operation.

(c) Refugee and Asylum Adjudication Services.—

(1) Authorization of appropriations.—In addition to such sums as may be otherwise available for such purposes, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of sections 207 through 209 of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

(2) Availability of funds.—Funds appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) are authorized to remain available until expended.

(d) Separation of Funding.—

(1) In general.—There shall be established separate accounts in the Treasury of the United States for appropriated funds and other collections available for the Bureau of Immigration Services and the Bureau of Enforcement.

(2) Fees.—Fees imposed for a particular service, application, or benefit shall be deposited into the account established under paragraph (1) that is for the bureau with jurisdiction over the function to which the fee relates.

(3) Fees not transferable.—No fee may be transferred between the Bureau of Immigration Services and the Bureau of Enforcement for purposes not authorized by section 286 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended by subsection (a).

(e) Authorization of Appropriations for Backlog Reduction.—

(1) In general.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 2003 through 2006 to carry out the Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvement Act of 2000 (title II of Public Law 106–313).

(2) Availability of funds.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) are authorized to remain available until expended.

(3) Infrastructure improvement account.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) shall be deposited into the Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvements Account established by section 204(a)(2) of title II of Public Law 106–313.

SEC. 1122. APPLICATION OF INTERNET-BASED TECHNOLOGIES.

(a) Establishment of On-Line Database.—

(1) In general.—Not later than 2 years after the effective date of division A, the Secretary, in consultation with the Under Secretary and the Technology Advisory Committee, shall establish an Internet-based system that will permit an immigrant, nonimmigrant, employer, or other person who files any application, petition, or other request for any benefit under the immigration laws of the United States access to on-line information about the processing status of the application, petition, or other request.

(2) Privacy considerations.—The Under Secretary shall consider all applicable privacy issues in the establishment of the Internet system described in paragraph (1). No personally identifying information shall be accessible to unauthorized persons.

(3) Means of access.—The on-line information under the Internet system described in paragraph (1) shall be accessible to the persons described in paragraph (1) through a personal identification number (PIN) or other personalized password.

(4) Prohibition on fees.—The Under Secretary shall not charge any immigrant, nonimmigrant, employer, or other person described in paragraph (1) a fee for access to the information in the database that pertains to that person.

(b) Feasibility Study for On-Line Filing and Improved Processing.—

(1) On-line filing.—

(A) In general.—The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Technology Advisory Committee, shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of on-line filing of the documents described in subsection (a).

(B) Study elements.—The study shall—

(i) include a review of computerization and technology of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (or successor agency) relating to immigration services and the processing of such documents;

(ii) include an estimate of the time-frame and costs of implementing on-line filing of such documents; and

(iii) consider other factors in implementing such a filing system, including the feasibility of the payment of fees on-line.

(2) Report.—Not later than 2 years after the effective date of division A, the Under Secretary shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the findings of the study conducted under this subsection.

(c) Technology Advisory Committee.—

(1) Establishment.—Not later than 1 year after the effective date of division A, the Under Secretary shall establish, after consultation with the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, an advisory committee (in this section referred to as the "Technology Advisory Committee") to assist the Under Secretary in—

(A) establishing the tracking system under subsection (a); and

(B) conducting the study under subsection (b).

(2) Composition.—The Technology Advisory Committee shall be composed of—

(A) experts from the public and private sector capable of establishing and implementing the system in an expeditious manner; and

(B) representatives of persons or entities who may use the tracking system described in subsection (a) and the on-line filing system described in subsection (b)(1).

SEC. 1123. ALTERNATIVES TO DETENTION OF ASYLUM SEEKERS.
